confer on some important matters with Mary Miles Minter and Director William F. Nigh, who were just then making the exteriors for "The Stork's Nest," a forthcoming Columbia-Metro production, in the Pocono Mountain district. It was shortly after lunch that the trio (James went along for company) climbed into the car and they were all back on Broadway in time for dinner. In the meantime, they had gone to the hotel at the Gap, where "The Stork's Nest" company were stopping, from there to the location where the cast were at work, and back again to New York, all in the space of one short afternoon. They even had time to have the "still" man snap them as they grouped themselves gracefully in front of the hotel, just before returning to the Manhattan studio.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Arkansas.

The Airdome motion picture theater in McGehee will shortly move to new quarters. The building on Railroad avenue formerly occupied by the Model Grocery company will be thoroughly renovated and remodeled, and occupied by the Airdome.

The New theater in Fort Smith, after undergoing many improvements, has been opened to the public. The house will be operated on Friday and Saturday as a motion picture show, and the remaining days will be for road shows.

Colorado.

The Hoffman Film company, capitalized at $250,000, has purchased twenty-three acres of land between Inspiration Point and Lakeside, where they will erect a studio. Arthur E. Hoffman, a young Denver man, is the president; Henry P. Dickinson, vice-president; Joseph E. Quinn, secretary. E. J. Mullen and H. H. Buckwalter are also interested in the enterprise.

Connecticut.

The Parkville theater at 918 Park street, Hartford, which was damaged by fire some time ago, will not be rebuilt.

California.

The Market Street theater, on South Market street, is undergoing extensive alterations and repairs, and when completed it will be one of the coziest motion picture theaters in San Jose.

State Corporation Commissioner H. L. Carnahan has issued a permit to the K. & D. company of San Francisco, of which Kolb and Dill, the noted German comedians, are the prime movers, to issue 25,495 shares of the company's stock to C. William Kolb and Max C. Dill, and to sell 24,500 shares to Maud Lillian Moulin for $18,000 cash. Kolb and Dill have entered the motion picture business and have contracted to devote two years of their time exclusively to the film company of which they are promoters.

Illinois.

The remodeling of the Vogue theater on Broadway and Lincoln is fast nearing completion and will be known as the Princess, under the management of Snider & Belaski.

Louisiana.

The Dreamland theater, St. Charles street near Commercial place, New Orleans, has reopened following extensive improvements made by Josiah Pearce & Sons.

Michigan.

The Star theater in Houghton, which was recently sold by Robert Nelson to Mr. Poonanen, has been redecorated and reopened by the new management.

The work on building the new Isis theater on Monroe avenue, N. W., Grand Rapids, has been started. The new theater will be managed by George C. Nichols, who owns several local picture shows.

Maryland.

The Lord Calvert Theaters company now has under construction its fourth theater, at the southeast corner of Fulton avenue and Baker street, Baltimore, to be known as the Gertrude McCoy theater, and will be opened about October 2. It will have a capacity of 800 people. The style of architecture is an Italian renaissance with a spacious vestibule 16 feet deep. The exterior will be stucco in a light gray finish. Special attention has been given to the ventilation and fresh air supply. Another very important feature is the steep pitch of the floor, affording all patrons an ample and equal opportunity of viewing the pictures. Frederick Clement Weber is president and manager of the comuany; Paul J. Prodoehl, secretary and treasurer, and T. Howard Embert, attorney.

Missouri.

St. Louis headquarters for the Triangle Film corporation, a New York moving picture company, were obtained recently, when a lease of several years on the second floor of the building nearing completion at 3316 Locust street was obtained. From the St. Louis office films will be distributed by the company throughout the southwest.

New Jersey.

The City Square theater, Washington and Anderson streets, Trenton's newest motion picture house, was opened August 28.

New York.

The Wilfred motion picture theater in Greene has been opened and is managed by Mr. Page.

Comedy Film Service, motion picture films, machines, accessories, $10,000; L. and L. Cohen, A. A. Deutsch, 23 Sturtevant ave., Bronx.

President Motion Picture corporation, Manhattan, motion pictures, etc.; capital $150,000. Incorporators: J. J. Finn, I. Kyle, J. Nicholson, Hotel Gerard, New York City.

The Star theater, at the corner of State and Spruce streets, Schenectady, has been purchased by W. A. Ripley of Cook & Ripley, and an exceptionally fine program of motion pictures will be shown every evening, with the exception of Sunday.

Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc., Manhattan, motion pictures and theatrical business; capital, $100,000. Incorporators: J. J. Jansen, Jr., A. E. Moore, E. E. Holmes, 37 Wall st., New York City.

Phoenix Film corporation, motion pictures, $10,000; A. Breitbard, M. Meyers, I. Schlank, 135 West Forty-seventh st., New York.

Great Eastern Photo Play corporation, Manhattan, theaters, opera, vaudeville, moving picture houses, $10,000; R. D. Ireland, G. Richard Benda, S. Bergoffen, 1520 Forty-third st., Brooklyn.

North Carolina.

The Special Features Film Producing company has been incorporated by the secretary of the state with an authorized capitalization of $100,000, of which amount the sum of $1,000 is paid in. The stock is subscribed by Robert R. Reynolds, Marcus Erwin and M. S. Erwin, and announcement is made to the effect that the home office of the concern will be maintained at Asheville. The company is authorized to produce and deal in motion pictures, and it is stated that extensive developments along this line are contemplated. The company will maintain offices at No. 17½ Patton avenue and it is authorized to deal in theatrical enterprises of all kinds in addition to the production of motion pictures.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	9-13	The Man Who Never Was Caught	Biograph	1,000
D	9-13	A Mansion of Tragedy	Essanay	3,000
D	9-13	The Social Law	Kleine	2,000
D	9-13	The Man Servant	Kalem	3,000
D	9-13	Advertising Did It	Lubin	1,000
D	9-13	Man's Law	Selig	2,000
T	9-13	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 73, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	9-13	Sunny Jim and the Amusement Company, Ltd.	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-14	The Rehearsal	Biograph	2,000
D	9-14	Tish's Spy	Essanay	2,000
C	9-14	Romance a la Carte	Kalem	1,000
C	9-14	Babe's School Days	Lubin	500
C	9-14	Wondering Billy	Lubin	500
C	9-14	Weary Goes A-Wooing	Selig	1,000
D	9-14	West Wind	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	9-15	The Soul of Pierre	Biograph	3,000
C	9-15	The Silent Tongue	Edison	1,000
C	9-15	Dreamy Dud's Cowboy	Essanay	1,000
D	9-15	Under Oath	Kalem	2,000
D	9-15	The Purple Night	Knickerbocker	3,000
D	9-15	Where the Road Divided	Lubin	2,000
C	9-15	Save the Coupons	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-16	A Lasting Lesson	Biograph	1,000
C	9-16	Moustaches and Bombs	Essanay	1,000
D	9-16	The Red Virgin	Lubin	3,000
C	9-16	Booming Trixie	Mina	1,000
D	9-16	The Jungle Lovers	Selig	3,000
T	9-16	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 74, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-16	The Shadow of Fear	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	9-17	The Girl and Her Trust	Biograph	1,000
D	9-17	Ransom's Folly	Edison	4,000
D	9-17	Broncho Billy and the Card Shark	Essanay	1,000
D	9-17	The Key to Possession	Kalem	2,000
D	9-17	A Heart Awakened	Lubin	1,000
C	9-17	The Professional Diner	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

C	9-18	Heart Trouble	Biograph	1,000
D	9-18	The Call of the City	Edison	1,000
D	9-18	The Scapegoat	Essanay	3,000
D	9-18	A Girl's Grit	Kalem	1,000
C	9-18	The Golden Oysters	Lubin	1,000
C	9-18	Cocksure Jones, Detective	Selig	1,000
D	9-18	His Golden Grain	Vitagraph	2,000
T	9-13	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 73	Selig	2,000

Monday.

D	9-20	Behind the Mask	Biograph	1,000
D	9-20	The Circular Path	Essanay	3,000
D	9-20	A Woman's Mistake	Kleine	2,000
D	9-20	The Call of the Dance	Kalem	4,000
D	9-20	The Silent Accuser	Lubin	1,000
D	9-20	The Eternal Feminine	Selig	2,000
T	9-20	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 75, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	9-20	Willie Stayed Single	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	And By These Deeds	Biograph	2,000
D	9-21	The Call of the Sea	Essanay	2,000
C	9-21	Double-Crossing Marmaduke	Kalem	1,000
C	9-21	The Careless Anarchist	Lubin	225
C	9-21	That Brute	Lubin	275
C	9-21	Monty and the Missionary	Lubin	500
D	9-21	The Range Girl and the Cowboy	Selig	1,000
D	9-21	Dorothy	Vitagraph	2,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.
THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.
SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday.

C	9-22	Cartoons in the Seminary	Edison	1,000
C	9-22	The Fable of "The Through Train"	Essanay	1,000
D	9-22	The Wolf's Prey	Kalem	2,000
D	9-22	A Desert Honeymoon	Lubin	3,000
C	9-22	Getting Rid of Aunt Kate	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	A Kentucky Episode	Biograph	1,000
C	9-23	Snakeville's Hen Medic	Essanay	1,000
D	9-23	The Last Rebel	Lubin	2,000
C	9-23	When Husbands Go to War	Mina	1,000
T	9-23	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 76, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-23	The Blood Seedling	Selig	3,000
D	9-23	The Lesson of the Narrow Street	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	9-24	An Unseen Enemy	Biograph	1,000
D	9-24	Her Happiness	Edison	3,000
D	9-24	An Unexpected Romance	Essanay	1,000
D	9-24	A Daughter's Sacrifice	Kalem	1,000
D	9-24	The Level	Lubin	1,000
C	9-24	Back to the Primitive	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	The Girl Who Didn't Forget	Biograph	1,000
D	9-25	When Conscience Sleeps	Edison	1,000
D	9-25	Affinities	Essanay	2,000
D	9-25	A Matter of Seconds	Kalem	1,000
C	9-25	Captain Kidd and Ditto	Lubin	1,000
C	9-25	The Auction of Run-Down Ranch	Selig	1,000
D	9-25	From Out of the Big Snows	Vitagraph	3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

7-19	The Blindness of Virtue	Essanay	5,000
7-26	A Texas Steer	Selig	5,000
8-2	The Climbers	Lubin	5,000
8-9	Chalice of Courage	Vitagraph	6,000
8-16	A Bunch of Keys	Essanay	5,000
8-16	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Aug. 23	Wheels of Justice	Vitagraph	4,000
Aug. 23	House of Thousand Candles	Selig	5,000
Aug. 30	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	5,000
Sept. 6	Mortmain	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept. 20	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	5,000
Sept. 13	The Man Trail	Essanay	6,000
Sept. 20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
8-30	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Sept. 20	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept. 10	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	9-13	The Senor's Silver Buckle	American	2,000
C	9-13	Superstitious Sammy	Falstaff	1,000
S	9-13	Seeing America First	Gaumont	1,000
C	9-13	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-14	Helen's Babies	Thanhouser	2,000
D	9-14	The Little Guard	Majestic	1,000
C	9-14	Incognito	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	9-15	Shorty's Ranch	Broncho	3,000
D	9-15	The Dark Horse	Reliance	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-16	The Rajah's Sacrifice	Centaur	2,000
C	9-16	Bessie's Bachelor Boobs	Falstaff	1,000
T	9-16	Mutual Weekly, No. 37	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	9-17	The Vivisectionist	Gaumont	2,000
D	9-17	The Little Lady Next Door	American	1,000
C	9-17	The Knockout	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-18	The Great Question	American	3,000
C	9-18	A Friend in Need	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

C	9-19	The Pool Sharks	Gaumont	1,000
D	9-19	The Twins of the G. L. Ranch	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	9-20	The Barren Gain	American	2,000
C	9-20	Simon's Swimming Soul Mate	Falstaff	1,000
C	9-20	The Lilliputian's Courtship	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	The Dead Man's Keys	Thanhouser	2,000
S	9-21	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	9-21	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	9-21	Everyheart	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	9-22	The House with Nobody in It	Rialto	3,000
C	9-22	Never Again!	Kay-Bee	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	The Woman, the Lion, and the Man	Centaur	2,000
C	9-23	Con, the Car Conductor	Falstaff	1,000
T	9-23	Mutual Weekly, No. 38	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

C	9-24	Busy Izzie	Gaumont	2,000
D	9-24	It Was Like This	American	1,000
C	9-24	The Treasure Box	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	A Disciple of Neitzsche	Thanhouser	3,000
C	9-25	Cats, Cash and a Cook Book	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	9-26	Merely Players	Reliance	2,000
C	9-26	Kidnaped at the Church	Mutual	1,000
D	9-26	The Miracle	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	9-13	Business Is Business	Broadway	6,000
C	9-13	Too Many Smiths	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-14	The Queen of Hearts	Gold Seal	3,000
D	9-14	How Early Saved the Farm	Rex	800
E	9-14	From Span to Spalato	Rex	200
	9-14	No release this week	Imp

Wednesday.

D	9-15	A Shriek in the Night	Victor	2,000
	9-15	No release this week	L-Ko
T	9-15	Animated Weekly, No. 184	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-16	Joe Martin Turns Em Loose	Rex	2,000
D	9-16	In the Heart of the Hills	Big U	1,000
	9-16	No release this week	Powers

Friday.

D	9-17	The Suburban	Imp	4,000
	9-17	No release this week	Victor
C	9-17	Molly's Malady	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-18	The Surrender	Bison	3,000
	9-18	No release this week	Powers
C	9-18	He Couldn't Fool His Mother-in-Law	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	9-19	The Pine's Revenge	Rex	2,000
	9-19	No release this week	Laemmle
C	9-19	No Flirting Allowed	L-Ko	1,000
D	9-19	The Broken Coin, No. 13	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	9-20	Under Southern Skies	Broadway	5,000
C	9-20	It Almost Happened	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	The Tenor	Gold Seal	3,000
	9-21	No release this week	Rex
C	9-21	His Home Coming	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

E	9-22	Not a Lamb Shall Stray	Victor	1,000
C	9-22	Scandal in the Family	L-Ko	2,000
T	9-22	Animated Weekly, No. 185	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	The Cry of the First Born	Laemmle	3,000
	9-23	No release this week	Big U
C	9-23	The Ham Actors	Powers	800
E	9-23	Life of the Frog	Powers	200

Friday.

D	9-24	When the Call Came	Imp	2,000
	9-24	No release this week	Victor
C	9-24	When Lizzie Went to Sea	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	A Message for Help	Bison	2,000
D	9-25	Every Man's Money	Powers	1,000
C	9-25	He Couldn't Support His Wife	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	9-26	The Fascination of the Fleur-de-Lis	Rex	3,000
	9-26	No release this week	Laemmle
C	9-26	Avenged by a Fish	L-Ko	1,000
D	9-26	The Broken Coin, No. 14	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000

Associated Service.

Release Week of

Sept. 20	A Kentucky Girl	Navajo	2,000
Sept. 20	Devoted Son	Liberty	2,000
Sept. 20	Cattle Queen's Romance	Ramona	2,000
Sept. 20	Accusing Finger	Empire	2,000
Sept. 20	A Watery Romance	Federal	1,000
Sept. 20	Happy Awakening	Alhambra	1,000
Sept. 20	Borrowing Hogan	Santa Barbara	2,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Sept. 1	The Woman Next Door	Kleine	5,000
Sept. 8	Money Master	Kleine	5,000
Sept. 15	The Fixer	Kleine-Edison	1,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Aug. 25	When a Woman Loves	Metro	5,000
Sept. 6	The Soul of a Woman	Metro	5,000
Sept. 13	The Silent Voice	Metro	6,000
Sept. 20	The Bigger Man	Metro	5,000
Sept. 27	An Enemy to Society	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept. 2	Infatuation	American	4,000
Sept. 9	The Wolf-Man	Reliance	4,000
Sept. 16	The Man From Oregon	N. Y. M. P.	5,000
Sept. 23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Aug. 30	The Heart of Jennifer	Famous Players	5,000
Sept. 2	The Incorrigible Dukane	Famous Players	4,000
Sept. 6	The Foundling	Famous Players
Sept. 6	Esmeralda	Famous Players	4,000
Sept. 9	Out of Darkness	Jesse L. Lasky
Sept. 16	Peer Gynt	Oliver Morosco
Sept. 13	The Case of Becky	Jesse L. Lasky
Sept. 20	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Sept. 6	The Fallen Standard	Balboa	2,000
Sept. 6	A Mix-Up for Mazie	Phunphilms	1,000
Sept. 6	Picturesque Java	Globe	500
Sept. 6	In Dahomey, West Africa	Globe	500
Sept. 6	Pathe News, No. 72	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 6	Pathe News, No. 73	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 6	Neal of the Navy, No. 2	Panama	2,000
Sept. 6	The Galloper	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 6	Monkey Shines	Starlight	1,000
Sept. 12	Maid of the Wild	Balboa	3,000
Sept. 12	Jocko, the Lovesick Monk	Pathe	500
Sept. 12	Intimate Study of Birds, No. 7	Pathe	500
Sept. 12	The Waterways of Bruges, Belgium	Photocolor	500
Sept. 12	Fishing with Cormorants	Globe	500
Sept. 12	Pathe News, No. 74	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 12	Neal of the Navy, No. 3	Panama	2,000
Sept. 12	Via Wireless	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 12	Pathe News, No. 75	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 12	Matrimonial Bliss	Starlight	1,000
Sept. 20	The Toilers of the Sea	Balboa	3,000
Sept. 20	Some Baby	Phunphilms	1,000
Sept. 20	Pathe Daily News, No. 76	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 20	Pathe Daily News, No. 77	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 20	Neal of the Navy, No. 4	Panama	2,000
Sept. 20	Simon, the Jester	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 20	Hot Stuff	Starlight	1,000
Sept. 20	Strange Occupations	Globe	1,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Sept. 13	The Ivory Snuff Box	Brady	5,000
Sept. 6	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 9	World Comedy
Sept. 13	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 10	World Comedy
Sept. 20	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 11	World Comedy
Sept. 20	Trilby	World	5,000
Sept. 27	Salvation Nell	California
Sept. 27	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 12	World Comedy
Sept. 27	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Shanghaied—ESSANAY—Featuring Charles Chaplin as assistant cook on a vessel which the captain plans to blow up to get the insurance. The owner's daughter is on board the ship, and is discovered by the captain and mate, who bind and gag her and cast her into the hold. She is rescued by the cook, and the captain and mate scuttle all the small boats except one, light a bomb and prepare to flee. The cook and the girl steal a march on them, however, and take the small boat and escape. The ship is blown to pieces, but he and the girl are saved.

Lost in the Swim—MINA—SEPTEMBER 9.—Jesse is in love with a handsome young man, but her mother calls upon the proprietor of the hotel and tells him to look up a count for her daughter. Brake Beam Pete, a good-natured hobo, makes his appearance and the crafty proprietor decides to make him earn his board. Disguised as a count, he starts out to win the hand of Jesse. He is on the verge of success when he is "lost in the swim."

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 73—HEARST-SELIG—SEPTEMBER 13.—Mrs. James Rolph, Jr., wife of San Francisco's mayor, christens steamer Annette Rolph; Cardinal Gibbons, with Mgr. Russell, starts out on visit to President Wilson, bearing message from the pope; the steamer Admiral Watson sunk at its pier after collision with freighter at Seattle, Wash.; monster parade at Boston; annual horse show at Newport, Rhode Island; Danish and American yachts battle for international cup in race held on waters of San Francisco Bay; survivors of the sinking of the Arabic taken to Queenstown, Ireland; lads of the Alameda high school join voluntary military class, Alameda, Calif.; former President Taft attends San Francisco fair on Red Cross day; United States soldiers guard bridge leading into Mexico.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 74—HEARST-SELIG—SEPTEMBER 16.—Japanese hold special celebration at Panama Pacific exposition, San Francisco, Calif.; Commodore James Pugh sets new record in national motor boat races, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Dumba, Austrian Ambassador, visits state department, Washington, D. C.; Crown Prince Alexander visits battery of British naval guns on Serbian lines; Crew from New York wins hard fought race in Middle States Regetta, Philadelphia; President Wilson attends baseball game between clerks of Agriculture and Interior departments, Washington, D. C.; Gen. Nafarratte, Mexican leader, offers to help run down Mexican bandits who crossed border; campers along the Potomac river hold unique regatta, Washington; Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck wins woman's national golf championship, Lake Forest, Ill.; Indians taken to the San Diego fair are given their first glimpse of the Pacific Ocean, San Diego; old frigate Portsmouth is burned in water of Massachusetts Bay; Vincent Astor, America's wealthiest young man, poses for motion pictures, Marblehead, Mass.

Booming Trixie—MINA—SEPTEMBER 16.—Trixie, a theatrical star, has lost her popularity and her press agent is given notice that he must bring her back into prominence or risk his job. He goes to his cousin, Tom, telling him to kidnap Trixie and elope with her. Tom is in love with another girl and reluctantly consents to the press agent's scheme, and preparations are made to boom Trixie. The girl with whom Tom is in love learns of the plot and decides to intervene, and her plotting ends in Tom's mistaking her for Trixie and finally finding that he has eloped with and married the girl he loves. The press agent has put the reporters on the trail, and as they think the girl is the actress, the newspapers start booming Trixie.

Broncho Billy and the Card Sharp—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 17.—Featuring G. M. Anderson. Broncho Billy shoots Faro Dan, a card sharp, and later hides in the wagon of a man he meets on the prairie. He escapes, and years later is made sheriff of an adjoining county. A rancher finds a cattle thief leading away some of his stock and holds him with a rifle while his daughter calls the sheriff. Broncho Billy arrives and learns the thief is the man who years before had befriended him. Broncho arrests the man, then hands in his star as sheriff, and goes back to the old county to give himself up. He meets Faro Dan, whom he had merely wounded, and also learns that he is now honest.

His Golden Grain—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 18.—Myrtle Gonzalez featured with an all star cast. John Hart returns home to find his ward and secretary planning to secure his money after driving out Elsie, the girl he has taken into his home and whom he has fall in love with. He overhears a crook blackmailing Julia and the secretary for trying to fasten a robbery on Elsie. Elsie enters at this moment and Hart bursts into the room and he then orders Julia to leave his home forever and asks Elsie to remain as his wife.

Behind the Mask—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 20.—Featuring Isabel Rea, Edward Cecil, Claire McDowell, Herbert Barrington and Hector V. Sarno. The maid, a crook in disguise, overhears that the Rajah of Ramptura will wear his famous ruby at the masked ball. Ascertaining what costumes the daughter of her mistress and her lover will wear, the maid duplicates them for herself and accomplice. In this costume she makes love to the rajah and steals the ruby. Miss Rathborn's lover happens to be at the trysting place where her accomplice is to be and she gives him the ruby. Later the tangle of mistaken identities is unraveled and the crooks are captured.

The Circular Path—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 20.—Featuring Henry Walthall and Warda Howard. Rev. Darwin Kirby, in love with a woman given to the gayeties of life, gives up the pulpit for love of the girl. Not being trained in paths of the world, he goes west for a new start, leaving his wife behind, while she takes up with an old sweetheart. Not making good in the west, the former preacher returns east, where he finds his wife in a cafe with another man, and shoots his rival. Thinking he has killed him, he hides in the slums, where he drops to the lowest depths of degradation. Later, learning that the man he shot is not dead, he calls together all his will power and re-enters the ministry. He then seeks the wife he still loves and she, tired and sick of the consequences of her gay life, consents to begin life anew, and the two start together on the right path.

The Call of the Dance—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 20.—Featuring Yansci Dolly and a strong cast. Natalie Hall has a passionate love for dancing and finds a warm friend in old Carlo, a musician. The girl is kidnaped and later rescued by Marston, assistant district attorney, who is ignorant of the fact that his Uncle Fiske is head of the vice ring. He gets the girl a position in the office of a friend, but she later gets a position in the chorus of a musical comedy and soon her wonderful dancing makes her famous. Marston finds her in the theater, and Fiske, who is madly in love with the girl, invites her to a dinner he is giving. Carlo, who is employed at the restaurant where the function is held, recognizes in Fiske the man who had blasted his life, and follows Natalie and Fiske and his friends to his apartments, where he shoots Fiske, who has assaulted the girl. Marston, who has also followed them, comes into the room at this time and takes Natalie in his arms.

The Silent Accuser—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 20.—A strong cast featured. Dr. Mills' daughter, Jane, is in love with his assistant, John Howard. Joe King also does odd jobs about the office. One evening money is taken from the doctor's desk and Howard is found unconscious, and later tells of his being choked in the dark by someone unknown to him. Later pencil marks are found on his collar and it is seen that they are the markings of a pencil held in Howard's hand while he was being choked, and record the up-and-down movements of his hand as he struggled. The doctor calls in the porter and asks him to assist in an experiment. He puts the pencil in the porter's hand and makes him clench his hand in the same manner in which Howard says he was choked. King becomes hysterical and cries out his guilt.

Eternal Feminine—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—SEPTEMBER 20.—John Strong, on the last night of the campaign for the governorship, makes a political speech and is heard by Helen Foster, an enthusiast for the cause of woman's rights. Strong is elected governor of the state and later meets Helen at a reception. He proposes to her and is rejected, and before he leaves her side he tells her that he is a suitor who refuses to be rejected. Helen goes out into the moonlight and her thoughts go back to the Stone Age, and she thinks herself the queen of that period ruling the Clan Feminine. Strongarm comes from a far country. He expostulates with the men who are ruled by the women and later leads them into an uprising. They overpower the women and then Strongarm takes possession of the beautiful Queen Helen and carries her to his cave. Helen awakens with a start and Governor-elect Strong returns to her side, and she then tells him she will marry him.

Willie Stayed Single—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 20.—Hungry Weary Willie "borrows" a suit of clothes from the clothes line and then makes love to a boarding house mistress, a widow. He knows that all he has to do is to marry her to enjoy three square meals a day. When the slavey cook mixes up two kettles and he gets a mouthful of soft soap instead of soup, he changes his mind. Under the impression that he has hydrophobia, Willie gets some rough treatment and escapes, leaving a heartbroken widow behind.

And By These Deeds—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 21.—A strong cast featured. Slick Bill Hudgins hears the sound of a child crying and discovers that the widow Callahan's crippled daughter is alone. Bill goes to Tom Blink's saloon, where he keeps his money, to draw money, and arrived there finds another man in charge. Knowing he must make good his promise to the little girl, he enters a Fifth avenue house and kidnaps a baby from a room which the millionaire, Stanley Biggins, had provided for his little daughter. The little girl comes upon the scene and insists upon being taken to see the child. He takes her there and next morning calls at the Biggins' residence, where the millionaire and his wife place detectives on his trail and, following the clue, the police arrest Bill; but little Miss Biggins wouldn't let him go to jail and he is given another chance.

The Call of the Sea—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 21.—Mary Morgan, the daughter of a wealthy man, falls in love with a fisherman and weds against her father's wishes. She is disowned by her father and later is taken ill, and only a surgeon in another village can save her life. Her father, hearing she is near death, relents and sends his yacht, the best on the sea, after the surgeon. They are lost in a storm, but finally reach the port after many anxious hours, in time to save the girl's life.

The Brute—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 21.—Mayme tells her mother that her husband is a brute and mother comes to the house and has a bomb planted beside the steps. James comes home, is delighted to see mother, and then "beats" Mayme for not telling him she was coming. The beating is done by slapping her on the wrist. Mother shoots the cannon after dear daughter and blows her out the back door. Later mother decides to let Mayme fight her own battles.

The Careless Anarchist—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 21.—Ivan Petroff and Peter Vasillovitch are anarchists, and Ivan is in love with Anita, Peter's daughter. Anita, however, loves Jim, a young American, and Ivan decides he will kill Jim with his new explosive. Later, through some mixup, the bomb containing the explosive is handed back to Ivan and it explodes, killing him. Jim and Anita are then free to marry.

Double-Crossing Marmaduke—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 21.—Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare featured. Marmaduke wants to get a ring for Violet, but in attempting to take it from Gwendoline he is bumped in the nose by Bud. Horace also falls in love with Violet and he tries to get the rings, and the crooks knock Bud over the head in order to get into the house. Bud recovers and after the thieves have gotten the jewelry case he gives chase to them. The chase leads to the roof of a house, and Bud and Marmaduke fall through the skylight, smash through five floors and land in the basement. Bud takes the jewel case back to Gwendoline and she tells him that the jewels have never left her fingers.

The Range Girl and the Cowboy—SELIG—SEPTEMBER 21.—Tom Mix featured. Tom is given Buck's position as ranch foreman on Sid Jordan's ranch. Buck decides to "get even" and, with other cowboys, starts to rustle Jordan's cattle. Vicky, Sid's daughter, sees Buck change the brand on a young calf and she is later taken a prisoner. Tom, in search of the rustlers, finds Vicky's trail, and after an exciting revolver duel rescues Vicky, who can no longer withstand Tom's offers of marriage.

Dorothy — (TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 21.—Featuring Maurice Costello, Leah Baird and Mary Maurice. Dorothy Manners falls in love with Tom Marley, whose father is negotiating with Dorothy's father for an invention for the production of manufactured cotton goods. Just as Manners is about to sign an agreement with Marley he drops dead, and the latter forges the dead man's signature and obtains the signatures of two witnesses. Marley then carries the dead man to a lonely spot, where he is found, but unidentified. Five years later Marley is very rich and has taken his son into partnership. Dorothy finds a letter which starts a train of clues leading directly to Marley. He dies from a stroke of apoplexy, while Tom, after making restitution, marries Dorothy.

Cartoons in a Seminary—EDISON—SEPTEMBER 22.—Laura's companions at Miss Syntax's seminary are shown a copy of the "Grouch Chaser" by Laura's beau and get a great laugh out of "Silas Bunkum's Boarders' Picnic." A huge spider steals the old maid's wig and carries it up into the branches where a bird lays eggs in it. Later the bird gets a whiff of limburger cheese and drops into the open mouth of a dog. While the girls are looking at the book Miss Syntax comes along and Jack runs, leaving the book, which the teacher picks up and looks at the pictures of "Kid Kelly Krusoe," in which Billy reading of Robinson Crusoe and his man Friday, falls asleep and they have some funny adventures.

The Fable of the Through Train—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 22.—Anna May Walthall, Anzenette Moore, Willie Belmont and Eugene Acker featured. Two high school heliotropes, Lib and Angie, make a pact to be friends forever and ever. Each keeps her nightie at the other girl's house. Later Angie marries Wilbur, who is a hustler, and Lib marries Otis, who bulled his way into the stronghold of finance. After a lapse of years, Angie visits Lib. Angie calls Wilbur a false alarm, but Lib tells her she has a husband's love and fine children, and says that she is the wife of a successful man who occupies a niche in the wall of fame next door to the sister of Jesse James. Later they chirk up and pay attention to a well preserved bachelor who drops in to get warm. Moral: When wealth walks in the door, the press agent comes in through the window.

The Wolf's Prey—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 22.—Featuring Ollie Kirby and Marin Sais. George Duncan and his wife, Dorothy, are stopping at the Grand Hotel. Duncan is called out of town and his wife excites Langdon's cupidity by the wonderful pearls she wears. The lady writes her husband a letter, addressing the note merely to "Dearest," and Langdon steals the letter from the bellboy and realizes that it will make a powerful blackmailing instrument. He shows the letter to the woman, telling her he will give it to her husband, making him believe she is guilty of a clandestine love affair unless she gives him her jewels. She does this, but later the jewels are restored to Mrs. Duncan, and also the letter, through the aid of Frances Ballou, the house detective.

A Desert Romance—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 22.—Featuring Romaine Fielding and a strong cast. The young easterner comes to the waste of the desert's rim. He tastes of the bitter fruit of the cactus and the poison gurgles madly through his veins. He meets Chiquita, a Spanish dancer, and this sane youth is turned by this foreign incense into a mad animal bent on lust. His eastern sweetheart comes west and finds the wreck of a man, the shell of the youth she had known and loved. The story is an old one, but a true one to those who have lived and paid the price of the many desert honeymoons which have gone before. J. C. G.

Getting Rid of Aunt Kate—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 22.—Kate Price featured. Pa Jones and his two daughters, Helen and Susie, and their beaux, Fred and Tom, get along until Aunt Kate arrives. Pa doesn't have a minute's peace, and finally he appeals to Tom and Fred, who suggest getting a husband for Auntie. Old Bill Perkins is selected as the victim and within a week after his introduction to Aunt Kate she leaves the Jones family and becomes the bride of old Bill.

A Kentucky Episode—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 23. Charles Perley, Jack Mulhall and Augusta Anderson featured. Tom Theron is seen by Jack Benson, sweetheart of the judge's daughter, killing the judge. Benson is warned to leave the country and in the next township he meets the judge's wife and daughter, who upbraid him for cowardice for not telling them of what he knew. The information comes through a note from the Therons warning him to move on. Benson returns to the forbidden ground, tells the sheriff what he knows, and then fights a desperate battle with the Therons until help, summoned by the girl, arrives in the nick of time.

Snakeville's Hen Medic—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 23.—Sophie Pain, the lady doctor, hangs out her sign in Snakeville and Mustang Pete goes to call on the hen medic. Bloggie sends him a note that his wife wants him and himself acquires a sudden ailment. Pete tells Bloggie's wife that her husband is making love to the lady doctor, and she rushes to her office. Bloggie escapes and locks his wife, Pete, the hen medic, and Slippery Slim, the office boy, in the office, and then climbs to the roof and covers up the chimney. Pete later extracts a shell from a rifle and places it in the stove. The place is blown up and Bloggie falls into a watering trough.

The Last Rebel—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 23.—Featuring Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe and Kempton Green. Betty Carew receives word of her father's and sweetheart's death, and the overseer of the plantation proposes marriage to her. She is clasped in his embrace when a young crippled Yankee comes to her assistance. Betty recognizes in him a man who, early in the war, had saved her home from a band of Yankee foragers. He finds out the trouble and gives Betty his fortune to pay for the plantation, and Howard proposes to her and they are married. Clay, her sweetheart, who had not been killed, sees the ceremony and goes to call on the girl. Later Howard, realizing his wife's love for Clay, takes his place in the battle run and is killed, and Clay and Betty are reunited.

The Lesson of Narrow Street—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 23.—All-star cast featured. Phil Mayborn, a young artist, is induced to invest his little savings in Wall street. He meets Sheldon, the eccentric ruler of the street, and, mistaking him for a derelict because of his shabby appearance, asks him to pose for his painting, "What Wall Street Does for a Man." Sheldon consents, and takes a liking to the young man, and when Phil's broker, one of Sheldon's agents, absconds with all available funds, Sheldon brings the young man to his private office, where, after impressing upon him that the narrow street ruins men, body and soul, he gives the young man back his money.

An Unseen Enemy—BIOGRAPH (REISSUE)—SEPTEMBER 24.—Featuring Lillian and Dorothy Gish and Richard Harron. The young man places money in the safe at home and the maid-of-all-work telephones her friend, the crook. The young man's sisters return from a walk with the sweetheart of the younger sister and are locked in the room adjoining the parlor where the crook attacks the safe. They manage to telephone their brother, who rushes home just in time, and meanwhile the college boy, longing for the kiss his sweetheart had refused him, and with his help the crooks are captured just as they run out of the house.

Her Happiness (THREE REELS)—EDISON—SEPTEMBER 24.—Featuring Viola Dana and a strong all star cast. Viola Winters, who is the daughter of a banker, falls in love with Harry Palmers, a chauffeur in a small garage. Her father objects to them seeing each other and finally through the aid of Mrs. Curtis, who once had been a sweetheart of Viola's father, they elope to New York and are married. The girl's father vows he will never let her enter his house again. Later, Mrs. Curtis is killed and in her will she leaves everything she has in the world to the young couple. In the meantime Viola's father has been speculating with the bank's funds and is ruined and Viola's mother wires her to come home and they arrive just in time to cover the father's shortage and a reunion is effected.

A Daughter's Sacrifice—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 24.—Featuring Alice Joyce and Tom Moore. Tom Wells, a victim of drink, is unable to pay the rent to Steve, who announces his determination to throw the man into prison unless Alice, Tom's daughter, who is in love with a young farmer, consents to become his wife. Alice sacrifices her happiness and marries Steve, and Wells dies after dispatching a note to Martin beseeching him to look after his unhappy daughter. Martin arrives at Steve's home just as he is attacking his wife. A revolver is accidentally discharged, killing the brutal husband.

The Level—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 24.—A strong cast featured. Dorothy Brooks rejects the proposal of Philip Craxton, a young settlement worker, because she considers him beneath her station. Dorothy is in love with Alan Dart, a young society man, who is the father of Mary's child, a girl of the streets. Dorothy accepts his proposal and the wedding day comes, but Mary breaks up the wedding at the church. At home Dorothy sees herself garbed in the white robes of virtue casting a deaf ear to the cries of the unfortunate souls below her level. Then comes a vision of what true humanity stands for, and the next day when Alan tells her that he couldn't marry Mary and sink to her level, she tells him that he might have tried to raise her to his level, and Dorothy gives Philip another answer.

Back to the Primitive—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 24.—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew featured. Frances and Hugh, just married, have opposite tastes. He believes in the simple life and she in the ultra-modern. Frances, however, consents to try out his doctrine, and they go into the deep, primeval forest. She soon tires of this life, but determines to cure her husband of his fad and, claiming he should be consistent, she destroys all their actual necessities, even the matches. Hugh balks at eating raw meat, and the result is that they are both glad to get back to civilization and comfort.

The Girl Who Didn't Forget—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 25.—Featuring Helen Bray, Jack Mulhall and Alan Hale. The grocery clerk lends the girl his savings so she can go to the city. Here she is engaged for a stage production and writes the news to her sweetheart. He doesn't receive the letter, however, as he had gone to the city, but doesn't find her. Years pass and she becomes a star under a stage name, while he is the trusted employee of a large firm. He arouses the jealousy of his employer's son, who lavished many gifts on the star, and when shortage in the firm's account is discovered the son says that the cashier spent it on the actress; but the girl says that the boy had stolen the money in order to buy her costly presents.

When Conscience Sleeps—EDISON—SEPTEMBER 25.—Featuring Bessie Learn, Robert Walker and Sally Crute. Robert Selwyn, a wealthy broker, is happy with his wife and young daughter until he meets Grace Bailey, an actress. His wife having no suspicion of the truth attributes his indifferent manner to business worries. He leaves a pearl necklace which he has purchased to present to the woman who holds him in her power, on his desk and goes out. As he leaves the office he sees his wife in the path of an automobile and in springing forward to save her is himself struck and is in a critical condition for several days. In his dream he sees the accident reenacted only it is his wife who is knocked down and brought home dead. He sees the actress taking his wife's place in the home, but she has no interest in married life and a career as a mother. One of his employees brings the necklace to his home and Mrs. Selwyn brings it to her husband just as he awakens and he tells her he bought it to give to her upon their wedding anniversary and mentally resolves that never again will she have cause to even accuse him of neglect.

Affinities—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 25.—Richard C. Travers, Betty Scott, E. H. Calvert and Lillian Drew featured. Frank Mitchell invites Alice Thomas, and Jack Thomas invites Mary Mitchell to go on an affinity picnic. They both go to different islands in the lake a mile apart. Jack swims over to the other island for a boat and gets one loaded with champagne intended for Frank's party. Frank and Alice discover their loss and give chase. Jack takes Mary aboard the boat, and after getting to the mainland they get into Mary's own car, but she doesn't know it. After some mixup, Jack goes to his knees before Alice and Mary begs Frank's forgiveness, and all agree matters are even.

A Matter of Seconds—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 25—(AN EPISODE OF THE "HAZARDS OF HELEN" SERIES).—Helen Holmes featured. Dawson, a new fireman, approaches Helen and, seizing her in his arms, kisses her. Star, the engineer, sees this and compels Dawson to apologize to Helen. Dawson drowns his humiliation in drink and the next day is dismissed. He climbs aboard the freight as it pulls out and knocks the relief fireman unconscious, and then hurls Star from the train. Helen hears of this and, knowing that the train will pass the station, she mounts a horse and gallops down the track. Dashing alongside the train, Helen throws her lariat over a piece of lumber projecting from the side of one of the flat cars, hauls herself aboard the train and brings it to a halt. Dawson has been injured in leaping from the train and dies later.

Captain Kidd and Ditto—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 25.—Billie Reeves featured as Billie, who decides to become a second Captain Kidd. Griff also has the idea that he is a pirate bold, and he picks a sight-seeing boat and takes possession of it. But Nemesis is aboard, if not on the passenger list, and the only thing that cheers the would-be pirates is the fact that they will not be sent to jail for life, but hanged, and they go quietly with the officers, after inviting everyone to the execution.

The Auction Sale of Run Down Ranch—SELIG—SEPTEMBER 25.—Bill Herrick, owner of "Run Down" ranch, finds the land is worthless and arranges to sell it at auction. Tom Hickey, the foreman, and Vicky, the rancher's daughter, who is Tom's sweetheart, assist. Isaac Goldplate discovers oil on the place and offers $5,000 for the property, but later discovers that he had been duped out of $5,000. Tom gets the check cashed, and Herrick gives Tom and Vicky $1,000 each with which to start housekeeping.

From Out the Big Snows—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH — SEPTEMBER 25. — Featuring James Morrison and Dorothy Kelly. Harris, a young adventurer in the big snows of the Northwest, becomes a friend of Dr. Brandon, who warns him against Marie, a young and beautiful woman of the dance hall. Harris disregards this and Jean, the girl's half-breed lover, finds Marie in Harris arms. He conceives a fiendish plan and, with Harris, goes on a hunting expedition. In the dense forest he overpowers his victim, ties him to a tree, and leaves him to be devoured by the wolves. Brandon, after a long search, finds Harris just in time. After recovering from his experience, Harris kills Jean and is seen safely over the border line by Dr. Brandon.

The Runt -(TWO REELS) SELIG—SEPTEMBER 27.—Wheeler Oakman and Edith Johnson are featured in this two-reel story produced by Colin Campbell. Tom Reynolds, who is defrauding the government, is warned he will be arrested unless he leaves the village and departs. Years later, returning, he is attacked by one of the men who would have brought about his arrest in the long ago, but the "runt," a little ne'er-do-well, who leaps into the path of the bullet, saves his life for the moment, though later on a bullet kills him and the two die in each other's arms. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue.

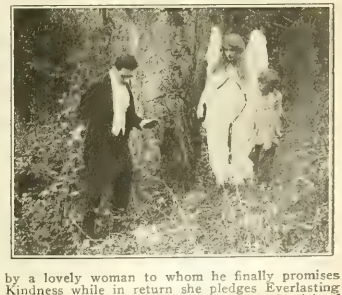
N. G. C.

The Ploughshare (FOUR REELS)—EDISON—OCTOBER 1.—Gertrude McCoy, Augustus Phillips and Robert Conness featured. Helene Leigh favors Jim Lawrence over her many other suitors. Her father learns that Jim has betrayed Jennie Strong, and he insists upon her becoming the wife of William, Jim's elder brother. Jim shoots and kills Jack Strong when he threatens him for bringing disgrace upon Jennie. An innocent man is accused of the murder. In a moment of remorse Jim confesses his crime to Helene and his brother. The latter deems it his duty to have Jim arrested, but Helene helps him to escape. The governor is tried for aiding the escape of the murderer. To save her husband Helen confesses that she alone is responsible. Jim has fled to South America, where he is killed. When word of his death is received Helene and the governor are acquitted. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Program

Helen's Babies—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—SEPTEMBER 14.—Harry Burton receives a letter from his sister, Helen, requesting him to come to her home and care for the two children while she is away. The bachelor does not yearn for exclusive control of his nephews, but when he comes to the postscript and finds that Alice Mayton, with whom he is secretly in love, is stopping at the summer hotel near Helen's home, an eager acceptance of his sister's invitation is forthcoming. After arriving at the place, the children play endless pranks upon him, but finally they atone for their mischief by appearing at the right time and helping their bashful uncle in his proposal to Alice. A little later the grateful uncle asks the little tots what they want, saying that he will see that every wish is gratified. The promises are made good and the marriage between Harry and Alice takes place.

The Twins of GL Ranch—THANHOUSER—SEPTEMBER 19.—The owner of GL ranch has just made a deal in horses, and while he is counting the cash one of his twin granddaughters sees two evil looking men looking in at the window. The grandfather is crippled with rheumatism, but the little girl quickly thinks up a plan to save the money. She picks up her big doll, telling her grandfather that the money will be safe in its dress. She goes into the kitchen, takes the money from her doll and gives the toy to her twin sister, telling her to let no one have it, and escapes out of the rear door, while the outlaws are busily engaged in beating down the sitting room door. The men naturally make for the little girl with the doll, but she leads them a chase, and coming to the edge of a cliff she throws the doll over. One man holds her while the other searches for the valueless toy, which he gets with difficulty. At this time a posse, headed by the other twin, dashes up and captures the angry men who find out that they have been tricked by the twin sisters.



Superstitious Sammy—FALSTAFF—SEPTEMBER 13.—In which Sammy, a votary to superstition of all kinds meets with much ill luck. But things do not take a serious turn until his girl accepts him and there is difficulty in selecting the date of the marriage. Sammy objects to Thursday, remembering the old song, "Thursday always was my Jonah Day," and he shakes with horror when she mentions Friday. The ceremony is set for Saturday, but Sammy does not appear, explaining that a black cat has crossed his path, and that he has had to turn back. The wedding guests are sent away, but they return on Sunday only to face another disappointment. This time Sammy forgets the ring, and everyone knows that you must not go back for anything after having once left your home, without being prepared for bad luck. So the guests are again sent away in an indignant mood. On Monday, Sammy receives a letter from the young lady, explaining that it is unlucky for a bride to wait too long, so she has annexed the best man.

Simon's Swimming Soul Mate FALSTAFF—SEPTEMBER 20.—The only work Susie's father ever did was to blow smoke through a pipe, therefore he is not friendly to Simon, Susie's lover, because, in his own words, "Someone must do the work around the dear old farm." Susie is tired of working around the farm, however, and she elopes with Simon, leaving father closely attached to his chair by means of a little glue. Finally the elopers reach a village and make for the justice of the peace. But the last named individual is out fishing, and as the couple are in a hurry they swim out to him, and hanging on to the back of the boat, implore him to marry them. The only objection the judge has is that there are no witnesses. But the arrival of the life guards overcomes this. Father arrives in a motor boat a little later, but the thing is done, and the united pair swim off.

Everyheart—BEAUTY—SEPTEMBER 21.—Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber are featured in this beautiful bit of symbolism that depicts "Everyheart" stepping in the Garden of God's Gifts, while on his way from the Realm of Spirit to the Sordid World, to obtain an abundance of Kindness and Protection. He is admonished that "according to life's eternal law every unused gift shall be taken away." Forgetting the warning, Everyhart is about to trade his gifts of Kindness and Protection for Money, Passion and Selfishness which are offered him, but he is saved by a lovely woman to whom he finally promises Kindness while in return she pledges Everlasting Love. When Everyheart becomes neglectful of

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

his kindness to the woman she sinks to the floor and when a physician is summoned Everyheart is told that only Kindness can cure her. After a vain search for his gifts of Kindness, all of which have been taken from him, he himself performs a kindness to an humble lad and finds the lad transformed to a new supply of Gifts of Kindness with which he finally restores the woman to her former place in his affection. N. G. C.

The Dead Man's Keys—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—SEPTEMBER 21.—A young clerk is accused of the murder of his employer, a wealthy financier, and circumstantial evidence is strongly against the man. At the trial his sweetheart and her grandfather, an old locksmith, are present. During the examination of the financier's keys the locksmith asks to see one. He declares that it is identical with the wax model that the chief clerk had brought to him the night before the murder, and that he had made the key for him. He then takes out the lump of wax with the key's impression. The chief clerk blandly denies the incident. However, through his spectacles, the old man sees a thumb print on the wax which is not his own. Taking his customer unawares, he grabs his hand and impresses his thumb upon the wax near the other mark. The marks are identical, and the chief clerk confesses, and his carefully laid plans incriminating the younger clerk are laid bare.

Never Again—KAY-BEE—SEPTEMBER 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Davis live in a lonely part of the Catskills. They are entertaining a young chap named Roy Gill and invite Ellen Watts, a young New York girl, for a visit. Ellen, however, misses the train, and is not met at the country station when she arrives. When Ellen gets to the house and finds the inmates asleep, she tries to effect an entrance through the window, but is scared away after a couple of shots are fired at her. Then she is chased by the dog, who in his zeal pulls the kennel after him. But the beast is stopped short in his mad career by a fence. Then the girl meets with more discomfiture at the station, where she is chased up onto the roof by a bear. In the pouring rain Ellen lifts her hands to Heaven and swears that never again will she leave the City.

The Woman, the Lion and the Man—(TWO REELS)—CENTAUR — SEPTEMBER 23. — Featuring Mlle. Ottawa and Capt. Bonavita. While performing with wild animals, Mrs. Fairfield recognizes Mancey, a gentleman crook, who had been the cause of her father's downfall. Mancey writes a note to Mrs. Fairfield demanding that she meet him and a plan suggests itself to her and she tells him to come to her room late that night. Fairfield overhears his wife's words and when he returns to the arena he meets Nero, the lion, his special pet. Mrs. Fairfield that night brings over her revolver and Mancey is led into the room. As he comes into the room the curtains part and he sees a lion. It is a duel in the dark between man and Nero. Later Mrs. Fairfield and her husband hear the lion's roar and the fall of bodies and as the picture closes husband and wife are in each other's arms.

It Was Like This.—AMERICAN—SEPTEMBER 24.—Henry Otto has made a splendid story of this one reel drama featuring Edward Coxen and Winnifret Greenwood. Richard Adams, anxiously waiting the arrival of a son one evening is amazed to discover, when the doctor returns with the joyful news that, "It's a boy," that the doctor's hat and overcoat have disappeared. When the doctor begs an explanation, Adams explains it was like this: and the rest of the story is a vision showing what transpired as the new boy arrived in the world. A burglar entered the house, was cornered by Adams, but later managed to overpower Mary the maid and then rifled the house to appropriate the coat and hat of the doctor.

The Treasure Box—CUB—SEPTEMBER 24.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry, while strolling through the park, finds a large sum of money and receives as a reward a quarter. He enters a restaurant to dine, but his quarter is stolen and when the time comes for him to pay he can't do it. He takes refuge in the back of the cafe, where he overhears two blackmailers discussing their plans. Just then Jerry's pursuers enter the blackmailers room and the machine is thrown under the table under which Jerry is hiding. Because of the ticking of the clock set to explode the machine Jerry believes the box to be filled with watches and other jewelry. Later when the man for whom the machine was meant finds Jerry he takes him home with him, where Jerry meets his daughter. Jerry has been carrying the bomb with him all the time and at six o'clock it explodes. When the dust clears away Jerry is seen hanging from the chandelier.

Cats, Cash and a Cook Book—BEAUTY—SEPTEMBER 25.—John Steppling, Anne Christy and Bessie Banks are featured in this one-reel production concerning John Brown and his wife, who are residents of a city and fond of high living. Brown's aunt Clarinda responds to an appeal for a loan of $5,000 with a letter to the effect that she will shortly visit the Brown's, bringing with her a jewel beyond price. Brown, who imagines a priceless gem, is disappointed to learn upon Aunt Clarinda's arrival that she has referred to a cook book containing her favorite recipes. To get rid of her when he finds that all of her money is invested in a home for sickly cats, he induces a friend of his to impersonate a burglar. Aunt Clarinda, after chasing pseudo burglar encounters and captures a real one, thereby winning a reward of $5,000, which she turns over to Brown.

Merely Players—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—SEPTEMBER 26.—To fan a flame of interest in his show among the indifferent country folk of the small country town in which they are stranded, manager Wilbur King conceives the idea of staging a sham hold up and attempted abduction of his leading lady, Vasaline Limelight. The editor of the town sheet agrees to write up the scene in sensational style. Irving Mansfield is the central figure in the highway kidnaping episode. Harry Steadfast, the rival lover, happens along and accepts the abduction in earnest. He rushes in and pummels the unsuspecting tragedian almost to death. The editor, realizing that the cat is out of the bag, refuses to print the story, but being pressed for news, he finally decides to print the story as it happened, with Steadfast's blunder as the feature. To further the interests of the company, Miss Limelight makes a sacrifice and marries Steadfast. Her love for him, however, is aroused, when, later, in New York, in the big scene of the play, he nearly chokes the individual who has been paying attentions to her.

Universal Program

It Almost Happened—NESTOR—AUGUST 20.—Mrs. Gordon is intensely jealous of her husband, who has an eye for feminine charms whenever he sees them. Mr. Gordon, on his part, is just as jealous of his wife, and always handles roughly the males who pay attentions to her. Mr. Cutter has a room in the propinquity of the Gordon's room. He receives notice from his wife that she is going to visit him, and is filled with rage. When Mrs. Gordon is shut out of her room because of a spring lock, Mr. Cutter sees her distress and invites her into his room. Then a knock is heard, and Mrs. Cutter enters. The thing is finally explained satisfactorily, and the three start out for a stroll. Gordon, who has become tired of playing by himself on the beach, cannot find his wife, and learning from old maid that she has gone out with Cutter, he exits shooting in every direction. Finally he locates the three and there is shooting and running on every side. After the war has subsided, Gordon and his wife make up, each promising to curb their jealousy. The Cutters follow their example.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 184—UNIVERSAL—SEPTEMBER 15.—Yacht Josephine wins trophy at Chicago, Ill.; ex-Governor Slaton of Georgia films comedy, Universal City, Calif.; Robert A. Gardner new golf champion; thrilling auto race at Newark, N. J.; consecrating Bishop at Los Angeles, Calif.; Cardinal Gibbons visits White House as peace emissary of Pope; Wilson hurls first ball at G. A. R. benefit at Washington D. C.; Pike's Peak auto highway opened by Senator; Arabic survivors reach Queenstown; Italians leave U. S. to fight for fatherland; scene on alligator farm near Los Angeles; cartoons by Hy. Mayer.

The Tenor—(THREE REELS)—GOLD SEAL—SEPTEMBER 21.—Antonio and Paula Sartori are left orphans by the death of their mother in Italy. Paula is adopted by a rich American woman, and Antonio by the chief of a band of musicians. Years later later Paula, now a famous surgeon, marries Genevieve Palmer, an heiress. Antonio and the chief's daughter, Marianna, have grown up together, and although she loves him passionately, he is only lukewarm. When Antonio and Marianna visit America their singing is the talk of the hour. Genevieve, who has left Paula on account of his using drugs, meets Antonio, and the latter's passions are aroused. Paula arrives and there is a touching meeting between the long separated brothers. Antonio takes Paula to see his sweetheart. At the meeting Paula denounces the woman, telling his brother she is his wife. In a fit of rage Paula falls dead. At last Antonio realizes the kind of a woman Genevieve is, and realizes that Marianna has always held his true love. A touching reconcilition takes place between them.

His Home Coming—IMP—SEPTEMBER 21.—Mr. Move is envious of Mr. Quick's beautiful house next door, and is forever begging his wife to try to rent it. The Quicks show no disposition to move out, however. While Mr. Move is away on business, his wife sees a "To Let" sign on the Quicks' house and rents it at once. Then she forgets to mail the letter to her husband, telling him of her move. Mr. Newcomer rents Mrs. Move's old house and moving begins all around. Mr. Move finishes his business and comes home on the midnight train. Not wishing to disturb his wife, he takes off his shoes, ascends the stairs in the darkness and starts to undress. Mr. Newcomer arrives, sees a pair of masculine shoes and throws them away. They land at Mrs. Move's feet, and recognizing them, she starts out on a run. In the meantime Move awakens Mrs. Newcomer who screams in terror. Newcomer throws Move out of the house and he lands in his wife's arms. Explanations ensue when Newcomer delivers the letter that Mrs. Move had forgotten to post.

Scandal in the Family—(TWO REELS)—L-KO—SEPTEMBER 22.—Father, with two other old fossils, is sitting on a park bench. A swell dame appears and the other two edge farther out and go over and get acquainted. Just as they are getting along nicely, the lady's escort swings into view. The guilty pair get their faces slapped, and as father is congratulating himself on his abstinence, the escort notices him and gives him a slap for good measure. He is knocked into a young chap who doesn't like to be bumped into. He tells father so, emphasizing his point with a smack in the jaw. At home daughter insists that he meet her new sweetheart. The latter is none other than the chap who had smacked him. Sweetheart is ordered out, but he returns, disguised as a girl. Father and Hank, the park escort, try to elope with him. This leads to disagreements. A taxi runs away, and Hank is hung up on a trolley wire. There is a marriage, but neither father nor Hank is the bridegroom.

The Cry of the First-Born—(THREE REELS)—LAEMMLE—SEPTEMBER 23.—Cecil Crenwell marries Uana, a Hawaiian girl, and a child is born to them. Receiving a cablegram from England, informing him of his father's approaching death, he departs, promising Uana to return soon. The mother and child are left with Lieutenant Graham of the Government Post. The latter's attentions are repulsed by the girl, and in revenge he writes Crenwell that Uana and the child perished in an epidemic of fever. Crenwell does not return to the Islands. Years pass and Crenwell has married in England. His second child is born. To complete his revenge Graham informs Uana of her husband's marriage in England, and she kills herself. Crenwell, through a friend, hears the whole story of his Hawaiian wife. With his wife, Lillian, he departs for the Islands, determined to give the first-born his birthright. Naipo, the first-born son, has grown up to hate his father. Seeking revenge, he attempts to kill Lillian's child, but the child is saved providentially, and Naipo falls down a cliff to his death.

When the Call Came—(TWO REELS)—IMP—SEPTEMBER 24.—Charlie, the son of Rev. Sterling, is in love with Rose, the daughter of old Elias. The latter is narrow minded, and not of the same creed as the minister, and as he sees the affair between the young people he consults with the minister. The Rev. Sterling, as alarmed as Elias is of a mesalliance, bundles his son off to college. Several years pass. Elias, through a marriage broker, is forcing his daughter to marry. At the moment she is to sign the contract she hears Charlie's voice in the church next door, where the young minister is giving an inaugural address. Rose flings down the pen and flees from the room, leaving the throng horrified and her father bowed down with shame. Charlie receives a "call" to a distant pastorate—the position to which he has been looking forward to. Rose sees in his pleasure her bitterness. How can he accept if she is to be Mrs. Sterling in a close New England community? So she returns to her stricken father, who has repented of his deeds.

When Lizzie Went to Sea—NESTOR—SEPTEMBER 24.—Eddie the barber, is deeply in love with Lizzie, the fruit vendor, and the only cloud in their sky is Tony. Tony has two villains kidnap Lizzie, but Eddie has heard her screams and starts in pursuit. Eddie finally locates his love and they both board a passing steamer by means of a launch. But the three plotters get on their

EVERY DIRECTOR Of Motion Pictures Should Have This Book

Motion Picture Photography

It is the most concise, comprehensive work ever published on the subject and will add to the sum total of any director's fund of knowledge.

With a years subscription to Motography, $5.00 postpaid anywhere in the United States.

MOTOGRAPHY
Monadnock Bldg.
CHICAGO

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address

Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

trail, board the steamer, and again get Lizzie into their clutches. Eddie misses her and a long chase ensues, in which Eddie is mistaken for the villain by the sailors, and is about to be roughly dealt with, when the captain and Lizzie arrive in time. The villains meet their just deserts and are put in irons, while Eddie and his sweetheart enjoy life at its best.

A Message for Help—(TWO REELS)—BISON—SEPTEMBER 25.—Lieutenant Richards, in charge of a telegraph engineering corps in the West, amuses himself with the artlessness of Mona, a young Indian maid. She thinks that she has his love and rapidly loses all interest in the young brave, Choco. In an uprising that follows, Mona helps the young engineer to get water to his stranded men who are awaiting reinforcements. After the cavalry arrive and the uprising is over, Choco escapes and determines upon a terrible revenge. With bow and arrows he stealthily awaits a chance to kill Richard, for he knows the lieutenant will not marry the girl. When the time for Richard's departure to the East arrives, Noma has a premonition of disaster, and will not leave him. He finally gets her to sit by a telegraph pole and listen to the "love song" saying that he will return soon. He puts his coat over her shoulders and his hat on her head, leaving her so. Choco steals up, sees what he supposes to be the accursed white face, and a quivering arrow pierces the girl's breast. In the East Richard clasps the "girl he left behind him," while Choco stands grief-stricken by the grave of little Mona in the desert.

He Wouldn't Support His Wife—JOKER—SEPTEMBER 25.—After the honeymoon, Shultz develops a growing laziness, and his wife becomes desperate when she is forced to perform all manner of difficult tasks. A law has been passed declaring that lazy husbands will be forced to work by the state and their wages paid to their wives. Shultz is arrested and put to work on a road gang near his home. When he sees the chief pay his wife the wages due him he grows desperate. That night Shultz escapes from the jail. The chief is taking Mrs. Shultz to a masquerade ball. He spies Shultz in the garden and pays him $50 for his costume, as he cannot get in without one. Just then the jail guards come up, and as they both look alike, the man in the convict's suit is hauled off to jail. Shultz finds his wife, and showing her the $50 he received from the chief, peace follows.

Every Man's Money—POWERS—SEPTEMBER 25.—Grant Darcy is a wealthy young bachelor given to enjoyment. His sister Irma wishes him to marry Laura Drexler, ward of Mr. and Mrs. Morley. Morley is in financial straits and does all he can to try to marry his ward to Grant. Morley gives his chauffeur instructions to see that the pair are left alone during the course of a drive. Laura sprains her ankle and as Grant takes her up in his arms he is overcome with passion. They are married the same day. Morley blusters at Grant for being alone with his niece, thinking that he will force him to marry Laura, but this is changed to chagrin when they notify him they are already married. Grant loses his fortune, but because he believes that she married him for his money he resolves to leave her. But when Laura pleads her innocence and he sees the love she has for him is real, he decides to remain and make a new start.

Avenged by a Fish—L-KO—SEPTEMBER 26.—Father and daughter are at the beach, but being unconcerned, father wanders off to get the salt air. A flirt rescues daughter from a vicious sardine in the surf and makes a hit with her. She agrees to wait on the sand for him while he goes for an umbrella. During his absence, a life-saver annoys her, and when the flirt returns she tells him about it. He declares he will disguise as a bathing girl, lure the life-saver with his beauty, and then give him the beating of his life. Father has a fuss with a lady and she tears his bathing suit from him. He later finds a bathing suit, but it has "Life Saver" on it. Therefore when daughter's admirer sees the gentleman with "Life Saver" on his suit, he concludes this is his prey and attempts to beat him up. But things do not turn out as anyone expects. The flirt and some officers of the law fall into the ocean where a shark is cruising. More people fall off the pier and there is confusion throughout. The life-saver comes out well, however, as he rescues daughter from the surf.

The Fascination of the Fleur de Lis—(THREE REELS)—REX—SEPTEMBER 26.—A peasant woman is fascinated by the fleur de lis, and craves one from the garden of the Duke of Salfoulrug, but is turned away by the gardener, who says that only those of royal blood may wear the fleur de lis. The woman spends hours watching the flower, and when her child is born, there is a fleur de lis birthmark on her shoulder. Fifteen years elapse and Lisette, the child, breaks the heart of her father, and her lover, Antoine, by marrying the Duke. She cares little for him, save that through him she possesses the fleur de lis on her state coach. The Duke and Duchess visit the King. The Duke sees Lisette in the arms of the King, and realizing that all is over, he commits suicide. Lisette is now installed in the palace as the King's mistress. The King is successfully operated upon by Antoine, now a famous surgeon. Antoine repulses Lisette, saying that the fleur de lis has come between them. When he leaves her she takes up a hot poker and applies it unflinchingly to her birthmark. Another lapse of time and Lisette, the Magdalene, stands over her mother's grave. Antoine, unable to stay away longer, follows her there, and they fall into each other's arms.

Feature Programs

Fox

Two Orphans—(FIVE REELS)—FOX.—Theda Bara featured. The plot centers around the lives of two orphan girls, Henriette and Louise, the latter being blind from birth. They come from the provinces into Paris and Henriette is drugged and taken to the apartments of the Marquis de Presles and Louise later falls into the hands of Mother Frochard and is taken into the slums, where Jacques, the son of Mother Frochard, and Pierre, his brother, a crippled hunchback, live. Henriette goes to the den to free Louise and the Chevalier de Vaudrey rescues Henriette from the Marquis and gathers his aunt and uncle, Count and Countess de Liniere, into the fracas. Louise, the blind girl, turns out to be the daughter of the Countess by her former marriage. Jacques is slain, Louise is restored to her mother, and the Chevalier is reunited to Henriette.

The Fixer—(FIVE REELS)—KLEINE.—Featuring George Bickel and Harry Watson. Christopher Cutting, the Fixer, starts trouble by telling a lie to Isabel Dare so that William Fowler can get away to go to a bachelor dinner. Bill gets into trouble and is sentenced to thirty days in jail, but escapes. The constable pursues him and just after his marriage to Isabel he is forced to return to the jail and the Fixer tells his bride that he had been sent to Mexico by the government. Bill and Cutting to make good have to go to Mexico and the real government agent also goes. When he returns Bill arrives in a gorgeous uniform and the real William Fowler arrives in the town at the same time. Bill is supposed to be dead, and with the dead man, who is supposed to be living, and the living man who is supposed to be dead, the last reel is a lively one. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Metro

An Enemy to Society—(FIVE REELS)—METRO—SEPTEMBER 27.—Featuring Lois Meredith and

Hamilton Revelle. Steven Adams has been reared as an enemy to society and he believes his mission is to rob the rich and help the poor.

On a return trip to America he meets on board the ship Steven Janissary, head of the great chain of Janissary grocery stores, and his ward, Decima Duress. Adams falls in love with the girl and he tells his pals he is going to live straight. Meanwhile Janissary holds over one Alderman McKenna some falsified indictments, which he keeps in his safe and which Decima asks Adams to get for her. Then it is that Balthazar Van Tromp tells Janissary that his safe is being robbed, and when Adams is being led down the stairs by the police Van Tromp tells Janissary that Adams is his son, whom he (Van Tromp) had kidnapped years before and reared in a life of crime. Adams and his father are reunited and later Steven Adams marries Decima Duress.

Mutual Masterpictures

The Man from Oregon—(FOUR REELS)—NEW YORK M. P. CORP.—A gripping story in which Howard Hickman, Herschel Mayall and Clara Williams are featured. Harriet Lane, a tool of Landers, a railroad lobbyist, gets "Honest Jim" Martin, senator from Oregon, to her apartments and there manages to have her photo taken with the senator in a compromising attitude, the threat being made that the picture will be given the newspapers unless Senator Martin consents to vote for the land grab bill. Next day he makes a stirring speech against it, and the girl by a clever ruse gets the negative out of Landers' safe and smashes it. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Under Southern Skies—(FIVE REELS)—BROADWAY UNIVERSAL—SEPTEMBER 20.—In this story the rival lover leads the girl to believe that her supposedly dead mother was a negress. He tells her that he will never reveal this disgrace if she will marry him. The lover of her choice cannot understand her refusal, but submits to his fate. On the wedding day, however, the schemer's plot is exposed by the sudden appearance of the girl's mother, who had long since absconded with another. The wedding is cut short, and after another attempt to interrupt the course of true love the villain is killed and the lovers united in happy marriage. For a longer review see another page, this issue.

North American

The Rose in the Dust—(CHAPTER 22, "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY")—AMERICAN.—The fighting in the circus following the killing of the lion tamer by one of her beasts is continued as this chapter resumes the story and all the principles are seen to escape, the diamond being carried by its finder to a lonely barn, where it is hidden and later is shaken down into the manger below. Arthur Stanley attempts to learn by wire from Richmond, Va., whether Esther is in Los Angeles. When the telegram in reply is seen by Blair he later changes its meaning so that Arthur is still convinced he is mistaken in thinking he saw Esther. Ere the chapter ends he obtains another glimpse of her, however. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 72—PATHE—SEPTEMBER 8.—Express track built above the original elevated railroad, New York City, N. Y.; steps leading to the Capitol are re-laid at Washington, D. C.; Mile cycle championship is won by Frank L. Kramer at Newark, N. J.; cartoon; Pathe American fashions; S. S. Admiral Watson partially sunk by steamer at Seattle, Wash.; many notables attend Exposition and Horse Show at Rochester, N. Y.; at "Denishawn" in Los Angeles the shrine of the ultra-dansant cult, society leaders enjoy the blessings of the Grecian physical culture in the Isadora Duncan style.

Pathe News No. 73—PATHE.—Lieut. Com. Ellis perfects self-scoring target; military exercises of troops at San Francisco, Calif.; homecoming day celebration at Waterloo, Ill.; Dr. Dumba, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, leaving the embassy at Washington; President Wilson opens ball game organized by citizens of the G. A. R.; General Goethals of Panama Canal fame visits Portland, Oregon; William M. Johnson defeats Maurice E. McLoughlin in match for the National Tennis Championship, Forest Hills, L. I.; Portsmouth burned at water's edge and sunk off Governor's Island, Boston, Mass.; yacht Josephine wins first race against Valiant of the Chicago Yacht Club; swimming meet held at Russell Square Playground for girls under sirteen years of age.

Neal of the Navy — (TWO REELS) — CHAPTER FOUR, ENTITLED "THE TATTERED PARCHMENT."—Mrs. Hardin and Annette accept Inez Castro's invitation to visit her at her Newport home. Neal is given a leave of absence and calls to see his mother and Annette. Hernandez is discovered on the grounds of the Castro cottage by Neal, who recognizes him as one of the men who escaped from the revenue officers. Young Hardin follows him to a hut near the shore. Hernandez instructs Inez to take Annette for a sail. Inez pretends to be suddenly taken ill and asks Annette to take her to the hut. In the meantime, sailors are sent to arrest Hernandez. They arrive at the place just as Hernandez has found the charts which Annette carries with her. He escapes with half of the parchment. For a longer review, see another page this issue.

The Toilers of the Sea—(THREE REELS)—PATHE-BALBOA.—Featuring Dorothy Davenport as the fisherman's daughter, who is in love with young Scott. Her father wishes her to marry Captain Dennison, but she refuses. Dennison's sister is in love with Scott, and together they plan to steal a fishing net and accüse Scott of the theft. The latter proves his innocence and, aided by his sweetheart's mother, elopes with Lotta. They return to the village and are forgiven by Bruce.

Some Baby — (SPLIT REEL) — PATHE-ROLIN.—Lonesome Luke is given money and sent to meet his employer's "baby" niece. The uncle does not like children and he spends the afternoon with "Florrie." After spending all his money, he learns that Florrie wears false teeth and a wig. He is further put out with himself when he sees his "baby" niece, a beautiful young girl in whose company Luke has spent a most enjoyable afternoon. The picture is thoroughly amusing. On the same reel with:

Workers of the French Soudan—PATHE.—Instructing and entertaining pictures of the natives of the French Soudan, who use primitive implements in constructing furniture of bamboo.

Via Wireless — (FIVE REELS) — PATHE GOLD ROOSTER PLAY.—Featuring Gail Kane and Bruce McRae in this adaptation from the play by Winchell Smith and Paul Armstrong. On his return from Turkey to appear before a board which is investigating the failure of his gun which has been accepted by the government, Lieutenant Sommers receives the wireless distress signal from the Durant yacht. He rescues Frances Durant. Frances and Sommers are in love, but a misunderstanding had been caused by Sommers' rival, Pinkney. In America the lieutenant proves that the failure of his invention was deliberately caused by Pinkney. In an attempt to escape in an automobile, the latter is killed. Sommers and Frances marry. For a longer review, see another page this issue.

Universal Special

Business Is Business—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 13.—Featuring Nat Goodwin as Isadore Lechat, a man with recently acquired wealth, who lets nothing interfere with business. He attempts to sell his daughter in marriage to a nobleman, but she is already deep in a love affair. His son, the idol of his eye, who frequents Parisian cafes, is killed in an automobile accident. His wife, because of his disowning his daughter, leaves him and finally his mistress comes to his home and is accidentally killed. All these things serve to make the man realize that there are other things in life besides business. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Broken Coin—FOURTEENTH EPISODE—WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 20.—At the end of episode thirteen Sachio and his army are surprised by Count Frederick and his troops and the war between Grahaffen and Gretzhoffen is on. As Frederick is about to give up to the enemy Kitty arrives on the field of battle with a newly formed regiment. Roleaux, trying to get to Kitty, is captured and imprisoned in the palace of Grahaffen. Ultimately Kitty and Frederick chase Sachio and his men to the last mentioned palace. In the meantime Roleaux has escaped from the guards, procured the coins, and started off for Gretzhoffen on a fast yacht. Sachio gives chase in a torpedo boat. Nearing the fort of Gretz-

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

MINUSA

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Uncle Sam at Work

BRAND NEW CHAPLINS

His Trysting Place
Musical Career
Rounders
Fatal Mallet
Mabel's Married Life
His New Profession
Those Love Pangs
The Face Upon the Barroom Floor
and 25 others coming.

Peerless Film Exchange

CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

We Furnish Cameramen
ALSO DO
PRINTING AND DEVELOPING OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
We guarantee all work. Give prompt delivery, at lowest prices
Standard Motion Picture Company
1621—5 So. Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

hoffen, the yacht, mistaken for that of the enemy, is fired upon, but Roleaux is rescued by

Kitty and Frederick in a dirigible just as the boat sinks.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

The Circular Staircase—(Five Reels)—Selig—September 20.—Eugenie Besserer, with a strong cast, featured. At Sunnyside, where Aunt Ray Innes and her nephew and niece come to stay there is much mystery and many grotesque happenings, a shot in the night, two dead bodies lying at the foot of the circular staircase, the disappearance of her nephew and her niece's fiance, Jack Bailey, the injury of her housekeeper, Mrs. Watson and the death of old Tom, the colored servant. Later there is a visit to a lonely graveyard and Aunt Ray battles with a desperate criminal in a secret room before the tangled threads of destiny woven by the Fates were finally unravelled. For a longer review see another page this issue. J. C. G.

Associated Service

Released During the Week of September 20.

Her Devoted Son—Liberty—September 20.—Burns, a rich farmer in Scotland, holds a mortgage on the farm owned by Mrs. Thomas and her son, Paul, who is in love with Burns' daughter, Esther. Paul leaves for America to earn money. Mona Higgins, the postmaster's daughter, who is also in love with the young man, destroys all mail between Paul, his mother and Esther. Paul receives $5,000 reward for rescuing his master's baby from a gypsy kidnaper, and returns home just in time to rescue the old homestead and marry Esther.

Borrowing Hogan—(Two Reels)—Santa Barbara.—Hogan, manager of a small dramatic company, finds himself in the city broke, but he gets shelter in the house of Mrs. McStinger. His blarneying tongue and his evident admiration for her wins her heart, and she takes the shelterless Hogan in. Later the company is again on its feet, but Hogan is found to be in pawn. He is incarcerated in his room by the landlady and made a close prisoner, but later he escapes and joins the company.

The Happy Awakening — Banner. — The city chap falls in love with the beautiful daughter of a rancher, and Rube, a farm hand, is also in love with the girl. Rube dreams that the girl has been decoyed to the city and there forced to don male attire and become assistant to a gang of thieves. He takes a hand himself and succeeds in rescuing the heroine from her surroundings and bringing her back home. Rube later awakens and learns that the girl and the stranger are still bent on a flirtation.

A Watery Romance—Federal.—Mr. Smaltz and Mr. Fish are in love with the same girl, who gives neither encouragement. Smaltz goes out one morning and meets the girl, and Fish later comes upon them and asks her to go for a row. Smaltz bores a hole in his rival's boat and when Mabel and Fish get out in the middle of the lake the hole begins filling the boat with water. Smaltz jumps in another boat and rescues Mabel and Fish, and then kicks Fish back into the water. Both are locked in jail, and Mabel, coming to bail them out, falls in love with the chief and elopes with him.

Accusing Finger—(Two Reels)—Empire.—The girl's favored suitor is locked in the bank vault by one of her other lovers. Later his conscience troubles him and he hastens to the vault, where the finger of the time clock is pointing to the hour of 12. He sees the safe about to be blown up by a cracksman and he overpowers the robber, but the alarm has been turned, and the banker, his daughter, and the police arrive. The vault is opened and the dying clerk lives long enough to point an accusing finger at the trembling fellow clerk. He is convicted of willful murder. He awakens to find that he is standing at the vault door with the crime only a figment in his brain. Later we see a wedding ceremony performed with the tempted man as the best man at his rival's nuptials.

A Cattle Queen's Romance—(Two Reels)—Romona.—Muriel Dallia, a western girl, is left a ranch by her father with the desire that she marry Edward Douglas, an Englishman, who abhors the idea of marrying a rough western girl, but having spent his fortune, he is persuaded to go to America. Muriel falls in love with a strange cowboy and refuses Edward's proposal, and that night the foreman brings to the ranch a large sum of money, and both the Englishman and a half-breed attempt to steal it. The half-breed is bribed by the Englishman to assist in abducting the girl and the money is placed in the cowboy's pocket. The next morning he is discharged, but Muriel is sure he is innocent. She is later carried away by the half-breed, but rescued by Bart and the half-breed confesses. The Englishman is sent to town under guard and it is evident that Bart will soon be the boss of the ranch.

A Shattered Romance—(Two Reels)—Deer.—Lillian Wiggins, a society girl, comes across Jack Bryce, a young artist, and is infatuated with him. She arranged to have her portrait painted, and soon afterward he proposes and is accepted. Soon after their betrothal Lillian is riding along the country road when she sees a little girl fighting with a great eagle, and learns that the eagle has stolen the little girl's brother. Lillian takes the baby and the girl to their home, where she finds the mother sick in bed and also sees a picture of her fiance holding the little girl in his lap. She learns the little girl is his daughter, and so she slips the photo into her bosom and takes Violet home with her. That evening when the artist calls Lillian confronts him with his daughter and, taking her by the hand, he goes home and begs forgiveness from his wife.

SOME NEW THEATERS

The Majestic Photo Play company, Lima, $10,000; F. J. Zanone, Henry Michael, I. M. Zanone, Theodore Michael and Samuel Michael.

LISTEN!

It's Zippy, Snappy and Full of Punch "THE VITAGRAPH BULLETIN"

Send for It!!!

"Willie Stayed Single"
Comedy.....MONDAY, SEPT. 20
Weary Willie has a chance to get three square meals a day without working. All he has to do is to marry the widow boarding house mistress. It looks easy, but see what happened. An all-star cast.

"Dorothy"
Two-Part Drama.....TUESDAY, SEPT. 21
An inventor's daughter uncovers the theft of her father's invention, and finds the guilty man is her lover's father. MAURICE COSTELLO, LEAH BAIRD and VAN DYKE BROOKE are the principals.

"Getting Rid of Aunt Kate"
Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 22
She is husky and strong-minded and upsets a peaceful household. Her nieces and their beaux think up a plan to get rid of her, which works like a charm, besides providing a heap of fun. Presenting KATE PRICE, MARY ANDERSON, HARRY FISHER and FRANK BUNNY.

"The Lesson of the Narrow Street"
Drama.....THURSDAY, SEPT. 23
What gambling in Wall Street does to a man is strongly impressed upon a young artist. He learns his lesson and much happiness results. EDWARD ELKAS, S. RANKIN DREW and MARY MAURICE are the cast.

"Back to the Primitive"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, SEPT. 24
Frances adopts her husband's fad of the Primitive Life to please him. He is pretty radical, but she carries it still further, until he finally balks at eating raw meat, and the inevitable result is they are both glad to get back to civilization.

"From Out of the Big Snows"
Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature. SATURDAY, SEPT. 25
A vigorous story of adventure in the Big Snows of the Northwest. Edwin Harris falls in love with a beautiful dance hall girl, arousing her half-breed lover's jealousy. But for the intervention of a young doctor, the half-breed's fiendish vengeance would have been carried out. JAMES MORRISON, DOROTHY KELLY, GEORGE COOPER and DONALD HALL are the cast.

Six a Week, Including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"THE BUTTERFLY'S LESSON"—Drama.....MONDAY, SEPT. 27
"THROUGH TROUBLED WATERS"—Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature.....TUESDAY, SEPT. 28
"RAGS AND THE GIRL"—Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 29
"THE PLAGUE SPOT"—Drama.....THURSDAY, SEPT. 30
"THE FOX-TROT FINESSE"—Comedy.....FRIDAY, OCT. 1
"THE SULTAN OF ZULON"—Two-Part Comedy.....SATURDAY, OCT. 2

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

LEAH BAIRD
WITH VITAGRAPH

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 2, 1915 No. 14

LUBIN

PRESENTS

THE SCREEN'S MIGHTIEST MIRTHFUL COMEDIENNE

MARIE DRESSLER

IN A NEW "TILLIE" PHOTOPLAY

IN 6 ACTS

TILLIE'S TOMATO SURPRISE

WRITTEN BY ACTON DAVIES

PRODUCED BY HOWELL HANSEL

AIDED AND ABETTED BY

TOM McNAUGHTON, Co-STAR IN "THE SPRING MAID" AND "SUZIE" - COLIN CAMPBELL, THE SCOTCH COMEDIAN, SARAH McVICKAR, ELEANOR FAIRBANKS AND JAMES THE FAMOUS LUBIN MONKEY

TWO HOURS OF HOWLS, YELLS, SCREAMS, GUFFAWS, LAUGHS, CHUCKLES AND ROARS

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 27 THROUGH THE V.L.S.E.

BIG FOUR FEATURE PLAY V L S E

Sigmund Lubin

The Triangle "Bullseye"

BY this time you have heard of the bang with which the initial Triangle Plays went over at the Knickerbocker Theatre last Thursday.

Shortly you will hear other similar concussions in the vicinity of Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston.

A year from now you will look back and date the most important development of photoplay presentment from these Triangle Model Theatre openings.

Griffith — Ince — Sennett have sub-consciously been building up the Triangle organization for years. It remained for the Triangle Film Corporation to give them the opportunity to go their limit.

Now it is done. The greatest directors, the greatest stars, the best photographers, have been brought together to produce the best plays!

It is simply a question of values everywhere.

You know now what "TRIANGLE" means, even if you've only heard from those who have seen. And Triangle Quality is only at the apex of the TRIANGLE—the beginning.

Watch the plan grow in effectiveness, in value, in results!

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

Mary Miles Minter and her pet bear in a scene from Metro's "The Stork's Nest."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 2, 1915 No. 14

Organization of Board of Trade Completed

BINDER DISCUSSES ITS AIMS

THE organization of the Motion Picture Board of Trade was completed on Tuesday afternoon, when the Board of Directors met at the offices of the board at 18 East Forty-first street, New York City, and elected the following officers:

J. Stuart Blackton, president; Carl Laemmle, manufacturer's vice president; Nicholas Power, supply men's vice-president; John R. Freuler, exchange's vice-president; F. J. Rembusch, exhibitor's vice-president; W. Stephen Bush, publications' vice-president; W. R. Rothacker, miscellaneous vice-president; E. A. McManus, secretary; Joseph W. Engel, treasurer.

After the organization of the board, the following standing committees were appointed:

Executive committee: Walter W. Irwin, W. A. Johnston, Nicholas Power, P. A. Powers, E. A. McManus and J. W. Binder (ex officio).

Membership committee: Carl Laemmle, J. Stuart Blackton, R. A. Rowland, S. L. Rothapfel, Siegmund Lubin, John R. Freuler, J. W. Binder (ex officio).

Auditing committee: Fred Hawley, L. W. Atwater, Carl H. Pierce.

Finance committee: J. Stuart Blackton, Robert H. Cochrane, Schuyler Colfax, Ferdinand W. Singhi, John R. Freuler, Joseph W. Engel, J. W. Binder (ex officio).

Arbitration committee: Samuel M. Field, Walter W. Irwin, E. A. McManus, Paul Gulick, Will C. Smith, Arthur James, J. W. Binder (ex officio).

Publicity committee: Arthur James, Chester Beecroft, Paul Gulick, Sam Spedon, Carl H. Pierce, Arthur Leslie, W. A. Johnston, W. Stephen Bush, Charles R. Condon, J. W. Binder (ex officio).

Following the regular meeting of the board, the executive committee, which is charged with the duty of conducting the affairs of the board, convened and elected Mr. Irwin chairman of that committee. J. W. Binder was then elected executive secretary of the Board of Trade, and William M. Seabury, of 52 Nassau street, was chosen general counsel. Mr. Binder is the man who has laid out the plan and scope of the board and who was chairman of the organization committee. Mr. Seabury is a prominent attorney, not hitherto identified with any of the film interests. He is a brother of Supreme Court Justice Samuel Seabury.

Mr. Binder reported to the board that nearly ten thousand dollars had already been paid into the treasury as initiation fees and annual dues, and that he was receiving applications for membership by mail and telegraph from all parts of the country.

"It is not the intention of the board to make a promiscuous campaign for members," said Mr. Binder to MOTOGRAPHY's representative. "We propose, however, to devote every minute between now and the first of November to bringing into the organization ever person, firm or corporation from Maine to California who has a legitimate right to claim membership, and who can convince the membership committee and two-thirds of the board of directors that he and his work will contribute to the permanent and substantial upbuilding of the industry as a whole. Men and concerns having these qualifications will be welcome; others will find it difficult to come in. It goes without saying, of course, that the applicant must pay in advance his initiation fee and annual dues in the class of membership to which he belongs. But, understand, he must have more than merely money. The question which the membership committee will keep to the front in its deliberations will largely have to do with the ideas and ideals that animate the work of the man or company applying for membership. Do these tend to elevate and make permanent the motion picture art? Well and good. Is the reverse true? Nothing doing. Is there a doubt? Investigate.

"You can readily see, can you not," Mr. Binder continued, "that the effect of such a policy will be to make membership in the board a thing to be desired, sought for; indeed striven for. And it will bind together those who come in as members in a bond that is closer than any legal or corporate union—the bond of mutual service for the general welfare of the industry.

"And that, of course, is the end and aim of the board. The motion picture industry—today the fifth in the country in point of money invested—has hitherto been entirely unorganized as a trade. Those who make a business of preying upon the body 'corporate' have been quick to note this condition. As a result, the industry has been a mark for all kinds of attacks which have cost it many millions of dollars. It is our purpose as an organization to fight these conditions, whether they exist in the halls of the national or state legislature; in the town council chamber, or in the back room of the ward heeler's club. We will fight them by dragging them out in the open; by bringing them into the fierce light of 'pitiless publicity.' We will fight them while they are being considered as bills. If any of them get by and are made laws, we will fight them in the courts. Hitherto this work has been done sporadically and spasmodically, if at all, by individuals or individual concerns standing alone. We propose to fight as a united industry—one that has at its command the mightiest media of thought expression in the world, the motion picture screen—and we will use this to create that still mightier force which when once aroused speaks in thunderous tones—Public Opinion. The motion picture screen speaks to more than ten million people in this country daily. It speaks a language that convinces.

"But, in addition to this, we shall use the public prints to tell our story. We shall, through the daily press, the trade papers, the weekly and monthly magazines tell the story of the motion picture—the wonderful fairy tale of its growth in a decade; the untold power of the screen as a propaganda medium and the consequent importance of keeping such a medium from the trammels of political, partisan or religious pre-publicity censorship; these and hundreds of stories of like kind and character, written by the greatest writers in the land, will be read by the millions and when the legislative 'uplifter' in Passamaquoddy or Pumpkintown rises to introduce his thinly disguised bill to create a censor board, or to limit the days on which pictures may be shown or to add an inch to the areaway about the theaters, or to specify a new system of ventilation, or to provide for compulsory free admission for all legislators to the theaters of his state or municipality, the aroused public sentiment, educated to know and understand the mainsprings which animate his action, will either 'laugh him to scorn' or tear his bill to tatters.

"Then, there is the broad commercial side of our activity at which I can only hint. In this there will be numerous and varied activities, each having for its object putting the business on a solid, permanent business basis. The securing of fair railroad carrying conditions for films; adjusting and working out the vexed insurance conditions which surround the industry; arranging to supply the members with credit information carefully gathered and kept for their information only; to create a body of men respected by all in the trade to whom members having honest differences may bring them for arbitration before rushing into litigation. These and many other features will be worked out.

"Now, I am going to anticipate the objection you are going to make. You are going to say that all this is very pretty but that it cannot be done in the film industry. You are going to say that the men in this industry hate each other, and distrust each other, that they will not work together. I am going to tell you that you are wrong. I had some of the oldest and most successful men in the industry tell me that same tale more than a year ago, when I started out to get broader support for the National Board of Censorship. I proved they were wrong then, I am going to prove them wrong now. And in saying this I will at once admit that there are men in the industry today who will not play on the level. There always will be. But I do say this: that the great majority of the men in the film industry today—in all branches of it—want to play on the level; want to build a business of which they can be proud; want to conduct their business so that it will be clean, high-grade and enduring. And I am only telling you what has been proven in every other business in the land that is today strong and prosperous, stable and profitable, that it will be the same in the film industry—those who play the game according to the age-old principles that at base govern all successful enterprise are the men who will win in the long run. And these men will work together for the common good in a trade association such as we will build and it is because this is true that this Motion Picture Board of Trade will in a few years be one of the most important factors in the industry. What the American Bankers' Association is to the banking business; what the National Canners Association is to the fruit and canning industry; what the Wholesale and Retail Grocers Associations are to the great business of making and selling foodstuffs; what the American Society of Civil Engineers is to the profession of engineering—that, and more will this organization be to the great art and industry of making, distributing and showing motion pictures. That is my profound conviction.

"But, you may say, 'all this is going to cost a lot of money.' I hate to demolish your arguments; but, really, you are a poor guesser. The annual budget of the Motion Picture Trade Board for the first year aggregates the huge sum of $49,563.00. That's a lot, isn't it? Well, if the state censor bills in the thirteen states in which they were introduced last year had become laws, they would have cost the industry in censor fees alone, more than $288,000. Motion picture men pay every year in insurance premiums more than they should, upwards of $400,000. I am told that there is outstanding on the books of the film exchanges of the country in uncollectable accounts upwards of a million dollars.

"How did this Trade Board come to be organized? Just about a year and a half ago I made an address to an assemblage of motion picture men in Grand Central Palace. What I said then, in the light of what has happened since, is prophetic. I said at that time:

> "All the problems which harass and hinder the motion picture industry today can be solved by a National trade organization made up of representatives from the three great divisions of the industry—the producer, the exchangemen and the exhibitor.

"That was the first public announcement. But sometime about the middle of last February a luncheon was given by my friend McGuire, of the National Board of Censorship, and myself at Rector's to some seventeen of the largest manufacturers of pictures. In response to a plain statement I made to them concerning the necessity of fighting the censorship bills which were pending in ten states, a sum of money was subscribed for that purpose. In order to prevent heart failure on the part of the political and other grafters in the states in question at their not getting any of this 'huge sum,' I will say that the exact amount of the 'fund' was $2,900. With it certain results were accomplished and about the middle of June, it was thought best to call the same men together who had contributed, and tell them what had been done with their money. They met in the projection room of the recently organized V. L. S. E. The same man who presided at the Rector luncheon, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, presided at the later meeting. After making the report I took occasion to say that in my judgment this work should not be done by the National Board of Censorship, and suggested that it ought to be done by the whole industry through a trade board. This suggestion was heartily and eloquently seconded by Walter W. Irwin, who told what other industries did in the way of organized effort to protect themselves against similar oppression. In the discussion which ensued, every man present agreed that the time was here for action. A volunteer committee was called for to draft a plan and map out a program for the formation of such a trade board. I was asked to do the work. I did it. The committee met, enlarged the plan and approved it after a series of meetings during August. On the first of September I resigned my position as director of finance and publicity of the National Board of Censorship and since then have devoted all my time to launching the new board. The result is told in the first paragraph of this story and is now history.

"For the future I have no fear. I am convinced that when a set of intelligent, earnest men, animated by a high purpose and working together unitedly for the accomplishment of that purpose, get together in sincere co-operation, the thing they strive for will be realized just as certainly as the sun rises and sets. And if I shall have personally, in the slightest degree, contributed to the sum total of their efforts and if these result, as they must, in a finer, cleaner, more stable, more profitable motion picture business, I shall be amply repaid for my efforts."

KNICKERBOCKER OPENING

Famous Triangle Organization Stages Its First De Luxe Performance in New York—Theater Beautifully Decorated

Several remarkable features marked the opening of the historic Knickerbocker theater, New York, Thursday evening, September 23, with its new policy of Triangle plays. That something new had reached Broadway was evident as soon as the capacity first night audience stormed the lobby and were admitted to an auditorium completely altered and redecorated to meet the requirements of the productions of David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, and in keeping with the first star combination offered—Douglas Fairbanks, Raymond Hitchcock and Dustin Farnum.

Red and green, the Triangle colors, prevailed. First to come to notice were the eight ushers and program girls, costumed in a creation of Mme. Georgenne, one of New York's leading modistes, whose parlors at 9 East Forty-seventh street are a rendezvous for fashion. First nighters who were watching their step saw first the black shoes with tan buckles, then white stockings disappearing into lace pantalettes that showed beneath short skirts. There were aprons, all white, with red and green trimmings, over the skirts which were of tan silk. A tight bodice and a headdress with a Triangle effect completed the striking costume. Mme. Georgenne personally fitted the eight girls at the Knickerbocker and also made two models which were sent to the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, and the Studebaker theater in Chicago.

The alterations to the theater structure were none the less marked. There was the shadow box, as solid as concrete, throwing its soft shades of gray to the screen over the enlarged orchestra pit where William Furst waved his baton over his symphony band of forty musicians. The balcony had been changed to permit the construction of eleven loges. Over all was the blend of Triangle colors, the red and the green.

All this led up to a proper appreciation of the star combination arranged for the inauguration of the new policy. Dustin Farnum, long a matinee idol, made new admirers in the Ince-directed Alaskan romance, "The Iron Strain." Enid Markey and Louise Glaum lent their beauty and ability to the star, and all their work was enhanced by the excellence of the photography.

The camera effects were particularly successful in all the plays. A scene in a driving rain storm from "The Iron Strain" vied with the desert and sunlight effects which Griffith obtained in the Fairbanks play, "The Lamb," and the comedy results achieved by Hitchcock, Mack Sennett, Fred Mace and Mabel Normand in "My Valet."

The Triangle Film Corporation's advertising campaign for the opening of the Knickerbocker Theater has been the talk of the stage world, in both its legitimate and motion picture spheres. The easy, conversational style of the ads, the big space, 14 point type and plenty of border of white have made them recognized in any location and eagerly read by newspaper subscribers. Already one prominent legitimate producing firm in New York has copied the Triangle style, which gives opportunity for speculation as to the future of theatrical advertising in the United States. Scare heads and blatant claims may yet give way to the Triangle pioneers in the field of quiet and honest but none the less forceful information regarding coming offerings.

Hale Hamilton. Frank Keenan. Eddie Foy.

Mack Sennett has rounded out his corner on comedians by making contracts with Joe Jackson, the Winter Garden and vaudeville headliner, and Bert Clarke, who has also been successful in the same fields of endeavor as the tramp cyclist.

The Triangle Film Corporation has been forced to postpone the Griffith production, "The Trail of Blood," because of the illness of Mae Marsh with pleurisy.

METRO SIGNS MARTHA HEDMAN

Lionel Barrymore and Hamilton Revelle Also Engaged for Important Features to be Produced by Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc.

The policy of the Metro Pictures Corporation of sparing neither expense nor effort in offering the public the foremost stars of the stage and screen in vehicles worthy of their highest artistic talents, was given concrete expression this week in the announcement that Metro had closed a contract with Martha Hedman, one of the most popular of the younger stars of the American stage, under the terms of which this charming and accomplished actress will be featured in an elaborate picturization of Booth Tarkington's powerful novel, "The Turmoil," the rights on which were secured by the Metro Pictures Corporation a few weeks ago. Obtaining the motion picture rights on this justly famous book was considered a master-stroke on the part of the directors of Metro's destinies, for "The Turmoil" has been hailed by critics everywhere as the "great American novel." Certainly among the Tarkington literary gems it is the chiefest jewel, and the selection of Miss Hedman to portray the character of the lovely and lovable "Mary Vertrees" is evidence that the screen version of "The Turmoil" will be of a quality comparable to its original.

Martha Hedman.

Next in importance to the part of "Mary Ventrees," in "The Turmoil," is that of "Bibbs Sheridan," a youth of many moods, and therefore with unlimited possibilities for a juvenile lead. George LeGuere, who was featured with Emily Stevens in "Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman," a recent Metro production from the studios of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., has been selected for this part.

Edwin Carewe, who directed "Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman," will produce "The Turmoil" at the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., studios, his selection as director of this important production by Metro officials being directly due to the tremendous success he achieved in the first named picture. Work will begin on "The Turmoil" immediately after Mr. Carewe finishes "The Final Judgment," the new name selected for the play in which Ethel Barrymore is starring, which is scheduled for early release in the Metro program.

Another notable addition to the list of Metro stars during the present week is Lionel Barrymore, long one of the most versatile and popular actors of the speaking stage. Early this week B. A. Rolfe, head of the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., signed Mr. Barrymore for the stellar role in a photo-drama of unusual quality, the title of which will be announced later.

William Nigh, who recently added fresh laurels to his reputation as a director of really big motion pictures, in "Emmy of Stork's Nest," the latest Columbia-Metro feature in which Mary Miles Minter is starred, will direct the Barrymore play.

In addition to Miss Hedman and Mr. Barrymore, Metro has also engaged Hamilton Revelle, the eminent English actor, for a series of pictures to be produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., for release in the Metro program. Mr. Revelle won a notable success in "An Enemy to Society," in which he shared stellar honors with Lois Meredith, and his engagement for other future Metro pictures was a logical sequence. In drawing room and polite heroic roles, Mr. Revelle is conceded to be at the head of his profession.

Gaumont's New Technical Director

Announcement was made recently that Fritz Orlamond had been appointed chief technical director of the Gaumont Company, which, beginning September 8, is to release its entire output exclusively through the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Orlamond, during the year that he has been affiliated with the Gaumont Company, has made a pleasing record for himself and has won a host of friends throughout the various branches of the industry. His first work at the studios was in the Comedy Star company, in which he played and directed with a master hand. Following this work he became an important member of the stock company in its heavy dramas. During this work, his masterly understanding of the technique of the studio caused him to be appointed assistant to the director. He has continued in this capacity for some time, until the complete reorganization of the Gaumont forces.

With the addition of several directors and producing companies, it was found necessary to have one man in general charge of the studio, and Mr. Orlamond was appointed.

Minusa Equips Dayton Theater

The Auditorium Amusement Company of Dayton, Ohio, is making some improvements in its equipment, and recently placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company, for two Gold Fibre screens, built according to specifications.

Some difficulty was found in obtaining perfect projection results, and the Minusa Cine Products Company had an expert call at the theater and advise just what the trouble was. The company is one of the most responsible firms in that territory, and is said to be heavily interested in Dayton real estate.

Billie Burke's First Day as a Screen Star

APPEARS UNCONSCIOUS OF CAMERA

THIS has been a week of uncommon activity at the Inceville plant of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, where Producer Thomas H. Ince is building film masterpieces for contribution to the Triangle. The arrival of Billie Burke, the commencement of work on a new production, the continued introduction of innovations and further additions to the forces employed, all have combined to make it the most eventful in many months.

Paramount, of course, among the current activities is the Burke production. Owing to the extreme care which Ince is exercising in the preparation of this subject for the screen, progress has not been as rapid as that with other features. Nothwithstanding this, however, interest in the appearance of Miss Burke has been at a fever pitch.

Miss Burke's first day in pictures was one that will long be remembered by all associated with the Ince-Triangle studios. The charming star was given her first thrill before she entered the gates of Inceville to make her debut before the lens. She was being driven along the shore road from the Long Wharf at Santa Monica, where she had disembarked from the steam yacht in which she negotiates the distance to Catalina Island each day, when a black cat sprang out from a clump of bushes by the roadside and made itself an obstacle in the path of the machine. The collision brought to an abrupt and unceremonious end all nine lives of the ebony feline, and the catastrophe served only to convince Miss Burke that her venture on the screen is destined to be one of sweeping success.

A Scotch street "set" erected especially for Billie Burke, Thomas H. Ince pointing in the foreground.

Within a half hour after Miss Burke had entered her pretentious dressing quarters, she appeared, ready for work. Following a brief rehearsal, Producer Ince gave the order to "shoot" and Billie Burke, the selfsame beauty of the footlight realm, who so steadfastly had declined flattering offers, until Ince approached and pursued her—became a star of the screen.

A strange fact concerning Miss Burke's work, one that was immediately noted and commented upon by Ince—is that she exhibited not the slightest indication of camera-fright. Usually a stage star, making his or her initial appearance in front of the camera, gives way to a petty fear that something will go amiss and be observed, which otherwise would escape detection on the stage. This results in a nervousness which is difficult to satisfactorily overcome. Yet, Miss Burke, with the exception of asking a few questions regarding sidelines and tempo of gesticulation, conducted herself in a manner befitting the most experienced of picture-play actresses. This has pleased Mr. Ince immensely and he is certain now that his high-priced star will be as magnetic on the screen as she is on the stage—if not more so.

The afternoon of Miss Burke's first day in pictures was spent in the canyons that make Inceville such a picturesque location for photoplay-making. Over two miles of pebbly river beds, circuitous trails and brush covered groves, she rode on horseback to a beautiful natural setting which will be used as the background of a number of important exteriors. For two hours she gave play to her talents and upon her return declared that she had enjoyed the experience.

Throughout the rest of the week, some interiors were filmed. These depict the living quarters of a Scotch peasant family, with which Miss Burke, as the American hoyden, comes into happy contact. Work is being rushed on the Scotch village street and with its expected completion in a few days, Ince will commence the filming of scenes in this set.

A most important fact in connection with the Burke production is that Mr. Ince is personally directing it, instead of merely supervising its progress. This is in pursuance of a request made by Miss Burke before she capitulated and shows the great producer concentrating upon one subject for the first time since he filmed "An Alien."

Another new production got under way this week at the Ince-Triangle studios. It is a virile drama of the West and has as its star that forceful and powerful interpreter of western characters, William S. Hart. C. Gardner Sullivan, Ince's prolific and verstaile author, is responsible for the scenario and this in itself, is a guarantee that the story has a tremendous "punch."

Hart, who has gripped audiences all over the world by his remarkable performances in "The Bargain," "On the Night Stage," "The Darkening Trail," and a host of two-reel numbers—all made under the Ince supervision—is a versatile actor, but he, as well at the severest of critics, acknowledges his forte to be that of the "bad-man" portrayal. Hence, in this current production, Sullivan has furnished him with a role that fits his capabilities more perfectly, it is believed, than anything he has ever attempted.

An unusually strong cast has been named to support Hart, the principal members of which are Clara Williams and Jack Standing. Miss Williams is the exquisite leading woman who scored so heavily in support of Hart in "The Bargain." Since that picture, she has not appeared opposite him in any other feature. Therefore her work will be watched with interest. Standing is the young matinee idol who recently severed his relations with a firm in the East to associate himself with Ince and this is his first appearance in an Ince production. He is playing the "heavy," a job for which he is particularly well qualified.

Wedgwood Nowell, actor, director and musician of note, has been permanently engaged by Producer Ince in the capacity of musical director of all forthcoming Ince-Triangle films. This is in accord with a plan established several months ago by Ince and because of the prominence of the man concerned is considered a most important item of news.

When Ince decided to submit a full musical score with each of his productions, he cast about for a suitable candidate to assume entire charge of the work. Several men of recognized ability were tried, but Ince was not satisfied with the executive ability of any of them until accidentally he heard Nowell playing on a piano. The music impressed the producer. Then he called Nowell into conference and the latter identified himself as a composer and musical director of prominence. Nowell originally joined the Ince forces as an actor and already has appeared in the leading heavy role in support of Bessie Barriscale. But now he is devoting his entire time to the arrangement of music for the Ince-Triangle productions. A staff of seven assistants has been engaged for him and these spend the day in specially built sound-proof rooms, where they can copy without the interruption of outside disturbances.

Another view of the Scotch street erected especially for Billie Burke.

A modeling department, equipped with all the facilities for making statues, monuments and other such elaborate and expensive adornments, is the latest innovation to be introduced at Inceville, in furtherance of a plan to embellish Ince-Triangle features with everything money can buy and hands can build, for purposes of realism on the screen. The department was formally inaugurated this week with the arrival at the studios of J. J. Donner, a prominent sculptor, who will have complete charge of the work.

Still another innovation of importance is a class in military tactics. This was organized this week, following close on the heels of the announcement that a dancing class had been organized, and all "extra" actors have been instructed to report three times a week to their instructor. The latter is Ex-Lieutenant Courtland Roberts, U. S. A., who, seeking health in Southern California, readily capitulated to an offer from Producer Ince. Roberts' duties will be to drill the Inceville supernumeraries in the art of carrying a gun, saluting, drawing the saber, marching, running, shooting, etc. Ince hopes to have his multitude of extras trained with such precision that when called upon to appear in a war story, they will be able to conduct themselves properly and thus fortify the production against unfavorable comment from experts.

DIRECTOR'S LONG TRIP

Jay Hunt of Horsley Staff Travels From California to New Jersey to "Cut" Feature Subject and Properly Assemble It

Jay Hunt arrived at the plant of the Centaur Film Company in Bayonne, N. J., this week from Los Angeles, a trip made for the express purpose of "cutting" the negative of "The Protest," a three-reel feature with Crane Wilbur as the star, which he directed and which will be released September 29 in the regular service of the Mutual program.

In sending Mr. Hunt from coast to coast, David Horsley, the producer of this feature, indicates the length to which he is extending his efforts to have his productions reach the highest possible standard of merit. "Cutting" a picture is an important item, though in most cases manufacturers fail to realize this fact. The work is often left in the hands of persons not qualified to handle it and in consequence the production in its finally assembled form suffers.

In the negative of "The Protest" it is declared more money was expended than perhaps in any other picture of a similar length. The story, the cast, the settings and other items of production are exceedingly costly. That the full wealth of effect which this expenditure presents might be preserved after the picture was finally completed for distribution, Mr. Horsley sent Mr. Hunt to supervise the cutting, feeling assured that he, as the director, was better able than anybody else, with his intimate knowledge of the production, to obtain the very best results.

"The Protest" is the first of the Horsley three-reel features to go into the Mutual program. As it introduces a new brand, Mr. Horsley was particularly anxious to have it set a very high standard, by which all future releases may be known. The scenario was selected from over a hundred stories submitted. It deals with a vital theme of everyday life—a problem that is perplexing this generation. It is a drama that holds up a mirror to life in every city and town, and is luxuriously and masterfully staged by Mr. Hunt, who has an enviable reputation as a director.

The cast is headed by Crane Wilbur, the popular photoplay star, with Leona Hutton in the leading feminine role. Others are Margaret Gibson, Ella Oswald, Jean Wolf, Mrs. Jay Hunt, P. O. Tabler, Robert Newcombe, Donald O'Brien, John E. Brennan and Joseph von Meter.

Russell Out of Equity

Robert Russell, who until recently was vice president and secretary of the Equity Motion Picture Company, with business offices in the Strand theater building, New York City, and a studio at Van Harbor, N. H., has severed his connection with that corporation. Billy B. Van remains as president, however.

Essanay Studios Unusually Active

COUNTLESS PRODUCTIONS UNDER WAY

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, announces that the company has arranged for an usual number of strong releases for the next three months, or the balance of the year 1915.

Essanay will release 181 reels in October, November and December. There will be produced 58 reels in October, 61 in November and 62 in December.

The photoplays will include works by the greatest writers of the period as well as dramatizations of the old masters. Such authors as Edgar Allan Poe, F. Marion Crawford, Henry Oyen, Clinton Dangerfield, George Ade and H. S. Sheldon are among those whose creations will be put into photoplay form.

Among the best of the multiple reel photoplays which will be released are "In the Palace of the King," by F. Marion Crawford, and in which E. J. Ratcliffe, Richard C. Travers and Arleen Hackett star; "The Raven," by Edgar Allan Poe, in which Henry B. Walthall takes the lead; "Tides that Meet," by Clinton Dangerfield, Bryant Washburn leading; "The Family Divided," taken from H. S. Sheldon's play, "The House Divided," featuring Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn; "The Village Homestead," by Joseph Byron Totten and featuring Darwin Karr; "The Old Sin," by H. Tipton Steck, presenting John Lorenz and June Keith and "The Great Deceit," written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr., and featuring Warda Howard and John Lorenz.

There also will be forthcoming George Ade Fables in Slang, the Dreamy Dud cartoons and scenic pictures, the western dramas by G. M. Anderson, the western comedies as well as Essanay-Chaplin photocomedies.

A new series of cartoons also will be introduced under the title of Essanay's Canimated Nooz Pictorial. This series, drawn by Wallace A. Carlson, author of the Dreamy Dud pictures, will be a burlesque on current topics of the day. They will be five hundred feet in length and coupled with five hundred feet of scenic.

Essanay is planning for a great spurt in putting out its releases and completing them far ahead for the convenience of exhibitors. Owing to the great demand for Essanay plays its directors have been working day and night the past few weeks to keep up to the call for pictures of the Indian Head brand.

There are a score of directors now at work, six more having been added to the company roll. Because of the magnitude of many of its productions, particularly "In the Palace of the King," for which both Chicago studios were utilized as well as a large out-door temporary palace, eight assistants working all the time to aid Director Fred E. Wright, other directors were kept busy taking out-of-door scenes and then working during the night on the indoor settings.

The new Essanay studio, which will be 350 feet long and 175 feet wide, with a floor space of 61,250 square feet, is being pushed as rapidly as possible in order to give plenty of room for the production of plays. This is claimed to be the largest indoor studio, lighted by artificial lamps, ever built, and it will accommodate a dozen directors working at the same time.

BOSTON TO SEE "CARMEN"

At Geraldine Farrar's Request, Paramount Will Show Lasky Masterpiece in Magnificent Symphony Hall for First Time

For the first time in its history Boston's magnificent Symphony Hall, dedicated to the cause of music and home of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be converted temporarily into a motion picture theater when on October 1 for a limited engagement the Paramount picture, Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, will be shown there at popular prices to the accompaniment of an orchestra of sixty pieces.

The selection of Boston as the first city in the United States in which Miss Farrar will make her debut as a star of the screen is at Miss Farrar's personal request, because Boston is her native city and because the exhibition in Symphony Hall, probably the largest auditorium devoted exclusively to music of the better sort, lends a spirit of serious artistic endeavor to Miss Farrar's photodramatic enterprise. The prima donna, who will attend the premiere, made the special plea in the cause of Boston to Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Company, who so arranged the exhibition with Morris Gest and C. A. Ellis, of Boston.

Aside from the dramatic portion of Miss Farrar's "Carmen" special stress is being laid on the musical accompaniment, in the arrangement of which the Lasky musical department had the benefit of Miss Farrar's personal suggestions and wonderful musical knowledge. Motion picture theaters throughout the country will have the opportunity to use the same orchestration that will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, arranged for orchestras of fewer pieces, whatever the particular requirements of the theaters demand.

Blanche Sweet Visits New York

Miss Blanche Sweet, the internationally famous photoplay favorite, who heads the regular stock company of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., has been spending the past week in New York City. This is her first visit to the metropolis within a year and the first time that she has had even a day away from her duties at the great studio out on the Pacific coast. Miss Sweet celebrated her visit to New York by appearing on Thursday night, September 16, on the stage of the Strand theater, where so many of the wonderful photoplays in which she appears have been shown since she came under the management of the Lasky Feature Play Company.

It happened that the current attraction at the Strand was the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Case of Becky" in which Miss Sweet herself appears as the mysterious girl with a dual personality. The fact that Miss Sweet happened to be in town when one of the most successful photodramatic renditions was being shown on the screen of that playhouse made her appearance especially timely and appropriate.

Miss Sweet was introduced to the audience at the Strand by B. F. Rolfe, who made some very flattering remarks concerning the extraordinary achievements of this young artist and the manner in which she has progressed under the Lasky direction and especially under the supervision of Cecil B. De Mille.

Miss Sweet was immediately recognized and the audience applauded her presence with a most contagious enthusiasm. Miss Sweet thanked the audience and expressed her pleasure in feeling that her work in Los Angeles brings her so close to the hearts of the Broadway public.

Miss Sweet will return to Los Angeles next week and more Blanche Sweet productions will then immediately be put under way by Mr. De Mille. The next production in which she appears will be the "Secret Sin" which is now announced definitely for release on the twenty-first of October.

Honored Like Real Monarchs

One of the greatest honors ever bestowed upon motion picture players fell to Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne of the Quality Pictures Corporation, Hollywood, when they were adjudged winners of a six weeks' popularity contest in the daily papers of San Diego and Los Angeles and were crowned King and Queen of the Southlands Exposition and of the motion picture industry.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are crowned king and queen at the San Diego Exposition.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the visitors met at the beautiful Spreckles theater, where they were welcomed by the manager, J. M. Dodge, who was chairman of the citizens' reception committee. The players were brought to the exposition grounds in automobiles which had been donated by the citizens who were members of the committee, and at the western gate of the exposition a parade was formed headed by the Thirteenth Artillery band, which was stationed at the fair. Next came a beautifully decorated car containing the king and queen elect and their pages and attendants. The rank and file of the motion picture world followed in other automobiles in a parade through the grounds.

The progress of the royal couch to the Spreckles Organ pavilion where the coronation ceremony took place was one continuous ovation. At the platform the king and queen elect were met by President G. A Davidson, Vice President Burnham, H. F. McGarvie and others most deeply interested in the event, where President Davidson publicly proclaimed Mr. Bushman as King Francis X. and Miss Bayne as Queen Beverly. He presented them with large golden keys to the exposition grounds and to the city—he bade them reign happily and supremely over the royal throng assembled and one of the greatest industries of the world—motion pictures. Both King Francis X. and Queen Beverly made brief speeches of acceptance, while a dozen camera men clicked off their acitons for the benefit of photo play fans all over the world.

The remainder of the afternoon festivities were of an informal nature, but at nine o'clock in the evening a big open air motion picture banquet was held upon the splendidly illuminated Plaza de Panama.

When the king and queen arrived and took their places on the platform under the canopy of the Sacramento building which encloses one side of the Plaza de Panama, President Davidson again officiated in a ceremony, this time presenting to King Francis and Queen Beverly handsome souvenir loving cups which were appropriately engraved in commemoration of the occasion. Again the royal pair voiced their thanks to the exposition management and the assembled throng. They then led the grand march and later adjourned to the Cafe Cristobal, where a dinner was given in their honor. Among those present from the various companies stationed in this section, were motion picture players, the executive officers, scenario writers, news service operators, representatives of the press. A partial list of the guests is as follows:

Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Quality Pictures Corporation; Helen Dunbar, Lester Cuneo, William Clifford, Mrs. VonName, Leigh Smith, Mr. and Mrs. William Alder, E. D. Horkheimer, Mr. and Mrs. Stechhan, Ruth Lackaye, Joseph Brotherton, Charles Didley, Henry Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Edwards, Jackie Saunders, L. J. Cody, Edwin J. Brady, Lucy Blake, Lillian Lorraine, William Conklin, William Cortleigh, Jr., and wife, Harry Harvey, Bertram Bracken, Madelin Pardee, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. McGarvie, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Kerr, George L. McFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Swartz, L. A. DeWein, J. W. McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Abrams, H. P. Caulfield, William Randolph Hearst, Mr. and Mrs. Don Meaney.

Dustin Farnum, Pallas Star, at Work

Contradicting all reports effecting the activities of Dustin Farnum in the East, it is announced at the New York offices of Pallas Pictures, the new Paramount producing company, that the popular star is now busily engaged at the studios of this company in Los Angeles.

Mr. Farnum has begun work on his first Pallas Pictures subject, "The Gentleman From Indiana," adapted to the screen from Booth Tarkington's well known romantic novel of the same name, and is supported by an exceptional cast, including Winifred Kingston, Herbert Standing, Signor Juan de la Cruz, Howard Davies, Charles Marriott, Page Peters, Joe Ray and Elsie Cort. The production is under the direction of Frank Lloyd, the Pallas Pictures star director, and will present one of the most elaborate subjects yet presented as a regular program release. A spectacular feature will be the building of a complete replica of the Whitecaps settlement at the crossroads and then its complete destruction by fire before the camera. In this scene over five hundred people appear. The camera work is in the able hands of Fred Dobson and several new ideas in this field are being worked out in this production.

On completing "The Gentleman From Indiana," Dustin Farnum will proceed on his second subject for the Pallas Pictures, which it is expected will be the well known "Davy Crockett." His third production will probably be "The Call of the Cumberland," a heart gripping story by Charles Neville Buck.

Justin D. Barnes

During the four years that he has been with the Thanhouser forces, Justin D. Barnes has played over four hundred character parts, running all the way from a day laborer to a billionaire. But Justin is the most versatile player in the business, and, naturally, any part assigned to him is handled with exceptional ease.

Justin D. Barnes

Prior to joining the Thanhouser studios, Barnes was with the Edison people for a considerable time, playing character roles. It has been said, and Barnes has admitted it, that since becoming a screen performer he has played in upward of 800 productions. A notable record, to be sure.

One of Barnes' earliest, and what many critics claim to be one of his best characterizations, was that of Abdool in "The Adventures of a Diplomatic Free Lance," a stirring drama of the adventures of a diplomatic spy. Later he played the lead in "The Great Train Robbery," one of the first big photoplay productions screened at the Thanhouser studios.

Barnes is the owner of "Tom," admittedly one of the finest harness horses in Westchester county, and is generally recognized as one of the best judges of horse flesh in the East. Frequently he has been consulted by horsemen during big deals, and his judgment of an animal has never been wrong.

House Burned for Films

The Eastern Film Corporation of Providence, Rhode Island, in keeping with its public statement recently that no expense would be spared in securing realistic effects for its productions, made good its word last week by employing a large force of men to build a house which was immediately burned to the ground. The scenes for which these spectacular fire effects were secured are a part of the film version of "Cap'n Eri," the famous sea story by Joseph C. Lincoln, now being produced at the Eastern Film Corporation studios under the master direction of George Lessey.

Considerable time, money and labor were consumed in preparation for this unusual event and an ideal location was finally selected at Conimicut, Rhode Island, situated at the edge of Narragansett Bay. After securing permission of the town authorities and making arrangements with the millionaire fire-fighters of the famous summer resort of Lakewood, George Hoffman, master of properties of the Eastern Film Corporation, at once placed a large force of men at work and in two days they had erected a large frame house on the beach at a cost of five hundred dollars. A day was then awaited on which the lack of wind would obviate the danger of firing the neighboring summer cottages of wealthy residents and three hundred extra people were engaged to take part in the scene.

Just before the house was fired

Under the personal direction of Mr. Lessey, a battery of four cameras was trained on the house and after several preliminary scenes had been made, gasoline and oil was poured over the entire structure and with the blaze at its height, George Bunny, brother of the late John, William Mandeville and Herbet Bostwick, the three principal characters in "Cap'n Eri," entered the building and enacted their parts. The fiercely burning flames quickly attracted summer visitors for miles around and their number was augmented by numerous skippers of craft on the water who thought an actual fire was taking place, until a crowd of five thousand gazed with startled eyes as the cameras clicked foot after foot of the spectacular scene. During the taking of the picture, Herbet Bostwick was injured by a burning ember from the falling roof and a property man was badly burned. The photoplay production of "Cap'n Eri" in five reels will shortly be released to photoplay patrons, featuring George Bunny in the title role.

KELLERMANN PICTURE BEGUN

Tremendous Organization Now in Jamaica, Starts Work on Unique Photoplay Feature Under Direction of Herbert Brenon

Advices from Jamaica, British West Indies, received by William Fox, inform him that work has been begun on the million-dollar Annette Kellermann picture, directed by Herbert Brenon, which it is claimed will be one of the most spectacular, elaborate and expensive photoplay productions ever made. While the bulk of the picture will be taken in Jamaica, scenes will also be made in Yucatan, the land of mystery, and on the famous Robinson Crusoe Island.

An entire troup of Arabs with their camels and Arabian steeds have been imported from Soudan for this production. An under-water city has been built, and at Montego Bay, Jamaica, an oriental town of luxurious magnificence, covering twenty acres of land, has been erected. Miss Kellermann is directed by Herbert Brenon and a staff of assistants, and with the company are corps of electricians, mechanics, scene painters, an accounting and business department, medical staff and various other functionaries.

While Miss Kellermann will be the central figure of the picture, William E. Shay will figure prominently in her support, and besides numerous Broadway principals, Miss Kellermann will be surrounded by a bevy of beautiful diving and swimming girls, picked by a committee of noted artists from candidates throughout the country. Altogether more than 2,500 people will participate in this picture, including thousands of natives of the tropics, who have been drilled for weeks in preparation for their parts in the action.

Edward Earle, Edison Star

Perhaps it is because Edward Earle has been but about two years in motion pictures, and therefore uninfluenced by the players of prominence longer in that histrionic world, that his screen presentations are notable for a distinct personality treatment, so to speak—that his own ideas, pronouncedly different from the old school, have in that short space of time found a prominent niche in a world now almost vastly peopled.

Edward Earle

He characterizes what might be termed the intellectual type of actor, not one in which strangely gifted powers of emotion rage to find an outlet in expression, but one whose emotional powers are acutely directed and energized by a keenly perceptive mentality. When on the screen, he moves but little, sometimes it would appear that his facial expression changes not at all. But watch him closely—study him—and it will be noticed that, though he appears ever at his ease, when he moves that one move is tellingly placed and counts with dramatic emphasis. Was it not Henry Irving who said that he studied and studied to reduce his gestures and movements and that he often found his most effective scene had been where he had been able to find the one tell-all gesture? Mr. Earle seems to seek, by few subtle touches, to reveal to us how that person being delineated differs from all others—by a remarkable simplicity to make clear, beyond the possibility of misunderstanding, what action-actuating motives prompt the course he dramatically pursues.

Edward Earle is a booklover, yes, and a student. After all the foregoing one might suggest that such a statement is not news, any more than sunlight and brightness go together. But let it not be thought that, like so many students, he is not "human." Perhaps his work in "Ransom's Folly" lets in with a cheerful, likable light more than any other recent play of his, the lighter side of him—the boyish, run-loving, prankish side that the public takes to so quickly. The Earle of that picture is more the Earle of studio life, except that a picture, of course, cannot reveal any of his quickness of repartee, the gently incisive wit of a nimble mind.

Thanhouser's Big Offerings

In a recent statement, Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, announced plans for many big Thanhouser productions to be released in the Mutual. "We will produce for the new Mutual program a three-reel Than-O-Play every three weeks and I plan to have each of these productions represent the very utmost in motion picture work. I have engaged the Baroness DeWitt, a member of the Swedish royalty, for a special production to be released soon. This play I believe will indicate my aim to furnish exhibitors with the highest standard of motion pictures regardless of cost.

"I have in preparation at the present time a series of feature productions that I believe will prove of vital interest to exhibitors. They include subjects of great educational importance which have been woven out of real human experiences. Many novelties will appear in these forthcoming releases which I believe will be found exceptionally interesting.

"Thanhouser photoplays are consistently good," said Mr. Thanhouser. "We aim to inject into each production, whether it be a single reel or a multiple reel play, the same feature quality. You will find in the Falstaff comedies, for example, comedians of Broadway fame. Many other producing companies are using characters such as these only for multiple reel productions. It is our idea to furnish a consistently good quality of films in all Thanhouser productions regardless of length.

"Exhibitors may look forward to many big Thanhouser releases in the Mutual's new program, and I am sure that they will agree that the consistent high quality of Thanhouser productions will prove a big box office attraction."

Farnum Succeeds Mels

Edgar Mels, manager of the publicity department of Lubin's, has resigned and will be succeeded by Joseph Farnum.

Mr. Mels came to Lubin's from the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, where, in addition to his other editorial duties, he ran what has generally been considered the most successful photoplay department of any daily paper in the country. In six months Mr. Mels increased the photoplay advertising in the Evening Ledger from $3 to $1,400.

Resigning from Lubin's, he leaves on the best of terms. He has not yet decided on his future activities.

Douglas Bronston of the Pathe scenario department is a versatile genius. He wrote a song for "Neal of the Navy," the big serial success, that was so good Pathe has had it published by Berlin Watterson & Snyder.

Films with a Smile—The Mutual Idea

BY SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON*

"SCREEN Literature," the literature of the motion picture, has come into being. The birth of a new literature has been an almost unconscious development. The motion picture came to us as a novelty of invention and has remained to develop into an art. I can think of nothing save the printing press which is so much a part of the life of the people. This intimacy of the motion picture with the people has held the film to a true picture of life. Schools and fads of painting and the art of the printed word, because of the limitations of their patronage, have been able to succeed despite their wanderings into strange, unwholesome realms. Not so with the motion picture. It is one of the people, for the people and answerable to the people. The present day film as a picture of life must stand for those qualities which we find the most admirable in men and women—strength, beauty, purity, cleanliness and a sense of the right. The photoplay which depends for its appeal on distasteful topics, like the "dope" habit, excessive drinking, deathbed scenes, tortures, murders long drawn out, suicides, the morbid and the suggestive, has no place in this new "screen literature." The successful photoplay, the kind of a photoplay that will liven, must present human documents. It must deal with reality presented in the pictorial language of reality. The weird, the bizarre, and fantastic must be handled very gingerly.

Just how the public accepts and rejects in its choice between the natural and wholesome on one side and the unnatural and unwholesome on the other is well demonstrated before us in literature. Alexander Dumas' adventure novels, startling but realistic in that they dealt with real people, have today a greater following according to records of the public libraries than the perhaps more technically perfect but less human stories of Balzac. The readers of the intensely human works of O. Henry outnumber the readers of Hawthorne and Poe by a ratio of thousands. "The Fall of the House of Usher" a masterpiece in horror and shudders, is known to a few. But millions have read, laughed and cried over "The Unfinished Story"—the story of a shop girl, a picture of Kitchener and a very despicable man. "The Unfinished Story" deals with life and makes you know that it is life, but "The Fall of the House of Usher," is an affair of the terrorland of bad dreams.

When I chose this subject of "Films With a Smile," I had no intention of discussing comedy films. The smile in films that I have in mind is the occasional bright light of humor that flashes in the drama of real life. Without this, I think that the photoplay is untrue and a failure as a part of the art of the motion picture.

Perhaps we can illustrate it best by an example from life. We are in a court room. A big murder trial is in progress. The principal witness has been on the stand for hours. The examination has filled the atmosphere with tenseness. There has been a terrible nerve racking recital of evidence. The jury, the lawyers, the spectators have been keyed to the highest pitch. It is a scene of the most desperate earnestness. The prosecutor in re-cross examination has paused in the middle of the question to gain the weight of impressive deliberation. You can hear the fall of the well known pin. Then a juryman in the front row grows red in the face, gropes swiftly in his pocket, snatches out a handkerchief and buries his face—just in time to half throttle a sneeze. A titter starts in the back of the room and in a moment the courtroom is upset with a storm of laughter. It was all over nothing, but it had to break from the tenseness of it all. As the laugh subsides the court raps for order and the trial proceeds. But meantime the air has been cleared by this trivial incident. The crowd was due for a laugh and took it at the earliest opportunity.

That perhaps conveys my conception of the very human demand for humor in the drama. The film drama that fails of this quality of humor fails both as a picture of life and as an entertainment for the people at whose taste the picture is aimed.

It is this spicing of even the most serious drama with touches of humor that is our constant aim in the making of the American Film Company's productions. There are flashes of humor in "The Quest" and the "Lonesome Heart," despite all their serious intent. There are humorous situations in "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs." The smiles must be introduced with fineness. Otherwise efforts at relief of the picture with humor will fail. It must not be obvious. It must be natural, a part of the story, not something dragged into it.

The photoplay to which one can take his family, knowing that it contains nothing offensive, or too deep for the young mind to fathom, nothing touched by a daring deviltry to incite a wrongful curiosity, or to plant a harmful thought, is the kind that the public wants. The way is clear to the maker of motion pictures and to the exhibitor who builds his daily program with the hope of permanency in the business. This changing of the public taste has been felt. Producers are seeking plays that meet these advanced ideas of rightful entertainment, and, to that end are working conscious that "screen literature" is growing a bigger, more vital thing every day.

Sight is the most swiftly responsive and most powerfully active of our senses. The eye burns its lesson deeply into the mind. There is no illiteracy in vision. Education is required to read and understand the language of the screen. But seeing is a way toward education, not only concerning physical things but opening as well a channel to introspection and a better measure of oneself. That is why both the classes and the masses, constituting the motion picture public, have raised their standard of taste, with the resultant of improved pictures by the big producers who are responsive to the public purse.

Cleanliness—there is no other word—should be the basis and final test for pictures entitled to a place in the public library of screen literature. Plays that are entirely wholesome and enjoyable, and in which the tear and sigh are blended into a smile and laugh, represent the best thought of the day. If a moral attaches let it be driven home convincingly, but shorn of sting or sordid shading.

*President American Film Manufacturing Company.

Motion picture plays should know neither creed, color, age nor sex, and should never paint to the eye of any of these an offending thing.

And sometimes smile.

PARAMOUNT GIRL GRITTY

Anita King, Crossing Continent in Auto, Unescorted, Fights Mad Coyote and Is Rescued by Prospectors

Having worked for eleven hours to free her car from the mud, successfully fought off a mad coyote and been rescued by two prospectors who heard her rifle shots, Anita King, the "Paramount Girl," after breaking the record between Los Angeles and San Francisco on the first lap of her coast-to-coast trip, alone, by automobile, has safely crossed the Great Salt Desert, in which two men recently lost their lives, and arrived at Salt Lake City in safety.

News of the destruction of the Famous Players Film Company's studio in New York had just reached Anita King, the Paramount girl.

Salt Lake, and she wired to Adolph Zukor her expressions of sympathy and regret.

Her departure from San Francisco was a great success, it being Paramount day at the Fair. Driving onto the stage of the Imperial theater in her coast-to-coast car and costume, she was greeted enthusiastically by a packed house, gathered to wish her godspeed. Mayor Rolfe's message to John Purroy Mitchel was handed to her. Amid the laughter and cheers of the multitude she set out on the second and most dangerous lap of her journey. She arrived at Salt Lake City exhausted after a terrible trip. Following a complete rest she gave the following description of her journey over the wastes:

"After leaving San Francisco," she said, "I stopped at Sacramento, and the second day passed over the Sierra mountains, stopping at Truckee. The third day I arrived at Reno, where I was wonderfully received by the mayor and a large party. I took many pictures at Reno with the camera which is my only companion on my transcontinental trip. The mayor presented me with a key to Reno. I appeared at the Grand theater. The house was packed and everybody was very enthusiastic. Leaving Reno on what is known as the Lovelock road, which is impassable in wet weather, ten miles from Lincoln Highway I got stuck in the mud. There had been a big cloudburst, but I did not know it, and I worked from 9 o'clock in the morning until eight that night shoveling mud. I got the car out, drove fifty feet and was stuck again. It was impossible for me to go on and I had no food with me, as I had expected to make Fallon in four hours. I was exhausted, so I got blankets out to lie down. About midnight a mad coyote attacked me, and after a terrible struggle I finally killed him and knew nothing more until I was picked up by prospectors who heards the shots of my gun. This was 3:30 a. m., so I must have fought with the coyote for three hours. The prospectors took me eighteen miles to a station house and gave me food. When I finally recovered I went back and got my car and followed the prospectors to Lovelocks. Then I continued my journey.

"The roads were terrible, so hot and dusty that it took nine hours to drive 89½ miles to Winnemucca. I ate supper at Winnemucca on Sunday night, took a supply of food and gasoline and left at 7:30 for Montello, driving all day and night. I arrived at Montello Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, not having seen or met anyone since leaving Winnemucca."

Miss King was met by a large party which toured out from Salt Lake to greet her and escorted her to the American theater, where she appeared. The house was filled to the doors and everyone was enthusiastic. Miss King is stopping at every theater along the route which shows Paramount pictures, telling motion picture fans how they are made and of the many stars, such as Mary Pickford, Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Clark, Blanche Sweet and Dustin Farnum, whom she has met at the studios of the Famous Players Film Company, the Lasky Feature Play Company and the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company.

Hutchinson Adopts Novel Plan

What is probably the most novel plan ever conceived for the production of comedy films has been inaugurated at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Manufacturing Company, according to a statement made by Samuel S. Hutchinson, president.

The idea instituted involves the use of three directors for two producing companies, rotating the direction of each of the two companies among the three directors. It is said that the novel comedy situations thus developed have resulted in remarkably better farce films than have been produced under the old scheme.

Mr. Hutchinson says: "I have always believed that novel situations in comedies were vitally essential to good comic productions. In order to produce really unique situations you must have great diversity—great versatility. Formerly I followed the plan used by other film manufacturers of using only one director to a company. The Beauty comedies gained considerable recognition under that scheme of affairs, but I was not entirely satisfied. When we recently increased the production of Beauty comedies to two a week instead of one a week, I conceived the idea that it would probably result in much better work to have three directors for the two companies, rotating the productions among the three directors. This means that a company producing Beauty comedies this week would be directed by one director; the following week the same company would be directed by another director, and the third week the same company would be directed by a third director. You will observe that this gives the directors sufficient leisure to create comedy situations. It gives them ample time to read and reread the scenario and to seek locations and to create situations. This consequently must result in a higher quality production, and I am looking forward to a new high standard of production in Beauty comedies."

Humphrey a Real Comedian

In the role of Marmaduke Smythe in "The Diamond from the Sky," Orral Humphrey has given to the screen one of its most unique comedy characters. Marmaduke Smythe is an old fashioned English barrister type fearful of everything "un-English" and who bases all matters for comparison on the customs of his native country. Needless to say his opinion of the "wild and wooly West" is not very high, yet he must endure its discomforts in his search for the legal heir to the Stanley titles and the diamond from the sky. Mr. Humphrey's characterization is different from any English type on the screen calculated to be funny. It is a character which if played too broadly would be very bad burlesque, unfunny and devoid of any note of naturalness. It would develop into a character obviously put into the cast as a laugh getter, and as often happens under such construction, get none. As Mr. Humphrey portrays Marmaduke Smythe, the situations which are so screamingly funny are matters of serious moment to the principal. He does not enjoy the fun one bit and that is the success of the characterization, for in his work there is no hint that Mr. Humphrey is playing for laughs.

Orral Humphrey

"Comedy is not a funny business," said Mr. Humphrey recently in discussing his work, "rather, it is a serious business. An actor to get laughs must act away from them."

Fox Forces Busy at Jamaica

Since the arrival of Director Herbert Brenon and his company at the Island of Jamaica, British West Indies, to make the William Fox feature starring Annette Kellermann, the tropical island has gone completely mad over motion pictures. The steamer Carillo, which carried the first of the three companies, docked at Kingston, Jamaica, on August 29. The voyage down, according to advices received by William Fox this week, was filled with incidents and adventure. From the very start of the steamer from New York, there were exciting incidents, but athletic contests were soon organized, and everybody was busy writing letters. Several hundred feet of film were also made.

The Kingston papers devoted columns of space to the arrival of the company, and the Myrtlebank Hotel, where Director Brenon and his staff assistants are stopping, was besieged by various officials. Mr. Brenon's first act was to establish an office and engage stenographers to assist those that he took down with him. On the day after their arrival, Dr. Lockett, the health inspector of Kingston, made a physical examination of each member of the company, and reported them all in splendid health. He recommended, however, three grain capsules of quinine for everybody every morning.

Prominent Jamaicans are giving Mr. Brenon every assistance in their power. An abandoned motion picture theater on King street is being fitted up as a studio, and the under-water city, oriental palaces and streets have been finished, and work began two days after the companies landed in Jamaica.

Prop Skeleton Surprised Native

On a recent trip to the Mojave desert in filming "The Woman's Share," Rollin Sturgeon and his Vitagraph company had a lot of fun out of "the silent partner," as they named the prop skeleton which accompanied them. The assistant director got it out to the location selected, with quite an effort, and hence decided to leave it out all night in order to have it just right for the scene that was to be taken in the early morning. Three hours after they had left the location and returned to their camp, a wild-eyed native rushed in and announced that he had found some grewsome remains. There was excitement for a few moments—until Mr. Sturgeon in his quiet way ascertained the location of the "find"—when it was discovered that "the silent partner" was the cause of all the trouble—and all had a laugh on the native son.

The discovery of the "silent partner."

Lubin of Philadelphia announces the engagement of House Peters, the famous photoplay star, to act in its feature films. He will be remembered best for his splendid work in "Salomy Jane." He begins his work with Lubin at once.

Scenes in Big Addition to Selig Studios

Part of the finishing room and identification department in the new addition

One end of the negative department, where room is provided for miles of films

Exterior view of the Selig Chicago plant. The new addition cannot be seen in this picture

Part of the drying room, which gives but a faint idea of the total space devoted to drying

Hundreds and hundreds of experienced girl operators are employed in the factory

A section of the perforating department showing a small battery of the expensive perforating machines

Big New Addition to Selig Studios

IS ALREADY OCCUPIED

A NEW addition to the Selig Polyscope Company's great plant in Chicago has just been completed, for the purpose of housing the laboratories and technical departments. This addition makes the Selig studios in Chicago among the largest and most modernly equipped in the world.

The new addition, builded of steel, brick and stone. is three stories high and new machinery installed in this addition aggregates in cost many thousands of dollars. The new addition includes the negative department, assembling department, developing department, printing department, perforating department, drying rooms, machine shop and film inspection department. There is also a job printing office in the new addition.

The film editorial department with modernly equipped projecting rooms is also located in the new addition, as are the editorial rooms of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Were it possible for all the friends of the Selig Company to make a tour of inspection of the new departments they would gain a new conception of the manifold details essential to the work of preparing and releasing the Selig pictureplay program. Laboratory experts are continually engaged in the dark rooms, the drying rooms, the developing rooms, etc., and the power which runs the delicate machinery is furnished by dynamos. The interior of the new building is finished in concrete in order to guard against fire.

The great vaults which contain new films, negatives, and other equipment are also found in the new addition to the Selig plant. The new building was but recently occupied and is now in active operation.

BUYS BIG ANIMAL PICTURE

President Aaron M. Gollos of Photoplays Releasing Company Purchases States Rights on "Vengeance of the Wilds," Thrilling Jungle Film

"Vengeance of the Wilds," a five-reel animal picture in which a caravan is attacked by wild animals and where scenes showing a hunter besieged by enraged lions, which finally break into the hunter's cabin, pull one forward on his seat, while in and through the entire five reels is woven a charming story of sturdy manhood and the protection of a young girl from the machinations of a villainous animal trader, who at the end of the film story is killed by his own captive leopards, makes a picture which will have a tremendous vogue among exhibitors.

It has been purchased for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin territory by A. M. Gollos, president of the Photoplay Releasing Company.

Several of the biggest owners of chain theaters, at a private showing the other day, started a small riot among themselves to ascertain who would get the picture first, which speaks for the drawing power of the film itself.

Mr. Gollos stated on Tuesday that six reels of film, entitled "The House of Bondage," are missing from his vaults, while he understands from other sources that this film is being booked throughout Ohio and Indiana He therefore requests that exhibitors in this territory who are being offered this film by any one other than the Photoplay Releasing Company to immediately communicate with his company at the Mallers building, Chicago.

Mr. Gollos also wishes notice given that Fred Linick, formerly salesman for the Photoplay Releasing Company, is no longer connected with it in any capacity and that Mr. Linick is in no way authorized to offer films for sale or booking as the agent or representative of the Photoplay Releasing Company.

V. L. S. E. Opens New Theaters

The V. L. S. E. features are establishing quite a record as the choice of exhibitors for opening new theaters. This is a distinction which is all the more notable by reason of the fact that in almost every instance, the theaters booking V. L. S. E. releases for their initial bow to the public, are among the larger and higher priced houses.

For instance, in Cincinnati, the Music Hall, said to be the largest photoplay theater in the West, featured for its opening, Meredith Nicholson's "House of a Thousand Candles," which the Selig Company is releasing. This feature was extensively advertised in seven column strips in the Cincinnati newspapers, as was the succeeding program, which had as its principal picture, another V. L. S. E. film, "The Wheels of Justice," produced by the Vitagraph Company. The Music Hall has a seating capacity of 5,000. It has for years been used principally for musical entertainments, the great semi-annual May Music Festival of Cincinnati, famous the country over, being the big event held there. An orchestra of thirty pieces, under the direction of Walter Esberger, and supplemented by the great Music Hall organ, played by Alfred Schehl, a distinguished soloist at that instrument, furnishes an unusual musical program.

Another new theater which recently opened with the V. L. S. E. program, is the Wells house in Norfolk. It showed the first week, Vitagraph's "The Sins of the Mothers"; Lubin's "The Sporting Duchess"; Vitagraph's "The Island of Regeneration"; and the second week Essanay's "The Blindness of Virtue," and "The White Sister," produced by the same company.

Baseball Feature Ready

"Right Off the Bat," the five-reel comedy drama in which Mike Donlin, is featured by the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, is now completed and will be released within the next fortnight. It remains only for President W. E. Shallenberger to choose which one of several sources of distribution open to him shall be the medium of presenting "Right Off the Bat" to the American public.

It goes almost without saying that a photoplay which presents Mike Donlin, for sixteen years the heaviest-hitting member of the New York Giants and one of the most popular players who ever swung a bat, would contain several references to the great National pastime. There is baseball in "Right Off the Bat"—real, red-blooded baseball played by two of the fastest teams in the country—but it is baseball that can be understood by all.

For probably the first time since the all-seeing camera has filmed passing events, baseball has been put on the screen in such a way that any woman, even though she be ignorant of the fine points of the game, can understand the plays. Besides this, there is a real, decidedly refreshing love story that runs through the picture.

Mike Donlin and Claire Mersereau in "Right Off the Bat."

The prologue, which covers the childhood of Donlin, is played by the most delightful children, all of them famous on the stage and the screen. There are several real thrills, a number of hearty laughs, some few little cries and a whole lot of happy chuckles in the five reels of "Right Off the Bat."

The Duluth "Photoplay News"

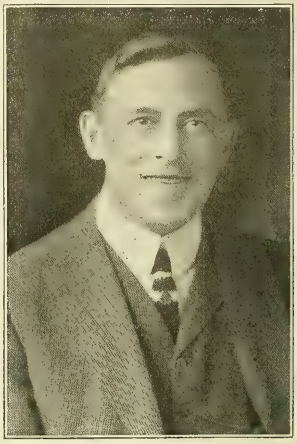
Thomas Furniss, president of the Brunswick Amusement Company of Duluth, this week enters the publication field with volume 1, number 1 of the Duluth Photoplay News, a fortnightly newspaper, four pages in size, and devoted to the coming attractions at the Rex and Lyric theaters of Duluth, which are owned and operated by the Brunswick Amusement Company.

Mr. Furniss is certainly to be congratulated upon his offering in the way of a house organ, for it is a surprisingly newsy little sheet that is devoted to the doings of Mr. Furniss' two theaters. The news matter is well arranged, well illustrated and well printed.

In his editorial column Mr. Furniss throws open his house to all comers and in his inaugural address to the patrons themselves says in part as follows:

"The house is yours."

That is what you say to a guest who visits your home. That is how you feel. While he is under your roof you wish him to feel at home, to be at home.



That is exactly how we feel toward those who are our guests at the Rex and the Lyric. You come as our guest. While you are there, the house is yours.

That is the attitude of every entertainment manager toward his patrons. It is peculiarly the case in the moving picture branch of entertainment. The people who visit the moving picture theater select the features. The management submits them. The manager picks out that the patrons of the theater will like the best he can. But you choose them. If they please you, the theater becomes more and more your favorite place of amusement. It is because you are assured of finding something to please you whenever you visit the Rex or the Lyric, that you have adopted it as your theater.

During the hour or two you spend with us as a visitor the house is yours. As long as you think of it as your theater, the house is yours.

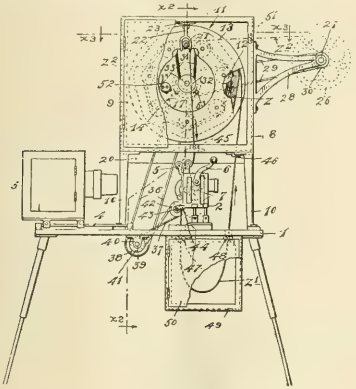
Bannon Resigns from Edison

After two years as publicity manager and special representative at the Edison studio, Frank Bannon tendered his resignation taking effect September 18. Prior to his entrance into the motion picture field, Mr. Bannon held a responsible civil service position in the Department of Finance, where he gained the sobriquet of "Smiling Frank" through his genial disposition and happy faculty of making friends and keeping them. But he responded to the call of the films and, accordingly, resigned from his post in the city service to become proprietor of a motion picture theater in the heart of New York City. After three years' success as an exhibitor, Mr. Bannon was anxious to probe the manufacturing end of the business and, therefore, made connections with the Edison Company as assistant to Manager Plimpton. Mr. Bannon has made the acquaintance of numerous exhibitors throughout the United States and is known as the "Edison Booster" wherever he visits. Due to his untiring energy Edison nights have been established in many prominent theaters and, through his efforts, arrangement was made whereby the Edison Company could show its current releases to exhibitors on one night each week at the Claremont theater in New York. Bannon is an athlete of no mean ability, having won many trophies for his skill as an oarsman on the Harlem River and as handball champion of the Y. M. C. A.

Frank Bannon.

Minusa Screen Goes to Alaska

When the inhabitants of Juneau, Alaska, gaze upon pictures shown upon a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, they will be treated to a genuine surprise, for the Johnson Seating Company, of Seattle, Washington, recently wired the factory of this important screen company, to make a shipment to Alaska by steamer leaving Seattle on September 17. The Minusa Cine Products Company is doing a very fine foreign business at the present time, and its screens are sold in every section of the globe.



The Laemmle Film Service, representing the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in Minneapolis, announces its removal to larger quarters at 717 and 719 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Recent Patents in Motography

REVIEWED BY DAVID S. HULFISH

PATENT No. 1,137,192. Reel for Projectors. Issued to F. D. Sears and A. O. Sodergren, Minneapolis, Minn.

This patent shows a new mechanical arrangement of film handling to the end (much desired) of repeated projection without rewinding the film; that is, a machine in which, after the film is projected once, the reel is found in proper condition for a repeated projection without rewinding.

1,137,192.

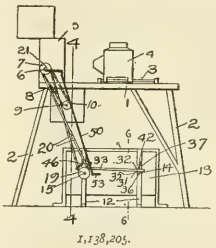
The reel designed by Messrs. Sears and Sodergren has a large revolving plate, which may revolve upon a central spindle, the spindle being horizontal and the plate vertical. This plate carries a circle of small rollers (seven rollers shown in the diagram accompanying the patent), and with its rollers it forms a rather large reel which might be used in the ordinary manner. With the large reel-plate loosely revolving upon its spindle, and with the small rollers locked against turning upon their separate spindles upon the plate, the large plate is turned to wind the film from its shipping reel to the improved reel, the film then forming a large open coil upon the seven (or more) small rollers.

When this has been accomplished, the large reel-plate is locked fast, and the small rollers are unlocked that they may turn upon their spindles. The inner end of the film is threaded through the motion head and carried back to the feed reel and there made fast to the tail of the film.

During projection, the film is drawn continuously from the inside of the reel and is fed continuously upon the outside of the reel, and at the end of projection the film is found in the same condition as at the start.

Features of novelty are found in the method of driving the movable parts of the film reel. The drive belt drives a pulley upon the center shaft of the large reel-plate, and from this center shaft a belt runs the separate rollers of the circle of rollers carried upon the large reel-plate. When the rollers are locked upon the plate and the plate is loose upon its bearings, the drive belt turns the whole reel mechanism, to wind the film from the shipping reel; but when the rollers are loose upon the large reel-plate and the large plate itself is locked against movement, then the drive belt turns the separate rollers to move the film upon the large plate, and to feed it positively out at the middle of the reel and to the motion head.

1,137,958. Portable Projector. Issued to Charles Dupuis, Charenton, France.



The parts are very compactly arranged, and the entire device may be carried as hand baggage.

In a box-like casing are mounted the feed mechanism and objective lens. The feed and take-up reels are on the top of the box with the lamp between them, the film passing through a horizontal film gate just under the lamp. The first direction of light thus is downward, from the small incandescent lamp, through condensers, through the film windows in the middle of the top of the box, past the horizontal shutters to an inclined mirror, there being reflected horizontally to the screen.

A small electric generator inside the box-like body of the projector furnishes current for the lamp and itself is driven from the crank.

1,138,205. Rewinding Device. Issued to Charles V. Foote, Nephi, Utah.

The rewinder is driven from the projection machine, so that, while any film is being projected, a previously projected film may be rewound at a leisurely rate, since the rate of rewinding need not exceed the rate of projection.

1,138,205.

A brake arrangement in the rewinder is arranged for control by the belt so that as the rewinder drives harder and tightens the belt, the brake upon the reel in the rewinder is loosened. Thus a uniform tension is provided upon the film being rewound.

1,138,360. Method of Presenting the Illusion of Scenes in Colors. Issued to Thomas A. Edison, assignor to New Jersey Patent Co., West Orange, N. J.

In the words of the patent:

The method of presenting the illusion of animated scenes in color, consisting in producing a negative by photographing at spaced intervals upon a sensitized film a plurality of series of images of a moving scene, preparing a positive film therefrom and blocking out solidly on the positive thus obtained all the portions of each image other than those representing the portion of the scene photographed of a certain color, different in each view of a series, and recurring periodically in the various series, making a sub-negative from such blocked out positive, preparing a positive film from the sub-negative, and projecting the series of images through said last named positive film in a moving picture projecting apparatus, each image being projected through a color medium appropriate thereto at such a rate that all the differently colored images of each series blend in the vision of the beholder to form the complete scenes in their natural colors, substantially as described.

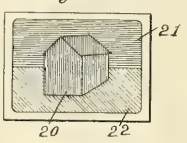
A little explanation would go a long way toward assisting mortal comprehension.

In the illustration the image being projected is divided into three parts for three colors; say, for purposes of this explanation, green grass, red house, blue sky. The white portions of the film are clear and the shaded portions are solid black. The shutter is a color shutter having green at 14, red at 15 and blue at 16. From one visible cross line on the film to the next, there are twelve sprocket holes each side, indicating three steps of the intermittent sprocket wheel. The two intermediate cross lines in the shaded portions of the film may be discovered or imagined.

Fig. 2



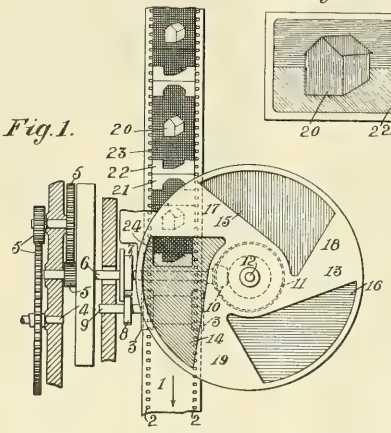


Fig. 1.

1,138,360.

As the figure is drawn, the grass is being projected through the green of the color shutter, the house and sky being blacked out. After a step of the film, the house will be projected through the red of the shutter, the grass and sky being blacked out in that part of the film. Then, after another step of the film, the sky will be projected through the blue of the color shutter, the grass and the house being blacked out in that part of the film. Repeat, and "persistence of vision," that mysterious phenomenon which first made the movie possible (though we might get along without it now, since we have such things as the Vanoscope, etc.), will give to the observer the illusion of all colors as if projected simultaneously.

1,139,245. Safety Door for Projecting Booths. Issued to Arthur Werner and R. S. Denniss, San Francisco, Calif.

The projecting booth has a door held open by strain upon a fusible wire, and a circuit is arranged for fusing the wire by electric current. Safety devices associated with the film being projected then are arranged to give current to the door-fuses in case the film should catch fire.

1,138,364. Automatic Shutter. Issued to John D. Engelbreit, assignor to Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.

The safety shutter is positioned at a considerable distance from the film gate, and near the condensers. A connection is provided between the shutter and the film gate such that while the film gate is open the shutter automatically takes a position to interrupt the light.

1,138,364.

1,140,434. Synchronizing Apparatus. Issued to C. S. Andres, Philadelphia, Pa.

In the drawings of the patent, the projecting machine has associated with it an electric commutator drum, and the phonograph is driven by an electric motor of specific design. The commutator of the picture machine sends to the motor of the talking machine current impulses which positively control the rotation of the motor. The two devices are shown connected by some sixteen or more electric wires, over which the control is effected.

1,140,434.

1,139,679; 1,139,680; 1,139,681; 1,139,682 and 1,139,683. Restorative for Blemished Motion Picture Films. Issued to Frederick W. Hochstetter, assignor to Paul M. Pierson, Scarboro-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

The restorative is to be rubbed upon the film to fill the scratches. The compounds are: (1) Petrolatum, spirits of camphor, sulphuric ether and glycerin. (2) A fatty base, camphor, alcohol, sulphuric ether and glycerin. (3) Oil, camphor, sulphuric ether, glycerin. (4) A fatty base and alcohol. (5) A fatty base and sulphuric ether. The proper portions are described in the patents.

Famous Players Productions Resumed

RELEASE SCHEDULE CHANGED

THE marvelous recuperative powers and remarkably efficient organization of the Famous Players company could not be better demonstrated than by the phenomenal rapidity with which actual production of films was resumed after the disastrous fire which completely devastated the company's New York studio on Saturday, September 11. As a result of the tremendous efforts expended while the ruins were still smoking, new executive offices were opened at 507 Fifth avenue, on Monday morning, September 13, production was under way at the company's Yonker's studio on the same day, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, Pauline Frederick and John Barrymore were assembled and at once prepared to appear in a series of new productions to be substituted for those injured or destroyed in the fire, and the printing of the first film on the newly arranged release schedule was begun at another laboratory.

Although the studios, offices and their co-related departments such as dressing rooms, property rooms, and projecting rooms, were entirely demolished, it has been definitely established that the laboratories of the Famous Players, contrary to the first reports of the fire published in the daily newspapers, was not blown out by an explosion. In fact, the laboratory was the only division of the entire building which remained intact after the fire, which totally refutes the assumption held by Fire Commissioner Adamson that film factories within the confines of the city are a menace to New York.

As the laboratory comprises the entire manufacturing end of the studio structure and is the portion of the plant which contained the chemicals that are believed by the fire authorities to be so dangerous to the community in the event of fire, the astonishing success of this part of the building in withstanding the attack of the devastating flames is at once a direct and incontrovertible contradiction of the theory that film factories are of necessity dangerous to the community, and a conclusive illustration of the great efforts exerted by the Famous Players to maintain an absolutely fireproof factory. That this portion of the building was subjected to the severest possible test by the flames is shown by the fact that the laboratory was situated on the third floor of the building, and that the flames, which completely enveloped it, swept past it in their upward flight and ate their way through the roof itself, leaving only this floor immune from their destructive force.

The Famous Players is already in a position to assure the trade that no plan which had been formulated or contemplated before the outbreak of the fire will be in any way modified or impaired, and that the only change of schedule will be that arising from the necessary delay in printing and assembling the scattered negatives rescued from the fire or the re-taking of such subjects as have been partially or wholly destroyed. This includes the postponing of release of Marie Doro in "The White Pearl," scheduled for September 20, which will now be issued on October 11, the indefinite postponement of Charles Cherry in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," and the re-arrangement of the next two months' program. The original release date of "The White Pearl" will be filled by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production of Lou Tellegen in "The Explorer."

The first Famous Players release on the revised Paramount schedule will be John Mason in "The Fatal Card," which will appear on September 20, to be followed by Marguerite Clark in "The Prince and the Pauper," October 4; Mary Pickford in "A Girl of Yesterday," October 7; Marie Doro in "The White Pearl," October 11; Hazel Dawn in "The Masqueraders," October 28; Marguerite Clark in "Still Waters," November 4; Mary Pickford in "Madame Butterfly," November 8; Pauline Frederick in "Zaza," November 11, and John Barrymore in "The Red Widow," November 15.

Fortunately, many negatives of future releases were stored in safety vaults not on the premises destroyed. It is feared, however, that two or three exceptionally elaborate features planned for release in the early spring have been totally ruined.

The immediate result of the fire has been the rushing to a speedy conclusion of the plans in preparation, prior to the fire, for the erection of the studios and laboratories on the newly acquired tract of land at Two Hundred Twenty-fifth street, west of Broadway, overlooking the Harlem and Hudson Rivers, the recent purchase of which created a sensation in motion picture and real estate circles, as this is the largest plot of ground ever secured by a motion picture concern within New York City for construction purposes. These plans, which call for the erection of the largest and most comprehensively equipped motion picture studios in the country, are now in the hands of the contractors who have been given instructions to rush the completion of the work with all speed at their command.

It is an interesting commentary on the completeness of the plans for the new studios and laboratories that Edwin S. Porter, under whose personal supervision they were drawn, declares that not one change in specifications will be necessitated by the fire.

"Every contingency which could possibly arise in a fire in the studios which we are now building has been anticipated and provided for. Last week's fire has not disclosed the necessity for any safeguard that had not before been anticipated and planned. The lessons of the fire prove conclusively that the fire prevention measures which we had already contemplated are more than adequate to cope with any situation which could conceivably confront us," said Mr. Porter with reference to the possible changes which the experience might have suggested to him.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, stated that the work of the organization would go on uninterruptedly.

"It is with the most heartfelt appreciation," added Mr. Zukor, "that I acknowledge in behalf of the Famous Players, the innumerable telegrams from exhibitors, exchangemen and manufacturers offering sympathy, and in many cases, the complete studio facilities and organizations of the senders. The Famous Players can never express in words the gratitude and pleasure which these sincere tributes from the members of the trade have afforded them in this hour of great trial, but it is particularly gratifying that the organized resources of the company made the acceptance of these offers unnecessary."

Lubin Secures New Comedy Star

Lubin of Philadelphia announces the engagement of David L. Don as a comedy star. Mr. Don has an enviable record as a light opera comedian, having played roles in "The Girl from Paris" with Louis Mann; "Adonis" with Henry Dixie; "The Belle of New York;" "The Merry Whirl;" "The Belle of Bohemia;" and other famous Broadway productions.

David L. Don.

Mr. Don began his public career as an acrobat with a circus at the mature age of nine. Then he deserted the sawdust and became an interior decorator and scene painter, and eventually a professional ball player, but all these activities held no charm for the future actor, and in the course of time he became a minstrel with the original Barlow, Wilson, Primrose and West Company on their first tour of the country.

After some years on the legitimate stage, during which he made himself popular as a comedian, Mr. Don heard the call of motion pictures and answered it. Now he is being featured in Lubin comedies, being filmed by Edward McKim, the director, who just joined the Lubin forces.

Photoplayers' Night on "Mandalay"

Wednesday evening, September 8, was photoplayers' night in the closing week carnival held on the Hudson River steamer Mandalay, and the fans who crowded the vessel optically feasted to their hearts' content on their favorites of the screen. Among those who accepted invitations to the affair were: Dorothy Kelly, Hughie Mack, Flora Finch, Lillian Walker, Wally Van, Teft Johnson, Kate Price, Arline Pretty, Helen Woodruff, Ned Finley, Mae Halpin, Charles Richman, Audrey Berry, Zena Keefe, Vic Smith, Garry McGarry, Donald McBride and Alice Lake of the Vitagraph Company; John Hines, Alice Brady and Vivian Martin of the World Film Corporation; and King Baggot, Rosemary Theby, Harry Myers, William Garwood, Violet Mersereau, Harry Benham, Leah Baird, Dorothy Phillips, Ben Wilson, Allen Holubar, and Brinsley Shaw of the Universal Company.

First prizes in the popularity contest were taken by Dorothy Kelly and Hughie Mack, the former of whom received a silver vanity case and the latter a silver cigarette case as remembrances of their triumph, while Mae Halpin and Ned Finley were rewarded with a silver mesh bag and silver cigarette case, respectively, for winning second prize. Dorothy Kelly and M. J. Ayers ran the gauntlet of elimination in the dancing contest successively, and received a beautiful loving cup as a material mark of commendation. The last three couples on the floor, including the winners, were remembered with silver mesh bags and cigarette cases. Baby Alexander was also awarded a prize for exhibition dancing. Photoplay night proved to be one of the most enjoyable and successful nights of the Mandalay's carnival week, much of the credit for which is due to T. E. Sniffen, general passenger agent of the steamship line.

Moss' Baseball Comedy

Ring Lardner, like most writers who have received their training on the daily newspapers, does most of his work with his hat on his head. In the accompanying picture he is seen hard at work with Hans Moss, the director, on one of his famous baseball busher's letters.

It was Hans Moss who conceived the idea of filming Mr. Lardner's clever baseball humor, so that the moving picture fans, as well as the readers of the sporting page might enjoy his unique stuff. Early this spring about the time the newspapers began to mention baseball again, Mr. Moss began to wonder why a little more attention to the national pastime would not be profitable to the motion picture producers, and after serious consideration of the subject decided that Ring W. Lardner ("you know me, Al") was the one best bet as the most logical author for a series of stories with the real true baseball atmosphere.

Hans Moss and Ring Lardner

Money talks with most of us, and Ring Lardner is no exception—so another popular author of the day was drawn into the moving picture field. Arrangements were then made with the Chicago National League Baseball Club to use the grounds during the season and Mr. Moss succeeded in persuading many of the National League stars to do their little parts in the pictures whenever called on, thus giving not only a series of good comedies to the motion picture fans, but an intimate view of the popular stars of the diamond as well.

The idea is good—the author is good—the way Mr. Moss is handling the proposition seems good, so the public may expect something a little out of the ordinary in the way of motion picture comedies from this series.

Directing Feature Productions

BY HERBERT BRENON*

MY father is Edward St. John-Brenon, an English journalist of no mean fame. My mother is Francis Brenon, also a journalist, who has done a considerable amount of writing both in this country and abroad. I was born in Dublin, Ireland, January 3, 1880, received my education at St. Paul's school, London, and King's college, London, and came to America at the age of sixteen and through the influence of George R. White, the famous super - captain of New York City, received my first position, a job requiring me to do the shouting in a production then running at the Academy of Music, called "Sporting Life." One day the director was trying to get a young fellow to shout "Programs—programs of the races." He could not get anyone who could shout loud enough so he said, "among you couple of hundred men, is there one of you who could say 'programs' loud enough for me to hear it?" So before anybody could beat me to it, I yelled out "programs" with a pair of lusty lungs. I was, thereupon, increased to seventy-five cents a performance and began my career as an actor. I was doubling on the job. Stenography and typewriting at four dollars for vaudeville agency, and playing eight performances at the Academy of Music as a program boy. It was rather difficult to combine both positions for the Wednesday matinee. Every Wednesday I wrote a different excuse to the vaudeville agent in order to get those seventy-five cents. About the fifth Wednesday my excuses ran out and the old time funeral was called into service. Sitting in the box at that Wednesday matinee performance, I saw my vaudeville agent listening to my "program—programs of the races, sir," and something in his look told me I had better not return any more.

Herbert Brenon.

The late Augustine Daly needed ten men as cadets in his production of "Cyrano de Bergerac." About fifty of us were sent up there and I had the good fortune to be selected as one. Through the influence of Kyrle Bellow, a great friend of my father's, I was promoted to the position of call boy. I feel that I owe to that great producer, Augustine Daly, a great measure of my executive ability.

I was given a small part in the run of the "Great Ruby," and my salary was ten dollars a week. I then became assistant stage manager with Walker Whiteside. My association with him, a great artist, is one I shall never forget. We played nothing but one night stands, but withal, it was one of the happiest years of my life.

I then drifted into stock companies in Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Louis and Chicago. In Chicago I became a director of stock companies and I consider this training absolutely the best to properly fit a man as a producer of motion pictures. The stock director is compelled to do in four or five rehearsals that which the Broadway producer has taken months. It clears his perception. He is forced to apply himself steadily to his work and producing, as he does, fifty-two plays a year almost, his imaginative qualities must be exercised and enlarged. He also learns, to a great degree, the sense of responsibility, but it is in nowise as great a responsibility as that which rests upon the producer of motion pictures, for the reason that at the most, a stock production costs a couple of thousand dollars and runs but a week, and then passes on, while the motion picture lives at least a year and sometimes five or more years. I firmly believe that any successful stock director would, when properly trained, make a successful motion picture director.

With my stock training, I, with my wife, Miss Helen Downing, took a vaudeville sketch of Will M. Cressy's entitled, "One Christmas Eve." We were quite successful. My mother, Mrs. Frances Brenon, then wrote a sketch for me, called "The Intruders," which my wife and I played for three years and we accumulated sufficient money to take a lease on a picture house in Johnstown, Pa. I ran this successfully, making a profit of sometimes from three to four hundred dollars a week, until a new house was built a little further down the street and my profits were cut in two. The following year came a third house —my profits were cut in three and soon dwindled down to almost nothing. I felt the call of the stage again and had watched so many pictures from the public viewpoint, that I made up my mind that I could do a great deal better than most producers of that day were then doing.

I came up to New York and interviewed A. W. Smith, of the Vitagraph, and Carl Laemmle, of the Universal. Both made me propositions, but I decided to accept the position of scenario editor with the Imp company, under the management of Julius Stern. I was at the head of this department and was then given my first opportunity by Mr. Laemmle to make a picture. This was entitled, "All For Her." A few months later I made the first three-reel picture the Imp company ever turned out, entitled, "Leah, the Forsaken." I was sent to Europe with a company headed by King Baggot and produced the first four-reeler ever turned out by the Universal, entitled, "Ivanhoe." One of my biggest successes at the Universal was entitled, "Absinthe." After this production Mr. Baggot returned to America and William E. Shay took his place. Mr. Shay has been my leading man ever since in every production.

On my return to this country Mr. Laemmle informed me that he had an opportunity to make a picture with Annette Kellermann. I immediately saw the tremendous value in her name and went down to Bermuda and produced "Neptune's Daughter." This was the first American production to run on Broadway at advanced prices. It ran for eighteen weeks in New York and twenty-seven weeks in Chicago, and it cost about forty thousand dollars to make. This is, of course, my greatest success. I then invested some of my own money in the production of "The Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Leslie Carter as the star. This production is earning handsome dividends for me every day.

*Producer with Fox Film Corporation.

Herbert Brenon directing a scene in "The Clemenceau Case."

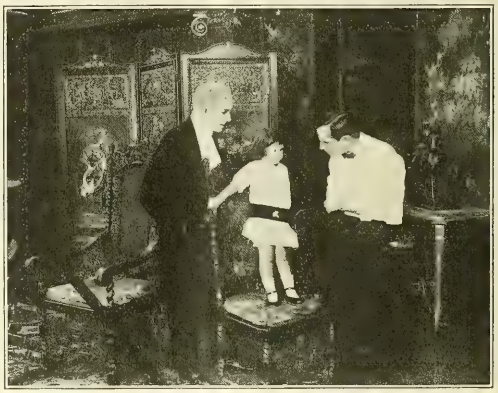
On my return from California, where I made this picture, I was introduced to William Fox. It took me but a few minutes to make up my mind that I was talking to the future leader of the motion picture industry. He made me an attractive offer which I accepted. This was last January. Mr. Fox then had four directors. At the present moment he is employing nine. He was issuing about two releases a month and recently began his one-a-week policy.

You ask me why my productions seem to be successful. Really, I could not tell you. I never know how successful a production will be until the public passes judgment. For instance, "The Clemenceau Case," is considered one of my greatest pictures. Mr. Fox said I had a great picture when he saw it assembled for the first time. I cannot tell you, even now, where its greatness lies, if it be great. So with my two recent productions, not yet released, "The Two Orphans," and "The Soul of Broadway," with Valeska Surratt.

It is said that genius consists of an infinite capacity for taking pains. I am far from a genius, but I do take pains. It matters not whether the scene is to run five feet or two hundred and fifty feet. I try to be just as careful in the matter of detail with every single foot of negative I expose. I try to avoid repetition and to appeal we must "hold the mirror up to nature." In fact, I endeavor to follow all the precepts laid down in Hamlet's advice to the players, "the eyes are the window of the soul," and it is my belief that to be a successful screen artist, one must have soul and expressive eyes. Dramatic training is most useful but not necessary. Miss Nance O'Neil, whom I consider the greatest living tragedienne, is a perfect master of gesture. Her gestures are controlled by her soul and not by her brain. To my mind there are two types of successful actors and actresses on the dramatic stage: The mechanical actor or actress and the tempermental actor or actress. The former acts from the brain, the latter from the soul. I always give the preference to the tempermental actor or actress. Whatever success I have met with, I owe, I feel sure, to a bond of sympathy which usually exists between myself, my staff and my players.



It may interest you to know my method of working. Never in my career as a producer have I used the so-called scenario. I write a synopsis of my story, thoroughly absorb it and then usually begin with the great moment. From that big scene, I radiate towards the tributary scenes. I let my imagination absolutely run wild with every particular sequence.

The manufacturer who insists his producer follow a manuscript or scenario, should pay the author the larger salary of the two, because it is his brain that conceives the story and the producer merely carries out his ideas. In cases of this sort, there is but little opportunity for the producer's imagination to assert itself.

Every producer has different ideas of construction, therefore, only a writer who thoroughly knows that producer's methods could possibly construct a scenario for him. Perhaps my training in the scenario department makes me assert myself so definitely on this point.

There was a time when I used to think that to make a picture successfully, one must have that quality which is called a "punch" or to be more explicit, one or many great dramatic moments. Of course, this is so today, but unless it has for its accompaniment those little touches of nature which make the whole world akin, we have not made an extraordinary picture.

The day of hairbreadth escape pictures is over, I think. We producers are absolutely dependent upon authors. Without literary genius to give us ideas we cannot march forward. It is my firm belief that we have every advantage over the speaking stage, for what we lose in word expression we gain in nature's beauties. The love of nature is strong in all of us. Every little child loves the sea shore, the green fields, the rivers and the mountains. You cannot give us these things on the stage, and I maintain that there is not a successful drama ever written, that, if properly constructed, will not lend itself to the screen. Where the stage can give you hundreds of men or animals, we can give you thousands. We can please the eye, we can touch the heart, we can make you laugh, we can thrill you, we can teach you, we can advise you, we can inspire you. Is there anything the stage can do that we cannot do? Don't forget we have our sub-titles to express beautiful thoughts or wise saws.

Herbert Brenon directing little Jane Lee and William E. Shay.

The producer of the motion picture can be and should be, through his art, educator, preacher, painter, actor, sculptor, jester and at times can bring to play the magnetism of the power of the orator.

One other thing. My idea of a great leader is one who never orders his men to do what he himself would not willingly do. In every case where I have asked an artist to do an extraordinary thing, I did it myself first, then, if I cannot do it, I won't ask the artist to do it. I learned this lesson a year or so ago when I was rather hard on an actor because he could not ride a horse exactly as I wished him to. He complained about its fiery temper, and to prove to him he was wrong, I got on the horse myself. He was right. I was in the hospital for two weeks.

CHAPLIN DENIES RUMORS

Famous Essanay Comedian Thoroughly Satisfied With Present Surroundings and Has No Thought of Joining Other Companies

Charles Chaplin, Essanay comedian, whose latest comedy, "Shanghaied," has just been completed, denounces the reports that he is planning to leave Essanay as "vain imaginings." It is stated both on the authority of George K. Spoor, president of Essanay and Mr. Chaplin himself, that he will continue with Essanay indefinitely.

"There have been many ridiculous rumors circulated about my leaving Essanay which was news to me," said Mr. Chaplin. "One story I read said I was going into vaudeville on Broadway; another that I was going with other film companies.

"There is no truth in any of them. I am engaged under a long term contract with the Essanay company and as far as I am concerned I intend to remain with it, and to produce no pictures for any other concern nor go on the stage.

"Not only am I under contract, but my associations with the Essanay company has been the most cordial and pleasant. Mr. Spoor and myself are in perfect harmony in regard to the work so why should I leave, even if I had no contract?

"I don't know where these rumors start unless they come from rival concerns. There is just as much truth in them as the reports circulated that I was dead, insane, crippled and otherwise incapacitated. I would like to settle once and for all the fact that I am producing the Essanay-Chaplin brand of pictures and no others, and will continue to do so."

To Lead Fashion Show

Miss Alice Brady, the popular and talented star of the footlights, who has also won a screen reputation in the Knickerbocker Star Feature, "The Cup of Chance," has been chosen as the star of the coming fashion show. Because of her rare beauty and grace, Miss Brady has been chosen for the leading part in the International Fashion Extravaganza which will be held at Carnegie Hall, New York, on October 7, 8 and 9.

Edwin J. Brady Married

Long Beach's moving picture studio should be renamed the Matrimonial Feature Film Company, in view of the frequency with which its members have committed matrimony recently. The latest match to be made is that of Edwin J. Brady and Lillian West, who slipped away recently to Santa Ana unbeknown to their coworkers and joined hands for life. The fact did not leak out until recently, however, at the Balboa plant.

Lillian West.

According to Miss West, she had no idea of jumping into the double harness Saturday morning. True, Mr. Brady had been importuning her every Sunday when they went for long rides in his car to wed. Each time, she acquiesced and set the date for the following Monday, knowing it would be impossible because both would be very busy playing their parts before the camera.

It so happened that neither one had to work Saturday afternoon. Mr. Brady suggested that they hasten away to the Orange County seat for the big event. Miss West, believing that it would be safe to go because the courthouse offices would be closed, consented. On the way over, they fell in with a leading townsman. When the would-be groom confided the purpose of the trip, the new made friend agreed to get the clerk to issue the license.

Edwin Brady.

That was more than Miss West had bargained for. But she couldn't get out of it. In Santa Ana, the chief of police and fire chief joined the party, at the instance of the politician, and all together formed a lively wedding party. Following a dinner at the leading hotel, the newlyweds returned to Long Beach. Both agreed to keep the matter quiet; but Mr. Brady was so happy that he had to divulge the secret after a few days.

Only a month ago, William Courtleigh, Jr., practically abducted Ethel Fleming of the Balboa forces and rushed her into matrimony. Miss Fleming and Miss West had been "pals" for six years, rooming together most of the time. The fact that she was deserted caused the now Mrs. Brady to give matrimony the first serious thought. Both are prominent members of the "Neal of the Navy" company.

Balboa Prominent at Fair

Moving picture day at the San Diego exposition recently seemed more like Balboa day, because of the large turnout from the Long Beach studio. It just happened that the date selected by the fair management came at a time when Balboa's "Neal of the Navy" company was working in San Diego, using some of the warships in the harbor. To help the exposition people entertain their guests, the Horkheimer brothers arranged to do a part of their work on the fair-grounds. The United States marines encamped there were utilized in this connection. Lillian Lorraine, William Courtleigh, Jr., Lucy Blake, Charles Dudley and a number of other well known players participated, under the direction of Harry Harvey. Joseph Brotherton was the cinematographer. Much interest was manifested in the "Neal" exhibit because it brings the navy department to the favorable attention of the people. They poured out in large numbers. In honor of the assembled motion picture players, the Exposition management served an elaborate banquet in the evening at the Critobal cafe, on the fair grounds. This was presided over by H. F. McGravie, of the exploitation department, and F. L. Macfarlane, his assistant.

The Balboa Stars

Around the tables were many screen celebrities. Balboa was exceptionally well represented. Among those present were E. D. Horkheimer, Bertram Bracken, Jackie Saunders, Madeline Pardee, Lewis J. Cody, Dorothy Dalton, Harry Harvey, Joe Brotherton, Lucy Blake, Douglas Bronston, H. O. Stechhan, Ruth Lackaye, William Courtleigh, Jr., Ethel Fleming, and Cullen Landis.

Massive Tropical Scene Constructed

Technical Director Charles Chapman of the Vitagraph Company has just completed one of the largest and most beautiful tropical scenes ever staged by the Vitagraph company. This scene, which represents a cave with three compartments and a rocky approach, looks like a transplanted section from one of the South Sea Islands. It was built for the picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "The Island of Surprise," on which Director Paul Scardon is now at work, assisted by Eleanor Woodruff, Julia Gordon, Zena Keefe, William Courtenay, Charles Kent and Anders Randolf.

Mr. Chapman and a corps of thirty workmen, including carpenters and expert workers in hurlap and plaster of paris modeling, were engaged for four weeks on the construction of this mammoth set which is forty feet high, one hundred feet wide and three hundred feet long. The burlap and plaster of paris was used in the construction of the sides and entrance of the cave and to reproduce huge rocks that weigh several tons apiece. Tropical plants, clinging vines, grass, shrubbery and trees that mask the opening of the cave and lend atmosphere to the scene were brought from nearby woods and florists. Special boats were hired that made many trips after sea plants, while automobile trucks were continually running to and from the beach transporting seaweed, sand and other material necessary to give the scene the realism demanded. In the construction of the rocky approach to the cave, huge boulders had to be built to rest on a super-structure strong enough to stage a battle between the three island castaways in the Brady story and a band of two hundred cannibals that were intent on their capture. In the construction of these boulders alone, a hundred and seventy-five barrels of plaster of paris were used.

Technical Director Charles Chapman of the Vitagraph Company and one of his tropical settings.

Mr. Chapman estimates the entire scene weighs in the neighborhood of twenty-seven tons and besides being the largest of its kind ever staged, represents his conception of the kind of scenes will be required as backgrounds for all feature pictures in the near future.

Calvert Still with Essanay

E. H. Calvert, who has been with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company four years, and who is under contract for a long term to direct pictures for the Chicago concern, denies that he is to go to another firm.

"There is absolutely no truth in the story circulated from Los Angeles that I had been engaged by a coast company," said Mr. Calvert. "At no time have I contemplated leaving Essanay."

"I consider George K. Spoor the greatest photoplay manufacturer in the country and I have thoroughly enjoyed my association with him and have been highly satisfied with my relations with the company.

"For these reasons I have never had a thought of making any change from the Indian Head banner. I am now under a long-term contract and fully expect to remain with Essanay until it expires and hope to continue with the company indefinitely."

Ohio Board Still Fighting "Hypocrites"

CENSORS EXTREMELY ANGRY

THE fight with the present Board of Censors in Ohio wages hotter and hotter as the days go by and the misrepresentations of the board and the fallacy of its judgment, especially on the "Hypocrites" film, is brought more and more to light.

The feeling was not lessened by the mid-week incidents of the campaign which centered in and around Cleveland. Carl H. Pierce, special representative of Bosworth, Inc., left Columbus Saturday night; spent the better part of two days in conference with James Steele and W. C. Bachmeyer in Pittsburgh, and then made straight for Cleveland.

On arrival there he gave a dinner to the leading newspaper men and exhibitors of Cleveland, during the course of which one exhibitor and then another offered him their theaters to run the film in defiance of the censors and put the case of "Hypocrites" in Ohio to a test.

At this the newspapers immediately printed the story that "Hypocrites" would be run in defiance of the censors. In fact, it looked for some time as if this would be the case, but some of those most interested reasoned against this, arguing that even if no judges could be found in Cleveland to convict the "criminals" yet "Hypocrites" would be no further along in Columbus where, it was said, the board would be able, by haling the offenders before some country judge, to obtain a verdict—not on the right of "Hypocrites" to pass, but purely on the legal point of whether an offense had been committed against the law as it now reads.

Meanwhile, Emery N. Downs, manager of the Knickerbocker theater, offered his playhouse for a private performance for Wednesday evening, and about two hundred attended. There were present the wife of the mayor of Cleveland and numerous of her friends. Several of the exhibitors were also present.

Mr. Downs gave an introductory address complaining of the work of the present censor board, stating how it misinterprets the pictures; its loose method of judging the pictures; and the generally unsatisfactory condition prevailing in that department. He said that he would like to have the people of Cleveland know of these conditions and now, he said, he proposed to show them a film that had been turned down in its entirety, which he believed to be a work of art; a film that in his judgment cleanses the mind and makes of each one that beholds it a better man or woman.

"Hypocrites" was then put on the screen. The photoplay was beautifully played by Spirlany, the talented leader of Mr. Down's orchestra, who played the exquisite "Angel Call" from the opera, "Louise," just before each entrance upon the film of Truth.

After the showing the newspaper men and the management circulated among those present, getting their views. The Cleveland Leader had this to say: "It's chaste, harmless, proper and beautiful." The censors had called it harmful and indecent. The Cleveland Plain Dealer characterized the film, quoting Mrs. M. A. Fanning, one of the leading society women of Cleveland—an intimate friend of Mrs. Mayor Baker: "It is an exquisitely pure and beautiful play—a triumph of photographic art." Numerous were the bursts of applause for the picture and at the end it was given a genuine ovation.

About two hundred ballots were cast "Unanimous —in favor of the picture," in answer to the question as to whether "Hypocrites" is harmless and an entirely fit photoplay to show.

During the excitement concerning the proposed showing in defiance of the censors, the board issued an order for the arrest of Manager Downs, Mr. Pierce and anyone else that might be connected with the showing—if they attempted a public performance. They apparently had not at that time dared to prevent a private showing. But when Mr. Pierce reached Columbus after this the indignation of Maud Murphy Miller had reached beyond bounds. She is said to have gone to the Chamber of Commerce, to have seen some of the members, to have called upon the attorney general (even as she threatened Mr. Maddox that she would do) and the attorney of the state of Ohio ordered even the private showing of "Hypocrites" cancelled on the ground that it was an indecent show and would be considered a public nuisance under the same statute that provided for the prohibition of lewd and obscene exhibitions, this in spite of the fact that he had never seen the picture.

Thus attacked, the management of the Majestic theater acting under the advice of Henry Gumble, an attorney, refused to allow the picture to go on. Mr. Maddox, the Majestic manager, called up the newspapers and informed them of the cancellation and the Evening Dispatch, on which Mrs. Miller serves as a reporter, explained to a gullible public that this closed the incident.

The Ohio State Journal, on the other hand, came out the following morning; told the details of the situation; explained that the manufacturers would appeal the case to the right parties when the attorney general decided which one was right. Attorney General Turner believes that the appeal is to the Industrial Commission. Attorney General Hogan, his predecessor believes that there is no appeal to the Industrial Commission—and there you are. What is that old saying, "When doctors disagree?"

Nor did the matter rest there. Friends of "Hypocrites" began to spring up all over the city. The wife of one of the leading bankers of the city had seen the picture in Los Angeles and to use her words: "I think it is the most beautiful of any picture I ever saw." The friend of one of the Ohio exhibitors had seen it in Buffalo. He said: "'Hypocrites' was wonderfully received in Buffalo. It is a wonderful lesson of God's truth."

Meanwhile opportunity offered Mr. Pierce to show the film to three of Columbus' most prominent ministers. They were unanimous in its praise. One of them said: "It is a work of art. I have been in favor of this Censor Board—but now I am against it. How it can pass the rotten stuff that I have seen, and then reject this work of art is more than I can comprehend unless the members are so depraved in their tastes as not to have the ability to comprehend art when they see it."

Just where this fight is going to end it would seem hard to predict, but it seems fair to assume that "Hypocrites" will affect the end of Maud Murray Miller and of some of the other members of the present board unless they find some way of escape by reconsidering the picture and permitting it to pass in Ohio.

Bessie Barriscale, Triangle Star

Bessie Barriscale, who has signed up with the New York Motion Picture Corporation for a long term at a very large salary, was born in New York but is rapidly transferring her allegiance to the West where she has worked for some time now.

Bessie Barriscale.

She started her stage career at the age of five at the instigation of her father who was an English actor who came over to America with the first "Lights O'London" company. Her very first part was with James A. Hearne in "Shore Acres," and she then stayed with this fine actor to play every kind of child parts from little Eva to Fauntleroy.

She later played "Lovey Mary" in New York for a season and went with the company to London playing the part for some ten months there.

At San Francisco and Los Angeles she became associated with two parts which she says have been her favorites, Juanita in "Rose of the Rancho," and the "girl" in "Bird of Paradise," the play which Richard Walton Tully wrote for her. She was to have gone East in it but the Morosco management would not release her from her engagement in Los Angeles. Her last big success was in "We Are Seven," by Eleanor Gates, in which she played in New York and after a summer season in San Francisco she was persuaded to join the Lasky company to present the "Rose of the Rancho," and at the end of the photoplay she received the offer from Mr. Ince which she could not well refuse.

Her performance in "The Cup of Life," with the New York Motion Picture Corporation company was a revelation and the critics rose at her all over the country. It was a superb creation and her work in "The Last Act," "The Painted Lady," and other pictures only serve to show what a supreme little artist she is.

The Strand theater, Hartford, Conn., said to be the finest theater in New England, celebrated its first anniversary the week of September 6 by running the five-reel Selig Red Seal play, "The House of a Thousand Candles." After considering several subjects for the celebration week the management of the Strand decided upon the Selig film because of the beauty of its production. Harry Mestayer is the featured star in the picture.

Gaumont's Gifted Girl Players

Florenz Tempest and Marion Sunshine were born about twenty years ago in Louisville, Kentucky. They attended a Catholic school in Louisville, conducted by Father Raffles, whose custom it was to have the children give recitations on Friday afternoons. On a certain Friday, when they were a little over five years old, they were to appear on the platform to give a scene from "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Sunshine forgot her lines, and the abuse which Tempest heaped upon her caused Father Raffles to name them Tempest and Sunshine, which name has stuck to them ever since. When they were six years of age, they were starred in the production of "Two Little Waifs," and the producer of this production, Lincoln J. Carter, offered a $5,000 prize for any two children that could equal them in dramatic work. During this engagement, Robert Mantell was so taken with their work that he engaged them for the two little princes in his production of "Richard the Third." From then on, their success was assured and they are a bigger drawing card today than at any time during their famous career. They have both appeared in the Ziegfeld Follies and at the Winter Garden, New York, and last year Sunshine played the lead opposite Raymond

Tempest and Sunshine

Hitchcock in "The Beauty Shop," while Tempest was a headliner on the vaudeville stage in an act called "One of the Boys." They have both been engaged by Charles Dillingham to appear during the coming season at the New York Hippodrome.

Their first release under the Gaumont banner will be in the Rialto Star Feature entitled "Sunshine and Tempest," to be released on the regular Mutual program Wednesday, October 6.

Minusa Screen for Casino

The Casino Amusement Company, of Davenport, through its Mr. Greenbaum, has placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company, for another Minusa screen. This one goes in the new Garden theater. Manager Greenbaum is a "stickler" for obtaining perfect pictures, and has placed orders with the Minusa Cine Products Company for Minusa Gold Fibre screens to be delivered to various theaters. The Garden theater will open within a few days, and is said to be the show house of Davenport.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil C. Cawand — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 2, 1915 Number 14

The Test by Fire

NO great loss without some small gain. The burning of the Famous Players studio building September 11, terribly destructive as it was to a film manufacturing property of great value and importance, nevertheless leaves at least two testimonials to efficiency which otherwise might have proven themselves only after years of effort.

The world always wants a demonstration. To locate the "show me" spirit in Missouri is to give only local credit to a national characteristic. Some things are easily demonstrated. It is a simple matter to prove that your films are good, merely by showing them. It doesn't take very long to show good service and efficient organization. But a fireproof structure can be demonstrated only by the test by fire.

The Famous Players film laboratory, on the third floor of the big studio building, was made fireproof. It was the part of the plant that would be most carefully inspected and most criticised. It was where the calamity howler would predict the starting of a fire. Yet, as a matter of fact, contrary to reports published in the daily newspapers, the film laboratory was the only part of the entire building that remained intact.

Paradoxical though it may seem, the Famous Players fire was positive proof that a properly constructed film laboratory is absolutely safe. The company's laboratory—one of those "menaces" of yellow newspaper talk—resisted successfully as hot a fire as will ever test a building. Those editorial statements of New York papers, that the great film plants are a constantly threatening danger to the city are ridiculous. The greatest care ever put into a structure has been given to the construction and fireproofing of the film buildings. The survival of the laboratory in this particular fire proved it, not only in the Famous Players case, but in every other responsible film concern in the country. The Famous Players fire in itself was no different from a fire in a piano factory or a clothing mill.

The newspaper attacks on the safety of film plants little concern the company which had the fire; for that company is now building its own new laboratories and studios outside the city. But the subject is an important one to the other companies who, never having had fires, have not demonstrated their fireproof quality. And nobody wants an object lesson of that kind. One is enough—in two senses. The demonstration has been made—successfully.

The other moral drawn from the catastrophe that inspired this editorial is the value of organization and solid establishment. There never was better evidence of the virility of supreme organization in this industry. The Famous Players production goes right on, with only such minor changes as the inconveniences of the moment necessitate. So far as exhibitors of Famous Players films are concerned, they need not have been informed that there was a fire. They are practically unaffected by it. We mention this not so much in praise of the company as because it demonstrates the value of business efficiency. The exhibitor is dependent upon the manufacturer for the stability of his program, the satisfaction of his patrons, the very life of his business. The manufacturer who is prepared to face any emergency with at least outward equanimity, and whose exhibitors can depend upon the program being carried out whatever happens, is building for the future of the whole industry, and incidentally for his own prosperity and fame.

The Censor's Bone Play

CENSOR boards are noted for what a Chicago politician calls "bone plays." This is not at all remarkable when we consider that censors are generally chosen for small political reasons, and not for their fitness for the work. But when they go as far in ignorant but arrogant zeal as did the Kansas board recently, it is time for their political superiors, who have intelligence at least, to take a hand.

Exhibitors in Kansas City, Kansas, objected to the state censorship law, and said so on their screens by means of a film tailpiece. The state board, with all the assurance of a European military censor, cut off the tailpiece and refused to be criticised.

Now the censors may censor the films, but the law gives them no jurisdiction over slides. So the exhibitors simply put the same protest on glass, and are showing the following legend on the screen:

This theater pays its share of an unjust two dollars per reel tax to the state of Kansas, because our august legislature thought you didn't know any better than to pay us your money to see something that would injure you.

Next thing you know they will be appointing an inspector to charge you two dollars each morning for an inspection of your person to see that you are properly clothed and that you have no concealed weapons.

The powers of a censor board are rather vague and indefinite as to their limitations, and the courts seem reluctant to define the exact boundaries. But this seems to be a clear case of overstepping the mark. The people make the laws, and no man may be denied the right to criticise any statute or regulation. There is no such thing here as lese majesty; and the act of the censors themselves in destroying adverse comment lays them open to a graver charge than any they could bring against the film interests.

This appears to be an excellent opportunity for the picture men to score against their enemies. In fact, we wish a few more censor boards would make the particular kind of "bone plays" that are bound to lead to their own destruction.

Roskam's Film Hospital

Edward M. Roskam, formerly of the Life Photo Film Corporation and more recently with the Eclipse Film Laboratories, is now interested in and head operating surgeon at Roskam's Film Hospital at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

Here a feature production that is suffering from bad construction, poor continuity, improper titling, dragginess and poor photography, is examined, titled, reconstructed and edited over and over again until it leaves the hospital a much improved picture.

There is an art to Roskam's cutting that is due to his ingeunity, originality and his knowledge of the proper length of each scene in a feature production.

Pictures lacking suspense, heart interest and thrills, after going through Eddie's agile fingers, come out of the hospital filled with these necessary qualities and are therefore better pictures and bigger money getters for the producer. Roskam is always on the job and his advice is worth having.

Just a Moment Please

During the long period when we labored far into the night preparing the copy for that epoch-making serial, "The Seven Suffering Sisters," we were beset by a fear that the publication of that gem of literature in this column would either drive its readers to the point of insanity or lead one of them to attempt the impossible by submitting a sequel to the famous story.

—

And now it has happened.

—

An unfortunate youth, who is handicapped in life by the initials C. J. C., has offered us the following complete novel in words of one syllable and dared us to publish it.

—

Since we seldom if ever take a dare, here goes to print the darn thing, only we warn you in advance that unless you are troubled with insomnia or have a severe attack of cholera morbus you had better skip the next two paragraphs.

—

It took a "Chalice of Courage" for "Mortmain" to resist "The College Widow" on "The Island of Regeneration" until "Crooky Scruggs," astride his "Ringtailed Rhinoceros," removed them to "The House of a Thousand Candles" in "Graustark," where "The Slim Princess" was entertaining "The Sporting Duchess" and some of "The Climbers." "Crooky," "The Black Sheep," visited by "The Sins of the Mothers," and having stolen "The Carpet from Bagdad" and "A Great Ruby" from "The Palace of the King," loosed "The Wheels of Justice" through "The District Attorney," and started on "The Man Trail" over "The Great Divide," through "The Dust of Egypt." Thus "The Ne'er Do Well," disguised as "The White Sister," saying "The Rosary," stumbled upon "Tillie's Tomato Surprise" and was locked up by "A Bunch of Keys," "The Juggernaut" of fate giving him "A Texas Steer" as a cell mate.

—

Speaking of film titles, Ben Schulberg is authority for the statement that Director Hugh Ford, on the morning after the Famous Players fire, fled in panic upon discovering in the street near the studio a bunch of film titles among which he noted "The Lost Paradise" and "The Morning After." We venture to predict that he'd have blown out his brains had he also found that Bosworth title "It's No Laughing Matter."

—

However, it's a pleasure to note that for once "Prince and Pauper" were on an equal basis, since both were found undamaged in the studio vault.

—

OUR BURG.

J. R. Freuler, pres. of the Mutual Film Corp., was a bus. visitor to Our Village this wk.

Tefft Johnson and his Missus of the Vitagraph co. who has been vacationing at the Dells in Wis. was entertained by the w. k. John Rock of Our Village the latter part of last wk. On one day Johnnie took em out to look over the Selig studio where they was warmly welcomed by Tom Heffron and Otie Harlan.

"Hen" Walthall of the Essanay Fillim co. of this village was the guest of honor at the last meeting of the Reel Fellers Club on Wed. last.

Ye Ed was invited to witness the advance showing of the new fillim "Trilby" put out by the Equitable co. at the La Salle theater last Thurs. and after giving it the o. o. is compelled to admit that its a regular pitcher in every respect.

A. W. Thomas the w. k. photoplaywrite what was a visitor in Our Burg last wk. with his Missus departed on the 9:55 rattler over the Nickel Plate on Sat. last for his home in Cleveland, O.

The pop. Bill Wright invited Ye Ed to accompany him on Fri. last for a visit to the gigantic new Selig studio and upon arriving there was delighted to catch Tom Heffron and Otie Harlan, as well as Gracie Darmond, hard to work. Tom proved he has more patience than a Dr. and Otie must have swett off moren a couple of pounds just in the short time we was there but the picture they was working on is going to be some pippin.

—

The w. k. Chris Whelen is a mighty busy chap these days. Keep your eye on Chris. He has something up his sleeve besides his arm.

—

Probably the meanest man in all the world has been discovered in the person of Wallace MacDonald of the American studios at Santa Barbara, who sends us a photograph of the San Francisco exposition, 4½ by 1 inch in size, on the back of which he writes, "See the Fair at my expense."

—

If we hadn't been able to actually see the great show we'd think he was trying to rub it in, but since we have had that privilege we shall prize his photo as a souvenir and say, "Thank you, Mac."

—

Can anybody suggest a way for us to get even with him?

—

Jake Wilk has threatened to submit another frontispiece.

—

Come on, Jake, shoot.

N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"Playing Dead"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' fascinating story, which deals with the eternal triangle, picturized, in five parts, proves a worthy vehicle for the first appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew on the V. L. S. E. program. "Playing Dead" provides these popular players with parts differing from those in which they have previously been seen, for while there are some excellent humorous moments, this story calls mostly for serious dramatic work. Mrs. Drew made the adaption and the direction, which is all that could be desired, is by Sidney Drew.

It is the man who makes the great sacrifice in this story, and as men can do things of this kind without such outward signs of distress this side of the domestic enigma makes a sympathetic story without the tense emotionalism and frequently overdone sentiment which is so necessary in cases where the woman is the wronged party. The character of Jimmy Blagwin is finely drawn. So well depicted in fact that the story is convincing much on this account alone.

Mr. Drew is capital as Jimmie Blagwin, millionaire club and sportsman who loves his wife so devotedly, so slavishly that he willingly gives up everything and plays dead that she may be free, without the notoriety of divorce, to marry the man she foolishly imagines to be better suited to her. Mr. Drew heightens the value of the dramatic situations by discreetly inserting here and there a bit of humor. His mere suggestion of a wink to the butler, which means that Preston is to prepare a cocktail first and offer it when ready for consumption, is indeed funny, and there are many other little touches of comedy throughout the picture.

A humorous moment in "Playing Dead."

Mrs. Drew plays Jeanne with her usual keen appreciation of the value of naturalness. Proctor Maddox, the polished, glib expounder of a new feminism, which at bottom is nothing more than a sauve method of attracting to him women whom he admires, is portrayed with effectiveness and fine artistry by Donald Hall. The supporting cast also includes Harry English as Carlton Adams, and Isador Marcil who does a commendable bit of character acting as Preston.

In its staging "Playing Dead" is well up to the high standard of excellence which marks the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features. The locations are well chosen and the interior sets are beautiful and in rare good taste. Sub-titles are generously used, but as there are few, if any superfluous leads and the action is at all times clear as a result, this can hardly be called a fault.

Jimmie Blagwin is the first one to notice the change that has come over his wife since she has met Proctor Maddox. Her head becomes turned by the latter's advanced ideas, all theory, on various sociological problems—one of the problems being that married women do not enjoy the freedom which is rightly theirs. Jeanne is finally won over by Maddox and admits to her husband that she and he are no longer suited to each other. She further tells him that she intends to join Maddox in his great work—correcting all the world's existing errors.

As Jeanne's happiness is Jimmie's one desire he decides to give her the freedom she wishes. After long consideration he hits upon a plan. He decides that Jimmie Blagwin must die, and that he will go on living under another name. His forethought and careful preparation make his plan a success, for Jimmie Blagwin is believed to be no more. Jeanne is bowed with grief. She is no longer interested in Proctor Maddox. Balgwin's return, as a burglar, to secure his missing will, is his only blunder, but it proves a happy one; for he is reunited to his beloved Jeanne, who now realizes that she loves him and no one else.

A scene from "Playing Dead."

"The Terror of Twin Mountains"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

HELENE ROSSON, the seventeen-year-old leading lady of the American Company, takes the leading feminine role in "The Terror of Twin Mountain," the two-reel American production to be released on September 27. Miss Rosson does some exceptionally good work and is thoroughly capable of portraying deep-felt emotion. She is supported by E. Forrest Taylor, who does admirable work as her husband, and Roy Stewart, who has been well cast as Ivan, the "Terror." The story is a rather unusual one and directed by The coach is held up.

William Bertram, who selected most suitable surroundings for the settings of the play and the beautiful scenery is splendidly photographed.

As the picture opens we see John and his wife, Frances, in their little home, just finishing dinner. We then are shown a store which bursts into flames and is soon a mass of charred debris. John, who is the owner of the store, has realized a loss of $5,000 through the fire and after some time in which he tries to gather together enough money to start a new store, he decides to go to the gold field and recuperate his money. He leaves his wife and starts out in search of a fortune.

Out in the gold field Ivan, "The Terror of Twin Mountain," who makes his home in a cave, murders a miner and steals his gold and later the sheriff places a reward for his capture, dead or alive. As Ivan is sitting on a rock in the wilderness he takes out a leather case and extracts therefrom a picture and his memory goes back to the time when he was in love with Frances, who is now John's wife. He sees a mental picture of the last day he had seen Frances when, after grabbing her in his arms and trying to stifle her cries, he is knocked down by John, who comes upon the scene at that moment. Ivan then goes back to the cave and accidentally drops the beloved case which he does not miss.

Arrived in the mining town and after getting ready his pack mule and supplies John starts to find a claim. He makes a mysterious find, a leather case in which is the picture of his wife, taken years before. Time goes on but John is not successful in his search for gold and returns to town where he receives a letter from his wife stating that she is about to join him and she will arrive by the coach that day.

The fight in "Terror's Cave."

Ivan holds up the coach, divests the passengers of their money and valuables and, recognizing Frances, he takes her by force to his cave in the mountains. The coach arrives in the town and the driver tells how a pretty girl had been taken by the bandit.

John starts out at once in search of his wife and articles she has dropped on her way to the cave serve him as a guide. He reaches the cave and hears her wild screams for help. He enters and a terrific fight ensues in which Ivan is killed and John and Frances are re-united.

"Judge Not, or the Woman of Mona Diggings"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

HARRY CAREY once more takes the leading role in a Universal Broadway feature "Judge Not or the Woman of Mona Diggings" is the title of this six-reel Broadway feature to be released on September 27. The story of highly melodramatic character, is from the pen of Peter B. Kyne. The production of the picture was given into the hands of Robert Leonard, who obtains some splendid results. The gambling joint scenes laid in the western town and those taken in the gay Eastern city are convincingly projected.

Carey is splendid in his portrayal of Miles Rand, the son of Judge Rand, which part is taken by Marc Robbins. Julia Dean as Molly Hanlon, the woman of Mona Diggings, does some excellent dramatic work and Harry Carter, as Lee Kirk, is also well cast.

A scene from "Judge Not or the Woman of Mona Diggings."

After the death of her father Molly Rand faces poverty and loneliness in Mona Diggings. Lee Kirk, a gambler, purchases a generous basket of supplies and sends them to Molly's shack and put a note therein proposing marriage. The girl finally decides to accept, knowing she will at least secure a provider and protector against the future. Kirk makes arrangements for a false marriage and as the wife of Lee Kirk, Molly continues to live on in the only environment she has ever known and finally becomes case keeper at his faro table in the gambling house.

In the East, Miles Rand comes home from college and his father, Judge Rand, discovers his son is a heavy drinker and finally, after words, Miles leaves for the West and arrives at Mona Diggings, where he meets Molly and falls in love with her. Molly urges him to return East and make a man of himself.

Miles returns home and is finally elected district attorney, while back in Mona Diggings Molly learns that her marriage to Kirk was false. One night Kirk's joint catches fire and Molly, after taking the money from the safe, makes her escape, believing that Kirk has perished in the fire with the rest. After arriving in the East the girl calls to see Miles Rand at his office and after a time he decides to introduce her into society. The judge meets Molly at a lawn fete which had been planned by Molly and Miles and when Miles tells his father that Molly is his promised wife he is astounded and plans to break the match.

A scene from "Judge Not or the Woman of Mona Diggings."

Kirk, who was not killed, but who escaped from the gambling house, comes East and seeing in the newspaper of the reception given by Molly, he goes to see her. The girl is amazed and terror stricken and finally gives him money in an attempt to buy his silence. After the man has left she decides to give Miles up for fear of ruining his future and arranges an appointment with another suitor and when Miles arrives she is apparently carousing with another man. The same night Kirk gains entrance to the house via a window. The girl denounces him for the evil he has wrought and in a drunken attempt tries to make love to her. A struggle follows and Molly shoots her tormentor. Molly is committed to prison and the time for the trial arrives.

Miles, the attorney for the defense, makes a strong appeal for acquittal on the grounds that Kirk was attempting burglary when he entered the window. Later the jury leave and return with a verdict of "Not Guilty." Molly rushes in to Judge Rand and tells him of her intention of telling the whole truth and Miles overhears the story. He steps in and pleads with his father and the old man begs forgiveness from both the son and the girl and a complete reconcilation follows.

"Peer Gynt"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

A RECORD-BREAKING audience was on hand to witness the special showing of Oliver Morosco's "Peer Gynt" on September 16, at the Broadway theater. The overture and special music written to the film by George W. Baynon is an unusual piece of orchestration, reflecting much credit upon the composer and harmonizing excellently with the atmosphere of the story. It includes familiar passages from Edvard Grieg's "Peer Gynt Suite." The music, by all means, supplements the value of the presentation.

A pretty scene from "Peer Gynt."

Cyril Maude, the English actor who played in the New York success, "Grumpy," for two years, gives an irresistible rendition of his character as Peer Gynt. The picture affords ample opportunities for Cyril Maude to demonstrate his versatility, for it proceeds with from ten to fifteen-year jumps, and at each transition he is seen in a new light, until ultimately he depicts the hobbling old man of the final scenes. The theme is intensely picturesque and attractively worked up.

There are frequent flights into the realm of the legendary and mythical, in which many grotesque imaginary creatures, half man and half animal, are seen in their mountain haunts. The peculiar phenomena of the fairy-tale and the legend will always be better described in the photoplay, because of the weird effects obtained through trick photography.

Banished from his Norwegian home for "bride theft," the care-free and rollicking Peer Gynt leaves his true love, Solveig, behind, and starts out on a long career of adventure. During his travels he gets into many precarious situations, but always survives adversity. In different parts of the globe Peer meets beauties of all hues, but his pleasure is transitory, and always comes to a sudden end.

Finally, in a feeble, decrepit state, the old man returns to his native hamlet to die, and is restored to the arms of Solveig, who has steadfastly watched and prayed for his return. When the Button Moulder, personifying the Saver of Souls, comes to cast Peer back into the pot to be remoulded, because his wasted life has proved him without design, it is Solveig's devoted love which absolves him.

A tense moment from "Peer Gynt"

In the cast are Myrtle Stedman, as Solveig, and Fanny Stockbridge as Ase, Peer's mother. The five different types of girls with whom Peer becomes involved in his extensive travels are Mary Reubens, Winifred Bryson, Mary Ruby, Evelyn Duncan and Kitty Stevens.

"A Sultana of the Desert"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

KATHLYN WILLIAMS and Thomas Santschi, together with the lions and other wild beasts of the Selig Jungle Zoo, are seen under splendid conditions in "A Sultana of the Desert," a two-reel feature scheduled for release on Monday, October 20.

The story of "A Sultana of the Desert," it may here be mentioned, is from the pen of Miss Williams herself, and gives the versatile actress unusual opportunities for emotional acting, as well as a chance to appear with the wild beasts in a story somewhat similar to those in which so many of her successes were achieved.

Thomas Santschi has chosen his locations with wondrous skill and the desert scenes are absolutely convincing in every particular. One does not have the feeling that if the camera had been shifted a foot or two, instead of desert he would have seen graveled paths and beautiful homes and surroundings, but quite the contrary, is impressed by the fact that nothing but heat and sand exist for miles in any direction from the point where the camera is stationed.

A scene from "The Sultana of the Desert."

As the story begins, Jean, the beautiful daughter of Martine, the French explorer, who loves Christof, is discovered by her father with the young man of her choice, and the two are forcibly separated, the father determining to place his daughter in a convent rather than permit her affair with Christoph to go farther.

Jean writes a message to her beloved, telling him that she is to be taken to the convent, and urging that he attempt to rescue her, but when Jean's maid slips Christoph the note, a servant of Martine's catches Christoph before the latter has had a chance to read the message and then imprisons him in a dungeon beneath Martine's home.

Jean and her father cross the desert with a caravan of camels and Jean is left at the convent, from which she succeeds in escaping, and later makes her way into the desert, where she encounters a lion, but makes friends with the beast until she is finally able to dwell in the same cave in which the lion has its home.

Jean's father, upon learning of her disappearance from the convent, engages Balsamo, a Bedouin pirate, to find Jean and return her home, but when Balsamo succeeds in finding Jean's hiding place in the desert he is attacked and killed by the lion.

Christof, meanwhile, is rescued by his sister from the underground dungeon, and learning from Jean's maid how her mistress has been sent to the convent, sets out on his camel to find and rescue her. Just as the two lovers meet and renew their love vows, Martine appears and the lovers are attracted by the sound of his rifle as he shoots the lion that Jean had tamed.

The girl is broken hearted over the death of the king of beasts, for she had really grown to love him who once had spared her life and who later had killed the pirate who would have kidnapped her. Reluctantly Jean's father consents to the marriage of Christof and his daughter. As the picture ends the three are paying their last respects to the dying king of the jungle.

"The House of a Thousand Scandals"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A PICTURE of a most unusual kind is "The House of a Thousand Scandals," which will be the American Mutual Master-Picture for this week. The film is so far from the beaten track that there is no comparing it with any of the other Mutual Master-Pictures and photographically is one of the prettiest screen offerings the Mutual program has yet announced.

The laying of many of the scenes in a beautiful Californian estate which abounds in Grecian statuary, sequestered pools with marble rims, and behind all a background of surpassing grandeur, enables the director to place his principles, all of whom are dressed in Grecian garb, as famous bits of satuary or paintings that are known the world over.

The Grecian dances which are given at frequent intervals

The mob attacks the cult leaders.

during the third and fourth reels might, with some players, and under the direction of some producers, be considered a bit risque, but so splendidly has Director Thomas Ricketts handled these scenes, and so beautiful is the photography, that they are gems of art rather than sensational or scandalous goings-on, though it must be admitted the villagers who live in the vicinity of this "House of a Thousand Scandals" consider them shocking in the extreme, since the score or more of scantily garbed maids display not a little of their figures during the course of the dance.

The Grecian dancers on the lawn.

Harold Lockwood is cast as John Wright, a multi-millionaire with a strong prehension for a new cult that has sprung up in the city and in which he is sincerely interested for a time and the Grecian dances and games that form such a great part of the production are all staged at John Wright's summer home which, to his neighbors, is known as the "House of a Thousand Scandals." May Allison makes both a pretty winsome Martha Hobbs, the humble heroine of the story, who eventually wins the heart of the millionaire, and Josephine Ditt is convincing, though hardly beautiful, as Greta Carr, the chief exponent of the new cult. To Miss Margaret Hawkesworth is due the credit for the training of the hundreds of supers used in the dance numbers.

John Wright, who has recently come into a tremendous inheritance, while riding through the woods one day is able to rescue a pretty country maiden, who is suddenly attacked by her rural lover, and later Wright learns the girl's name is Martha Hobbs and that she is the daughter of a surly, crusty, heartless man, who forces both his daughter and wife to live a life of drudgery.

When the mother collapses under the strain, Martha comes to the city and there John, who has founded the Wright Industrial Home, finds her and gives her refuge in his new institution.

Sometime later Wright attends a lecture on the life of the ancient Greeks by Greta Carr, who is an exponent of the ancient Grecian mode of living. John is overcome by her enthusiasm and offers her his palatial summer home as a spot in which she may try out her community idea of living.

When Greta and her followers take up their home in the Wright country estate the neighbors are much shocked, after it becomes known that the followers of the Greek cult go about bare-footed and scantily garbed, at all hours of the day and night, and the fame of the cult becomes so great that the villagers indgnantly decide to destroy the Wright homestead, the mob being led by Ralph, the rejected suitor of Martha and the man from whom she was rescued by John Wright.

Though both John and Greta endeavor to explain to the villagers the purpose behind the Greek cult, all their pleas are ignored and the beautiful Wright homestead is totally destroyed by dynamite in a sensational scene that must have cost the American company hundreds of dollars.

The explosion quells the mob spirit and the mob becomes exceedingly grave when it learns that the charred body of Ralph has been found in the ruins of the home, having been destroyed by his own plan to dynamite the house.

The villagers, after the riot has subsided, learn to look with tolerance upon the cult members and eventually from the ruins of the Wright home there arises a place even more beautiful than the structure the villagers destroyed. The happy life of the cult is resumed and John and Martha soon find their long friendship growing into a deep, pure love.

"Simon, the Jester"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE film version of William J. Locke's "Simon The Jester," produced by Edward Jose and the third Gold Rooster play released by Pathe, contains throughout its five reels much entertaining action and many developments which are far from commonplace. The production is excellent and photographically the film is of high quality. These features contribute considerably to the appeal of the offering, which shows fine judgment in regard to settings and other technical details.

A scene from "Simon, the Jester."

The story is a delightful blending of practically all the elements which combine to make a really human theme. It is a romantic drama treated in a light vein, and has several bright moments intermingled with those of a serious nature. It is a romance of a well-to-do Englishman, a member of Parliament, who takes it upon himself to "cure" his young secretary of his infatuation for a hippodrome performer, a cat trainer, and in his pains-taking efforts to do so, he himself comes to love her and in the final scene gains her consent to become his wife.

There is no moral drawn and one is brought to no conclusion as to the reason for the central character's sudden change of attitude toward the actress. She seems to grow no more charming as the story progresses. But it does not lack plausibility, and the action is at all times interesting and enjoyable, it will be especially interesting to those who are familiar with the novel.

A pretty scene from "Simon, the Jester"

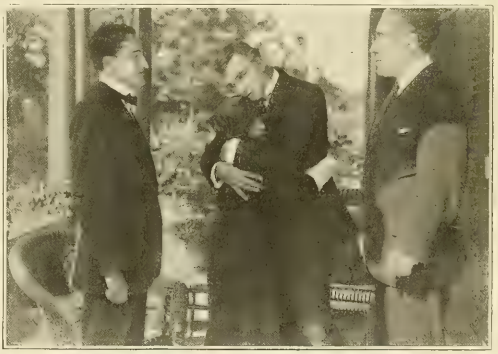
The vindictive dwarf who first endears himself to Lola by killing her worthless husband, Captain Vouvenarde, only later to permanently blind her with an acid, is indeed an interesting figure, and he gives to the picture a touch of the unusual. This part is played to remarkable effect by Jerold Hervener, perhaps better known as Little Jerry, who has appeared on both the concert and speaking stages throughout this country.

Edwin Arden is featured in the title role. As the English gentleman who is told by his physician that he has but nine months to live, provided he quits smoking and drinking, and only six months if he does not. Mr. Arden is pleasingly energetic and expressive. Irene Warfield as Lola, Alma Tell as Eleanor Faversham, and Crawford Kent as the young secretary, play their parts with ability.



The story differs but little from the book on which it is based, and concerns Simon de Geck who, upon learing that he has only a few months to live, decides to make the most of the life before him. He spends his money lavishly. So great is the change which has come over him that his fiancee, Eleanore, and his friends believe he is losing his mind. His secretary's infatuation for Lola, an actress, promises to ruin the young man's career.

Simon, in an endeavor to put a stop to this, brings Eleanor, whom he does not wish to marry and cause to be a widow in a short time, and Blake together, with the result that they decide that they are in love with each other. To have Lola out of the way he takes her to Paris. There he has a serious attack from his ailment. A young surgeon performs an operation and cures Simon. He is now entirely changed and has a deep affection for the actress, and at the close of the story he asks her to marry him.

"An Unwilling Thief"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

A MILLIONAIRE'S daughter, kidnaped in childhood, and whose abductors determine to use her as an accomplice in their various schemes, instead of demanding a ransom of the father, and her restoration to her long suffering parent years later, makes up the plot of "An Unwilling Thief," the three-part Edison subject for release October 8. The story, written by Mary Imlay Taylor, was produced by Langdon West.

A scene from "An Unwilling Thief."

The sympathetic interpretations rendered by Herbert Prior, as Harrison, and Leoni Flugrath, as the daughter at the age of sixteen, are noteworthy features of this picture. The other characters are also well enacted by Lawrence White, James J. Gerson, Marjorie Ellison, and Marie Sasse, who have important parts. To the players must be given due credit for their efforts to make "An Unwilling Thief" an entertaining picture, for the story gives them few opportunities in the way of dramatic situations.

In the opening scenes the wealthy Mr. Harrison's home is shown. His little girl, Bab, falls and cuts her wrist on a piece of broken glass. The family physician is called and he finds that the injury is not serious, but assures the child's parents that Bab will bear a scar all her life. Shortly after this "Black" Ferber and his wife, Meg, plan to kidnap the child and obtain a heavy ransom for her release. They abduct the little girl but are so closely pursued by the police that they determine to keep Bab and teach her to steal for them.

The shock proves too great for Mrs. Harrison and she dies from an attack of heart failure. To fill as much as possible the void left by his missing daughter and dead wife, Harrison adopts George Barber, his nephew. George does not appreciate all his uncle has done for him and when he is sent to college he becomes entangled in scrapes of all kinds. The millionaire's young friend, David Clay, a lawyer, does all in his power to make the boy realize the error of his ways, but to no avail.

A scene from "An Unwilling Thief."

Finally, Harrison becomes disgusted with his ward's behavior and, giving him a considerable sum he sends the ungrateful young man from his home. Twelve years have passed since Bab has been kidnaped. Meg Ferber dies, leaving the girl in the keeping of her two men associates. The girl resolves to put an end to her unhappy life with these rough characters and uses her first opportunity to run away from them.

She secures employment in an apartment house where Clay lives. Her persecutors learn her whereabouts and frighten her into consenting to rob the lawyer. Clay enters the room just as she is going through his papers. The child breaks down and gives the lawyer an account of her past. From some incidents she recites and the scar on her wrist he recognizes her as Harrison's daughter. Further evidence proves Clay's conclusion is correct, and she is restored to her father. Her persecutors are arrested. The lawyer receives Harrison's consent to make Bab his wife.

"The Bigger Man"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE struggle between capital and labor is given comprehensive portrayal in the B. A. Rolfe offering on the Metro program, "The Bigger Man." The story, which is based on "The Bridge," by Rupert Hughes, conveys well its moral—that the worker, the actual builder, does not receive his proper share of the harvest, and furthermore, that both fail to realize how necessary one is to the other. The theme is a big one and its many opportunities for dramatic effect have been grasped and used to good result by John W. Noble, who produced the picture.

In the end, employer and employed are reconciled, and this is brought about by the champion of labor, a rare type; for he is absolutely sincere and deals with the situation intelligently, which is a combination not often found in contemporary leaders on either the side of capital or labor. Henry Kolker plays this part skillfully. In his scenes with the ironworkers in whom the seed of unrest and dissatisfaction has been sown by an agitator, Mr. Kolker does splendidly.

The story is convincing, and this is in a great part due to its sincerity. From the time Stoddard consents to give up the girl he loves in return for her father's promise to meet the demands of the men there is a great deal of sentiment brought into play. The men, with downcast eyes, thank their leader and tell him that they are not satisfied that he should make such a sacrifice for them. The financier's daughter sends money to a wife in Europe, that she may come to this country and be near her husband, a laborer, and arranges a surprise meeting between the two, and this meeting is witnessed by the capitalist, whose heart is softened by the sight.

There are incidents which might easily impress one as being less reasonable than they are tender, and as such is not the case in this story, it gives evidence of the sincerity of the author, the producer and the players. Renee Kelly deserves high praise for her artistic interpretation of Janet Van Nest. Miss Kelly gives charm to the part and renders it with feeling. Orlando Daly, Elsie Balfour, J. H. Goldworthy, Edwin Boring, Richard Lee and Mayme Kelso complete the cast. "The Bigger Man" has been given every advantage in the way of exceptional settings and photography.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

"THE DOUBLE CROSS" is the title of the twenty-third chapter of the popular North American serial, "The Diamond from the Sky." This chapter shows the change in the attitude of Luke Lovell, the gypsy, to Esther. Lovell sees Esther with Quabba and asks the organ grinder to let him see the girl. Later he begs her forgiveness for his actions in the past and swears a return to his old time gypsy allegiance.

"The Diamond from the Sky," which when last seen was lying in a manger, is again found by the stableman, and he is about to leave the stable with it when he is overtaken by the sheriff, who takes the jewel from the man and it is then put up for auction to pay the debts of the Santley circus. In this chapter the last glimpses we get of the gem it is dangling from the auctioneer's hand and two pair of gloved hands are reaching for the gem. The question is now "Who Got the 'Diamond from the Sky'?"

Luke Lovell steals a ride on the rear of the tallyho carrying John Powell and his friends, but when he is discovered he is forced from his perch and as he is sitting on the side of the road when he sees Esther and Quabba.

The four inmates of John Powell's mansion, who are gradually wrecking him, have succeeded in convincing Arthur, known as John Powell, that it was not reality but his imagination that he saw Esther on the road side. Although Arthur feels sure it was Esther in the flesh and blood that he saw, he is finally convinced that it was but imagination.

Vivian leaves the Powell estate and meets Homer Graydon, an elderly millionaire, who is paying marked attention to her. He shows her an account in the paper which tells of the auction sale of the famous Stanley heirloom that day, and Vivian tells him that if he cares for her at all he will get her the gem, no matter what price he has to pay for it, and he promises he will get it for her.

Luke Lovell goes to the Powell estate and there meets Blair Stanley, who tells him to come back in an hour and he will help him out. Blair then calls the police, telling them to be at the Powell estate in an hour to arrest a blackmailer who is bothering John Powell, and when Luke enters the mansion he is met by Blair Stanley, but soon is attacked by the police and led out. Marmaduke Smythe, the English lawyer, calls at the Powell mansion and here Arthur, who is flushed and excited with wine, declares himself not John Powell, but Arthur Stanley, the heir to the Stanley earldom, and announces that he will buy the "Diamond from the Sky" at the circus auction.

John Powell declares that he is Arthur Stanley.

Luke Lovell swears allegiance to Esther.

At the police station a Wells Fargo money band is found in the possession of Luke. John Powell or Arthur Stanley comes to lay a complaint against the man and is confronted with the Wells Fargo money-band. He sees Luke being led off to his cell and then leaves. The gypsy sends for Esther and tells her that he had received $500 with this band wrapped around it some time before from Arthur Stanley, and that he had gotten his enormous fortune by starting with stolen money.

At the circus grounds a big auction is held. People from all over the countryside attend, wealth and poverty are both represented. At last the famous "Diamond from the Sky" is put up, and Arthur Stanley and Homer Graydon are pitted against each other in eager determination to own the diamond. At last the crowd presses toward the auctioneer's stand and we last see two pairs of gloved hands reaching for the glittering gem.

"Voices From the Past"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "Voices From the Past," scheduled for release on September 30, the Lubin Film Company will offer a melodrama of wide appeal. The picture features Lillie Leslie, William Cohill and Joseph Smiley, Miss Leslie being called upon to play a dual role, that of herself and her mother, for in the greater part of the photoplay vision scenes are used to depict events that happened long before. In these Miss Leslie appears as her own mother.

Photographically the picture lives up to the Lubin trade mark of "clear as a bell" and particular credit is due the director for the convincing rain storm scene in the third reel.

In this portion of the story, from a scene laid in a small town railroad station, one can see a terrific downpour of rain through the window and the lightning flashes against the dark background outside, all so splendidly handled that one is almost convinced he is beholding a real storm and not a mere stage effect.

As the story runs, John Pemberton, who has given his ward Elsie a thorough education, is in love with the girl and therefore somewhat shocked when he learns that she contemplates marriage with one George Trent, a man much older than herself.

Upon visiting Elsie in the city and finding her at a gay dinner party with Trent, Pemberton takes the girl hime and next day leaves with her an envelope containing a message telling his reasons for opposing her marriage to Trent.

As Elsie reads the letter, vision scenes are used to depict the events described in the message and one sees Elsie's mother wooed by Pemberton and a man named Craig. The girl is forced by her father to wed Craig because of his great wealth and shortly afterwards Trent enters the story and urges Mrs. Craig to divorce herself from her husband and marry him, since she is already infatuated by his advances, made to her when she was engaged to Craig.

One night in a drunken frenzy Craig attempts to caress his wife and she strikes him down in self defense. Trent witnesses the tragedy through an open window.

The coroner's inquest renders a verdict of suicide and so Mrs. Craig is free to marry Pemberton, who began his wooing almost immediately following the funeral of her husband. Some months after Pemberton and Craig's widow are married, Trent calls upon Mrs. Pemberton and explains that unless she immediately elopes with him, he will reveal the truth about Craig's death, and then for the first time he explains that he saw the incident through the window.

Pemberton, who had gone to the station to depart for the city that night, finds himself unable to get a train, due to a terriffic storm that arises, and therefore returns home.

As he enters the house Trent hides behind some curtains, but Pemberton becomes quickly aware of his presence through a hat, still dripping with rain, which Trent has left behind.

Accusing his wife of being false to him, Pemberton turns upon her and a stormy scene follows, at the end of which Trent appears from behind the curtain and accuses Mrs. Pemberton of being a murderess.

Shocked by the accusation and overcome by the doubt of her faithfulness on the part of Pemberton, Mrs. Pemberton drops dead and the scene fades back to the Pemberton library and Elsie reading the message sent by her guardian.

Realizing how Trent wronged her mother, the girl is quick to see her guardian's justification for opposing her marriage and thoroughly repentent she seeks her guardian and as the picture closes he is revealing to her the love he has so carefully restrained through all the years.

"An Enemy to Society"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN THE five-part visualization of George Bronson Howard's "An Enemy to Society" Metro presents an attraction which should be more than well received, for in story, interpretation and staging the picture is consistently good. Produced by Edgar Jones from the scenario by George D. Proctor, this film contains spirited action and a number of tense moments nicely blended with a pretty romance. The subtitles are worthy of particular mention, since they are used to such good effect.

Hamilton Revelle is finely cast as Stephen Adams, a young man of engaging personality who from childhood has been taught to rob the rich and use the greater portion of his hauls to aid the deserving poor. Mr. Revelle realizes to the fullest extent the opportunities his part gives to him. Lois Meredith is a charming Decima Duress, and Henry Bergman renders an excellent character performance as Van Tromp, who for years has dreamed and planned revenge upon Jannisary. The latter part is commendably played by H. Cooper Cliff.

Numerous details of general action and settings are responsible for the fascinating atmosphere of the crook play which pervades the picture, and for this charming quality due credit must be accorded the director. Another important factor is that the action, which is continuous and interest-compelling, is at all times in close relation to the plot itself, making the story smooth and steady in its development to the exciting climax.

Edith is impressed with Stoddard's consideration for the laboring people.

The cast also includes William C. Cowper, L. M. Horne, F. G. Bell, Richard Carlyle, John O'Hara and Master Thomas B. Carnahan, Jr.

In the opening scene Steve robs a wealthy man during a reception he is giving to his gay friends. Adams is a modern Robin Hood and his many donations to charity make him feel justified in taking from the undeserving rich a share of the wealth which they squander. His conscience has always been clear, and he first realizes that he is in fact "an enemy to society" when he becomes quite interested in Ducima Duress, whom he meets while on a sea voyage. The girl performs many charities, and she is delighted when Adams promises her a large donation for a model tenement she proposes to build.

This sum he takes from her rich guardian, Janissary, at a game of cards. To the great disappointment of the men who brought him up to be a thief, Steve announces that he has "turned his last trick." But later Ducima Duress expresses the wish that she was in possession of some papers which Janissary holds over the head of a certain officeholder and uses to force the alderman to secure some property for his company which is necessary to the carrying out of her plans for the tenement, and this decides Steve to obtain these papers from her guardian's safe.

He returns to Wulf Axtell and Van Tromp and asks them for the plans to Janissary's house and tells them that he will make this his last job. On the night of a reception at the Janissary home, Steve succeeds in opening the safe. He is just about to make off with the affidavits when Van Tromp enters the house and informs Janissary that he is being robbed. Steve is caught and Van Tromp proves to Janissary that the thief is his son, whom Van Tromp had kidnapped in childhood. This is Van Tromp's revenge for a wrong done him by Janissary. The father at first shuns his son, but later Ducima Duress effects a reconciliation and marries Steve.

Van Tromp's dream of revenge is realized.

"The Circular Path"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THE wonderful emotional ability of Henry B. Walthall, Essanay's star, is put to a supreme test in "The Circular Path," a three-act drama from the pen of H. S. Sheldon, which was released on Monday, September 20, for in this photoplay Mr. Walthall runs the full gamut of emotions, and exhibitors the country over who know he is famous for this particular sort of acting will, therefore, hail the picture as an unusual offering.

As the Reverend Darwin Kirby, pastor of a small city church, Mr. Walthall has a character a bit unusual in which to make his first appearance, as the drama begins to unfold, but soon we learn that he is so enamored of Evelyn Ross, the heroine of the story, and the stenographer of Henry Lorrimer, a flirtatious business man, that he is willing to resign the pastorate of his church that he may devote all of his time to the girl he has grown so fond of.

Eventually he is able to outdistance all rivals and to win the heart and hand of Evelyn, but soon another change unfitted him for work in the business world and that he is for her former suitor, and Walthall then is seen as a down-takes place, for he finds that his life as a churchman has unable to support his wife. Learning that she cannot have the luxuries to which she is entitled, the girl forsakes him and-out, one of the dregs that infest the slum districts of every large city, and he fairly lives his difficult role.

The flirtatious employer entertains his stenographer.

As the drama ends another transformation takes place, and, upon recovering from a serious injury in the hospital, we find that the down-and-outer has once more determined to set his feet on the upward path and devote his life once more to aiding his fellow men. In this he is aided by Evelyn, who has become a nurse in the very hospital to which he was taken when injured by an automobile, and as the picture closes the Reverend Kirby, once more a servant of the Lord, is about to open a mission in the slum districts, while Evelyn has promised to join him in his uplift work as soon as possible.

The difficult role of Evelyn is in the hands of Warda Howard and she gets everything possible out of the part, though in one scene, that in which she returns to the bedside of her dying mother, after ordering her employer never to call upon her again, she is a bit inclined to rant and wave her arms.

Edmund F. Cobb is Henry Lorrimer, and as the flirtatious business man is splendid. In fact, it is the best work that this reviewer has seen him do since he joined the Essanay forces.

The Rev. Kirby calls on Evelyn.

Photographically, "The Circular Path" is all that can be desired, and Director Calvert has put over the story in a fashion that makes it easily understood and thoroughly convincing in every particular.

"Man Afraid of His Wardrobe"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

OCTOBER 2 the American Film Manufacturing Company will release the first Mustang brand picture on the Mutual program. They have chosen for their initial release a production scenarioized from "Man Afraid of His Wardrobe," a clever story of motion pictures written by Charles E. Van Loan, one of the foremost humor writers of the day.

A. Lester Hale announces that he will break his contract.

The picture depicts the troubles of a producer of a motion picture company and a star from the East who is under contract. The star proves an utter failure and soon the producer is wildly seeking a means of breaking the contract.

This production fairly breathes forth stirring humor. The direction of the production was put into the hands of William Bertram and he has obtained splendid results in both photography and action. Art Acord plays the part of Buck Parvin, a western man who excites laughter by his droll actions. E. Forrest Taylor takes the part of A. Lester Hale, the popular matinee idol from the East, and these capable actors are supported by Anna Little as Miss Myrtle Manners, the leading lady of the motion picture concern, and Lawrence Peyton, the producer of the company.

James Montague, producer of the Titan Motion Picture Company, receives word that A. Lester Hale, under contract for ten pictures to be taken in the West, is to arrive at the studio soon. A week later A. Lester Hale, accompanied by his valet and a dozen large trunks, arrives and refuses to accept any other dressing room than the star's, which is being occupied by Miss Manners.

Buck Parvin prepares the wax bullets.

Some time later work commences on the first picture, and Hale proves an utter failure. He will not ride through the brush for fear of scratching the saddle, refuses to ride through the water for fear of getting wet, and three or four times utterly spoils a number of feet of film by crossing in front of the camera during a scene. After the first picture is completed and sent to the head office a report arrives, a curt telegram to the effect that A. Lester Hale is a scream on the screen and that it is up to Montague to fix his contract.

The producer, with the aid of Buck Parvin, an extra man, arranges a little entertainment for Hale, and that night Parvin is mysteriously occupied by some revolver shells, a wax candle and a package of tacks. The next morning a new picture is started and Hale is told that he must ride into the water and save Miss Manners, who is captured by Indians and is a prisoner on the opposite bank. The star at first refuses, but later he starts to ride across, and his valet prepares with dry underclothes and a towel for his ride from the river. When the horse gets to the point where he has to swim, Hale becomes frightened and falls off the horse into the water. Buck Parvin takes a careful aim and shoots, and with a wild scream A. Lester Hale lets go of the horse and disappears under the water.

He is rescued by Parvin and revived, only to be told that the scene was a failure and that it must be taken over again. He refuses and announces that he will break his contract. Parvin, who has always longed for the beaver hat belonging to Hale, swims the river to rescue it and hides it under his shirt. Montague, who has been mystified over the shot fired by Buck, discovers it is a wax wad with a tack attached and is sticking to Hale's anatomy. The last we see of Hale he is on the observation platform of an outgoing train and Buck Parvin waves him farewell with the beaver hat in his hand.

"The Little Mademoiselle"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

PROVIDED with unlimited opportunities for the display of her talent and skill in conveying the simple emotions of a young girl, Vivian Martin gives to her part in "The Little Mademoiselle," a Shubert feature for release through World Film Corporation, an engaging naturalness and quiet charm. Miss Martin gains and holds the sympathy of the spectator all through her eventful experience as Lili Breval, the little French girl who, shortly after her arrival in America, becomes separated from her guardian and, as she is without money and a knowledge of the English tongue, she is, indeed, in a predicament.

Jim refuses the reward offered.

But in the end all turns out well for Lili, as she metes a young man conversant in her language and a gentleman in every sense of the word. Much good, wholesome comedy and a considerable amount of melodrama make up the story of "The Little Mademoiselle," which was written by Mark Swan. Though the story soon becomes nothing more than a series of incidents in Lili's young life, it contains much that is entertaining, and this is mostly because Vivian Martin is in the foreground the greater part of its five reels.

Director Oscar Eagle has obtained splendid results with what good points the story presents, and by keeping the players always active he has increased the value of both the humorous and dramatic moments which arise from a plot which embodies little that is novel. The scenes taking place at the automobile race have an atomsphere of excitement and are effectively contrasted with the reposeful air which surrounds the scene in which Lili and Jim are thankful for what meager conveniences the only shelter they can procure, a deserted farm house, affords them.

Etienne and Gabriel come to tell Breval of their message.

Arthur Ashley as Jim Pemberton, Lila Chester as Gabriel D'Ornay, Mario Majeroni as Henry Breval and E. M. Kimble as Jim's father are prominent in the supporting cast. The photography throughout is of good quality and it does justice to the well-chosen locations and artistic interiors.

Briefly, the story tells of Lili Breval, who comes to America to visit her uncle, an automobile manufacturer. Henry Breval decides that his son Etienne must marry the little mademoiselle. But Lili does not care for Etienne, and he is deeply in love with another girl. During a railroad journey the girl becomes separated from her uncle. In her more or less aimless wanderings she meets Jim Pemberton, a young man whose wealthy father disinherits him because Jim would rather work on automobiles than pursue his studies at college.

Jim loses his job as mechanic at a garage and he and Lili walk off through the country, bound for nowhere in particular. They reach the automobile race track, where, by chance, Jim is allowed to drive Breval's car. He wins the race and meets Lili's uncle, who is finally persuaded to consent to the marriage of his niece and her protector through many trials and tribulations.

The Peters Expedition

Undoubtedly one of the most interesting and comprehensive motion picture trips ever arranged is that to be known as the Peters Photographic Expedition which will start from New York on November 1, 1915, and during the following four or five years will visit Hawaii, Samoa, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, New Hebrides, British North Borneo, Sarawak, the Philippines, Japan, Corea, China, Indo China, Cambosia, Straits Settlements, Siam, Sumatra, Java, Burma, Assam, India, Native States, Afghanstan, Persia, Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Tunisia, Algeria, Greece, Balkan States, Europe proper, Scandinavian Peninsula, Russia, England, Scotland and Ireland.

The expedition will be headed by T. K. Peters and wife of New York, T. C. Bartlam, secretary and assistant to Mr. Peters, several actors and actresses, two scientists, two camera men with their assistants, and the tour of the various countries will be made as far as possible by motor car, some four or five big automobiles having been especially equipped for such an expedition.

The expedition will carry letters of introduction to high government officials in practically all of the countries to be visited, and it is expected two score or more big pictures will be made enroute, the pictures each running from four to eight reels in length. Besides this several hundred thousand feet of authentic educational films will be taken, the plan being for this film to form the nucleus of the largest film library of this sort in the world. It is also planned to take some twenty thousand feet of big game pictures while in Borneo, Assam and China.

Donald Brian in Lasky Release

Donald Brian, one of the most popular young stars of the American stage, will make his debut as a photo-drama player in the Paramount picture, on September 27, "The Voice in the Fog," produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and adapted for the screen from the novel of the same name by Harold MacGrath.

Mr. Brian for four years has had the unusual distinction of being the leading masculine musical comedy star of the country. He stepped into fame overnight, as it were, when he originated the role of Prince Danilo, in "The Merry Widow," and for the past few seasons he has been the star in "The Siren," "The Marriage Market," and "The Girl from Utah."

"The Voice in the Fog" is by the author of "The

Donald Bryan in a scene from "The Voice in the Fog."

Goose Girl" and "The Puppet Crown," both picturizations of which, by the Lasky Feature Play Company, have met with universal success wherever shown. Harold MacGrath is an imaginative writer of fiction whose work never fails to meet the popular demand.

Exhibitors' Mass Meeting

On Friday, October 1, a mass meeting of all the exhibitors in Chicago has been called by the International Motion Picture Association of Illinois to be held at the Association headquarters, room 210 Masonic Temple, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

The special meeting is called for the purpose of thoroughly discussing five new ordinances soon to be introduced in the city council, all of which will prove more or less detrimental to the motion picture industry. Only bona fide exhibitors will be admitted, but every one owning or managing a house in the city of Chicago should make it a point to be present, as unless the exhibitors get together in self-protection, legislation that may result in many of the houses being wiped out, will be apt to pass the Chicago city council.

SELIG SERIES NEARLY READY

Side Splitting Comedies of Rural Life to Be Called "Chronicles of Bloom Center" Will Shortly Be Released

On Thursday, October 14, the first of a series of twelve two-reel pictureplays "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," will be released by the Selig Polyscope Company. The first release will be a Selig Diamond Special in three reels entitled "Landing the Hose Reel." Following the first release in three reels, "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" will be released as two-reel comedies every other Monday in regular service. The second in the "Chronicles of Bloom Center" will be released Monday, October 25.

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center" promise to achieve another record to compare very favorably with that other great serial put forth by the Selig Company, namely, "The Adventures of Kathlyn." A special company of character artists were engaged to play the rural types, and Mr. Selig caused a rube village to be erected in Los Angeles which was named "Bloom Center."

The new Selig series is something entirely different from the ordinary series films, for while the characters and the same environment are utilized in all twelve comedies, yet every story is complete in itself and has a well-defined plot. By this method there is a connecting link in the "Bloom Center" series and interest is sustained, but at the same time every release does not necessarily have to be seen in order to keep in touch with the entire series.

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center," according to the Selig Company, is going to set a new record in screen comedy. There is no vulgarity, but at the same time true American rural life is presented in a comical way. Critics who have been permitted to view several of the forthcoming "Bloom Center" stories assert that "everybody will be doing it" just as everybody did it following that other money-making Selig serial "The Adventures of Kathlyn."

ESSANAY TRAVELER HOME

V. R. Day Returns from South America After Having Traveled More Than 22,000 Miles and Spent But Two Nights in Sleeper

V. R. Day is back at his desk in the Essanay offices in Chicago after a tour of South America begun on April 20 last, when he sailed from New Orleans with his wife, and which only ended on September 15 when he reached Chicago, having landed in New York on September 11. During their travels Mr. and Mrs. Day covered more than 22,000 miles and spent but two nights aboard a sleeping car, one en route from Chicago to New Orleans, and the other coming from New York back to Chicago, and all the balance of their expedition was made by water.

From New Orleans the Chicagoans sailed to Havana and after sight seeing on the island of Cuba, traveled across to Colon and Panama, making the voyage through the canal and stopping long enough to thoroughly inspect the workings of the great waterway. Mr. Day was present, on his return trip, when the big slide occurred that now blocks the canal and prohibits the use of the locks, though he has scarcely put on enough weight to be suspected of having caused the slide himself by his presence. He explains that the so called "slide" is not in one sense a slide at all, but rather an oozing up from beneath of the soil so as to block the passage of big boats. In one place Mr. Day alleges an island many feet in diameter has formed in the very center of the canal, the whole formation having arisen almost over night from unplumbed depths between the canal banks.

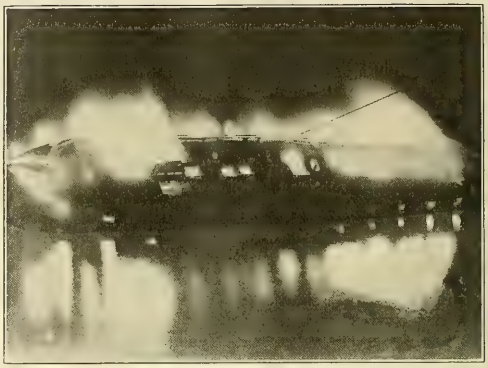
From Panama the Days journeyed down the West Coast, stopping at Guyaquil, Equador; Paita, Callao, Lima, Antofagasta, Chile, Valparaiso and Santiago. Here they had planned on crossing the mountains and coming back up the East Coast, but despite the fact that the month was July, a tremendous snowfall in the mountain passes made it impossible for travelers to cross through them and as they had just missed a south bound boat they had to wait a full seven weeks before they could catch the next steamer and go on to La Concepcion, though they spent the time in sight seeing and so visited places that would otherwise have been impossible for them to behold.

After crossing through the straits they stopped at Punta Arenas, the southernmost city in the world, and noted in passing that the inevitable motion pictures have reached even that spot, there being two theaters there. Crossing to Port Stanley in the Falkland Islands, they saw in the harbor the British cruiser Glasgow which defeated the German cruiser Dresden in a naval battle and saw some of the trophies of the engagement.

Proceeding up the Eastern Coast they stopped at Buenos Aires, Argentina; Montevideo, Uruguay; Santos, Rio de Janeiro, and Bahia, Brazil, Bahia, Pernambuco, Barbados and from thence sailed for New York. Mr. Day looks well after his lengthy trip and though he combined business with pleasure on his travels, declares that he had the time of his life.

Opens New Branch Office

Constantly expanding business of the Big Four has necessitated a change in the Denver headquarters of this organization, from a sub to a branch office, and the establishment of a new sub-office, in Salt Lake City. Denver, heretofore, has been a division office of the Kansas City branch, of which E. R. Pearson is manager.



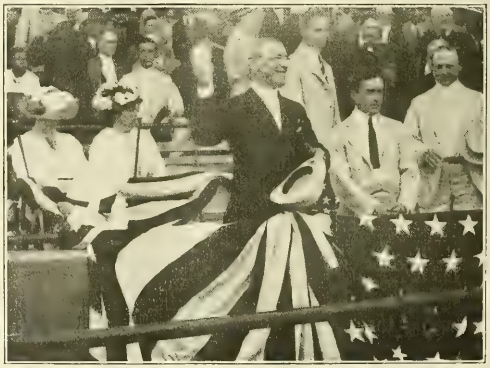
Frank R. Harris who has had charge of the Denver sub-office has been promoted to branch manager of the new division,—a step which is in line with the general policy of the V. L. S. E., to promote men from the ranks, rather than going outside to obtain executives for important positions. The new branch office will be located at the present address of the sub-office, 1031 Seventeenth street, until November 1, when it will occupy large space in the Wight building, 1433-37 Champa street. Extensive alterations are being made in this building to accommodate the V. L. S. E., a large vault is being installed, and a spacious and handsome projection room fitted up. The Denver office will cover New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, and sections of Montana, Idaho, Nevada, South Dakota and Nebraska. The Salt Lake City sub-office will serve the latter sections, and also Utah.

"Sweet Alyssum," written by Charles Major, author of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," etc., will be released on November 15 as a Selig Red Seal Play through V. L. S. E., Inc.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

English and French commissioners seek loan for allies. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Famous warship Portsmouth set on fire to get iron from the hull. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.



Sant' Anna leaving New York for Italy. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Dr. Dumba, Austria-Hungary Ambassador, leaving the embassy. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Envoys from the allies arrive in New York to negotiate big loan. Copyright, 1915 Pathe News.

President Wilson throws the first ball, at opening of baseball park. Copyright, 191-, Universal Animated Weekly.

Brevities of the Business

WEST COAST NEWS

By Captain Jack Poland

Never before in the history of motion picture productions in California have the manufacturers and their entire staffs been as busy as they are now creating films for the amusement loving public of the world. At every studio carpenters are busily engaged raising new "sets," new structures and scenes are being built and everyone except the comedy producers are talking about pictures of the unusual class. Big things are promised by all companies, and the new pictures to be made during the rest of the year 1915 promise to attract greater interest and attention to the production fields than ever before.

The Fine Arts Films studios, formerly the Reliance-Majestic and Griffith headquarters, at East Hollywood, have taken over a great plot of ground upon which they have erected huge towering sets for their new creations to be made under David W. Griffith's personal supervision, aided by a brilliant staff of directors, featuring such stars of the films as DeWolf Hopper, Mae Marsh, John Emerson, Lillian Gish, Douglas Fairbanks, Tully Marshall, Rozsika Dolly, Courtenay Foote, Kathryn Kaelred, Henry Woodruff, Owen Moore, Julia Dean and others in the supporting cast, for Triangle program features.

The New York Motion Picture Corporation, Thomas H. Ince, director-general, has in production for the Triangle program some of the most extraordinary pictures of the season, thrilling dramas with the most unexpected of picturesque scenery, costumes and surroundings, starring such celebrities as Billie Burke, Dustin Farnum, Orrin Johnson, Willard Mack, H. B. Warner, Frank Keenan, Bessie Barriscale, Mary Boland and others.

Mack Sennett and his Keystone organization also have their hats in the ring in the production of the highest class of high-priced comedies for the Triangle program, featuring such wonderful laugh makers as Eddie Foy and the little Foylets, Joe Weber and Lew Fields, Raymond Hitchcock, Mabel Normand, and even Mack Sennett himself.

President Fred Balshofer of the Quality studios, featuring Francis X. Bushman and his leading lady, Beverly Bayne, in specialties for the Metro program, is again home and busy. His star and starress have gained added fame during the past few weeks by being elected king and queen of the Motion Picture Day celebration at the Panama-California Exposition, San Diego, and their prestige has gone up several hundred degrees. Yet in the course of events it is a pleasure to mention that Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, while being elated over their popularity, have not changed a bit. They are both the royal man and woman they were before their crownship and admission unto royalty at the San Diego exposition.

Under the Horkheimer's direction, the great series, "Neal of the Navy," continues to develop and expand, featuring Lillian Lorraine. There is a strong western demand for this series, which are said to be among the most notable, instructive and educational yet produced by a film company. It is through the production of real high class pictures that the Balboa organization continues to grow stronger.

The great Selig Zoo studios and animal exhibition in Los Angeles continues to grow in prestige and popularity every week. It is the natural choice for large picnics, society gatherings of various nationalities and big events, because of its extensive acreage and vast variety of features, all of which are utilized for the pleasure of patrons of the zoo, who are featured in sensational animal pictures for the Selig releases. It is a novelty that is experienced and participated in by hundreds of notables visiting California.

The magnificent $1,000,000 Universal City studios in the edge of the great and picturesque San Fernando Valley have been visited during the past week by many notables. Ex-President William Howard Taft, Major-General Goethals of Panama Canal building fame, William Randolph Hearst, the noted publisher; Judge Gary, the steel magnate, and others have made the sight-seeing trip that is adding much to the prestige of Los Angeles as a film production metropolis, and have been glad of their visit to this interesting city, where nearly thirty directors and some one thousand stars and players are busy before the expert cameraman creating pictures for the Universal program. Director-General Henry McRae and Manager of Publicity M. G. Jonas never overlook an opportunity to entertain notables, and incidentally they are on most occasions pictured in some special scene, all of which adds to the prestige of Universal pictures.

Wallace MacDonald, assistant director with the American Film Company, Santa Barbara, is sending out to his friends a natty miniature picture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, with these few remarks, "See the Fair at My Expense, 12 cents." It's a neat and catchy idea and original with this Flying A specialist.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Oklahoma

McClure Motion Picture Company, Tulsa, Okla., capital stock $250,000. Incorporators, H. A. Mackie, R. L. Noon, E. Y. Worley and M. H. Farnham, all of Tulsa, Okla.

The acquisition of the "Gold Rooster Plays," Pathe feature films, and the introduction of orchestra music was announced by the management of the Strand theater at Oklahoma City Tuesday. The new line of pictures will be exhibited in addition to the Metro plays now shown periodically.

Veno Pistocco has purchased the Star-Electric theater at Savanna, Okla., from the Savanna Amusement Company, and after renovating and repairing, will open the fall season October 1. Mr. Pistocco also announces that he will reopen the Star theater at North McAlester on October 1, having put the Star theater in a first-class condition, in addition to having installed new opera chairs. Both the Star theater at North McAlester and the Star-Electric at Savanna will show Pathe plays exclusively.

Sans Souci Park Dome, also Sans Souci Park and concessions at McAlester, Okla., closed for the season Sunday night, September 12. The theater and park will reopen again next spring with many added attractions and will show the latest pictures on dates not filled by regular theatrical attractions.

Richard Gill, park manager and manager of the theater, more than made good and will again manage Sans Souci next season.

The Star Airdome at McAlester, Okla., closed for the season Saturday night, September 11. The Dome will reopen in the spring with A. Bert Estes as manager and will show moving pictures on dates not filled by stock, musical comedy and vaudeville companies.

Big George Plummer of Oklahoma City, Okla., representing the General

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago

	Bid	Asked
American Film Manufacturing Co....	80	95
Biograph Company.....	45	57
Colonial Motion Picture Corp	1½	4⅝
General Film Corp., pfd....	42	48
Majestic Film Mfg. Co.....	140	175
Mutual Film Corp., pfd.....	50	54
Mutual Film Corp., com.....	50	53
North American Film Corp., pfd.....	65	...
North American Film Corp., com....	63	77
New York Motion Picture Corp.....	68	72
Thanhouser Film Corp.....	1⅞	2⅜
Triangle Film Corp.....	8½	8¾
Universal Film Mfg. Co.....	150	...
World Film Corp.....	3¼	3⅝

American Film Manufacturing Company.—It is reported to be earning between 20% and 25% and now paying dividends at the rate of 10%. Its output, of close to 500,000 feet per week or 26,000,000 feet per annum, makes this company the second largest manufacturing concern in the industry. A considerable portion of its output goes to France, Switzerland, Spain, Italy and Great Britain. In addition to its big factories in Chicago and Santa Barbara, its ownership in an English plant makes a very attractive showing in substantial assets.

Triange Film Corporation.—Will open up its first theater—the Knickerbocker, in New York City—on September 23. It is reported the business secured six weeks before release date is enough to cover the total overhead expenses. There were 50,400 shares sold on the New York Curb between Monday, September 11, and Saturday, September 18. A par is $5.00 and stock has sold above 8, the present market level represents a premium of 60%.

North American Film Corporation.—Bookings are now in excess of $850,000 and show an increase of between $15,000 and $18,000 per week.

Film Company; L. P. Arnold, president of the Mid-Western Film Company; E. P. Eslick, sales manager, and Mrs. Marie C. Paul, advertising manager, were recent visitors in McAlester. The Mid-Western people are putting on a contest and endeavoring to find the most popular and beautiful girls in Oklahoma to star in the new production which the Mid-Western Film is preparing to produce.

Oregon

In a decision upholding the constitutionality of the Sunday closing law at Salem, Septemebr 13, the Supreme Court of Oregon held it was unlawful to keep open on Sunday any business institutions save moving picture shows and theaters, drug stores, physicians' offices, livery stables, meat markets, bakeries, or undertaking establishments. The court held moving picture shows and theaters necessary, as affording needful mental diversion conducive to rest and relaxation. The law was attacked as class legislation and as a violation of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States.

Missouri

The highest priced moving picture actors in the world are the officers and directors of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis, Mo. In a recent production entitled "The Making of John Hayes," which picture is to be exhibited at the state fair and the principal cities of Missouri and probably will be exhibited all over the United States, should the picture take with the moving picture world as well as expected, there appeared as voluntary moving picture actors before the cinema personages no less impressive than the following: John I. Beggs, president of the St. Louis Car Company; Henry W. Peters, vice-president of the International Show Company; Henry Semple Ames, vice-president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company; Dr. Robert O'Reilly, capitalist; Robert H. Stockton, president of the Majestic Manufacturing Company, and S. B. Hoffman, vice-president of the Merchants-Laclede National Bank. All of these men are very wealthy, some are rated as millionaires, and the wealth of the actors in the cast would not miss the billion mark by but a few cents. True to their character duties as financiers, they drew salaries for their historic services. The entire board of directors acted their parts like old timers in the motion picture acting business and the picture will undoubtedly prove to be the success of the year.

Many of the scenes center about a bank and its various departments, even down to the safe deposit valuts. St. Louisans to the number of 196, consisting of bank officers, directors and employes, their families and volunteers, took part. The role of "Betty Lane," the heroine, was taken by Adrienne Kroell, a former St. Louis girl and prize winner in a beauty contest in 1907. The leading male part was played by Ernest Ingalls of Chicago, Ill.

Miss Ida Damon of St. Louis, Mo., who found positions as stenographer closed to her after she won a prize of $10,000 in a motion picture company's contest last spring, has announced that she has joined in a vote-getting race for one of the five automobiles which will be awarded to a woman by a life insurance company in a business-getting enterprise. Miss Damon said that she felt hurt when told that the positions as stenographer were open only to young women in need of money, but was glad to welcome the opportunity to take up other work, which she considered as interesting as taking dictation.

Texas

Sunday picture show cases that were filed in the county court at Dallas, Tex., in June, prior to the trial of the test case before Judge W. L. Crawford, Jr., were dismissed September 14, when they were reached on the docket of the court. At the time of the instructed verdict of "not guilty" in the test cases, County Attorney M. T. Lively announced that the other cases pending in various courts would be dismissed. Unless the cases are taken up on an appeal, or a new suit instituted and sustained by the Criminal Court of Appeals, there will be no further prosecutions in Dallas, Tex., for moving picture theaters showing moving pictures on Sunday.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS

By George Barker

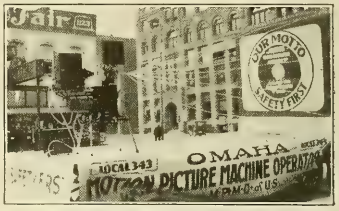
Nebraska

The new Hanson P. K. theater has been opened at Omaha by Mogie Bernstein, who was formerly juvenile officer for the county of Douglas, Neb. Mr. Bernstein's house is located at Castlar and Twenty-ninth streets. Universal pictures are being shown.

The opening of the Strand theater, Douglas and Eighteenth streets, Omaha, gives that neighborhood a veritable gay white way, since some 500 Mazda lights, blaze forth on the theater's front, and one might almost imagine himself on Broadway itself, so brilliant are the illuminants. The Strand opened on Saturday night, September 18.

President W. C. Denny of the Omaha operators' local 343 is delighted with the new ordinance just passed permitting the Omaha board of motion picture examiners to pass anyone who had served one year as an apprentice, provided they have been citizens of Omaha for the same length of time. Many are said to be anxiously waiting to take the examination, and E. B. Randje was the first apprentice to pass the examination and be admitted to the local.

The Clifton Hill theater of Omaha is now under new management, the house having just been purchased by E. H. Wilson and W. M. De Camp, and a program supplied by World Film Corporation is being used.



Many of the Omaha houses are increasing their prices from 5 to 10 cents and finding business as good as ever. Manager Walsh of the Lyric theater, 113 Vinton, was the first to raise prices, and shortly after the Benson, Afton, Hill, New Hamilton, Omaha and Benson theaters followed the example.

The new Bohemia theater opened at Thirteenth and William streets, Omaha, on October 2.

The Hipp theater, Omaha, had a new generator set installed last week and a union operator is now in charge of the projection room.

The Union Pacific and Northwestern railways have organized a safety first campaign with motion pictures and each week is issuing an animated newspaper called "The Sporting Extra." The prints of this subject are being made by the western filmers at the George Barker laboratory, 3513 Seward street, and the first run of the topical was shown at the Empress theater last week. The reel contained, besides the Elks clam bake and state militia encampment, several hundred feet of safety first propaganda.

The operators of Omaha caused quite a furore by their display in a recent Labor Day parade held in that city. The accompanying illustration shows the clever float arranged by the Omaha operators.

Owing to the strong demand for Wm. Fox features in the Omaha territory, the branch office of the Wm. Fox Feature Film Corporation in the Board of Trade building is soon to become a regular exchange instead of a branch office. They will then move into larger quarters, that provision may be made to store the numerous features in stock. The new exchange will be managed by Joseph Levy.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

President Maxcy of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company came down from Oshkosh, Wis., on the 21st and is spending a few days in Chicago with his sales manager, Charles C. Pyle. Mr. Pyle has just closed the order for a new Bartola instrument to be installed in the "Band Box," a new theater which is being erected on Madison street at the present time.

F. O. Nielsen states that his picture "Just Out of College" opens at the Ziegfield Theater, September 25, for an indefinite run.

Tefft Johnson and his wife have been spending their vacation at The Dells at Kilbourn, Wis. Mrs. Johnson was born in that section of the country and has had a great deal of enjoyment in going over again the scenes of her childhood. On their return to Chicago last week Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were the guests of the Selig Polyscope Company at the studio, where they watched the putting on of several scenes with a great deal of interest. W. Lord Wright of the Selig Company was the guide of the party.

Samuel Dinsmore, president of the Nuflux Sign Company, was in the office Friday to announce that he has completed an installation of his announcement boards with cut out changeable letters at the Lakeside Theater, Ascher's beautiful new Sheridan Road theater, and that he has also closed a contract to make a similar installation at the new Kalo Theater, which is not yet completed. Mr. Dinsmore placed a subscription for Motography. (McQuade please note.)

Aaron M. Gollos of the Photoplay Releasing Company purchased Carl Ray's 5-reel picture entitled, "Vengeance of the Wild," last week. Mr. Ray left on Sunday for Muskegon, where he will surprise his former fellow-villagers with a roll that would choke a horse.

Fred Linick is no longer salesman for the Photoplay Releasing Company. The company is very anxious to learn his whereabouts and would appreciate having the information from any one who is able to give it in order that they may dispose of the accumulation of mail which is addressed to him in care of their office.

E. H. Brient, president of the Peerless Film Exchange, who has been making his home in Des Moines, has been spending most of his time in the Chicago office for the past few weeks, where he has trebled the bookings of the office. Mr. Brient is negotiating for a splendid film which will be released in the very near future. An announcement will be made in MOTOGRAPHY.

Ralph D. Small, who probably handles more motion picture stocks than any other broker in Chicago, was entered in the golf tournament at the Indian Hill golf club Friday and Saturday of last week.

Joseph Sullivan, secretary to H. E. Aitkin of the Triangle Film Company, is spending a few days in Chicago.

The world's greatest fishing expedition, comprising three members of a well known advertising agency and your humble scribe returned Sunday last with a basket full of fish caught in the placid waters of Lake Como. The most striking incident of the expedition was the efforts of two of the party to break the double scull record, using the anchor as a handicap. It is understood that three-quarters of the lake was covered in record time for this kind of rowing.

President John R. Freuler, Mutual Film Corporation, and President Samuel S. Hutchinson of the American Film Manufacturing Company, Inc., have been in Chicago the past week. Mr. Freuler is looking exceptionally well notwithstanding that he has been working very hard in arranging all of the details in the big new Mutual program. Mr. Hutchinson will leave for Santa Barbara within a day or so, where he is keeping in close touch with every detail of the production of the big continued screen novel, "The Diamond from the Sky."

V. R. Day is back again at his desk in the Essanay offices after a splendid trip up and down both sides of the South American continent.

A press showing of the big 6-reel production by the Essanay company entitled, "The Palace of the King," was held on Wednesday morning, September 22, at the Essanay studio.

Old "Bill" Sweeney was a caller at the MOTOGRAPHY offices last week. Mr. Sweeney was one of the committee which secured the second floor of the building in which the Movie Inn is located as club rooms for the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago.

Roie C. Seary is enthusiastic over the way in which he is obtaining bookings on Triangle service. With the opening of the Studebaker Theater in the very near future, where advance showings of future releases can be made, Mr. Seary believes that a great many more exhibitors will want Triangle service which will make the Chicago office busier than ever.

A. W. McArthur, Jr., advertising manager of the Moving Picture World, is spending a week or two in Chicago relieving the Chicago man while he is on his vacation.

George L. Cox left for St. Louis Wednesday the 22nd to attend the premier showing of his latest 2-reel production, "The Making of John Hays," which opens at one of the big St. Louis houses for a week's run. A great many of the prominent St. Louis financiers took part in several scenes in this picture and Mr. Cox's presence was requested by them as they are tendering him a banquet at the City Club after the performance.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Hayward Mack, who left New York a short time ago, has just finished another good part in the three-reel picture, "The Pinnacle," produced by Richard Stanton at Universal City. Mr. Stanton, himself, played the lead and Mr. Mack the heavy. The picture is brought to a thrilling finish with a big fight between the two men.

Bessie V. Bannon, secretary to Horace G. Plimpton during his seven years' reign as manager of the Edison Bronx studio, has resigned from the Edison Company. Miss Bannon is exceedingly clever in handling scenarios, casting, cutting, assembling and supervising studio production.

Marie Walcamp and Max Asher, two of the best-known members of the western forces of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, are recovering from a siege of pneumonia.

Kalem is hard at work on the "Ventures of Marguerite," the new series in which the daintly little star, Marguerite Courtot, is to be featured. It is said that the first episode will be released October 22.

The Selig Company has ordered a number of beautiful pennants which can well be utilized for pillow tops, etc. Each pennant also contains the picture of a Selig star. These pennants are the very latest novelty, and if your newspaper is interested in a novel campaign in which pennants are utilized, address Selig Polyscope Company, publicity department, Chicago, Ill.

Edith Storey, Evart Overton, Ned Finley and Jay Dwiggins have just returned from Oyster Bay, where they have been taking scenes in "On the Trail," a Vitagraph feature being produced under the direction of George D. Baker.

Charles Bartlett, or plain "Charlie," as he is better known, has been given the direction of the company headed by Winifred Greenwood and Ed Coxen and will make one and two-reel American features.

Joe King, former leading man with the Gold Seal Company at Universal City, who has been away for several weeks, has returned to the studios, where he is to play opposite Cleo Madison in the production of two-reel subjects.

Bigelow Cooper slowly returned to the Edison studio this week, very much battered up from an automobile trip to Pennsylvania, but with his perennial good nature unscathed.

Miss Jeanette Horton, who makes her motion picture debut in "The Guilt," a three-act "Broadway Favorites" feature, experienced a narrow escape when a pistol used in this production was accidentally discharged.

Helen Rosson, the clever little ingenue with the American company, is very happy with altered conditions. Dick Rosson and Queenie, her brother and sister, are also with the company and there is an aunt who is not only a good cook but who loves to cook.

William N. ("Bill") Bailey, recently a member of the Imp-Universal stock company and who played important roles with Essanay for several years, has just joined the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., forces, and will henceforth devote his talents to Metro pictures. Mr. Bailey is now assistant director to John W. Noble, who has staged many notable screen productions and who recently finished the direction of "The Bridge, or The Bigger Man," by Rupert Hughes, an early release on the Metro program.

Richard Stanton, who this week started to work at the Universal City studios, is busy with his first production, a three-reel drama by F. McGrew Willis, entitled "The Pinnacle."

Baby Stewart, of the Thanhouser-Mutual studios, who, despite her three years, is fast coming to the fore as one of the screen's prominent juveniles, recently served as hostess to a number of her youthful friends who reside in and about New Rochelle. And a right smart little hostess she made, too.

Sidney B. Lust of the United Film Service, 903 E street, Washington, D. C., has secured the exhibition rights on the K. & R. Film Company's six-reel feature, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," for District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland.

Frank Borzage is the most recent of film stars to change employment. Frank, who is one of the "grandest" villains in screen work, is now affiliated with the Mutual, having been engaged to play opposite Neva Gerber in one of the American "beauty" companies.

Glen White, who was formerly with the Imp company of the Universal, left for Universal City, where he will appear hereafter in West Coast productions.

Alfred Vosburgh has been signed by the American Film Company, Inc., and will probably play opposite Miss Vivian Rich in a series of heart-interest dramas.

Producing Manager Rollin S. Sturgeon of the western Vitagraph forces is selecting his cast for one of the biggest Vitagraph features attempted by the company, at Santa Monica, Cal., a picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer."

Richard Harding Davis' popular story, "Ransom's Folly," affords Edison a chance to place the three stars—Edward Earle, Mabel Trunnelle and Marc MacDermott—in one feature for the first time in a long while.

Miss Adele Farrington, one of the shining lights of the Pacific coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has been loaned to the American company at Santa Barbara, Cal., to play the leading part in one of the pictures produced by that organization. This picture is entitled "This Is the Life," written by Charles Van Loan, well-known contributor to the Saturday Evening Post. It is a comedy, and was written by Van Loan some six or eight months ago, with a view to having Miss Farrington enact the leading role.

Before fully three thousand rooting fans, the baseball teams from the Edison and Vitagraph studios grappled for championship honors Saturday on the Vitagraph baseball grounds, Brooklyn. It was a momentous game for the Edison aggregation, as the only previous game out of twenty had been lost to the Vitagraph ball players. Darkness handed a glorious victory to the Edison team in the eighth inning by a score of 11 to 7.

Edison baseball team.

A three-reel production to be released on the Mutual program is being directed for the Gaumont Company by "Silent Bill" Haddock at the Long Island studios. The well-known vaudeville team of Tempest and Sunshine is being featured in this production, which is to be entitled "The Heritage of Hate."

In the cast of the "Butterfly on the Wheel," which Maurice Tourneur has just started to produce for the World Film Corporation, the title role, created in the stage version by Madge Titheradge, will be played by Vivian Martin and the part of the husband by Holbrook Blinn. M. Tourneur is the director who wrote and staged the film version of "Trilby," now playing for a run at the Forty-fourth Street theater.

King Baggot has at last found a good director. He is Harry McRae Webster, late of Essanay and points west.

"The Rosary," the seven-reel Selig Red Seal play released through V. L. S. E., is proving so popular that the Selig Polyscope Company has been forced to make many extra prints of the production.

William D. Taylor, director of the $20,000 prize photoplay "The Diamond from the Sky," recently handled 536 supernumeraries through fifty-two scenes of picture making in one day.

Josephine Earle, an actress of considerable stage experience who recently entered the field of motion pictures, has been appointed a member of the Vitagraph stock company.

Now that his health has been thoroughly restored, J. Warren Kerrigan is soon to return to the Universal City studios. Following his recovery from a recent operation, Kerrigan removed his company to the Lake Tahoe branch of the Universal's Pacific coast studios, where a number of Kerrigan features were produced.

Much of the success of Ashley Miller as director-in-chief of the Arnold Daly "Ashton Kirk, Investigator" series is that he is a practical photographer of long years' experience and understands all the tricks of the camera. Many a director has complained that his excellent cameraman was spoiled through his ambition to be a director, but Mr. Miller suffers none of this trouble, as he knows as much, if not more, about the camera than any operator he gets.

Donald Brian, musical comedy star and one of the most popular players in America, is seen in some of the latest dances in the Paramount photoplay production of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company entitled "The Voice in the Fog," from the novel of the same name by Harold MacGrath.

With Grace Cunard in the hospital, the work on "The Broken Coin" serial is progressing rather slowly for the time being, it being necessary to construct sets in which the company can take scenes not requiring the presence of the leading lady.

"Neal of the Navy," the patriotic photoplay which Balboa has been filming this summer, might never have been finished, for the automobile in which the principals were returning to Long Beach from San Diego on a recent night trip came within a very few inches of going over a high precipice, down into the Pacific ocean a hundred feet below. Those in the car were Lillian Lorraine, William Courtleigh, Jr., Ruth Lackaye, Ethel Fleming, Douglas Bronston and three attendants.

After a distinguished career in the spoken drama, extending from 1888, Otis Harlan has announced his permanent retirement from the stage. Hereafter Mr. Harlan expects to devote his talents exclusively to motion picture work. He will shortly make his initial bow to motion picture fans in the Selig Red Seal play, "A Black Sheep."

Maurice Tourneur, the eminent French director of motion pictures, has accepted a scenario for the filmatization of "A Parisian Romance," with George Beban of "Sign of the Rose" fame as the star, and will begin work on its production at once. He is author and producer of the screen version of "Trilby," now playing at the Forty-fourth Street theater.

William H. Humphrey, one of the Vitagraph Company directors, returned recently from a two weeks' vacation spent at Nantucket, Mass., boating, bathing and fishing. Before Mr. Humphrey had time to "spring" any of his accumulated stock of fish stories on his unsuspecting fellow Vitagraphers, he was given a manuscript of "The Flower of the Hills," with instructions to hasten his production for an early release.

Tom Terriss has disproved the old Biblical saw, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." Terriss evidently is not without honor, even in his own country, England, for he received a cablegram yesterday from London, saying that $4,000 of bookings had been taken for his first American feature, "The Pursuing Shadow," and asking him to hurry prints of "Flame of Passion,' "The Pearl of the Antilles" and "A Woman of the World," together with those of whatever other pictures he might be engaged on.

Of course that plucky girl, Helen Holmes, went to work too soon after her sickness and has had to go to bed again and worry the doctor by asking to "get up tomorrow."

Governor Hiram Johnson was the speaker of the day at a Labor Day picnic held on the spacious grounds of the Selig Jungle-Zoo in Los Angeles Monday, September 6.

Accompanied by those members of her tribe who are at present in the United States, Columbia, the Esquimo girl who was born at the Chicago Exposition in 1913, this week visited Universal City. The party, en route to the San Francisco Exposition under the care of Capt. J. C. Smith, were met in Los Angeles and invited to the picture city by Rex de Rosselli, who has known them for years.

Marjorie Ellison, whose work in leading and heavy roles has gained her a widespread following in Edison films, leaves that company after an engagement covering more than two years. She will leave New York the latter part of this month, going direct to Los Angeles, where she will join one of the larger producing companies.

Sidney Drew, brother of "John," uncle of "Ethel" and husband of "Mrs.," entertained all of these family adjuncts, together with other notables, Friday morning last at a private showing of his latest photoplay, "Playing Dead." The exhibition was given in the projection rooms of the V-L-S-E, Inc., by which organization the feature is to be distributed.

Hobart Bosworth and his company of feature players have left the Universal City studios for the Bear Valley country, where they are to remain for several weeks staging exterior scenes in the production of a five-reel story of Indian life entitled "Natawangan," in which Hobart Bosworth is to appear in the title role.

They call William D. Taylor the director-in-chief of the "Diamond from the Sky" serial now. This is due to the fact that in the many big scenes he has about four assistants to handle the crowds and follow his dictates.

For the fourth time in six months, Syd Chaplin was painfully if not seriously injured at the Keystone studios last week. In making a water scene in the artificial lake he fell from a height of about seventy feet and struck the water horizontally, receiving bruises and shock that left him unconscious for twenty minutes and prevented him from working for five days. He is now fully recovered, however, and back at work.

Among those who have visited Universal City in the last week, there were Mrs. Carter Harrison, wife of the six times mayor of Chicago, with Mrs. William A. Edwards of Los Angeles, a sister of former President Taft. The following day Ko Hitachi and Tajima Yama, champion Japanese wrestlers, visited Universal City and were filmed in a match in a fifteen-foot ring before the camera.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	9-20	Behind the Mask	Biograph	1,000
D	9-20	The Circular Path	Essanay	3,000
D	9-20	A Woman's Mistake	Kleine	2,000
D	9-20	The Call of the Dance	Kalem	4,000
D	9-20	The Silent Accuser	Lubin	1,000
D	9-20	The Eternal Feminine	Selig	2,000
T	9-20	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 75, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	9-20	Willie Stayed Single	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	And By These Deeds	Biograph	2,000
D	9-21	The Call of the Sea	Essanay	2,000
C	9-21	Double-Crossing Marmaduke	Kalem	1,000
C	9-21	The Careless Anarchist	Lubin	225
C	9-21	That Brute	Lubin	275
C	9-21	Monty and the Missionary	Lubin	500
D	9-21	The Range Girl and the Cowboy	Selig	1,000
D	9-21	Dorothy	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

C	9-22	Cartoons in the Seminary	Edison	1,000
C	9-22	The Fable of "The Through Tram"	Essanay	1,000
D	9-22	The Wolf's Prey	Kalem	2,000
D	9-22	A Desert Honeymoon	Lubin	3,000
C	9-22	Getting Rid of Aunt Kate	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	A Kentucky Episode	Biograph	1,000
C	9-23	Snakeville's Hen Medic	Essanay	1,000
D	9-23	The Last Rebel	Lubin	2,000
C	9-23	When Husbands Go to War	Mina	1,000
T	9-23	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 76, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-23	The Blood Seedling	Selig	3,000
D	9-23	The Lesson of the Narrow Street	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	9-24	An Unseen Enemy	Biograph	1,000
D	9-24	Her Happiness	Edison	3,000
D	9-24	An Unexpected Romance	Essanay	1,000
D	9-24	A Daughter's Sacrifice	Kalem	1,000
D	9-24	The Level	Lubin	1,000
C	9-24	Back to the Primitive	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	The Girl Who Didn't Forget	Biograph	1,000
D	9-25	When Conscience Sleeps	Edison	1,000
D	9-25	Affinities	Essanay	2,000
D	9-25	A Matter of Seconds	Kalem	1,000
C	9-25	Captain Kidd and Ditto	Lubin	1,000
C	9-25	The Auction of Run-Down Ranch	Selig	1,000
D	9-25	From Out of the Big Snows	Vitagraph	3,000

Monday.

D	9-27	The Seymour House Party	Biograph	1,000
D	9-27	Darling Dandy	Essanay	3,000
D	9-27	The Mysterious Visitor	Kleine	2,000
D	9-27	The Guilt	Kalem	3,000
D	9-27	Tony and Marie	Lubin	1,000
D	9-27	The Runt	Selig	2,000
T	9-27	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 77, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-27	The Butterfly's Lesson	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	His Wife's Story	Biograph	2,000
D	9-28	The Convict's Threat	Essanay	2,000
C	9-28	Foiled	Kalem	1,000
C	9-28	In Zuzuland	Lubin	400
C	9-28	The Wayville Slumber Part	Lubin	600
C	9-28	Her Slight Mistake	Selig	1,000
D	9-28	Through Troubled Waters	Vitagraph	3,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.
THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.
SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday.

D	9-29	The Country Parson	Biograph	3,000
C	9-29	The Parson's Horse Race	Edison	1,000
C	9-29	At the Old Swimming Hole	Essanay	1,000
D	9-29	The Man on Watch	Kalem	2,000
D	9-29	The Dragon's Claw	Knickerbocker	3,000
D	9-29	The Last Rose	Lubin	2,000
D	9-29	Rags and the Girl	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

C	9-30	Winning the Widow	Biograph	1,000
C	9-30	Off for a Boat Ride	Essanay	1,000
D	9-30	Voices from the Past	Lubin	3,000
C	9-30	Why the Boarders Left	Mina	1,000
D	9-30	The Agony of Fear	Selig	3,000
T	9-30	The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 78, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-30	The Plague Spot	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-1	Brutality	Biograph	1,000
D	10-1	The Ploughshare	Edison	4,000
D	10-1	Broncho Billy Misled	Essanay	1,000
D	10-1	The Curious Case of Meredith Stanhope	Kalem	2,000
D	10-1	When the Wires Crossed	Lubin	1,000
C	10-1	The Fox Trot Finesse	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-2	Her Renunciation	Biograph	1,000
D	10-2	The Butler	Edison	1,000
D	10-2	The Family Divided	Essanay	3,000
D	10-2	The Runaway Box Car	Kalem	2,000
C	10-2	The Cello Champion	Selig	1,000
C	10-2	A Queen for an Hour	Vitagraph	2,000

V. L. S. E. Program

8-9	Chalice of Courage	Vitagraph	6,000
8-16	A Bunch of Keys	Essanay	5,000
8-16	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Aug. 23	Wheels of Justice	Vitagraph	4,000
Aug. 23	House of Thousand Candles	Selig	5,000
Aug. 30	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	5,000
8-30	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Sept. 6	Mortmain	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept. 13	The Man Trail	Essanay	6,000
Sept. 20	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	5,000
Sept. 20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept. 20	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept. 27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct. 4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	9-20	The Barren Gain	American	2,000
C	9-20	Simon's Swimming Soul Mate	Falstaff	1,000
C	9-20	The Lilliputian's Courtship	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	The Dead Man's Keys	Thanhouser	2,000
S	9-21	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	9-21	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	9-21	Everyheart	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	9-22	The House with Nobody in It	Rialto	3,000
C	9-22	Never Again!	Kay-Bee	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	The Woman, the Lion, and the Man	Centaur	2,000
C	9-23	Con, the Car Conductor	Falstaff	1,000
T	9-23	Mutual Weekly, No. 38	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

C	9-24	Busy Izzie	Gaumont	2,000
D	9-24	It Was Like This	American	1,000
C	9-24	The Treasure Box	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	A Disciple of Neitzsche	Thanhouser	3,000
C	9-25	Cats, Cash and a Cook Book	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	9-26	Merely Players	Reliance	2,000
C	9-26	Kidnaped at the Church	Mutual	1,000
D	9-26	The Miracle	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	9-27	The Terror of Twin Mountains	American	2,000
C	9-27	Gustave Gebhard's Gutter Band	Falstaff	1,000
C	9-27	The Amateur Camera Man	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	The Road to Fame	Thanhouser	2,000
S	9-28	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	9-28	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	9-28	Love, Mumps and Bumps	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	9-30	The Protest	Centaur	3,000
C	9-30	Love's Strategy	Mutual	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-1	Stanley's Search for the Hidden City	Centaur	2,000
C	10-1	A Perplexing Pickle Puzzle	Centaur	1,000
T	10-1	Mutual Weekly No. 39	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-2	A Fool's Heart	Eclair	2,000
D	10-2	Hearts in Shadow	American	1,000
C	10-2	The Oriental Spasm	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-2	Man Afraid of His Wardrobe	Mustang	3,000
C	10-2	Mixed Males	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-3	As in the Days of Old	Reliance	2,000
C	10-3	His Lordship's Dilemma	Gaumont	1,000
D	10-3	The Mystery of Eagle's Cliff	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	9-20	Under Southern Skies	Broadway	5,000
C	9-20	It Almost Happened	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-21	The Tenor	Gold Seal	3,000
	9-21	No release this week	Rex
C	9-21	His Home Coming	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

E	9-22	Not a Lamb Shall Stray	Victor	1,000
C	9-22	Scandal in the Family	L-Ko	2,000
T	9-22	Animated Weekly, No. 185	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	9-23	The Cry of the First Born	Laemmle	3,000
	9-23	No release this week	Big U
C	9-23	The Ham Actors	Powers	800
E	9-23	Life of the Frog	Powers	200

Friday.

D	9-24	When the Call Came	Imp	2,000
	9-24	No release this week	Victor
C	9-24	When Lizzie Went to Sea	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	9-25	A Message for Help	Bison	2,000
D	9-25	Every Man's Money	Powers	1,000
C	9-25	He Couldn't Support His Wife	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	9-26	The Fascination of the Fleur-de-Lis	Rex	3,000
	9-26	No release this week	Laemmle
C	9-26	Avenged by a Fish	L-Ko	1,000
D	9-26	The Broken Coin, No. 14	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	9-27	Judge Not, or the Woman of Mona Diggings	Broadway	6,000
C	9-27	Snatched from the Altar	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	Her Prey	Gold Seal	2,000
	9-28	No release this week	Rex
C	9-28	Billy's College Job	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

C	9-29	An All Around Mistake	Imp	2,000
C	9-29	Married on Credit	L Ko	1,000
T	9-29	Animated Weekly No. 186	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	9-30	No release this week	Laemmle
D	9-30	The Sheriff of Red Rock Gulch	Big U	2,000
C	9-30	The Orr Mystery	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	10-1	The Wolf of Debt	Imp	4,000
	10-1	No release this week	Victor
	10-1	No release this week	Nestor

Saturday.

D	10-2	The Ghost Wagon	Bison	3,000
	10-2	No release this week	Powers
C	10-2	An Innocent Villain	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-2	Her Three Mothers	Laemmle	3,000
	10-2	No release this week	Rex
C	10-2	A Mortgage on His Daughter	L Ko	1,000
D	10-2	The Broken Coin No. 15	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko	5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan	5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing	2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe	24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.	5,000

Associated Service.

Release Week of

Sept. 27	Brother's Redemption	Santa Barbara	2,000
Sept. 27	Dusty's Finish	Banner	1,000
Sept. 27	The Woman He Married	Ramona	2,000
Sept. 27	Pete's Adventure	Alhambra	1,000
Sept. 27	Woman's Past	Federal	2,000
Sept. 27	What's the Name, Please	Empire	1,000
Sept. 27	The Bent Gun	Deer	2,000
Sept. 27	Rose's Victor	Liberty	1,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Sept. 8	Money Master	Kleine	5,000
Sept. 15	The Fixer	Kleine-Edison	1,000
Oct. 6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Sept. 13	The Silent Voice	Metro	6,000
Sept. 20	The Bigger Man	Metro	5,000
Sept. 27	An Enemy to Society	Metro	5,000
Oct. 4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept. 2	Infatuation	American	4,000
Sept. 9	The Wolf-Man	Reliance	4,000
Sept. 16	The Man From Oregon	N. Y. M. P.	5,000
Sept. 23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept. 30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Sept. 6	The Foundling	Famous Players	5,000
Sept. 6	Esmeralda	Famous Players	4,000
Sept. 9	Out of Darkness	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept. 16	Peer Gynt	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Sept. 13	The Case of Becky	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept. 20	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Sept. 23	'Twas Ever Thus	Bosworth
Sept. 27	The Explorer	Jesse L. Lasky
Sept. 30	The Fatal Card	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Sept. 12	Maid of the Wild	Balboa	3,000
Sept. 12	Jocko, the Lovesick Monk	Pathe	500
Sept. 12	Intimate Study of Birds, No. 7	Pathe	500
Sept. 12	The Waterways of Bruges, Belgium	Photocolor	500
Sept. 12	Fishing with Cormorants	Globe	500
Sept. 12	Pathe News, No. 74	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 12	Neal of the Navy, No. 3	Panama	2,000
Sept. 12	Via Wireless	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 12	Pathe News, No. 75	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 12	Matrimonial Bliss	Starlight	1,000
Sept. 20	The Toilers of the Sea	Balboa	3,000
Sept. 20	Some Baby	Phunphilms	1,000
Sept. 20	Pathe Daily News, No. 76	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 20	Pathe Daily News, No. 77	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 20	Neal of the Navy, No. 4	Panama	2,000
Sept. 20	Simon, the Jester	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 20	Hot Stuff	Starlight	1,000
Sept. 20	Strange Occupations	Globe	1,000
Sept. 27	The Lost Secret	Balboa	2,000
Sept. 27	Exploring Ephraim's Exploit	Pathe	500
Sept. 27	An Intimate Study of Birds No. 8	Pathe	500
Sept. 27	Pathe News No. 78	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 27	Pathe News No. 79	Pathe	1,000
Sept. 27	Neal of the Navy No. 5	Panama	2,000
Sept. 27	The Spender	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept. 27	Considerable Milk	Starlight	1,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Sept. 13	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 10	World Comedy
Sept. 20	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 11	World Comedy
Sept. 20	Trilby	World	5,000
Sept. 27	Salvation Nell	California
Sept. 27	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 12	World Comedy
Sept. 27	Little Mademoiselle	Shubert
Sept. 27	The Lure of a Woman	Armstrong
Oct. 3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Her Renunciation—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 2.—Featuring Claire McDowell, Isabel Rea, Laura LaVarnie and Hector V. Sarno. Overwork at her art had undermined Miriam Dranton's health and she seeks fresh air in a fishing village with an old couple, whose granddaughter, Lucy Joyce, is a cripple. The old folks consent to pose for Miriam, thinking to earn money for Lucy's operation. Miriam's sweetheart, Spencer, comes to visit her, and is entranced by Lucy's beauty, and Miriam, seeing them together, realizes that her happiness is shattered. Back in her studio she completes her painting and wins the grand prize with it. Revisiting Lucy, whose operation has turned out to be a success, she saves the girl from drowning at the cost of her own life—the sublime sacrifice of love.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 75—HEARST-SELIG—SEPTEMBER 16.—State's birthday is celebrated at San Diego and Panama-Pacific Expositions; large dynamite blast lifts 82,000 cubic yards of rock at Fort Springs, Va.; Greek pageant held at Portland, Me.; New York schools open; Labor Day at San Francisco; billion-dollar war loan is sought by bankers representing allies, who meet American financiers in New York; steamer Nevada launched at Manitowac, Wis.; army aviators, Lieut. Morrow, and Mechanician, Khuen-Kyrk, meet with accident at Brownsville, Tex.; cruiser Columbia, flagship of submarines, leaves navy yard at Philadelphia; U. S. S. Minnesota tries out new four-blade propellers.

The Circular Path—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 20.—Henry B. Walthall and Warda Howard featured in an emotional drama that shows how Reverend Kirby left the pastorate of his humble church for the love of a girl who was being courted by a flirtatious business man. After Kirby had won the heart and hand of the girl, but failed to make a success as a business man, she left him for her former suitor, while he became a drunkard. Eventually, however, he reforms, and the two, once more united, begin a new life. For a more complete review of this picture see another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 76—HEARST-SELIG—SEPTEMBER 23.—Boston Red Sox defeat White Sox on Governor's Day at Boston, Mass.; non-capsizable and collision-proof craft demonstrated by Captain Samuel Golden at Weehawken, N. J.; New Jersey councils of B. P. O. Elks celebrate annual reunion; first spade of earth in subway project turned in Philadelphia; state fair held at Syracuse, N. Y.; only double-deck jack knife bascule bridge ever built constructed in Chicago; Selig Zoo at Los Angeles inspected by happy throng; New York police recruits reviewed by Mayor Mitchell; Harvard football squad, Cambridge, Mass.; military events on the border, Harlington, Texas.

An Unexpected Romance—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 24.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. The old settler's daughter goes to the real estate agent to ask for more time in which to pay the mortgage on their property. The agent forces his attentions on her and finally wires the owner of the land that the settler refuses to pay and prepares to evict the pair. Meanwhile the owner goes to the country for his health and arrives just in time to prevent the eviction, and when the settler's daughter thanks him it is a case of love at first sight.

In Zululand—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 28.—In Zululand lives Queen Cocoa, who loves Zebo, a good-for-nothing nigger. Cocoa's daughters hit upon a scheme to spoil the match and disguise as ghosts and one night when Zebo comes to call on their mother they meet him. Then they go to their mother still in the disguise and tell her that all attentions between her and Zebo must cease. The next day the queen orders Zebo to be beheaded.

The Seymour House Party—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 27.—Featuring Augusta Anderson and Charles Perley. Stanton objects to his wife playing cards for money. Their host, Seymour, has given his wife a costly necklace, which is stolen by the maid, and the jewel case put among Mrs. Stanton's belongings. Her husband finds the case and also a note asking his wife to pay gambling debts and he becomes convinced that his wife stole the necklace. Mrs. Stanton overhears the maid arrange with her confederate to sell the necklace and she goes to the rendezvous where she is captured and locked in a room. She later escapes, however, and the necklace is returned to its owner.

Darling Dandy—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 27. Featuring Ruth Stonehouse and John Lorenz and John Thorn. Darling Dandy, an orphan, with practically no education, is a lovable character and the young minister of the village falls in love with her. However, the girl falls in love with a young engineer, who comes to the village and he proves to be a scoundrel and leaves the girl heartbroken. The engineer who has wronged a girl in the city takes her child and leaves it on the minister's doorstep and Darling takes it to her home. The city girl forces the engineer to go with her for her child, but when she sees it she refuses to take it back and Darling Dandy, learning what a scoundrel the man she loved is, turns to the minister.

The Guilt—(THREE REELS)—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 27.—Featuring Jeanette Horton and Harland Moore with a strong cast. Eleanor Gordon witnesses a quarrel between her father and Roland, who asks him for her hand. Later the girl and her father engage in a quarrel and a pistol in Gordon's hand is accidentally discharged and the man falls dead. As a result of the murder Roland, who had been seen quarreling with Eleanor's father, is accused of the murder, and Eleanor lets him be pronounced guilty. Gates, a district attorney, tells the girl he knows she is guilty, and Thompson, a trusty, overhears the conversation and steps into the room and declares himself to be the slayer. He tells of how he was Gordon's partner and because the man had defrauded him he had shot him from the outside of the house; his pistol had been muffled by a Maxim silencer and Roland is freed and restored to the girl for whom he was willing to die.

The Butterfly's Lesson—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 27.—Featuring Carolyn Birch and Leo Delaney. Leila, a social butterfly, plays loose with her admirers, Arnolod Brayton and Count Malais. Arnold, alone in a sail boat, is knocked overboard by a boom and swims to a deserted island and arrives just in time to save Leila from the count, who has abducted her. They leave the island and the count is stranded. As Arnold takes her in his arms Leila tells him she had had her lesson and will never flirt again.

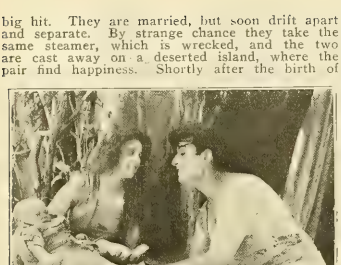
Tony and Marie—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 27.—Tony comes to America leaving his wife in Italy. He receives a letter from his wife, telling of the birth of a baby. One night Rosso, who lives with Tony, attempts to rob a sleeping organ grinder, who is awakened by the chattering of his monkey. Tony awakens and interferes and gets the money and a knife from Rosso, who escapes, but the organ grinder is stabbed and dying he tells the police Tony did it and he is jailed. Marie arrives in America and finds Tony after a long search. She nurses a sick man in the next room who turns out to be Rosso and he, before dying, confesses his guilt and Tony is freed.

His Wife's Story (TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 28.—Featuring Vera Sisson, G. Raymond Nye and a strong cast. William Courtnay, a rising young lawyer, sees Louise Blair, a cabaret singer, in a restaurant, and urges her to give up the unworthy occupation. Outside of the door of the restaurant the girl is confronted by a man and she gives him money. A few days later she secures employment in a book store. Fenmore, the man to whom the girl had given money, finds the card which Courtnay had given the girl and applies to Courtnay for a clerkship. Later Louise meets Courtnay again and becomes his private secretary and comes face to face with Fenmore. Courtnay urges Louise to marry him and she consents, and Fenmore is discharged from the office and vows vengeance. He goes to Courtnay's home and there Louise tells of how she had eloped with Henry Bryson, chairman of a campaign committee, years before, and how Fenmore was his secretary and found out that he already had a wife and child. Fenmore is killed by Bryson, who later pays the penalty of his crime, and Courtnay and his wife are happy together.

A Convict's Threat—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 28.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. The convict's cell mate, after being freed, calls on the former's wife and threatens to tell who her husband is unless she gives him money. The convict saves the warden's little daughter from drowning and is pardoned. One night the released cell mate attempts to kiss the convict's wife and just then the pardoned convict arrives and after nearly choking his former cell mate to death there is a reunion between husband and wife.



Foiled—KALEM—SEPTEMBER 28.—Ethel Teare and Bud Duncan featured. Aloysius isn't very big, but he is strong. Reckless Reginald summons two cut-throats and they try to kidnap Ally's sweetheart, Gwendolyn, but Aloysius lays the three men low and Reginald then summons Rubdub Ab Rummy, a genii, who hypnotizes Gwendolyn and makes her come to the villain. However, she escapes and the day of her marriage to Aloysius Rubdub again casts a spell over her and compels her to leave the house and she is kidnaped and placed in a barn. Later Rubdub gets in a quarrel with Reginald and changes him into a skeleton. Ally rescues Gwendolyn and when they see Rubdub they break all speed laws in getting away.

The Wayville Slumber Party—LUBIN—SEPTEMBER 28.—Comedy cast featured. Mack and Frances, the daughter of the local chief of police, leave for the justice's to be married. Later the chief's wife gets a letter telling her that the man her daughter is in love with is an A. P. A. When she tells her husband this he starts for the justice's office and there the crowd proceeds to beat up the newly wed husband, but in the midst of the riot a telegram is handed in, which tells mother that her son-in-law is not an A. P. A., but those letters are his initials.

Her Slight Mistake SELIG. SEPTEMBER 28.—Featuring Tom Mix. Bill, a cow-puncher, answers an ad in a matrimonial journal. When he sees the girl's picture, however, he decides to rig up as a wild man and he goes into the hills in this condition. In the meantime a naturalist professor who has been collecting bugs in the hills is seen by Muriel, the old maid, who gives chase, and after overtaking the professor, starts for town with him. After telling him that she has $50,000 in her grip he falls upon her and they embrace and they are married by the justice of the peace, when Bill and his cowboy friends come upon the scene. He is told that the old maid is already married and Bill does a joy dance until he discovers that Muriel had $50,000 in her grip.

Through Troubled Water—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—SEPTEMBER 28.—Featuring Alfred Vosburg, Anne Schaefer and Myrtle Gonzalez. Viola Lorraine, an actress, is loved by Gordon White, who writes a play in which she makes a big hit. They are married, but soon drift apart and separate. By strange chance they take the same steamer, which is wrecked, and the two are cast away on a deserted island, where the pair find happiness. Shortly after the birth of their child they are taken off the island and back to civilization. Viola, although she receives offers of theatrical engagements, decides in favor of home life and her husband.

The Country Parson—(Three Reels)—Biograph—September 29.—Featuring Louise Vale and Franklin Ritchie. Veronique Sauviat meets Jean Tascheron and falls in love with him. Her father has amassed a great fortune and proposes to give Veronique a fabulous dowry if she will marry Graslin, the richest man in the province. She is forced into the loveless marriage and Jean leaves home and meets Sauviat, who has been impoverished by the payment of Veronique's huge dowry. One day he accompanies the old man home and there encounters his lost Veronique and the old love affair is rekindled. Later Jean is arrested for stealing the old miser's money and is sentenced to be executed. On the day of the execution Veronique's baby is born. Graslin starts to embrace her, but she waves him away with a shriek—for Jean is even now dying on the guillotine.

The Parson's Horse Race—Edison—September 29.—Raymond McKee as the tramp who gives a tale of woe to the parson and receives in return a job as coachman. While the preacher and his family are in the church on Sunday the tramp, who was a jockey once upon a time, invites the other drivers to race him. The constable hears of the race and determines to arrest the men if they race on the following Sunday. The next week the new coachman cannot resist the temptation to "brush" with the other horses and he gives the parson and his family an exciting ride. It proves quite attractive to the parson and he congratulates his coachman for winning.

Dreamy Dud at the Swimming Hole—Essanay—September 29.—Cartoon by Wallace A. Carlson. Dreamy Dud goes swimming in the river and after diving to the bottom sees a beautiful mermaid, to whom he makes love, and she is so delighted that she kisses him. Dreamy is transported to the seventh heaven when he wakes up and finds it was too good to be true.

The Man on the Watch—(Two Reels)—Kalem—September 29.—Featuring a strong cast. Pete, a member of Randall's gang, secures a position as waiter in the Grand Hotel and after wounding the manager he hides the pistol in a soup tureen. He learns that a silver service is to be presented to the U. S. battleship and is on exhibition at the hotel and plans to secure it. The Randall crew succeed in taking part of the service, and Hilton, the house detective, sees them trying to take the rest of the service. He is captured and kidnapped and taken to their den. Randall's wife comes upon the scene and the gang take her away with them in an auto. Hilton tries to loosen his bonds and upsets a lamp. He manages to escape, but the (——) is destroyed. Later the fleeing auto arouses the suspicion of the police, who take up pursuit and capture the crooks.

The Dragon's Claw—Knickerbocker—September 29.—A little girl and her father, who are settlers in a small western town, become friendly with the neighboring Indian tribe and the father is presented with a piece of metal representing a dragon's claw. Some time later he is held up by a band of bandits and is killed, and one of the bandits takes the dragon's claw. Years pass and the little girl grows into a beautiful young lady, and in the east marries a prominent figure in the business world and they are most happy. Her husband becomes interested in a mine in the west which is christened "The Dragon's Claw" because of an Indian charm he owns. While out in the western desert he shows the dragon's claw to his wife, and she has understood that the one her father had to be the only one of its kind, and is sure that this man is the one who had killed her father. Taking everything with her, she leaves her husband alone on the desert to die, but she is held up by a band of robbers, and while holding them at bay her husband arrives and saves her, but he himself is killed. She leaves the dead body of the man who killed her father and goes on her way, and later discovers that dragon's claws are common in that section of the country, and, realizing her tragic mistake, she goes back to the dead body of her husband and falls lifeless over it.

The Last Rose—(Two Reels) Lubin—September 29.—Featuring Lottie Briscoe and Arthur Johnson. Carlotta Valandi, a beautiful Italian opera singer, is the idol of her friends and is loved by Angelo, also a singer. John Converse, a minister, hears her sing "The Last Rose of Summer" and falls in love with her and they become married. Later she is jealous over the attentions paid to an old friend, Marion, and decides to run away from her friend. That same morning she receives a note from Angelo asking her to come to him when she is tired of her husband, which note she flings to the floor. The note is found by the husband's sister and when Carlotta returns she is told that John has started proceedings for a divorce. Carlotta returns to the stage and later her husband reads that she intends to return to Italy forever. She goes back to the rectory for a last visit and here her attention is arrested by the strains of "The Last Rose of Summer," which piece she had had a record made for the Victrola. The girl knows that her husband has not forgotten, and taking courage, enters the house, and all bitterness and past unhappiness are forgotten.

Rags and the Girl—Vitagraph—September 29.—Featuring Maurice Costello and Adele De Garde. Tom Raine, a wealthy broker, is forced to change clothes with a tramp in the woods and dressed in this attire reaches a hut just in time to save June from a beating at the hands of her step-parents. Tom falls deeply in love with the girl, and the pair are seen talking by the others and the father goes after Tom with a club. A fight ensues and but for the timely arrival of Tom's family, who from their auto had seen the affair, a tragedy might have occurred. Tom explains matters and June returns home with them and later marries Tom.

Winning the Widow—Biograph—September 30.—Featuring Gretchen Hartman and Alan Hale. The bachelor at the summer boarding house is quieting a child he overhears crying in the next room when the mother, a dashing young widow, comes into the room. He falls in love with her, but she refuses him. At last he determines to kidnap the child and hold it as hostage until she names the day. The child is kidnaped and the bachelor takes it to a furnished cottage and each day looks for an ad in the paper to see if the widow advertises for the child. The next day the widow, accompanied by the shoe clerk who had kidnaped the baby for the bachelor, comes to the house and introduces the shoe clerk as her husband and thanks the bachelor for taking care of the baby while they were on their honeymoon.

Off for a Boat Ride—Essanay—September 30.—A strong cast featured. The family are out for a boat ride when father sees a pretty girl fishing and goes to help her. The family miss father and the daughter's fiance finds him and then mother takes a hand. They finally start for home. Jack falls in the water and comes up in a den of thieves, and he is forced to burglarize the family's house that night. An unpropriously funny chase with father, mother and daughter in night clothes takes place, and later, through the efforts of Jack, the burglars are captured and peace reigns once more.

Voices from the Past—(Three Reels)—Lubin—September 30.—A strong cast featured. John Pemberton, who has given his ward, Elsie, a thorough education, is in love with her, and is startled to learn that she contemplates marriage with one George Trent. He gives the girl an envelope containing the reasons why she must not wed Trent, and as Elsie reads she sees her mother, Alice, wooed by both John and a man named Craig. She is forced by her father to wed Craig because of his wealth. Trent then enters the story and urges Alice to divorce herself from Craig. Craig is later killed by Alice in self-defense and Trent witnesses the tragedy from the window. Some time later Trent goes to Alice and tells her he knows that she killed Craig and he will not keep it quiet unless she promises to marry him, and the shock proves too much for her constitution and she drops dead. Elsie, repentant, seeks John, and he puts the ring on her finger he had intended to put on Alice's finger years before.

Why the Boarders Left—Mina—September 30.—If you put up at a hotel where the bus driver dropped the grips on your head and while registering he stuck you in the ribs with a pin, escorted you unto your room with a kick—wouldn't it exasperate you? If he started flirting with your wife and aroused the feelings of another boarder, who chased him through the halls with a gun, what would you do? And besides being a bus driver and proprietor and hotel clerk, he also tried to cook, what kind of eats do you think you would get? This is the plot of this Mina comedy.

The Agony of Fear—(Three Reels)—Selig—September 30.—Robert Arthur, scion of an English family, is an outcast in America and repeatedly disabuses Henry, his valet. His cousin, Maitland, knowing that if Robert should die he would get the estate, sends a confidential man to America to watch Robert. Robert has met and wronged Louise and receives a cablegram that his father has died and he is the sole heir. Later Louise creeps into the automobile belonging to Robert and when he returns in a drunken frenzy he throws her out and to her death. Donald, a new valet, is engaged, and thereafter Robert receives mysterious messages which follow him to all parts of the country. In the far west Arthur becomes engaged to a beautiful girl and their wedding night is set and he receives a message which reads: "On the stroke of ten on your wedding night you shall pay." The minute hand is one minute of ten and the face of the clock disappears and the face of Louise appears. Robert falls lifeless to the floor and Detective Bowles disovers that it was Donald who had been working on Robert's superstitions, as Louise was his sister.

The Plague Spot—Vitagraph—September 30.—A strong cast featured. Eben Greggs, a miser, has a friend in Dr. John Farley, who discovers a case for the deadly bubonic plague. The old miser's only child is kidnapped by a crook and the doctor pretends to secure the ransom and while they are at the safe he drops his fountain pen point under the crook's hand and then tells the crook that he is inoculated with the deadly germs. When the crook is safely handcuffed he is told that the germs have been rendered harmless by Dr. Farley's plague cure.

Brutality—Biograph re-issue—October 1.—Featuring Mae Marsh, Walter Miller and Lionel Barrymore. The girl has been married only a few months when her husband's brutal nature assumes full sway. She attempts to leave him, but he forces her to dissemble. The next day they attend a theater and witness a great actor's impersonation of the brutal Bill Sykes in Dickens' "Oliver Twist." The tragedy makes a lasting impression upon the husband's mind, and aghast at the thought that he may some day kill the woman he loves he promises to curb his temper and succeeds in his attempt.

When the Wires Crossed—Lubin—October 1.—Featuring L. C. Shumway and Adda Gleason, with a strong cast. Lydia Kemp, wife of Oliver Kemp, candidate for mayor, overhears a phone conversation where woman's voice says she will meet the man at Sherman Park road. As she is going out of the telephone booth she sees a woman step out next to her and recognizes in her the woman whose picture she had found on the floor of her husband's library. Meanwhile, the original of the photograph goes to the door of Kemp's summer home and asks if she can use the telephone and, when once inside, pretends illness. Mrs. Kemp arrives and sees the girl, Cyril, alone with her husband. She then sees a reporter and McEwen, boss of "Little Hell," going to the door and realizes the whole thing is a frame-up. She then goes into the house, fixes a tray with a decanter and three wine glasses and enters the living room just as McEwen is accusing Kemp and Cyril. McEwen realizes that his plot has failed and he and Cyril leave in a rage, and Lydia realizes her jealousy was unfounded.

The Fox Trot Finesse—Vitagraph—October 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew featured. Crosby, a typical retired business man, pretends lameness in one leg when he has to dance with a bunch of elderly ladies. The plan works until he forgets which leg is lame and his wife determines to lay a little trap for him. She hides behind the door and when the husband, thinking his wife has gone out, gets up on both feet, the secret is out. To punish him and get him to accompany her to a dance that evening she invites dreaded mother-in-law to come for a week's visit and then Crosby promptly capitulates.

The Butler—Edison—October 2.—A pleasing comedy drama finely enacted by William Wadsworth, Richard Tucker and Gladys Leslie. The story is of a young spendthrift who receives his allowance from an uncle he has never seen. He is surprised to receive a letter from this uncle asking him to give the bearer, a butler, employment, as the uncle is now on his way to Japan. Sometime later young Graham is unable to meet his gambling debts and he raises a check sent him by his uncle. The butler sees him doing this and prevents him from cashing it. He then explains that he is the uncle and that he promised Graham's mother to look out for her son and he is making good his promise.

The Family Divided—(Three Reels)—Essanay—October 2.—Featuring Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn. Henry F. Galzier and his wife are much in love with each other, but one day she sees her mother with a strange woman, and later sees the husband giving the woman money to help out a destitute child, and suspecting that her husband has been untrue obtains a divorce. Her daughter is awarded to her and the son to the father. Twelve years after the separation Glazier sends his son away and asks his wife to meet the youth in the office of a friend, "Bob" Moulton, a young attorney in love with Myra. By chance the parents also meet here and a reconciliation is affected when matters are explained.

The Cello Champion — Lubin — October 2.—Featuring Billie Reeves as Bill, a gentleman of too much leisure, who is found on the front steps of Mrs. Pyfrom's home and induced to impersonate Dovey, the cello champion, who has eloped with Mrs. Pyfrom's daughter, and with a phonograph and a soap bow Bill does very well until some of the young men substitute a rag-time quartette for his next selection, and as a consequence the concert winds up in a riot and Bill is thrown out on the sidewalk and hit on the head with a flower pot.

Mutiny in the Jungle—Selig—October 2. Colonel Harte, commander of a fortress in India, loses the plans of the fortress, and suspicion points to Captain Powner, who is engaged to the colonel's daughter, and Powner is condemned to be shot at sunrise. Ralph, the colonel's son, is conscience stricken and confesses his guilt on paper and then takes his life. Powner, who has been freed by Ralph, is captured, and once more condemned to die, but he saves the son of Din Zodra from a tiger and in a fight with the tiger's mate is saved from death by stumbling upon the corpse of Ralph and finding the dead man's pistol.

A Queen for an Hour—(Two Reels)—Vitagraph—October 2.—Edith Storey, Hughie Mack, Evart Overton and a strong cast featured. Jane, the daughter of a laundress, has in Anita, daughter of a wealthy man, in love with Ralph, a double. Anita asks Jane how she would like to be courted by a real count. In other words, to change places with her so she can elope with Ralph. That night Jane is substituted for Anita. The count proposes and is promptly accepted by Jane. Anita and Ralph are married and appear upon the scene just as Jane is on her way out. The count and Anita's father rave like mad men, but unfortunately Tom, Jane's once-scorned beau, arrives on the scene and carries her off while dad makes the best of things by giving the newlyweds his blessing.

An Unwilling Thief—(Three Reels)—Edison—October 8.—Cast includes Herbert Prior and Leoni Thigrath. Meg Ferner and her two associates kidnap Bab, the little daughter of Mr. Harrison, a millionaire. Twelve years later the girl decides to escape from her life of crime—her abductors force her to steal for them. She secures employment in an apartment house. Her persecutors search for the girl and finally find her. They frighten her into consenting to rob one of the apartments. While attempting to steal something in one of the rooms she is surprised by the entrance of the man who lives there. He turns out to be a friend of Harrison's and by a scar on her wrist he recognizes her as the millionaire's daughter. She is restored to her father. In the final scene Clay obtains Harrison's permission to marry Bab. For a longer review see another page this issue.

A Sultana of the Desert—(Two Reels)—Selig—October 20.—Kathlyn Williams is featured in a story written by himself which gives her opportunity for emotional acting, together with a chance to appear with the beasts of the Selig jingle zoo. Thomas Santschi has the leading role opposite her. For a more complete review of this picture see another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Mutual Program

The House with Nobody in It -(Three Reels.)—Featuring Ivy Troutman. Donald Bryce, a young artist, is engaged to Muriel Allen, and Leonard Brandon, when Muriel refuses to marry him, tells her that her mother was a victim of hereditary insanity. The girl breaks off her engagement with Bryce and gradually falls the victim to the morphine habit. She goes to the city and, warned by a vision of the terrible consequences of the drug taking, she cures herself of the habit. Meanwhile, Brandon has been exploring the old Allen home. Mysterious noises and unaccountable lights in the windows have led the neighbors to believe that the house is haunted. Brandon is making a search when Muriel returns unexpectedly, and Bryce, who has taken refuge on the porch from the rain, hears the noise of a struggle and breaks into the house. Brandon is later killed by a bolt of lightning, which loosens the bricks in the fireplace, which reveals a treasure box containing money and documents that Muriel was only the adopted daughter of the Allens. The fear of insanity removed, Muriel consents to marry Bryce.

Bessie's Bachelor Boobs—Falstaff—September 16.—The time draws arduously upon four bachelors who are staying at a bug-infested summer house, the only women guests of which are antiques. Under different circumstances, they all meet a beautiful girl on an adjoining farm, and as her father hangs out a "help wanted" sign, all four apply and readily agree to work for their board. She explains to each, after much urging, that the cruel man who holds the mortgage on the house is going to foreclose. Each of the infatuated ones gives her money. At night, when the men return to the house weary after the day's exertion,

Watch For It

WE have in course of preparation the most amazing announcement ever made to the motion picture industry.

We ask you to watch for it.

We believe it will be the most startling declaration that has ever appeared in the pages of this book.

The CHAPIN LINCOLN PHOTO-CYCLE

Charter Features Corporation

110 West 40th Street
New York City

they find the place closed. Here is the note they find: "Dear Farm Hands—Pop and I have left the farm to go back on the road. We star in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and, thanks to your generosity, this year we can play the big time. Bessie Blinn." They all look at each other and then faint.

Con, the Car Conductor—(Falstaff—September 23.—Con, the most popular man working for the Hicksville Traction company, is fired because he has refused to charge the carfare of the foppish son of one of the stockholders. But his ousting turns out to be only for the ostentatious assuage-ment of the griefs of the father and his monocled son. Con soon returns to his position in disguise, and gets the stockholder's son into trouble with an old maid. But he just as quickly gets him out of the difficulty, and the son, realizing that the conductor has saved his good name, insists that a reward from the street car company be bestowed upon his benefactor. This is how Con gets his long-anticipated raise.

Love, Mumps and Bumps—(Beauty—September 25.—Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell featured. To avoid Percy's persistence, Emma hastens off to the cabin of an old friend in the mountains, but is followed by the young man. He develops symptoms of a mysterious nature and two mountaineers who see him trying to get into the cabin and see the condition of his face, immediately quarantine the entire household. Frank Travers hastens to their assistance and he is also obliged to remain in quarantine. In the absence of the town physician, the veterinary is called in and diagnoses Percy's trouble as "lumpy jaw." The days go by and an attraction springs up between Frank and Edna. The town physician returns and pronounces the malady only mumps and measles. The quarantine is removed, but Frank and Edna decide to make the cottage their summer home.

A Disciple of Neitzsche—(Three Reels)—September 25.—With Florence La Badie as the factory girl. The professor is a believer in the doctrines of Neitzsche, the German philosopher, who thinks that only the strong and capable are worth while and that it is a vain task to try to lift up the weak. The daughter is interested in settlement work, but her father will have nothing to do with it. The rich girl befriends a factory girl who is having a hard struggle, and the latter resolves to live straight for the sake of the girl who believes in her. A gangster, through a made-to-order bit of heroism, wins the confidence of the scholar's daughter and finally she consents to marry him, in spite of his past record and her father's objections. Here the factory girl whom the professor had spurned intercedes and saves his daughter from the wily gangster by contriving to have her hear from his own lips that he is already married, and all he wants is some money. The working girl's sweetheart bursts in, finds her with the gangster, fights with him, and then denounces the girl. But the professor and his daughter, who have been listening in the next room, explain matters and the lover asks forgiveness. Realizing how much he owes the poor girl, the scholar renounces the doctrines of Neitzsche.

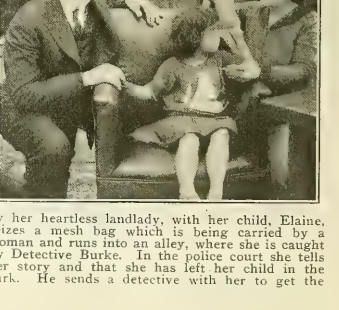
The Miracle—(Thanhouser—September 26. – Every day old Annie, a cripple, misunderstood by her shyness and reclusive habits, goes to the little roadside shrine, where she steadfastly prays that she may be healed of her condition. In reality she is big-hearted and loving, but the children are taught to be afraid of her, calling her "the old witch." One day while at the shrine, Annie sees that her one true friend, a little girl, has caught her foot in the frog of a railroad track. In desperation, she prays for strength to save her little friend. The miracle happens, and the poor woman just has time to run over to the place and snatch the child out before a train comes rushing on. Later, Annie is taken into the home of the child's mother, and the woman's cup of happiness is full when the children of the village gather around her and ask her to be their grandma.

The Terror of Twin Mountain—(Two Reels)—American—September 27.—John leaves his wife, Frances, and goes into the mountains to search for gold. In a cave in the mountains dwells Ivan, "The Terror of Twin Mountain," who has a reward of $5,000 on his head. Ivan had loved Frances some years ago and after John had won her he had left the town. The stage coach on which Frances comes to join her husband is held up by Ivan and he takes the girl by force to his cave, where they are found by John. Ivan is killed, and Frances and John are reunited. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

J. C. G.

Gustave Gebhardt's Gutter Band—(Falstaff—September 27.—Gustave Gebhardt, the leader of a little three-piece gutter band, is in love with Apple Annie, who owns a prosperous fruit business. Gustave has a rival in the person of the bass horn player, and jealousy leads the two into a fierce aquatic battle, in which the bass horn player is worsted. He is discharged. Next morning the leader is treated to a surprise. The horn player is a Norwegian, the cornetist a Swede, while the man who handles the trombone comes from Denmark. They unite in conspiracy, inform Gustave "We are neutral," and refuse to play longer with "a belligerent." "Apple Annie" remembers that it is impossible to play upon a wind instrument while watching another person suck a lemon. Wherever the "neutral" band goes it meets children sucking on lemons, and pantomime music is all they can play. In the end, the dissension is adjusted and the rebels humbly return to their leader.



The Protest—(Three Reels)—Horsley—September 29.—Featuring Crane Wilbur. Molly Fischer is a typical East Side slum woman who has a desire to improve herself. Because of this she is made the butt of all persecutions and jeers of the neighborhood until Skinny Walsh appears and pretends to defend her. He asks the girl to live with him, promising that it will be unnecessary for her to continue her struggle, but she leaves home, taking Maggie, her crippled sister, with her. She obtains a position as stenographer and here Skinny continues his persecutions until she loses her position. The next day she goes into a department store to beg for a position and here steals a pocketbook. It is the purse of Blanche Armstrong, the fiancee of Roger, son of the owner of the store. Molly is seen taking the purse and the owner of the store makes a proposition to her to exchange herself for her freedom, and she accepts his proposition. Skinny, recognizing the man, follows them to a cafe and there telephones Hackett's wife. Roger learns of this and goes to the cafe, and is seen by Skinny, who tells Jerry Flinn, a political boss, that the district attorney is in a cafe with a woman. He is telling his mother that he is the one who brought Molly to the cafe, when he looks up and sees Walsh and two newspaper reporters at the door with a flashlight camera. A few days later Molly calls on Blanche and tells her the truth of the evening's drama and then tells Roger to brace up. That night Mollie works out a plan to secure documents which Roger wants, and the next day calls on Flinn, who, thinking he could work on her, asks her to go to his bachelor apartments. In the meantime Roger goes to Molly's home and there her crippled sister tells him of her sister's connection with Flinn. Inside the apartments, Molly finds she cannot surrender herself to any man, and she grabs the documents and tries to escape. Just at this moment Roger bursts into the room. Later Roger wins his case, Flinn is sent up, and Blanche makes an effort to regain Roger, only to be put aside in favor of Molly, who is taken in by Mrs. Hackett.

Stanley's Search for the Hidden City—(Two Reels)—Centaur—September 30.—Captain John Bonavita and the Bostock animals featured. Dr. Archibald Mannering, with his little daughter, is wrecked in the West African coast and taken to the Hidden City. Years later Nina is now the white mascot of the tribe and to the island comes H. M. Stanley and two young reporters, Jack Wilson and Tom Dixon. Tom falls in love with Nina and the queen of the city is jealous of the girl because the king makes love to her. She arranges for the boys to get away in a canoe and the queen is killed in the mix-up. The rest escape and reach the coast, where they are picked up by an English liner, and Stanley occupies the Hidden City after a stirring fight.

Hearts in Shadow—American—October 1.—Featuring Vivian Rich and Jack Richardson. Nan Baird, after being cast out upon the streets by her heartless landlady, with her child, Elaine, seizes a mesh bag which is being carried by a woman and runs into an alley, where she is caught by Detective Burke. In the police court she tells her story and that she has left her child in the park. He sends a detective with her to get the child to confirm her story, but the child, in the meantime, has wandered away. Burke laughs at the woman, telling her it was a good story, and she is taken back to prison and there put in a cell. When Burke returns home that night he is greeted by his wife and a little girl, whom his wife found in the park. He is convinced that the child is Nan's, and the three hasten to the police court, and Nan is discharged and given money and employment.

An Oriental Spasm—(Cub—October 1.—George Ovey featured. Jerry, seeing a peddler carrying a tray of phony jewelry, takes one of the jewels which appeals to him, not knowing that its possession forebodes trouble. Suddenly two Hindoos appear before him and tell him that the jewel he has had been stolen from an idol in their temple.

He is taken to India with them and he is taken before the Royal Kazabo. He tries to escape from the room, but rushes into another occupied by the members of the Kazabo's harem and his favorite wife. To the latter Jerry is at once attracted. He spends too much time with her, however, and the Kazabo starts on Jerry's trail and captures him. He escapes, however, and in a rowboat starts back for the good old U. S. A.

The Fool's Heart—(Two Reels)—Eclair—October 1.—Keough, a gambler, is driven to borrow $5,000 from his partner, Van Atta, and signs an I. O. U. for the money. The next day he learns of more reverses and kills Gibson, a rich ranch owner, who is traveling along the road with his latest "haul." During this time Keough is supposed to have been occupying his partner's house while the latter was on a trip. Van Atta returns earlier than expected and finds Tait, a thief, plundering his house. In the struggle that takes place Van Atta is killed. Later the murder takes the I. O. U. from Van Atta's pocket and deposits it in that of his partner. When Tait is about to leave the house, Keough sends him to Gibson's house, thus hoping to avert suspicion from himself. Later the sheriff arrives and asks Keough if there has been anyone else in the house. He says not, but the officers decide to investigate. When Keough looks down upon the upturned face of his partner, the shock and his own sense of guilt overcomes him and he falls dead over the body.

Mixed Males—(Beauty—October 2.—Frank Borsage, John Sheehan, Beatrice Van and Nelle Belle Widen. Si Jenkins and Hezekiah are in love, Si with the daughter and Hezekiah with the daughter's widowed mother. Each pair plans to elope without the knowledge of the other. Owing to the dark night, Si steals the widow and Hezekiah the daughter. After the wedding has been performed the secret comes out, much to the chagrin, then ultimate pleasure of all concerned.

Man Afraid of His Wardrobe—(Three Reels)—Mustang—October 2.—A. Lester Hale, a motion picture actor under contract, arrives in the west and there makes a failure in picture acting. At last the producer schemes to force the actor to break his contract and with the aid of Buck Parvin, an extra man, succeeds. Parvin also succeeds in securing the beaver hat which A. Lester Hale wore. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Universal Program

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 185—Universal—September 22.—The Marowijine with eighty-eight passengers is lost in a hurricane in the Gulf of Mexico; safety device safeguard shown at Portsmouth, Ohio; Mayor Rolfe leads parade on sixty-fifth anniversary of California's admission to the union, San Francisco, Calif.; society girls dance for charity at Long Beach, N. J.; owner fondles 467-pound python with 260 teeth; Coney Island, N. Y., closed with Mardi Gras; Eskimo born at Chicago World's Fair at Ocean Park, Calif.; Newport, Ark., under water from recent river rising; motordrome opened at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.; allies come to New York to meet American bankers and arrange for gigantic loan; King Christian of Denmark reviews Second Dragoon Regiment; Count Von Bernstorff on a visit to Secretary of State Lansing, Washington, D. C.; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

Her Prey—(Two Reels)—Gold Seal—September 28.—George and Tom are partners and pearl divers. George leaves for a lucrative position in the city and falls prey to Leonora Carewe, an adventuress. Tom finds a black pearl valued at $10,000. Leonora influences George to visit his former partner and endeavor to gain possession of the pearl. Leonora accompanies him, but falling in love with Tom, she quits the game and tries to win him. In revenge George tries to throw her over a cliff, but Leonora has armed herself, and in the struggle, kills him. The evidence points to Tom as the murderer, but Leonora, deeply in love, saves him by confession. She is released, however, when she pleads that she killed George in self-defense. Seeing her love for Tom is hopeless, she sadly leaves, and as the story ends, Tom and his sister embrace, glad to be rid of the adventuress.

Snatched from the Altar—Nestor—September 27.—The day before Eddie's wedding, the boys give him a party. The decanter is tipped a little too often, and as Eddie is the guest of honor, he is the first to succumb to the libations. There is an old maid in Eddie's boarding house, whose romantic propensities have been aroused by the festive matrimonial air. Eddie's pal gets a great idea for a joke. Calling to their aid a movie actor near by, they dress him up as a minister, and, getting Eddie into the old maid's room, insist that, as he is found in her room, he must marry her. In his soused condition, Eddie says "he should worry," and the fake marriage is pulled off. When Eddie awakens sober the next morning, and learns of his dilemma he is in misery. His absence causes anxiety, and some of the boys look him up and drag Eddie and the old maid to the church. After much anguish on the part of Eddie and his sweetheart, they are let on to the fake marriage, and all ends well.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE
CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Uncle Sam at Work

BRAND NEW CHAPLINS

His Trysting Place
Musical Career
Rounders
Fatal Mallet
Mabel's Married Life
His New Profession
Those Love Pangs
The Face Upon the Barroom Floor
and 25 others coming.

Peerless Film Exchange

CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY

The Finest Film Laboratories in the World

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING

American Film Laboratories

"The Tiffany of the Film Trade"

69-71 West 90th St., New York City

We are successful because we produce the best quality possible

LOUIS B. JENNINGS, Pres. and Gen'l Mgr. EDWIN S. PORTER, Vice-Pres.

Billy's College Job—Imp—September 28.—Edith's father has no use for Billy, a mere "actor fellow," and to avoid his attentions, Edith is packed off to a seminary. She arrives just as the principal is leaving on a vacation. As the principal's substitute is to be Lydia, Billy's sister, Billy manages to get the job of principal himself. Lord Helpus is father's choice for Edith. All is well at the seminary until Lord Helpus arrives in New York, where dad announces he is going to introduce his Lordship to Edith. Edith and Billy are married in secret and Lydia gets the job in the nick of time. Father's storm of abuse when he sees Billy is suddenly checked when a wedding ring is thrust under his nose—and all they say when they see the battered and bewildered aristocrat, is, "Lord Help Us."

All Around Mistake—(Two Reels)—Imp—September 29.—King Baggot as John Goody. Mrs. Goody is called from the city by the illness of her mother. John promises her he will remain in nights, but the temptation is too great, and he visits the cabaret with one of his bachelor friends. They both leave the place, stewed, and have a fight with an Italian peanut man on the way home. As her mother has speedily recovered, Mrs. Goody returns the next morning. John reads in the paper of a terrible crime, and seeing the marks of his combat with the Italian, he believes he is the murderer. The wife, seeing the strange man in the bedroom, calls in the cop, who arrests the whole lot of them. John has given his wife a note confessing his guilt. During the hearing at the station, the note is found by the sergeant, who immediately gives John the third degree. John confesses to everything he thinks he has done and shows the sergeant the newspaper. The paper happens to be a year old. Everybody has a good laugh and husband and wife are reconciled.

Married on Credit—L-Ko—September 29.—As the minister wants cash down for performing the ceremony, Billie leaves the bride waiting and goes in search of some mazuma. During his absence, a poor but nervy individual steps in and tries to grab the bride. But he hasn't the fee either, and is forced to go out just as the bride's father is coming in. As Billie is returning with the purse, he is deprived of same by the outgoing individual. Billie retrieves the purse, but when he gets back to try again, father is there, and further matrimonial procedure is out of the question. After several anomalous developments in which father, Billie, the fresh individual, and some cops figure, the day's worries come to a close.

The Sheriff of Red Oak Gulch—(Two Reels)—Big U—September 30.—Bill Borden and "Two-Gun" Smith love the same girl, but she finally marries Smith. Smith is caught cheating in a poker game, and, to escape his pursuers, he deserts his wife and child. His wife dies, and Bill Borden raises the baby. Twenty years elapse, and Jack and his supposed father discover a rich gold claim. There is a gold rush, and among those who come is "Two-Gun" Smith, under the alias of "Chalky." Bill does not recognize "Chalky" on account of his changed appearance. Jack is in love with an Eastern girl, and they plan to marry when he sells his mine. In a card game with "Chalky," Jack loses everything, even his claims. Bill Borden tries to force the gambler to give up Jack's claims and a fight follows. "Chalky" is mortally wounded, and at last, being recognized by Borden, he tells him that Jack is his son. "Chalky" restores the claim and then dies. Borden resolves that the secret of Jack's father shall never be revealed.

The Ore Mystery—Powers—September 30.—(Lady Baffles and Detective Duck Series.)—Some valuable ore is left in charge of Nellie, the pretty dispatcher of the B. V. & D. R. R. company. Lady Baffles and her allies are after the ore, but Nellie puts the authorities wise. The sheriff is not successful in catching the culprits. Neither is Duck, for that matter, but the latter manages to defeat the purposes of the thieves, who, far out on the seas, open the box, not to find the precious ore, but a pair of oars, with a sarcastic note from Duck. Through one of his marvelous disguises, Duck has managed to get the ore into his own hands, and the skeptical sheriff is forced to acknowledge the greatness of Duck.

The Ghost Wagon—(Three Reels)—Bison—October 2.—When Bara and her father were crossing the country in a "prairie schooner" they had been attacked by a band of Yaquis, and everyone in the party had been killed with the exception of the baby, Bara, and old Fleming. Years later, there is a superstition about the "Ghost Wagon," whose appearing is supposed to be the sign of death. Bara, now a full grown girl, lives with Old Fleming. Two worthless characters, Tom and Jeff, are angling for the old man's silver mine, and in a quarrel, Old Fleming is killed. Tom and Jeff, in league with Pete, an enemy of Bara's, make a proposition to a mining investment company, and the president's son, David, returns with them on an inspection trip. When Bara learns of David's mission, she repulses him without giving him a chance to explain. Pete incites the drunken Yaquis to raid the settlement, and Dave, realizing the danger, saves Bara in spite of her protests. When Pete raises his gun to kill Bara and David, whom he has cornered, the "Ghost Wagon" comes flying by and Pete is killed by the spirit of Old Fleming. The posse captures and kills the Yaquis, and Dave and Bara, in each other's arms, turn and see the "Ghost Wagon" speeding across the mountain trail.

An Innocent Villain—Joker—October 2.—Jinks, although quite innocent, is taken for the gentleman partner of a crook and hustled off to the coop. He phones his wife and tells her he is to be on a thirty-day business trip. Wifey, lonesome, rents the house to a band of college girls and visits her mother. When the real crook is arrested and thrown into the same cell with Jinks, the latter chokes a confession out of him, and is set free. When Jinks arrives at his home he finds himself in the midst of a "pajama" party. Meanwhile, wifey's mother has decided to visit the young couple, and, arriving, finds Jinks in the above circumstances. Wifey arrives a little later, however, and the matter being straightened out, the girls invite the others to be their guests at a "reconciliation party."

Her Three Mothers—(Three Reels)—Laemmle—October 3. Carolyn's mother passes away, and her father marries again within a year. There is immediate friction between Carolyn and her mother-in-law, who puts the burdens of the household upon the girl's shoulders, and so hoodwinks Dexter, that he thinks she is right. Inwardly raging, Carolyn does her work in silence. But things grow worse as the girl is not even allowed to partake of the most innocent pleasures in life. However, Carolyn has made a friend of Amy Lee, and finally, in desperation, she breaks away and goes to the Lee's city home, where she is cordially received. She is introduced to a Miss Crompton, a neighbor of the Lees. The long denied heart of the spinster opens to her, and she offers the girl a home, which is eagerly accepted. In the years that pass, the two have become very dear to each other. Another joy has come into her life, in the shape of a young man who is paying Carolyn lover's attentions. Money is left to Carolyn, and her father and step-mother try to get her to return, but she is profoundly happy with her "third mother" and realizes she cannot live again with her mother-in-law. The picture fades as Carolyn and Miss Crompton embrace.

A Mortgage on His Daughter—L-Ko—October 3.—Hank holds a mortgage against father for ten glasses of beer, which Hank says he will cancel provided father gives him his daughter in marriage. Father agrees, but has forgotten another mortgage of twelve glasses which another gentleman has on him, and when Hank comes to claim his bride the other gentleman is marrying her. There is such a commotion at the wedding that no one gets married. As the bride feels very indifferent towards Hank, he resolves to kill himself, but through a mistake father drinks more of the poison than Hank. Both Hank and father then try to absorb all the milk on a milk wagon as an emetic. The milkman objects, nurses and doctors think their victims are going to get away, and some cops try to stop everyone else. Anyway, there is no wedding, and the two prospective grooms lose their mortgages.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Song of Hate—(Five Reels)—Fox.—Betty Nansen featured, and a strong cast. Scarpia, an influential Italian official, is in love with Flora Tosco, a singer, who loves Saranoff. Scarpia orders his soldiers to torture Saranoff, hoping to force him to confess the hiding place of a spy. Tosca, driven mad by the cries of her lover, reveals the hiding place of the spy and Saranoff is ordered to be shot. Tosca pleads with Scarpia and finally he agrees to spare his life, and orders his soldiers to put blank cartridges in their rifles and gives Tosca passports out of the country. Tosca stabs Scarpia and later finds that Saranoff has been killed. It is later found that one of the soldiers was to blame for Saranoff's death.

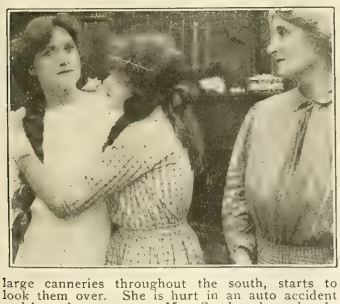
Metro

The Bigger Man—(Five Reels)—Rolfe.—Featuring Henry Kolker and Renee Kelly. John Stoddard is hired by Courtlandt Van Nest to supervise the construction of a gigantic iron bridge. He falls in love with Janet, who is engaged to Kenneth Stuyvesant, a captain in the militia. Van Nest, when he learns that the men are threatening to strike, tells Stoddard that he will agree to an increase in wages if he will have nothing to do with his daughter, and Stoddard consents. Later, Janet Van Nest leaves home and her father goes to Stoddard's house, where he meets Edith, Stoddard's sister, and through her influence he experiences a change of heart and becomes reconciled to the idea of Janet marrying John Stoddard. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

North American

The Diamond From the Sky—(CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE)—"THE DOUBLE CROSS"—AMERICAN.—"The Diamond From the Sky" is found by the sheriff and sold at auction to pay the debts of the Santley circus. The last we see of it a mass of humanity blots the auctioneer from view as he knocks the gem down to the winning bidder. Luke Lovell, after being jailed, sends word for Esther to come and see him. When she arrives he begs her forgiveness and swears a return to his old-time gypsy allegiance. Marmaduke Smythe calls at the Powell mansion and, flushed and excited with wine, Arthur stands up and declares himself to be the heir to the Stanley earldom, and also declares that he will buy the diamond at the auction. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The House of a Thousand Scandals—(FOUR REELS)—AMERICAN.—A decidedly out-of-the-ordinary Mutual Master-Picture based on the experiment of Greta Carr, an exponent of Greek culture, and John Wright, a millionaire, who offers Miss Carr his summer home as a place in which she can demonstrate her community idea of living. A love story between John and Martha Hobbs, a poor girl who runs away from home and later becomes a member of the Greek colony, adds interest to the picture, while Grecian dances and poses of superb beauty make the picture one never to be forgotten. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.



Paramount

The Case of Becky—(FIVE REELS)—LASKY.—Featuring Blanche Sweet and Carlyle Blackwell. One of the subjects of Balzamo is a young girl, Dorothy, who is a great favorite with audiences at his exhibitions. He tells the woman who had been his regular performer that he doesn't want her any more and this woman hints to Dorothy what this means, and the girl has a fit of temper in which she reveals her other, lower self. As that other self, Becky, she flounces out of the theater and later takes a job as waitress. She loses this and then she is given the position of a companion to Miss Emerson, sister of a prominent specialist in nervous troubles. One day she reveals her Becky nature, and Dr. Emerson and his assistant, Dr. Arnold, decide to study her as a case of dual personality and, if possible, cure her. Dr. Arnold cures the girl by his hypnotic power, for he has fallen in love with her, and when later Balzamo comes after her there is a conflict of wills and the young specialist wins. Balzamo then confesses that Becky is Dr. Emerson's daughter and the two young lovers are left together with the blessing of her father.

Out of Darkness—(FIVE REELS)—LASKY.—Featuring Charlotte Walker. Helen Scott, owner of large canneries throughout the south, starts to look them over. She is hurt in an auto accident and loses her memory. Mrs. Sands, whose daughter works in the canneries, befriends the girl and later Helen gets a position in the cannery, and learns that the workers threaten to strike unless they get larger wages. When the strike is ordered Helen and Jeanne are the only two who remain faithful to the manager, and in the meantime the strikers, trying to rob the company, set fire to the building, and Helen and Brooks, the manager, are injured, and on recovering Helen's memory is restored and she remembers that she is Helen Scott, and when Brooks asks her to marry him, declares her identity, and they agree to work together in improving conditions of the canneries.

Peer Gynt—(FIVE REELS)—MOROSCO.—A fanciful and adventuresome story having to do with the wanderings of a pleasure-loving youth who is banished from his native village. In his lifelong absence from the land of his birth he meets five different specimens of feminine beauty, with all of whom he is disappointed. Having had triumphs in most everything but love, he finally returns, an old man, to his native hamlet to die. Here he is lovingly welcomed by Solveig, his first and last sweetheart, who has prayed for his return throughout the years. Through her constant love Peer is rescued from being cast back into the melting pot to be remoulded, and happiness crowns the outcome. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News, No. 74—PATHE—SEPTEMBER 14.—The opening of public schools in New York City; the Sant' Anna, which caught fire from some unknown reason, leaves New York with 17,000 Italian reservists on board; envoys from the allies arrive to negotiate a loan of $500,000,000; many prominent society people patronize military tournament held at Piping Rock, L. I.; hydroplanes compete for Wrigley trophy at Chicago, Ill.; Pathe's Paris fashions; Mrs. Vanderbeck defeats English player, Mrs. Gavin, for national championship title, Lake Forest, Ill.; scienists the world over visit the LaBrea tar beds at Los Angeles, Calif.

Pathe News, No. 75—PATHE—SEPTEMBER 18.—Count Van Bernstorff arrives at the State Department to interview Secretary of State Lansing on the Arabic note; 32,000 bales of hay catch fire in Pleasanton, Calif.; prominent stage favorites urge the young men of England to avenge the fate of the victims of the Zeppelin raid in London, England; venison barbecue held at Riddie, Ore.; pageant held in memory of John More, who settled in the Catskills in 1772 at Roxbury, N. Y.; incredible speed attained in 300-mile race at Chicago Speedway; cartoons; burial of the men of the submarine E-13, who were killed by a German destroyer in Danish waters; annual maneuvers of the cavalry held at San Francisco, Calif.

Simon, the Jester—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE GOLD ROOSTER PLAY.—Adapted from the book by William J. Locke and produced by Edward Jose. Edward Arden is featured and the cast includes Irene Warfield, Alma Tell and Crawford Kent. Simon de Geck is told by his physician that he has but nine months to live, and he continually puts off his marriage to Eleanor in fairness to her. Endeavoring to stop his secretary's attentions to an actress, Simon takes her to Paris. There he is operated upon by a young surgeon and is cured. He decides to marry Lola, who has remained by his side all during his recovery from the operation. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Considerable Milk — PATHE-STARLIGHT.—Heinie and Louie agree to marry two sisters—one homely and one pretty. Both are to wear veils so they will not know their fate until after they have been pronounced man and wife. Louie proves to be the lucky one. The reward for their valor is an established business—a dairy store. Louie falls for the charms of the girl who takes care of the milk store. His wife sees him kiss the girl. In retaliation she invites Heinie to her house. There Louie and Heinie's wife find him. Heinie's wife upbraids him, and in his agitation he drinks poison by mistake. The doctor tells him that the cure is milk. Taking no chances, Heinie literally bathes in the fluid.

Hot Stuff — PATHE — STARLIGHT — Heinie and Louie favor the fair young lady by having a bill changed at the hotel desk. She repays them by giving them another bill. This they take to the bank, where it is discovered to be counterfeit.

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Let Us Send You Our New Proposition on the

Bartola Orchestra

Add Dignity to Your Theatre Improve Your Music. Write to

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
Bartola Musical Instrument Co.
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

They just escape arrest. For revenge, they follow the lady to the counterfeiters' den. There they receive rather rough treatment, but they are good runners and get away with their lives.

Pawns of the War God — (Three Reels) — Pathe-Balboa.—Girard, a chemist, is sent to a secluded island to perfect an explosive. He is followed there by a spy, who wins the confidence of the inventor's daughter. Girard gives the formula to Gladys and the spy attempts to take it from her, but is unsuccessful. He finds a bullet which is charged with the new explosive and hurriedly places it in his mouth. The chemist tries to take it away from him and in the struggle the cartridge explodes, killing both. Gladys destroys the formula.

Intimate Study of Birds—(Split Reel)—Pathe. —The owl family are the subject of this installment, which pictures bird life entertainingly and instructively. On the same reel with:

The Police Dog to the Rescue—Pathe.—Animated cartoon.

Exploring Ephrim's Exploit—Pathe—An animated cartoon from the Bray studios.

Universal Special

The Broken Coin—(Fifteenth Episode)—Universal Special—Week of September 27.—Count Frederick and Kitty, together with King Michael and his frightened guests, take refuge in the dungeon of the palace. Count Sachio and his men have been charging on the outside. A detachment of men are about to break into the dungeon when Frederick discovers an old water wheel, and turning it on, he and Kitty contemplate the speedy death of their enemies as the water begins to rise. This forces the king to propose a treaty of peace to Frederick, which is finally accepted, and the water is shut off. As Sachio is about the leave the dungeon he finds a charred piece of script which pertains to the former abduction of a king. He keeps this, but drops the script and Kitty finds it. Kitty hides, but is soon discovered, and at the end of the episode Sachio and his little band of soldiers are capturing Kitty Grey, their worst enemy, who has the document on her person.

Judge Not; or, The Woman of Mone Diggings—(Six Reels)—Universal—September 27.—The story of Molly Hamlin, who is tricked into a false marriage by Lee Kirk, a gambler. She later meets Miles Rand, son of Judge Rand, who comes to the western town and who dissipates terribly. She finally urges him to return east and make a man of himself. Some time later the girl, thinking that Kirk has been burned to death in a fire, goes east and there again meets Miles Rand. However, Kirk has not been killed and he follows her to the east and annoys her continually. Finally, in desperation, she kills him, but in the end she is happy in the love of Miles Rand. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

Playing Dead—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew featured in this picturization of the novel by Richard Harding Davis. In order to free his wife, whose happiness is his happiness, and make it possible for her to marry the man she believes better suited to her, Jimmie Blagwin successfully plays dead. He lives under another name. Jeanne is bowed with grief and she is no longer interested by Proctor Maddox. To secure his will, which leaves everything to his wife and which he learns cannot be found, Jimmie enters his own house as a burglar. He is discovered there and reunited to his beloved Jeanne. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

NOW READY!

Mr. Tom Terriss

and his able supporting company in

THE PEARL OF THE ANTILLES

Powerfully Dramatic Scenically Superb

Five Big Reels

Picture Playhouse Film Co., Inc.

No. 71 West 23rd St., New York City
No. 5 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago

WIRE!—WRITE!

Associated Service

Released the Week of September 27.

The Woman He Married—(Two Reels)—Romona.—The farmer's daughter runs away from home and is abandoned by the man who takes her to the big city. Later she meets with a young rancher and marries him and she finds in her husband's partner the man who abandoned her. Back on the old farm a younger sister of the girl is subjected to a similar temptation, but is stopped when her father tells the girl of her sister's experience. The story ends with the restoring of her former humble lover to favor.

The Bent Gun—(Deer)—Dick, after being sent from home, goes West, and obtains employment on the I. X. L. ranch. He falls in with Black Pete, and while on a drunken spree he shoots his former employer, who spies Dick riding away and thinks he is the one who shot him. Black Pete is shot and captured, but Dick makes his escape. He is later taken to the ranch, but in the meantime Black Pete has confessed. Dick's father is notified and he takes his prodigal son back and all is forgiven.

A Brother's Redemption—(Two Reels)—Santa Barbara.—A little girl and her baby brother escape from their brutal, drunken father to the roof of a freight car. They arrive in the great city and the little mother takes up the burden of life for herself and brother. In the years that follow the boy begins to follow in his father's footsteps and the girl even becomes a thief to save him from the result of his folly. The boy's regeneration comes about and the girl marries the man of her choice.

The Waiter Who Waited—(Two Reels)—Federal.—Oscar Piffle, a waiter in a beanery, loses his job and goes into the park and there in the paper sees that the Swelldorf Hotel wants a first-class waiter. Here he saves Gertie, the village belle, from being robbed, and introduces himself as a pure food expert. Gertie invites him to call and he does. However, Porpus, a customer with whom he had a fight when he worked at the beanery, meets him there and tells Gertrude all about him. Later the whole hotel is in a riot by the shooting and finally Porpus is subdued. Gertie is thunderstruck and faints in the arms of Mr. Fish, a waiter.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Alabama.

The handsomest photoplay theater in the South, the Strand theater, Birmingham's newest amusement house, opened its doors to the public September 16. It has a seating capacity of nine hundred and is the last word in photoplay theater construction, representing an investment of nearly $50,000. T. S. Abernethy is manager.

Delaware

Raver Film Corporation, N. Y. Capital, $300,000. To manufacture, sell and deal in and with films, cameras, etc. Incorporators, H. H. Waller, O. S. Burr.

Vitascope Film Company. Trade and deal in cameras, photographic instruments, etc. Capital $500,000.

Idaho

Inland Investment Company, Pocatello; to conduct theater and picture show business; capital stock $40,000. Alec Murray, Art Amundson and E. J. Reinfeldt, incorporators.

Illinois

Mr. Taylor, manager of the Majestic Theater in La Salle, will shortly install a $4,000 pipe organ.

Alice Theater Company, Chicago; capital, $2,500; incorporators, E. S. Hartman, C. E. Morrill, Barre Blumenthal.

H. Milo Rea opened a moving picture show at Rieder's opera house, in Troy.

September 6, the Apollo Hall in Princeton was leased for five years by Charles J. Allardt of South Bend, Indiana. The Apollo was formerly owned by Tom Henderson. Harry Easton of South Bend will be resident manager.

A new ventilating system is being installed in the Star Theater in De Kalb.

I. N. Martin has assumed the management of the Colonial Theater in Galesberg.

The Majestic Theater in Rock Island has been reopened after extensive improvements.

Iowa

The Lost Nation opera house has been opened. The theater has been redecorated and remodeled and the patrons of Lost Nation now have a very pretty and cozy theater.

The Royal Theater in Charles City will be managed by D. C. McCellan of Minneapolis.

Kentucky.

The Olivette Theater company, Louisville, with a capital stock of $1,000, divided into shares of $25 each, filed incorporation articles. The company will operate a motion picture show. The debt limit is $5,000. The incorporators are: Moses Lang and David H. Stiebel, eighteen shares each and Louis Speevack, four shares.

Maine

The Portsmouth, N. H., Photo Play Company, Kittery, $100,000—Horace Mitchell, H. A. Paul, M. G. Mitchell, Kittery, Me. Producing and exhibiting motion pictures and photo plays.

Massachusetts

The Morning Star Film Company, Fall River, $100,000; J. Alfred Fredette, Joseph A. Rivet.

Kriterion Company of Boston, theaters, $1,000; Bernard M. Corbett, Thomas H. Mullen, Frederic G. Bauer.

It is stated that East Lynn will have a motion picture theater.

United Amusement Company, Boston; Ernest F. Pierce, Herbert W. Pattee, Oliver J. Mellett; $25,000.

Michigan

The Bijou Theater in Flint has been renamed the Garden. Many improvements have been made and it will be managed by Harold Weiss.

Marc Peck, manager of the Rowena Theater of Fenton, has purchased the Gem Theater at Holly from James B. Starken. Mr. Peck has taken possession of the theater and will remodel and redecorate it and make it an up-to-date place of amusement.

Manager George Smith of Lapeer has had his theater, the Majestic, redecorated and it now presents a very pleasing aspect.

Seating capacity for 1,100 persons is to be provided in the Majestic Theater, a photoplay house, which is being erected on Biddle avenue, opposite the city hall, in Wyandotte, for the Harris & Warren Amusement Company. The building, now under roof, is designed by Christian W. Brandt, architect, of Detroit, and is of brick, stone, steel and terra cotta construction. It will contain space for two stores, one on each side of the main entrance and lobby. Cost of the building is estimated at $60,000. It is to be ready for opening by November 1.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

EMILY STEVENS
WITH ROLFE-METRO

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 9, 1915 No. 15

LUBIN

PRESENTS

THE SCREEN'S MIGHTIEST MIRTHFUL COMEDIENNE

MARIE DRESSLER

IN A NEW "TILLIE" PHOTOPLAY

IN 6 ACTS

TILLIE'S TOMATO SURPRISE

WRITTEN BY ACTON DAVIES

PRODUCED BY HOWELL HANSEL

AIDED AND ABETTED BY

TOM McNAUGHTON, Co-Star In "The Spring Maid" and "Suzie"- COLIN CAMPBELL, The Scotch Comedian, SARAH McVICKAR, ELEANOR FAIRBANKS And JAMES The Famous Lubin Monkey

TWO HOURS OF HOWLS, YELLS, SCREAMS, GUFFAWS, LAUGHS, CHUCKLES AND ROARS

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 27 THROUGH THE V.L.S.E.

BIG FOUR FEATURE PLAY V L S E

Sigmund Lubin

What the Newspapers Say

We've already told you that Triangle Plays are a hugh triumph. That's our statement.

Now read what the critics in the greatest newspapers in New York say of them:

"Here Triangle Triumphed."—New York Herald.

"The best programme ever seen on the screen hereabouts." —New York Sun.

"Triangle Films real sensation. 'The Lamb' outdoes the 'Birth of a Nation' in its thrills." —New York Tribune.

"Superb photography and excellent music marked the premier at the Knickerbocker." —New York World.

"Elaborately arranged and splendidly mounted 'The Iron Strain' brought out the most generous applause." —New York Telegram.

"The three pictures illustrate the highest point yet attained in the art of motion pictures, taken and directed by three of the greatest men in the picture industry." —New York Sun.

"It is films like 'The Lamb' which will best enable motion picture producers to compete with drama at the same scale of prices." —New York Evening Post.

The same plays that appeared in New York may be seen in Chicago when the Studebaker Theatre opens on October 2nd, and in Philadelphia when the Chestnut Street Opera House opens on October 5th.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

Pauline Frederick in a scene from Famous Players' "Zaza."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 9, 1915 No. 15

Triangle Opens at Knickerbocker

BY CHARLES R. CONDON

THE opening of the Knickerbocker Theater on Thursday evening, September 23, as a motion picture house with a fifty-cent to two dollar scale of prices, meant more than the mere enlistment of another legitimate theater in the motion picture exhibiting ranks. It marked the first actually aggressive step of the Triangle Film Corporation.

Since its formation Triangle has been actively engaged in producing pictures and selling stock. The former consisted chiefly in continuing the activities of the Reliance, Majestic and New York Motion Picture Companies, and in securing famous stars to take part in them. The sale of the stock was accomplished without a great deal of trouble, the stock quickly attracting attention and bids, and rising above par shortly after being placed on the market.

But with the opening of the Knickerbocker the third and most important part of its operations—the box-office test—began. In this field, aggressiveness and good pictures alone spell success. It was an overcritical gathering that viewed Triangle's first three offerings opening night, and to say that the pictures got laughs where the directors had planned them and held the undivided interest of all in the dramatic parts is commending them highly.

These things they did, and, in the doing, convinced many of the skeptical that regular legitimate theater prices, or two-dollar shows as they are commonly called, are not the impossible condition predicted. Just how they will stand the keen competition of other amusements or how long they will last, time alone can tell. Triangle, however, is not built entirely upon the two-dollar-theater plan. Hundreds of exhibitors throughout the country can afford to pay the proposed rental of these pictures. The prestige and advertising value of their first having been exhibited in the country's best houses is unlimited.

Leaders of the artistic and literary worlds vied with old showmen and men of finance in praising the pictures at the opening. Among those noticed in the loges were Otto H. Kahn, Metropolitan Opera House director and member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company; President Walter Frew of the Corn Exchange Bank; President W. B. Joyce of the National Surety Company; former Secretary of the Treasury Frank A. Vanderlip; Charles Hayden of Hayden, Stone & Company; A. B. Leech of A. B. Leech & Co.; Conte Gianni Bettini, Marquis Serra, Ignace Paderewski, Daniel Frohman, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, George Barr McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock, George Beban, Howard Chandler Christy, James Montgomery Flagg, Pennhyrn Stanlaws, Irvin S. Cobb, Rupert Hughes, Harry E. and Roy Aitken, Ad. and Charles Kessel, Mr. and Mrs. William Collier, John Emerson, Edward Abeles, and many others.

The huge applause and contagious enthusiasm occasioned by the Griffith picture, "The Lamb," leaves no doubt as to which of the three topped the triangle of popularity. It was about an even break between the other two subjects, "The Iron Strain," from the Ince studio, and "My Valet," produced by Mack Sennett.

Preceded by western drama and flanked by farce comedy, "The Lamb," proved a happy and fitting medium. Its general strain is light comedy with both the effete East and adventurous West for its background, but towards the end of the picture, drama, as impressive and thrilling as the early scenes are ludicrous, is introduced, giving the play a strong ending. W. Christy Cabanne directed the production under D. W. Griffith's supervision. It has many of the subtle touches of comedy and pathos which have come to be recognized as the finger-marks of Griffith.

It is true that "The Lamb" contains very little of a sympathetic nature; still, at times, situations unite to arouse in one a feeling of pity for Douglas Fairbanks' character, "The Lamb," a young man who was robbed of the benefits of sturdy boyhood and self-reliant youth by wealth and who, at the age at which most young men enter seriously the task of life, is foppish, irresponsible, uninteresting and physically, a weakling, for all of which his indulgent and worshipping mother is to be thanked.

Had "The Lamb" not inherited certain manly traits from his ancestors and been courted by romance and adventure, he would have remained the drawing room plutocrat and correct nonentity that the story introduces on its opening. Douglas Fairbanks interprets the painful walk and frowning physical efforts of Gerald's type to perfection and without the complexion of acting. His likable personality and character-lined face satisfactorily explain Gerald's transformation when confronted with danger. Seena Owen lends grace and beauty to the role of Mary, "The Lamb's" fiancee, besides enacting the part very well. The others in the cast are: Lillian Langdon, Monroe Salisbury, Kate Toncray, Alfred Paget, William Lowery, and Eagle Eye.

The Thomas H. Ince production, "The Iron

Strain," is one of those exceptional western dramas for which Inceville has become famous. Ince is justly termed "the man who brought the West to the screen," for, under his supervision, the forever-gone days of the West and Northwest, with their wild romance, frontier towns, lawless mining camps and hard-riding cowboys are as vivid and fascinating upon the screen as they were in real life.

A scene from "The Iron Strain."

With Dustin Farnum for its star and Enid Markey for its leading lady, "The Iron Strain" tells an original story of a big, handsome son of sedate Boston who, while roughing it in the Northwest, meets a social butterfly seeking recuperation, falls in love with her, and is rewarded with the title "Barbarian" and the treatment which goes with it. Aroused, he kidnaps the girl and wins her love after she has unwillingly become his wife.

Scenically, the production is an artistic triumph. Several times during its exhibition the picture's wonderful outdoor views excited audible admiration among the spectators. This, as well as the many striking situations in the drama, its graphic enactment and refreshing humor, and the air of finish which pervades it, reflects credit upon the ability and judgment which go with Ince's supervision. Besides Dustin Farnum and Enid Markey, the cast contains such talent as Charles K. French, Louise Glaum and Truly Shattuck.

Raymond Hitchcock prefaced the showing of "My Valet," in which he is featured, with one of his inimitable speeches. He spoke briefly of the practicability of $2 pictures, emphasizing the skill and reputation of the men producing them and the stability of the company releasing them, and concluding with a grinning hope that the people—and the management—would like his picture. On the screen Hitchcock is fully as funny as he is on the speaking stage. His droll expressions get over, and his work succeeds in keeping up with the high speed set by past Keystone productions.

Also prominent in "My Valet" are Mack Sennett, "the master mind of comedy," who also acted as director, and Mabel Normand. With this trio leading the cast, it is hardly necessary to say that the action is typically Keystone. The opening scene is one of the funniest in the picture. Hitchcock and Sennett, his valet, are seen seated in a stateroom in a train whose course lies along a snake-like trail through hills and mountains. Papers and dust fly through the open window, smacking the occupants in the face with the force of a torpedo. Sennett, seated beside the window, receives orders to mix an eggnog. So conscientiously does he carry out his orders that he forgets about the suction through the window and attempts to pour the drink with professional flourish, giving his unsuspecting employer a shower bath.

The plot is not diffused, as is generally the case, with slap-stick comedy, but is intelligible, consistent and highly amusing. Fred Mace plays an important part in the picture as an excitable French count who is resolved to defend his claim upon his sweetheart against all comers. The action throughout is snappy, devoid of objectionable horse-play, and filled with laughable plays upon ordinary incidents which only a Mack Sennett could make comical.

The Knickerbocker theater, renovated and repaired throughout, and in some places refurnished, presents a beautiful environment for pictures. The musical accompaniment, too, has received considerable attention. A symphony orchestra of forty musicians plays an especially arranged program which, it is understood, will be universally used by all who show Triangle pictures, the size of the orchestra depending, of course, upon the size and needs of the various houses. Courteous and prompt service by uniquely dressed girl ushers is one of the commendable features of the Knickerbocker. The interior decorations and effects were designed by the Cheltenham Advertising Agency.

A scene from "My Valet."

Complete synopses of "The Iron Strain," "The Lamb" and "My Valet" will be found on page 769.

CHAPLIN DUPER "PINCHED"

George Levi Arrested in New York City Charged with Manufacturing Bogus Prints of Chaplin Comedy Films

That a gang of moving picture pirates has made close to a half million dollars within the last few months by selling counterfeit duplicates of Charlie Chaplin films was revealed on September 28 by the arrest of Abraham George Levi, a moving picture broker of 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York City, who was arraigned before United States Commissioner Clarence S. Houghton, on a charge of violating the criminal section of the infringement law.

Levi, according to Assistant United States Attorney Harold A. Content, operated as the Chaplin Film company. In three months, it is said, he has sold outright at least $50,000 worth of the counterfeit films, chiefly in the west. His arrest is only the second of its kind in this district under the copyright law.

"The profits made by these persons, I am given to understand, are enormous," said Mr. Content. "That can be readily understood from the fact that it costs the pirates about 3½ cents a foot to duplicate the reels, whereas it costs the legitimate companies several thousand dollars a film because of the big salary and royalties paid to Chaplin."

Levi is specifically charged with infringing the copyright on "The Champion," a film owned by the Essanay Film Manufacturing company, with which Chaplin now has a contract which is said to bring him over $1,000 a week.

It also will be charged that the defendant infringed the copyrights on "His Musical Career," "His Prehistoric Past," "A Gentleman of Nerve," "Dough and Dynamite," "His Trysting Places," and "Getting Acquainted." These copyrights are all owned by the Keystone Film company.

The federal authorities charge that the method used by Levi to get hold of the original of the films was to call the Mutual Renting Company or any other film exchange that handled the Chaplin reels and ask that one of the latest films be sent to a certain moving picture theater on a one-day rental basis. As soon as the messenger disappeared, it is said, Levi would rush off with the film to a photographic printing establishment, where he would have what is known to the trade as a "dupe" negative made from the positive film.

Roselle Signs with Gaumont

William Roselle was born in New York City in 1877. He studied civil engineering and started in to make a name for himself in that profession. The engineering business, however, was full of ups and downs, principally downs, he thought, as he was engaged in surveying a line for a proposed railroad through a rocky, mountainous country, and experienced many painful tumbles. One day "Hairline Billy," as he had been nicknamed by the other boys in the camp because of his accuracy with the transit, was having some trouble with his rodman. A party of tourists happened along, and among them was a prominent actor. They stopped to see what the row was about, and watched the proceedings with great interest. Billy was waving his arms and his language was full of personality. The actor was visibly impressed. Finally he walked over to Billy and tapped him on the shoulder. "Young man, you should be an actor." That was not all, but it started Billy thinking, with the result that the following year found him playing a small part in Shakespearean repertoire with Ada Rehan and Otis Skinner. He stayed with them for two years and attributes a large part of his success to the valuable training received at the hands of these two masters of stagecraft. The last time Mr. Roselle appeared before a New York audience was in "She's in Again," which had a successful run at the Gaiety theater last spring. He has the distinction of having played in every performance of "Brown of Harvard," 845 in all. When Henry Woodruff left the cast, Mr. Roselle played the lead. Among other productions in which he has been featured are: "The Cost," "The Lottery Man," "The Fortune Hunter," "Brother Masons," "Our Wives," etc. For several seasons Mr. Roselle was leading man for Lulu Glaser and Sam Bernard. His first appearance under the Gaumont banner will be in the three-reel Rialto Star Feature release for October 20, "The Card Players."

May Allison of the American Company

May Allison is an almost ideal picture type, slim, graceful, well dressed and with blue eyes and fair hair. As the picture people put it, "She has a good screen presence." Miss Allison is appearing with Harold Lockwood at the American Studios and they make a charming couple, young and good looking and what is more, both are brilliant artists.

May Allison.

She was born on a Georgia plantation and is proud of her family tree. Her first big part on the stage was as Vanity in "Everywoman" under the banner of Henry W. Savage; she later played Beauty in the same production.

Possessed of a beautiful and well trained lyric soprano, Miss Allison entered the realms of musical comedy and for a long time alternated with Ina Claire in the title role of the "Quaker Girl." This was followed by leads with De Wolf Hopper in "Iole" and in "Miss Caprice." Her last performance before receiving an invitation to act in films was at the Maxime Elliott Theater in "Apartment 12 K," in which she was featured.

May Allison made her first acquaintance with the silent drama at the Famous Players studios in "David Harum" and she had, as now, Harold Lockwood opposite to her. Then followed a short engagement with the Lasky concern when she received a tempting offer from the American company which she accepted.

THIRD INCE CONTRIBUTION

Julia Dean, Famous Emotional Star, Will Be Featured in "Matrimony," a Powerful Drama of Domestic Dissension

For his third contribution to the new Triangle program of $2 picture plays, Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, has decided to present Julia Dean, the distinguished emotional star, in an absorbing and all-powerful drama of domestic dissension, entitled "Matrimony."

This vivid play is from the versatile pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, the gifted young author, who has turned out so many remarkable stories for Ince, and it is expected to set a new mark in the presentation of problems on the screen. It is essentially a drama of the home; a story of the pitiful weakness of a man, of the soul-battle fought by a woman and of the ultimate triumph of innate goodness, purity and happiness.

While it does not constitute Miss Dean's initial appearance on the screen, nevertheless it affords her, it is believed, greater and more acceptable openings for a display of her emotional qualities than did her previous appearance.

The settings employed in the production of "Matrimony" are of the kind seen only in many of those big society stories which have gained greater laurels for Ince. Furniture of the most expensive character adorns virtually every set, while bric-a-brac and paintings—the latter done in oils by Inceville's special staff of artists—lend additional finesse.

A distinctive feature of the production will, perhaps, prove the magnificent array of gowns worn by Miss Dean in her interpretation of the stellar role.

Another strong point in connection with "Matrimony" is the cast of favorites that appears in support of Miss Dean. The male lead, that of Weston Rossmore, is played by no less a photoplay celebrity than Howard Hickman, the erstwhile coast stock star, who has scored heavily in a number of Ince dramas. The part of Thelma Iverson, "the other woman," is portrayed with consummate skill by Louise Glaum, who has been frequently alluded to as the "most wonderful siren on the screen." Thelma Salter, the talented child actress, does creditable work as Viola, the little daughter, while Elizabeth Burbridge, than whom there are, it is declared, few better ingenues, handles the part of the little sister in a manner befitting her rank in the film world.

Will Release Through Associated

Lloyd Hammond, of the Atlas Motion Picture Company of Detroit, Mich., after two weeks of careful investigation of the New York market, arrived at the conclusion that the best proposition of the field was offered by the Associated Film Sales Corporation, and has closed a contract with that corporation by which he will furnish one comedy a week. The Atlas Motion Picture Company is incorporated under the laws of Michigan, with studios situated on Gratiot avenue between Rohms and Crane streets, Detroit, with down town offices in the Legitt building. A stock company of exceptional ability is maintained, featuring Roy Walling, stock star for the past five years, who has proven to be a find.

The Atlas Motion Picture Company claims to have supplied some of the largest and best programs with films, and its output has been disposed of entirely in this way.

The Atlas employs two directors, George Earle and Glen Lyons. Its executive staff consists of Charles Ross, president and general manager, Percy R. Upton, secretary and treasurer, Frank Schaffer, vice-president and laboratory superintendent. Detroit offers many natural and wonderful commercial advantages for making beautiful pictures, but during the latter part of November, the Atlas Motion Picture Company will take up winter quarters in Los Angeles.

Film notables. Left to right: Bennie Zeidman, Griffith Fine Arts Films; Don Meaney, Quality Picture Corporation; Douglas Fairbanks, Triangle Film Corporation; Mabel Condon; Ernest Shipman, publicity promoter; Mrs. Don Meaney; Nell Shipman, Universal Film Company, and William Christy Cabanne, Fine Arts Films. Snapped at Fine Arts studios.

Otis Harlan's Film Debut

Otis Harlan, known the country over as "the king of American comedians," will make his initial bow in motion pictures on October 18, when he appears in the leading role in "A Black Sheep," a five-reel Selig Red Seal play released through V. L. S. E. Picture theater patrons are to be treated to a new style of comedy when they see Mr. Harlan in action. He has coupled his knowledge of "what the public wants" with the possibilities of the camera, as he has learned them in the Selig studios, and the result is a delightful brand of comedy which is distinctly of the Harlan variety. He has carefully avoided all that has become trite in the screen farce and has also evaded the stiffness which marks all straight stage comedy brought before the motion picture camera. Mr. Harlan's fun-making antics may be described as being a happy medium between the farce of the screen and the straight comedy of the stage. It is thoroughly enjoyable to all and offensive to none.

Otis Harlan.

Mr. Harlan's recent decision that he has given up the stage is of no little importance, since he has trod the boards since 1887. He has appeared in most of the Hoyt farces on the stage and has created the original roles in many of them. In addition to these plays he has appeared in company with such stars as Thomas Seabrook, Edna May, Annette Kellermann and Anna Held. He is also a manager and producer of note, having charge of the Bijou circuit for three years and having staged the original production of "Baby Mine." Some of the most notable stage productions in which he appeared and those which old time theater goers are most likely to remember are: "The Isle of Champaign," "Tobasco," "Broadway to Tokio," "The Girl From Up There," "The Vanderbilt Cup," "A Parisian Model" and "A Model Maid." The Hoyt plays in which he appeared were "A Black Sheep," the play which has been filmed by Selig, "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Texas Steer," which has also been filmed by Selig, and several of the other famous Hoyt comedies.

Why I Went Into Motion Pictures

BY GERALDINE FARRAR

IT is the sounding board of the piano that gives roundness and substance to the tone; it is the resistance of the carbon that gives greater brilliance to the arc, and it is the artistic sympathies of our hearers that inspire us all to redouble our efforts to interest, instruct, or entertain. The orator is more eloquent in proportion to the numbers of his sympahetic hearers; the actor more brilliant as his audience sways to his art. All this is by way of introduction to what follows. Frequently, since last spring, when I determined that the time had arrived for me to enter a new field of artistic endeavor, I have been asked the question: "Why?" My friends have said: "Already you have reached great popularity through the operatic and concert stages. Why motion pictures?" While it is true that to most of these inquiries I have answered, "Why not?" in half jest, I am glad now to tell more fully precisely the reasons why I declined a summer of rest and ease for a summer of mighty hard work.

Geraldine Farrar.

For what was said in the first paragraph is quite true. The artist—the person who had dedicated himself to an artistic cause—if he be sincere in his response to the call from "within" cannot stand still. There is but one road in art and that is "straight forward." There is no detour, no turning back. And in exact proportion to the inspiration which the artist obtains from a responsive and sympathetic audience, precisely so is the effect of lassitude and wasted opportunity. Work is for workmen, as the comedian once said. And friends are for artists.

When Morris Gest first interested me in motion pictures as a field of work exceptionally suited to those gifts with which I have been endowed as an actress, I was more surprised than amused. I had been at various times to see motion picture entertainments, but usually in the theaters in Europe. It never had even occurred to me to act for the screen.

The more I thought of the suggestion the more it interested me and before long I knew—I felt, as it were,—that motion pictures really offered a field in which I could not only work with great sincerity and happiness, but also through which I would be answering that inner command constantly in the artist's mind, "Broaden yourself, extend your scope, make new friends."

After attending scores of motion picture entertainments in New York and other American cities, I saw and understood to what wonderful ends this great medium of dramatic expression was pointed. The Paramount theaters interested me most because of the truly high principles that seemed to prompt the producers and exhibitors.

After a discussion with Samuel Goldfish, head of the Lasky Feature Play Company, I found myself within a few weeks thereafter on the way to Hollywood, Cal., where the Lasky studios are situated. Right here I wish to say in all my experience never were those around me so eager to please, so kind in their attentions.

When I first sang for the talking machine I believed for a moment that I would be unable to overcome the feeling that it was a mechanical contrivance. I was not sure that the best artistic impulses would respond. My experience, however, was that once I started to sing all sense of the mechanical thing in front of me disappeared. I saw in my mind's eye a great throng of people to whom I was singing.

And that was my experience before the motion picture camera. I lost sight of the photographer and his steady turning. I saw only a mighty gathering of men, women and children—thousands and thousands—who were watching my every movement. It was thrilling and I knew that my sincerity was meeting with response and that my picture would please.

Sketch of Geraldine Farrar, made from life by LeRoy Baldridge of Photoplay Magazine staff.

Never in the world's history of amusements has there been any audience so great, so wonderful, as the motion picture audience. Sight is the medium of the photoplay and the simple emotions of pantomime are universal to human nature the world over. The South American nature, the Chinese, the most highly cultured of Europe and the Asiatic all understand the emotions of comedy, of tragedy, of happiness, joy, sorrow, jealousy and anger.

The famous fight scene in "Carmen."

So, where thousands have seen and heard me in grand opera and concert, where hundreds of thousands have heard only my voice through the talking machine, millions now will be my audience in motion pictures. And they will see Geraldine Farrar in her happiest mood, I assure you—well, wait and see "Carmen" and tell me that you agree with me.

World Film and Equitable Jointly Celebrate

The first birthday of the World Film Corporation and the birth of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation was celebrated on Monday, September 20, at the Hotel Astor, New York, by a luncheon at which Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of World Film and vice-president and advisory director of Equitable, and Felix F. Feist, who, with Arthur S. Spiegel, guides the destinies of Equitable, were hosts to the members of the trade press.

The speeches were few, short, and full of life. Milton C. Work, representing the Shuberts, acted as toastmaster. His request for a few remarks from the man who in himself is World Film, Lewis J. Selznick, was backed by the applause of everyone present. Mr. Selznick rose, began by stating that he was only going to speak for a few moments, and kept his word. But what he did say was to the point, and clearly outlined World Film's policies, progress and plans for the future. The latter consists in making good film, and selling it in the face of competition.

Following Mr. Selznick, William A. Brady, Joseph L. Rhinock, Felix F. Feist, and Harry L. Reichenbach spoke briefly upon the movements of the film industry as related to the growth of World Film and the birth of Equitable. William A. Brady, in his speech, paid a glowing and generous tribute to the productive and creative ability of David W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation."

Those present were: Lewis J. Selznick, Felix F. Feist, William A. Brady, Britton N. Busch, Henry F. MacNamara, Milton C. Work, Joseph L. Rhinock, Jacob Wilk, N. Winik, Henry J. Brock, Lynde Denig, John W. Semler, Tracy Lewis, Peter Milne, Charles R. Condon, J. Dailey, C. O. Kracht, Stuart N. Lake, P. B. Newman, A. S. Aronson, Harry Ennis, Harry C. Drum, Milton E. Hoffman, M. Selznick, George W. Lederer, Harry L. Reichenbach, G. W. Newgass, and M. F. Newman.

FAIRBANKS TO REMAIN

Star of First Griffith Triangle Production Signs Long-Term Contract and Departs for New York Studio.

Douglas Fairbanks, the first of the legitimate stage stars engaged by Mr. Griffith to be starred in Fine Arts Films Triangle plays, has signed a long-term contract with Mr. Griffith, during which time he will be featured in a series of comedy dramas. As most everyone knows, Douglas Fairbanks is the recent star of "He Comes Up Smiling," "The New Henrietta," and "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," and unlike the majority of legitimate stage stars, proved an immediate success in his first picture, "The Lamb." This marks a great victory for the Fine Arts Films studio, which is endeavoring to sign up all the most prominent of speaking stage stars.

Mr. Fairbanks has just completed his second picture, "Double Trouble," and will depart for the New York Fine Arts Films studio to do his third picture, the temporary title of which is "His Picture in the Papers." This play is to be produced by John Emerson, the well-known Frohman star and producer. Mr. Emerson leaves for New York this week, in company with Mr. Fairbanks and other members of the supporting cast.

Fairbanks will remain in the New York studio for three or four pictures and then return to California. Intermittently he will spend half the time in New York and the balance of the time at the Fine Arts Films' Hollywood studio. At the present time there are a number of very prominent speaking-stage stars at the Hollywood studio. Included in the list are De Wolf Hopper, Helen Ware, Orrin Johnson, Jane Grey, Tully Marshall, Rozsika Dolly, Frank Campeau, Paul Gilmore, Sarah Truax and Thomas Jefferson, besides the Griffith stars, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish and Robert Harron.

The order in which the Fine Arts Films will be released on the Triangle program is "The Lamb," starring Douglas Fairbanks, for the first; followed by "The Martyrs of the Alamo," presenting an all-star cast; "Old Heidelberg," featuring Dorothy Gish, assisted by Wallace Reid; "The Sable Lorcha," featuring Tully Marshall and Thomas Jefferson; "The Lily and the Rose," starring Lillian Gish, featuring Rozsika Dolly and Wilfred Lucas, and "Jordan Is a Hard Road," starring Dorothy Gish and featuring Frank Campeau.

Robert Edeson, Kathryn Osterman, Katharine Kaelred, Brandon Tynan, Molly McIntyre, Margarita Fischer, Hilda Spong, Lenore Ulrich, William Courtleigh, Robert T. Haines, Muriel Ostriche and George Soule Spencer are numbered among the Equitable stars.

Your Show and the Continued Photoplay

BY D. J. SULLIVAN*

EVERY exhibitor can take a lesson from the history of the magazine publishing business and the development of the continued story. Look the field over and you will discover that the majority of the successful magazines make the continued story an important part of every issue.

The reason is simple and obvious. The continued story awakens interest and carries it right along. It is "sold" to the reader when he gets the first installment and he buys the rest of the installments automatically. He doesn't have to be re-sold on every chapter.

Now, another comparison—in the grocer's business. Any successful grocer will tell you that his business depends on certain staple articles, the things that keep his customers coming back time after time. He cashes in on the repeating value of his line of established goods.

Now, how would you as an exhibitor like to have just as steady and reliable a trade patronage as the grocer or butcher? The tradesman knows pretty accurately what every week's business is going to bring him. He can standardize his methods and trim his costs, because he has a regular business.

No doubt you have given consideration to this possibility and probably have tried in some way to work out a scheme for doing the same thing for your motion picture business. You have thought about a regular clientele and wondered just how to get it. You are just as truly a business man as the successful merchant is and the methods by which he has won success are available to you. You can use them with the same certainty of results that he enjoys.

The tradesman who makes a marked success is he who handles the best brands of goods and lives on the favor earned by the excellence of his brands. The same thing is true of your business.

Put this down to remember, right now: The continued photoplay is a staple article. It is an article which you can utilize just as surely as the grocer uses his best advertised and best known brand of flour or canned goods.

I might cite you thousands of examples and comparisons to show you that the best interests of life and business are sustained interests, continued interests, but this is hardly necessary. You may have already proven it to yourself in your own theater.

The success of the "Diamond From the Sky" shows that a great many exhibitors have demonstrated this truth to themselves.

Going back to the grocer's shop for a moment, the grocer knows that the brand that flashes once from his show window or in his advertising will never build a trade for him and support his business. It is equally obvious also that no short single film ever made a theater or established a permanent patronage.

But right here in the records of my office is plenty of proof that the connected film story, each chapter complete in itself, satisfying within its reels the curiosity it excited, but with the thread of the main plot sustaining and exciting further interest has made the theater and has established exhibitors in successful business.

It seems to me that there can be no question but that the secret of the success of the good motion picture serial is the same as that of the good novel running in any magazine, which means that each chapter shall be plausible, probable and possible, arousing curiosity and then nearly satisfying it—taking the edge off of this curiosity but leaving much to be learned about the general plan of the plot and leaving the theater patron pleased, but still anxious for more.

There are many similarities between the publishing business and the motion picture industry and no where do they run more closely parallel than in the continued story of the printed page and the screen. This is given a particular pointedness because of the fact that the printed story is being released to the public simultaneously with the story in films. Thus each chapter, where in type or films, carries the same sustained interest, the same major and minor plots and the same elements of success.

The production of a successful continued photoplay calls for an artful handling beyond any of the requirements of the shorter productions. The matter of climaxes, for instance, comes in for a lot of consideration, and unless they are properly placed the film is going to leave the audience unsatisfied and unhappy. But still caution must be observed, because with the public growing more and more sophisticated it asks that something be left to conjecture. It is essential that always something be left to be learned.

When you get to the top of a hill you lose interest in getting there. It's always the effort to get there, with all its ups and downs and uncertainties, with the goal always just ahead, that is interesting, and that is the way of the continued story or photoplay, from beginning to end.

You have known people who spoiled the reading of a book by turning first to the last chapter "to see how it turns out." That is rather a frequent trait. In the continued photoplay you capitalize just that kind of interest and without the possibility of the patron turning ahead to discover how it comes out—because it can't be done, and so this patrons has to some back to your house every time to get the next installment and to ultimately find out, as in the case of our picturized romantic novel, "Who gets the Diamond."

The short film is pleasant. It is the breeze that cools you on a hot day, but the serial film is the life of your business. If you once establish a good one it keeps you going happily. There is a sort of assurance of sustained patronage that gives the exhibitor more peace of mind, just like money in the bank.

There is a business aspect of the continued photoplay that must appeal to every exhibitor as important. Continued advertising is sure to win. With a single picture there is no cumulative effect except as it may impress your audiences with the general quality of your bookings. After the single picture is run, all the advertising you have done on that particular picture has quit working.

But the advertising and promotion effort made for the continued photoplay keeps piling up effect and result, because the play is running right along in your house and is there to supply the demand created by your work and expenditure. Thus, is it clear that the continued photoplay justifies and in fact calls for a bigger advertising outlay than any single picture.

*Of the North American Film Corporation.

For very closely related reasons the continued photoplay can be backed up with many more expensive advertising and promotion helps than would be practical or possible in connection with single pictures or "one time" features. The high art heralds, the newspaper space, the souvenir advertising helps used the first week in the promotion of the continued photoplay, count and show results all through the subsequent weeks. For example, in connection with the promotion of "The Diamond From the Sky," a special book to exhibitors, under the title of "How to Increase Your Box Office Receipts," was issued. Exhibitors who put into operation the plans that they found presented there are telling every day of the successes they have met. And their success with this continued photoplay has covered their whole business. What they have learned in the handling of this picture has increased their efficiency as managers and is reflected in every aspect of their business.

As an example of how "The Diamond From the Sky" is being shown and advertised by the wide awake exhibitors everywhere, this article is illustrated with pictures of Proctor's One Hundred Twenty-fifth street theater, in New York.

The billboard shown in the photograph shows "The Diamond" dominating the advertising of the house and program—and alongside, by the way, you will observe a Mutual Master-Picture is well represented. There is an example to every exhibitor in Proctor's treatment of "The Diamond."

Wright's Methods with Supe-s

Director Fred F. Wright for Essanay, who has just completed the production of F. Marion Crawford's six-act drama, "In the Palace of the King," through his own enthusiasm, inspired all of the 5,000 persons who took part in the photoplay, with individual responsibility. Before starting work, Mr. Wright had worked out his plan of production to the minutest detail, so that when he had his great host of players there was not a single hitch, and he was enabled to push the play through in record time for such a stupendous piece.

"With the thousands of persons who were absolutely raw material I anticipated some difficulty in getting them all to do exactly as I wanted, but they really did better than the ordinary super who has had some experience," said Mr. Wright. "In fact, I think their lack of any experience helped. They knew nothing, so were ready to follow instructions to the letter.

"I took every one into my confidence. So many times when a great crowd is used the director says do this and do that. The extras haven't the slightest conception of what the play is and why they are going through a particular action. Consequently they are indifferent and do not care about anything except to draw their pay.

"Before every scene I talked to the men and women in groups and explained carefully what the play was about and what their part in it meant. I told the horsemen and the foot soldiers what their action represented and its relation to the play; the same with the peasants and other groups. As a result each one became interested in the play and was inspired to realize his individual responsibility.

"I saw to it that their lunch was good and that they were well taken care of in every way. It created a spirit of good will and an enthusiasm for the play that was extraordinary. Consequently even in mob scenes there was perfect team work that is rare in pictures where so many persons are used."

Mr. Wright directed "Graustark" and "The White Sister," of Essanay's feature photoplays, as well as many other important multiple reel dramas. He has had more than twenty years experience in directing work, seven years of which he was directing photoplays.

His first experience in theatrical work was when a boy of sixteen, he played Henry VI in Richard III, for Thomas W. Keane in his home town at Troy, N. Y. He was with Keane several years, playing leading Shakespearean roles. He then went into the directing end of the work; was for many years with Stair and Havelin and directed in stock in all the large cities of the country.

He first began photoplay work in directing a picture for I. W. Ullman and for two years directed large multiple reel features for the foreign market. He then became associated with one of the largest companies in the United States as head director, supplying pictures for the United States and Europe. He was with this company four and a half years when he was engaged by Essanay.

"The Pearl of the Antilles"

"The Pearl of the Antilles" was adapted by Mr. Terriss from his greatest English success, "A Sword of Honor" and picturized upon the island of Jamaica, Mr. Terriss' company being the first moving picture concern to ever take pictures upon this beautiful island.

The cast of "The Pearl of the Antilles" includes Tom Terriss himself in the feature part, Rienzi de Cordova and Lionel Pape, two well known English actors who have starred for many seasons with their own companies in England and played under the management of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, George Alexander, Cyril Maude, et cetera. Mr. Pape has just been selected to play one of the leading parts with Grace George in her forthcoming season. The cast also includes Alfred Hemming, who has just been selected by the Shuberts to play the leading part in the musical comedy production "Tonight's the Night." The leading part of "Pearl" is taken by Miss Tessie de Cordova, who makes her initial appearance upon the screen and is a native of the island of Jamaica, child of nature, fearless, graceful and beautiful.

Siegmund Lubin leaving for the San Diego Exposition. Saturday, September 25, was set aside as Lubin Day.

The picture will be released by the Picture Playhouse Film Company.

MIRROR FILMS ORGANIZED

Captain Harry Lambart, Well-Known Director of Vitagraph Staff, Organizes Company to Produce Feature Stories

A new motion picture concern recently organized is announced this week in the shape of the Mirror Films, Incorporated, headed by Captain Harry Lambart, for some years one of the chief producers for the Vitagraph Company of America. It is rumored that there is a good solid foundation of a financial nature back of the corporation. Captain Harry Lambart is a man of long and varied experience in pictures and one who has had the force of character and ability to carry out the ideas which have come to him as a result of his years in photoplay productions. A stage producer for many years, a world traveled man and a thorough student of motion pictures from the standpoint of photography as well as direction, Captain Lambart holds a unique position in the field. He has gone forth from his studio to study the finances of the business, the needs of the exhibitor, the problem of distribution and other details of the industry concerning which the average director of films knows next to nothing.

Captain Lambart.

A representative of MOTOGRAPHY had a talk with Captain Lambart at the new offices of the corporation at 16 East Forty-second street, New York, and found his host deep in the process of getting his force organized. The captain cleared his desk of a few things and then turned to his visitor.

"We are getting ready to make pictures," he said. "I am not bothering about the finances. That is taken care of and I am only interested in seeing that we produce worth-while pictures. We are not starting out to make better pictures than anyone else, as I have seen announced by some new companies. If we make pictures as good as any other are making right now, I shall be satisfied. We are going to produce the best of which our talent and facilities will permit. The public may judge of the pictures after they are thrown on the screen.

"We may have some revolutionary ideas here," the captain continued, "but I have seen a great many revolutionary ideas spring up and accomplish good for the trade in the twelve years of my experience in this business. For one thing, we are driving straight away from the false notion that the motion picture industry is a theatrical enterprise. It is not. It is a commercial enterprise, the marketing of a canned product to a certain, definite class of retailer—the exhibitor.

"I realize that there are certain big features films which are to be played in opposition to legitimate theatrical attractions which must be handled in the way which smacks of the theatrical, but even then, I maintain that a highly specialized organization is necessary to get the most out of them, an organization such as is not known in the theatrical business.

"Another highly important phase of the business which has been considered and worked over from time to time but for which there have been no real precedents laid down is the treatment accorded to the exhibitor. Why, if the manufacturer in any other line of trade had treated his retailers as the exhibitor in this business is treated, the business would go to smash. It is quite true that efforts have been made to render him service, but there has been a hitch some where along the line.

"We propose to give the exhibitor a square deal. Our policy is and will be dead against such practices as permitting a competitor to over bid and take away service from any exhibitor without, at least, giving him opportunity also to make a bid for it and we shall use our best efforts toward the best sort of treatment on the part of those through whom our pictures reach the exhibitor. We want to build for the future and not reach an anxious hand toward the immediate dollar."

It was twelve years ago that he first entered the Gaumont studio in Paris. Since that time he has been making pictures almost continuously with the exception of an occasional return to stage productions. His first experience in pictures in this country came in 1912 after he had been producing for Werbans Leuscher at the Globe theater. He met Commodore Blackton and was invited down to see if he would not like a place on the staff of the Vitagraph Company of America. Under Commodore Blackton, whom Captain Lambart considers one of the cleverest men in the technique of making pictures in the world, he played parts while studying Vitagraph methods.

Then he got a script called, "The Test," out of which he made a two-reel subject which was most successful. That was his beginning as a director for the Vitagraph and he remained with Mr. Blackton until the formation of his own company this summer.

When the officials of the City of New York decided to exhibit a film at the Panama exposition to show the workings of various departments of the city government, Captain Lambart was chosen to produce the film. He spent ten weeks with the heads of the department of police, docks and ferries, and bridges and with the Public Service Commission, making pictures and took in addition many scenes of an historical nature in and around buildings and places concerning which there are stories in American history.

With such a man of world travel and knowledge as Captain Lambart at the head of it and with such men on the board of directors as we have heard are there, the Mirror Films, Incorporated, will loom large as a potential factor in the film business.

EQUITABLE EMPLOYS BEAUTY

Alexandra Carlisle, Famous English-American Star, Late Leading Woman for John Drew to Make Debut in Films

One of the strangest contracts ever entered into by a stage celebrity and an engaging corporation, was that consummated this week between the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation and the famous legitimate stage beauty—Alexandra Carlisle. Miss Carlisle, who attained fame in England seven years ago, stepped into prominence in this country by reason of her unusual beauty and ability in "The Marriage Game," and recently as leading woman opposite John Drew in the Empire theater production of "Rosemary." Miss Carlisle, through her contractual engagements with Equitable, makes her debut on the screen under the guidance of Director Marshall Farnum, in Russell Edward Smith's scenariozation of Kate Jordan's novel, "Creeping Tides." In the contract with Equitable, Miss Carlisle, who, by option, following her first effort, if desirable, to Equitable, becomes an exclusive Equitable star, demanded the insertion of a most curious clause. It reads thus: "The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation hereby grants to said Alexandra Carlisle the rights to refuse to appear in any role, characterizing evil women, or indiscreet females. If the part apportioned her calls for the portrayal of an adventuress, evil creature, woman of the world or unfaithful wife, said Alexandra Carlisle will have the right to refuse to portray said role."

Alexandra Carlisle.

This clause is the first of its kind to appear in a motion picture contract and bears out the statement of Miss Carlisle's manager that within the past two months she refused to appear in the star part of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" for Klaw and Erlanger, in which she portrayed the role of the mother of an illegitimate child and in "The Married Mistress" for William Elliott, both of which plays held unbounded opportunities for the delightful actress.

Another recruit to the Equitable roster of noted stars is Jose Collins, late star of Ziegfeld's Follies and leading player in last year's Winter Garden show. Miss Collins recently appeared in a screen production of "The Imposter" on the World Film Program and scored an instantaneous hit. Her work so appealed to Mr. Selznick and Spiegel and Feist of Equitable, that arrangements were entered into by which Miss Collins becomes an Equitable star. She will begin work within a fortnight. Marc Edmond Jones of the Equitable scenario staff has been assigned to procure a suitable vehicle and arrange a scenario for her.

Pathe News Scores Big Hit

A remarkable example of newspaper enterprise applied to a motion picture news film was shown by the Pathe News last week. The serious subway accident in New York, where a whole block of street caved in, burying a trolley car and killing and injuring a large number of persons, happened shortly before 8 o'clock in the morning on September 22. Within a half hour of the accident three cameramen had arrived from the Pathe studio in Jersey City, and within an hour their negatives had been received in the studio, where they were developed, projected and cut. By 11:30 they were on their way to Bound Brook to be printed, and two hours later fifteen prints were being delivered by a squad of special messengers to theaters in the Metropolitan district, where bookings had already been made by telephone. Seven other prints followed an hour later, so that twenty-two theaters in New York City and Brooklyn were showing on their screens on the afternoon and evening of the day of the accident pictures of the big news story of the day. In one instance, at least, a theater was showing the film at 4:30 p. m. Among the houses who booked this "scoop" were the Strand, Broadway, Proctor, Moss and Brill houses and the Summer and Duffield in Brooklyn.

The New York Tribune voluntarily paid a remarkable tribute to this exhibition of enterprise by featuring a story of the "scoop" in a box at the top of the third page.

Not satisfied with this feat, P. D. Hugon, manager and editor of the Pathe News, put over another one the very next day. The newspapers of Thursday were carrying display stories of Henry Ford and his "jitney" submarine, and his call upon Secretary Daniels at the White House. A Pathe News cameraman caught Mr. Ford at the White House, and J. R. Bray, the Pathe cartoonist, was summoned and put to work upon an animated cartoon of Mr. Ford and his submarine. The photographing of these pictures was rushed through at high speed and on Friday the pictures were being shown on Broadway. The amount of labor and the speed with which the films were made is shown by the fact that 2,000 pictures had to be photographed for this cartoon.

"The County Fair"

The Fine Arts Films studio, located in Hollywood, has purchased from Charles Bernard of Pasadena, Cal., the motion picture rights of "The County Fair," of which Bernard was the author and which Neil Burgess made famous as a play a quarter of a century ago. "The County Fair" still lives in the hearts of the theater-going public and contains an excellent story for motion picture purposes. Negotiations have been started with a prominent speaking star to play the part Neil Burgess created in the original production.

Latest Power's Machine Used

A Power's Cameragraph No. 6B motion picture projecting machine was used at the National Exposition of Chemical Industries during the week of September 20 at the Grand Central Palace, New York, to project the motion pictures depicting the many different phases of the chemical industries throughout the world.

Ince Studios to Move to Culver City

WILL OCCUPY TWELVE ACRES

THE purchase by Thomas H. Ince of approximately twelve acres of land in Culver City, to be used as the site of a new studio for the production of Ince-Triangle features was announced this week from the Inceville studios of the New York Motion Picture corporation. Coming, as it does, at a time when Ince and his pictures are subjects of wide discussion in film circles, this news has stirred the west coast photoplay colony to a noticeable pitch of interest.

Culver City is a suburb of Los Angeles, it being situated about half way between the "city of films" and the numerous beach resorts. It is a community of rapidly-increasing popularity by reason of its proximity to Los Angeles and in addition to that advantage possesses unusual facilities for motion picture making. That fact is what prompted Ince to negotiate for the purchase of a tract. It has been the great producer's belief for some time that Inceville, the present locale of the N. Y. M. P. producing plant, in the Santa Monica mountains, is inadequate—and, at times, inconvenient—for the production of the multiple-reel plays that he is making for contribution to the Triangle. He has been seeking a site that offers the combined advantages of convenience and scenic beauties. And, in Culver City, he has found it.

That the new plant will be one of mammoth proportions is attested by the number and dimensions of the various buildings planned for erection. These will include, six stages, each measuring 60 by 150 feet, administration building, 60 by 150 feet, receiving room, 80 by 90 feet, wardrobe room, 60 by 150 feet, paint shop, 50 by 60 feet, property room, 50 by 200 feet, factory and cutting room (with which will be incorporated the projecting rooms), 100 by 150 feet, garage, 90 by 90 feet, carpenter shop, 100 by 200 feet, scene dock, 100 by 190 feet, commissary, 100 by 150 feet, power plant, 40 by 75 feet, sewing room, 50 by 50 feet, plumbing shop, 30 by 40 feet, fire house, 25 by 60 feet, and 300 dressing rooms.

The property has its frontage on Washington boulevard, one of the most beautiful of thoroughfares in all of Southern California, and can thus be reached easily by automobiles from either the city of Los Angeles or the beach towns. It is also accessible by what are known as the Venice Short Line electric cars, which stop regularly at the Culver City station, which is but a block from the proposed site.

Just when the removal will take place depends totally upon the speed with which the construction work is carried on. It is the hope of Mr. Ince that he will be enabled to take possession of his new plant before the Christmas holidays, and to this end the contractors have been instructed to employ a large extra force of men. The architects are now completing their plans and within another week, it is believed, they will be in shape for delivery to the builders. All the construction work will be done, of course, under the supervising eyes of Ince and his stage manager, Tom Brierly.

An additional announcement—coupled with that of the purchase—which is particularly welcome to many of the older Incevillians, is that Inceville will not be wholly forsaken. The plant will be maintained by the company, as before, except on a smaller scale. Most of the Ince forces will move, in time, to the Culver City studios, but a number of them will remain behind to engage in the production of such subjects as demand the picturesque natural settings of the canyon location. These are principally the big, virile western stories in which William S. Hart is to be starred.

Billie Burke is the cynosure of all eyes at the plant this week—all eyes that, in any way possible, can steal a glimpse of her while she is appearing before the camera, under the direction of Thomas Ince, in an elaborate photodrama for The Triangle. She is an attraction such as has never before graced Inceville with her presence. Innocently enough, she is upsetting the celerity of action at the big Ince plant. She has awakened the curiosity even of staid old Civil War veterans, now engaged in another picture. She is wearing pink pajamas. They're silk and they cost, according to the latest advices from the auditing department, $32.50. But that isn't the reason why Inceville is all aflutter, agog and astir. It is because these dainty luxuries of the boudoir are adorning the beautiful, golden-haired star who is shattering forever the assertions of many that "Billie Burke would never appear in the films."

COMING BLUE RIBBON FILMS

Some Exceptional Screen Stories Will Be Offered by Vitagraph Company During Last Three Months of Year

A more varied program of Blue Ribbon Feature releases has seldom been announced than that arranged by the Vitagraph Company for the three months of the closing year. The pictures selected unite the best authors with the flower of the Vitagraph stock company in addition to stars from the legitimate stage, whose reputations have established them as favorites with playgoers all over the world. The subjects include drama, comedy-drama, and comedy and represent the Vitagraph Company's best efforts in feature photoplay production.

For October, the first picture will be the six-part comedy, "The Dust of Egypt," from the well-known farce by Alan Campbell. It was produced under the direction of George D. Baker with a cast that includes Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Hughie Mack, Naomi Childers, Charles Brown, Edward Elkas, Frank Currier and Cissy Fitz-Gerald. The latter part of October, Maurice Costello will be seen in "The Man Who Couldn't Beat God," the second prize winner of the Sun scenario contest. It was written by Harold Gilmore Calhoun and tells a vivid story of a man who believed he could erase the scar of the murder of his master from his soul. Mr. Costello is seen at his best, ably assisted by Charles Eldridge, Thomas Mills, Robert Gaillard, Naomi Childers, Edwina Robbins, Estelle Mardo and Gladden James.

Three releases are announced for November and are remarkable examples of photoplay construction and production. "The Turn of the Road," a five-part feature produced by Tefft Johnson, in which Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour, Bobby Connelly, Naomi Childers, and Robert Gaillard, will be seen in the portrayal of the principal roles, is the first. A Cyrus Townsend Brady story, "Heights of Hazard," that contains every known thrill, will add additional interest to the month's program. "Heights of Hazard" is also a five-part feature and will introduce Charles Richman, Eleanor Woodruff and Charles Kent in the leading characterizations, the production being made under the direction of Capt. Harry Lambart. Robert Edeson, Fay Wallace, Lillian Burns, Charles Eldridge, John T. Kelly, and a special cast of Vitagraph players, will be seen in "The Cave Man," the last week of the month, produced under the direction of Theodore Marston.

December will be ushered in by the release of "A Price For Folly," one of the strongest dramas on the Vitagraph program. It was written by George P. Dillenbeck and produced in five parts by George D. Baker, with Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Harry Morey, Charles Kent, Louise Beaudet, Ethel Corcoran and Arthur Cozine.

Frank Daniels, the inimitable king of comedy, whose first Vitagraph release, "Crooky," established him as a screen comedian in a class by himself, will round out the year's Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features in "What Happened to Father," written especially for him by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It is a story of the theater; a story of that region known as "back stage," that has always been a mystery to the uninitiated. A strong Vitagraph cast support Mr. Daniels in the enactment of the comedy, which was produced in five parts by C. Jay Williams.

Plimpton to Distribute Through Authors

The Authors Film Co., Inc., which has been making such success in its new method of express distribution with Walker Whiteside's "The Melting Pot," announces that contracts were signed last week with Horace G. Plimpton, formerly general director for the Edison Company, who has just formed what will be known as the Plimpton Epic Pictures Corporation, whereby it will manufacture big features with big stars exclusively for the Authors Film Company, Inc., and its express distribution.

Douglas Fairbanks and Director William Christy Cabanne of the Fine Arts Film studios.

ELABORATE LOBBY DISPLAY

Exchanges of V. L. S. E., Inc., Offer Exhibitors Oil Paintings and Lobby Advertising of De Luxe Kind on Features

The sales force of V. L. S. E., Inc., are earnestly spreading broadcast the doctrine that the proper place for lithographs is on the billboard, and that an artistic, dignified lobby makes the greatest appeal to the largest number of the most desirable patrons.

This propaganda is in line with the unceasing efforts of the "Big Four" organization, to increase the prestige of the photo-drama and thereby aid the exhibitor in attracting the better paying class of patronage.

Backing up their declaration that the exhibitor should look not only for good features, but good features accompanied by the best material to exploit them, the V. L. S. E. have had built a number of sample lobby sets on the Vitagraph feature, "Playing Dead," which will be displayed in the various branches of the organization as examples of the most effective type of lobby display.

These sets consist of five pieces, each of which is an original oil painting. There are no reprints. All of the art work has been done with a brush, by hand.

They are made up in two ways: Some of the pieces are distinct and individual scenes from the play, while others provide artistic frames in which to set "stills." In the latter case, the space on the board not occupied by photographs bears impressionistic decorations, suggestive of the theme of the features.

The display on "Playing Dead" is only the forerunner of a similar series to be prepared for the other V. L. S. E. releases. The C. J. Dryden company, which was so successful with this first issue, has also been engaged by the Selig company to visualize the main incidents in "The Circular Staircase," in a like manner, and by the Essanay company to prepare the display for "The Man Trail." Features to follow from these manufacturers' studios will be treated, likewise, and the Lubin company has signified its intention of adopting the advanced idea.

It is interesting to note that this move of V. L. S. E. is not only commercially sound, but that it is in line with the agitation in many cities to prohibit the use of mounted paper in any form in the lobbies of moving picture theaters.

Boise, Idaho, is one of the cities to adopt an ordinance against this kind of display, on the ground that nothing is more inflammable than paper mounted on canvass, and that where this kind of paper is hung in theater lobbies, the main avenue of escape, in case of fire, is entirely cut off. A cigarette thrown aside as some careless person enters the lobby, a half lighted match carelessly tossed away, a short circuit in the wiring, or various other causes, might easily start a fire at any moment.

The State of Michigan has also taken cognizance of this danger, and has passed a law abolishing this kind of advertising throughout the state.

"Shanghaied," hailed as Charles Chaplin's funniest comedy, has been completed in Essanay's Los Angeles studio, and critics who have seen it are unanimous in the assertion that it is the best laugh-making photoplay Mr. Chaplin has ever produced. It is released Monday, October 4.

WALTER HAMPDEN ENGAGED

Knickerbocker Star Features Sign Famous Actor of Broadway Successes, Who Has Supported Henry Miller, Nazimova, and Others

Knickerbocker Star Features will be responsible for the screen debut of another Broadway star with the release of the three-reel feature, "The Dragon's Claw," in which Walter Hampden takes the leading part. Early in life Hampden left New York to begin his theatrical career in England, in a company under F. R. Vincent's management, which has fed the English stage with its best actors.

In 1914 he took London by storm when he made his great debut at the Adelphi theater in "The Prayer of the Sword." While there he also played in Hall Caine's "The Prodigal Son" and "The Bondman." But Hampden was anxious to return to America, his native land, and, in 1907, brought over with him "The Servant in the House," which he persuaded Henry Miller to put on. In this he won an enviable reputation on the American stage and the theater-going public from coast to coast remember his wonderful interpretation of Manson in this production.

His acting in "The Master Builder" at the Bijou theater in New York with Madame Nazimova, along with other plays with her, brought him more popularity. This was followed by a short season with Viola Allen, when he was featured in Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City."

After a successful season in the lead of the curious Chinese drama, "The Yellow Jacket," Hampden has joined the Knickerbocker forces, adding one more to the list of Broadway celebrities who have harkened to the call of the camera.

Elsie Janis in New Bosworth Release

As its latest release, Bosworth, Inc., announces Elsie Janis, the international favorite of the stage and screen in her fourth film subject, "'Twas Ever Thus," a novel photoplay presenting a triple love story from the prehistoric age up to the present.

In this production the star appears at her best and in the different episodes of the story her varied talents are given a wide field. Supporting Miss Janis, Bosworth, Inc., have selected an exceptional cast including such able players as Owen Moore, Myrtle Stedman, Hobart Bosworth, Harry Ham, Helen Wolcott and Joe Ray.

The producers, in staging this play which was also written by Elsie Janis, were called upon to secure an unusual variety of scenes and in this respect have gone to particular pains to give the subject the desired backgrounds. A striking contrast is offered when the film turns from the cave-man period, when animal skins were used both for furnishings and clothing, to the over-dressed Civil War age with its imposing Southern homes and quaint interiors and thence up to present metropolitan settings with their developments of city life. It is readily expected that this release will even win greater favor than any of the previous Janis film-plays.

Kathryn Osterman's work in "The Bludgeon" was so satisfying to the directors of Equitable that she has been signed to appear in four other productions during the forthcoming year.

Blanche Has Some Stunning Frocks

Blanche Ring is wearing some stunning frocks in the new Oliver Morosco picture, "The Yankee Girl." While Pasadena folk seemed much enthused when she appeared at the fashionable Hotel Huntington in her smart riding togs, and Santa Monica devotees of the surf thought her a dream in her bathing suit, yet it is the three evening gowns she uses in the play that deserve the real praise. One worn on the yacht is all cream satin and heavy deep fringes of crystal; another is of cream Chantilly lace combined with satin of the palest primrose; while a third is a rare Italian lace with chic touches of sapphire velvet. With these stunning creations Miss Ring wears her famous pearls and her equally celebrated Canary diamond pendant.

Blanche Ring, the Morosco star.

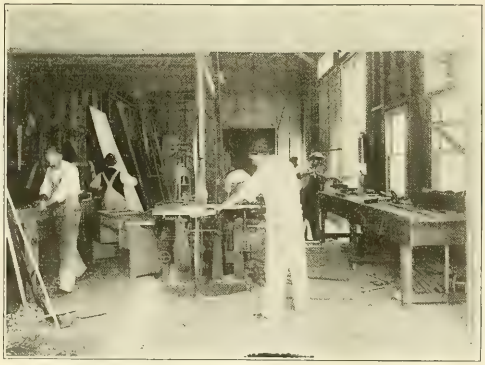
Metro Picture for New Theater Opening

Recognition of the high standard of Metro pictures was forcibly demonstrated this week when a Metro feature was selected for the opening of the Neighborhood Playhouse, a unique institution founded and directed by the Misses Irene and Alice Lewisohn, two philanthropic daughters of a millionaire, who began a campaign last season to raise the class of entertainment on New York's East Side. The Neighborhood Playhouse is one of the most attractive theaters in New York, and last season, after its opening, was given over to classic playlets, dancing, pantomime and like entertainment.

Owing to the increasing vogue of motion pictures it was decided to show a few of the very high class feature pictures this season from time to time, and Miss Grace Halsey Mills, manager of the theater, chose a Metro production for the opening. The picture chosen was "The High Road."

George F. "Lefty" Miller was married in Jersey City on September 24, by the mayor to Caroline Ryan Green of Springfield, Mass. "Lefty" is well remembered by the baseball profession, as he was formerly pitcher of the St. Louis Nationals, and before that played with Seattle, Norfolk, Denver, Williamsport and Butte. "Lefty" has been connected with Pathe Freres for the past three years.



Scenes in the New Lubin Studio at Coronado

The big outdoor studio which gives space enough for the erection of many sets.

The scenic loft where talented artists paint the canvasses necessary for sets.

The carpenter shop is one of the busiest places in the entire plant.

The general offices are models of efficiency, equipped with latest devices.

The wardrobe room where are stored costumes of every variety and style.

This massive gate impresses all who seek entrance to the studio and is useful besides.

Lubin's New Studio at Coronado

OCCUPIES EIGHT ACRES

THE Western branch of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, located at Coronado, California, is now housed in the new Lubin studio, one of the most complete and beautifully located plants devoted to the making of moving pictures, on the Pacific Coast.

Situated on the edge of San Diego bay, directly opposite the city of San Diego, it is surrounded by a scenic investiture which bespeaks the artistic taste of the one responsible for its selection.

The studio occupies some eight acres of ground. The office and administration building at one end is of most attractive and pleasing design and provides ample quarters for the office force and laboratories. At the other end of the grounds is a structure running along the edge of the bay, thirty by one hundred fifty feet and four stories high, designed of old English castle style architecture. Between these two buildings are the garage, stage, dressing rooms, store rooms, wardrobe room and the various miscellaneous buildings.

The entire grounds are surrounded by an attractive and ornamental cement wall, fourteen feet high. All of the buildings, including the stage, the carpenter shops, dressing rooms, garages, etc., are of cement. In the carpenter shops the latest wood-working appliances have been installed and in fact this is true in each construction department, so that the studio is practically self contained, being in a position to manufacture all of its new costumes, furniture, props and scenery. The comfort of the performers has not been neglected, as the dressing rooms are all of the very latest type of cement construction and are provided with hot and cold water and shower baths.

It is estimated that the total cost is something in excess of sixty thousand dollars and completing, as it does, a chain of Lubin studios which span the continent, it is a credit to the enterprise of the Lubin Manufacturing Company.

Gaumont Signs Cissy Fitzgerald

Cissy Fitzgerald, who will shortly make her appearance as a Mutual star in "A Corner in Cats," a single reel comedy being screened at the Gaumont studios, for release in the regular Mutual program, was christened Marie Kathleen Cecelia Fitzgerald.

She really started her life and her career on the stage under the abbreviated title of Cissy. It was because her brothers back in England had given her the name "Sis," and Cissy was so much easier to remember that it became her regulation footlight name. She first came to this country from England in "The Gaiety Girls" company, after a long and successful run at the famous Daly theater in London. She scored a tremendous success, and soon signed a contract with Charles Frohman, making her first appearance in "The Family," one of the most successful productions of the season. She did not remain in America very long, however, going home to accept a more lucrative engagement. Back in her native land, Miss Fitzgerald played for a number of years. Then she married and announced that she was to give up the stage forever and traveled all over the world with her husband, visiting Africa, India, Australia, China, Japan and almost every part of Europe.

Miss Fitzgerald returned to America about eighteen months ago. Shortly after she arrived she was engaged by the Vitagraph Company and remained there for some time, playing comedy parts.

New Knickerbocker Director

Stanner E. V. Taylor, the well known author-director, has been made director-in-chief of the Knickerbocker Star Features. This announcement is in accord with the company's policy of employing the very best of talent for its three-reel feature releases. Taylor's rise to success has been a rather swift one, starting with the Biograph Company as playwright for David W. Griffith. Under Griffith's tutelage, Taylor made rapid progress and it was there that he was taught the elements of moving picture directing. The Reliance Company was the next to claim Taylor and for them he directed his own photoplays, having such notables in his cast as Henry B. Walthall, James Kirkwood, Marion Leonard and Arthur Johnson. Taylor has also done some notable directing of Rex pictures and, for the past year, has been engaged in producing large independent features.

Besides possessing a skillful knowledge of technique, Taylor is an advanced student of human nature, and his directing shows the hand of one who has a sympathetic understanding of life and people.

Wurlitzer Awarded Prizes

The Board of Awards at the Panama-Pacific Exposition has recently confirmed the award of two grand prizes and two gold medals to the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company upon the Wurlitzer piano, the Wurlitzer player piano, the Wurlitzer unit orchestra, and the Wurlitzer harp.

Wurlitzer instruments received these honors in competition with musical instruments of all other makes, which seems conclusive proof that Wurlitzer instruments do excel. Upon investigation we find that the Wurlitzer piano is notable for the wonderful accuracy of all parts, and its scientific acoustic scale. The Wurlitzer player piano is distinguished for its expression devices and patent tracker. It plays with perfect human fidelity and is also equipped with a double sounding board. The Wurlitzer harp is the chosen harp of the greatest American and European concert harpists and also the exclusive harp of the Vatican, Rome.

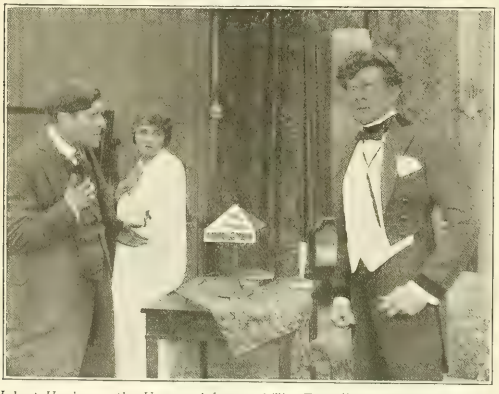
The Wurlitzer unit orchestra combines the majestic cathedral organ with full symphony orchestra, entirely controlled by one musician and the devices are used in America's finest theaters and auditoriums. A Wurlitzer unit orchestra has just been placed in the Isis theater, of Denver, at a cost of $50,000.

It is a well known fact that the exclusive selling plan of "One Price—No Commissions," together with extraordinary factory facilities, and increased production, enables the Wurlitzer company to sell through its great group of stores, famous lines of pianos, player pianos, etc., at prices 15% to 25% lower than similar quality can be purchased elsewhere.

EQUITABLE MAKES RECORD



Newest of Producing Firms Signs Amazing Number of New York Theaters for Its Product —Only Established Stars Engaged

One of the most remarkable accomplishments in the history of feature films, is that of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, which, through General Manager Felix F. Feist, announces that one hundred and thirty-two motion picture houses in greater New York have signed for the presentation of Equitable pictures during the forthcoming year. This remarkable response to the bare announcements of the newly formed Equitable gives some insight into the condition of the film market at the present time.

Equitable came into the field about nine weeks ago. That is, it began producing then. Its executive activities began four weeks ago and its releasing activities are but one week old. It was stated by Equitable that no stars or celebrated players would be engaged for productions who had no previous experience in film work. No star, no matter how important, who had not proven his or her camera worth, will be used by the Equitable. The experimental days are over. Mr. Feist and Mr. Selznick set about to procure such stars as have proven of undoubted value before the lens, with the result that twenty of the foremost stage stars are now under contract, or option to Equitable, including Gail Kane, Charles J. Ross, Cyril Scott, Kathryn Osterman, Muriel Ostriche, Margarita Fischer, Alexandra Carlisle, Thomas A. Wise, Florence Reed, Lenore Ulrich, Henry Kolker, Julius Steger, Helen Ware, Wilton Lackaye, Hilda Spong, Robert T. Haines, and Brandon Tynan. Each of these players have appeared in one or more important features, except Miss Carlisle, who first submitted to rigid tests in order to prove her screen possibilities. Miss Carlisle would not sign until she had proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that her features would register. Mr. Feist said that her appearance on the screen would be just as wonderful and dignified as her stage personality.

"We are going to eliminate the possibility of bad screen appearances by avoiding experimentation," declares General Manager Feist. "We are trying to secure such stars as have given entire satisfaction under the most adverse conditions and these stars we are prepared to offer more than a few weeks work. It will require more than a standing as a star to induce us to engage a player—they must be the right material for camera work—else, other producers are welcome to them."

The exhibitor who looks forward to certainties can anticipate Equitable's forthcoming productions.

Hobart Henley in the Universal feature "The Tenor"—a remarkable double exposure still.

Big Booking of V. L. S. E. Features

A run of unusual length for one company's productions has just been booked by the B. F. Moss Theatrical Enterprises from Joseph Partridge, manager of the New York exchange of the V. L. S. E. Stating on October 4, the Moss organization will show at its Eighty-sixth street and third avenue theater, six Big Four features in succession, for three days each. Those that have been selected are "The Sins of the Mothers," "Crooky," "The Island of Regeneration," "Playing Dead," "The Chalice of Courage," and "Mortmain."

These are all Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features, but following this run the Moss Enterprises expect to follow out the same plan with the features of the other companies of the V. L. S. E., until a point has been reached when all of the strongest recent productions of the combination have been shown, when the house will book the regular program of V. L. S. E. as each feature is released.

Associated Active in Los Angeles

The Navajo Company, one of the releasing companies on the Associated program, is very busy filming a two-reel comedy drama of western life entitled "The Bug and the Butterfly." The story deals with the adventures of two Easterners out West and tells how one proved able in a big emergency, and the other found the land of heart's desire. The great outdoors and the far west furnish the background for startling action and the lives of some very real people, the kind you meet out West every day. William E. Parsons, director of the Navajo brand, is in charge of this production which will shortly be released on the Associated program.

"Hypocrites" Fight Goes Merrily On

PASTORS PRAISE PICTURE

DURING the week just passed, the censors having shown no marked disposition to change their attitude toward "Hypocrites" in the state of Ohio, and the entire situation has become so red-hot as to cause ministers to preach sermons on the subject and politicians to try to stop the ministers' mouths.

For example, the Reverend Dr. J. J. Tisdale preached a sermon on "Hypocrisy" last Sunday evening during which he told his flock the simple, beautiful tale which forms the background of this inspirational screen drama. He said in part: "What does it mean in the Bible to stand before God naked? Does it not mean that God discerns the real in us in contradistinction to the false? Let us not shudder at this word 'naked.' Nakedness was never discovered until sin came to the world—remember that. Let us then observe no false modesty in our cry against naked truth. Rather let us welcome the truth which will uncover and destroy our false modesty. Hypocrisy is the deepest sin that stalks the earth. Let us be grateful for the discovery of this hidden sin—the naked truth."

Another staunch defender of "Hypocrites" is Rabbi Kornfeld. He is said to have spoken to several people who had condemned "Hypocrites" without having seen it—as a result of which a politician approached one of his friends and said: "You call Rabbi Kornfeld off of 'Hypocrites.' I have 9,000 votes for him in my hand. He is running for school commissioner. If he stops talking about 'Hypocrites' the 9,000 votes are his. If he continues to advocate this photoplay he will undoubtedly be defeated."

The foregoing illustrates the machinations of the petty politicians, who, without ever giving the cause a fair hearing are determined to accomplish their own end—to uphold the censor board—at no matter what the cost—in order to obtain the patronage and influence of the three members of the censor board and their friends.

"It is outrageous," exclaimed one fair minded citizen, "that such a condition should exist in the fair state of Ohio—that politicians should lend themselves to such despicable methods to withhold from the people of Ohio a masterpiece of art, when such outrageous plays as the 'Devil's Daughter' and others, containing no moral, but rather illustrating the vile effects that a vampire has upon men's homes, should be allowed to pass."

The matter of "Hypocrites" has now taken such hold of the public that numerous letters are being written to the editors of newspapers begging them to use their influence to see that "Hypocrites" is passed.

Meanwhile, Carl H. Pierce, recognizing the demand of the public for this picture, and being at present unable to show it—even privately—without fear of arrest by reason of the order of the attorney general, is now seeking an auditorium in order that the prominent ministers of Columbus—headed by the Reverend Dr. Tisdale—may address the people at a public mass meeting, telling them about "Hypocrites," and also what they think about the methods of the board of censors who could exercise so little intelligent discrimination.

METRO PICTURES MAGAZINE

Handsome Publication Designed for the Public is Placed on Sale—Arthur James and Merritt Crawford Head Its Editorial Staff

A publication of the "different" sort entered the motion picture field during the present week, when the first number of Metro Pictures Magazine made its bow to the public. The new magazine will be published weekly by the Metro Pictures Corporation and it is under the personal direction of Arthur James as editor, with an executive staff which includes Merritt Crawford as managing editor, Henry James as business manager, and George W. Herbst as advertising manager.

The first number of Metro Pictures Magazine is twenty pages with a cover in colors designed by Lambert Guenther, the art director of the New York Tribune. The cover has a full page picture of little Mary Miles Minter, starring in "Emmy of Stork's Nest," a Columbia Picture Corporation feature scheduled for early release on the Metro program. In its pages, profusely illustrated, are leading articles by Mme. Petrova, William Faversham, Emily Stevens, Edfrid A. Bingham, Hamilton Revelle, Tom J. Geraghty and others. It will be sold at five cents and its distribution will include news-stands.

In make-up and illustration the new publication can be rated among the very best magazines of the day and in keeping with the progress as well as the dignity of the motion picture industry and its appeal is distinctly popular.

The Metro has every reason to be proud of its new offering to the public.

Thanhouser Ball to Be Gala Night

Every year New Rochelle puts on its happy clothes and welcomes the screen stars of the East into its peaceful domains. The entire staff of the Thanhouser Film Corporation takes this little way of meeting their confreres in the industry, and all the performers and directors in and around New York City also take this way of having a mighty good time. This year it will be a great ball, which will be held in Germania Hall, New Rochelle, on Thursday, September 30. Needless to say all the Thanhouserites will be there, but so will the members of other companies. It is a peculiar fact that everybody has a soft spot for New Rochelle, but this is usually understood by those who know what a corking set of entertainers the Thanhouserites are. They have made New Rochelle's an open door for those who seek fellowship and congeniality.

The grand march will be led by Mignon Anderson and Morris Foster, the Thanhouser newlyweds. The ushers will be the Thanhouser twins, and the flower bearer the Thanhouser Kidlet. Among those who are expected to be there are Pearl White, Harry Benham, Maud Fealy, Gladys Hulette, Jack Harvey, John Adolfi, Florence Turner, Ethel Grandin, Paul Panzer, Louise Emerald Bates, William Garwood, Jack Noble, Sidney Bracey, Marguerite Snow, Mary Miles Minter, Wally Van, Edith Storey and numerous others. Arrangements are in the hands of John Lehnberg, the well-known character actor, who takes delight in providing for anything that gives pleasure to others. Edwin Thanhouser and the full executive staff will be present to help the festivities along.

Youthful Girl Accomplished

Helene Rosson, ingenue lead with Jack Richardson and Louise Lester in Director Donald McDonald's Mustang Company, has joined the ranks of youthful stars. Miss Rosson is but 17 years, yet she possesses a dramatic poise and an appreciation of dramatic values that many, her senior in both years and experience, fail to obtain. In the first release by this company, soon to be announced, Miss Rosson essays the role of a ward of a very bad man—"Breezy" Blake—which Jack Richardson will play. The influence of this man in her life, its effect and final undoing, her battle and her triumph, furnish a vehicle for some exceptionally emotional acting; in fact, a responsibility that few girls of equal age are called upon to assume in a dramatic way. The action of the story centers around her fight for that indefinite thing called "right," and against the insistent influence of her bad guardian. There is a wonderful weaving of the human emotions in the story, that cause one to hate the man, Blake (Jack Richardson) and endear to one's heart the frail, young creature whose life battle is being portrayed. Miss Rosson is peculiarly fitted to play young, sympathetic roles; and to do so with a vim and dash that do not detract from the beautiful girlishness of her work, but rather lift it from the oft-seen "milk-and-water" style, to definite, deft characterization. She is both artist and athlete. She wields the brush with the touch of a prize-winner and is an accomplished musician, playing both the piano and the violin.

Helene Rosson.

INCEVILLE ACTIVITIES

Warner Arrives to Begin Picture Work—Hart Company in Desert—Big Set Erected—Mary Boland in Grand Canyon

H. B. Warner, the notable star of the legitimate stage, has arrived at Inceville to fulfil a contract with Producer Thomas H. Ince, providing for his appearance in forthcoming Ince-Triangle features. The scenario of the drama in which he will make his debut has been completed and he is now awaiting the erection of sets before beginning his career as an Ince-Triangle star. Warner will play the part of a young minister, the role having been especially written around his particular abilities, and will have a strong cast of Ince stock favorites to support him.

William S. Hart, Clara Williams, Jack Standing and a notable list of others from Inceville, under the direction of Charles Swickard, are on the Mojave desert, this week, filming scenes for the current Ince-Triangle western drama in which Hart will be starred. An unusual fact in connection with the trip is that none of those making it will have the opportunity of seeing Hart, himself, execute a thrilling fall from a horse, as called for by the scenario. The fall will be made while the horse is galloping at top speed down the side of the foothills that fringe the desert stretch. At least, that's what the scenario says and Hart has never been known to "cheat."

A set that measures, over all, 128 feet in length and 38 feet in width is being built on one of the big Inceville stages this week for use in the spectacular war story in which Krank Keenan will be starred on The Triangle by Thomas H. Ince. It will depict the throne room in the palace of a barbarian king and will eclipse anything in the nature of stage settings ever before attempted by Ince. A feature of the set will be that it is to have a special flooring. This is designed to facilitate the erection of the rest of the set, which will include twenty mammoth pillars rising to a height of twenty-five feet. Keenan is portraying the part of a barbarian monarch in this production, which is being directed by Reginald Barker, and he declares the role to be the most horrible, in its character, that he has ever undertaken. It is a delineation, however, that the great actor excels in and Ince is counting upon him to score a tremendous success.

Mary Boland, formerly John Drew's leading woman, and Willard Mack, the author-actor-producer, left, this week, for the Grand Canyon of the Arizona to enact some scenes for the current Ince-Triangle feature in which they will be starred on The Triangle program. Accompanying Miss Boland and Mr. Mack is Frank Mills, the well-known New York leading man, who has a prominent part in the cast, and Director Walter Edwards, who is in charge of the production.

"Damaged Goods" Shown

The first showing of the photoplay production of Eugene Brieux's world-famous drama, "Damaged Goods," prepared by the Mutual Film Corporation, was given at the Broadway theater, New York City, on Monday morning, September 27, at ten o'clock. To it, President John R. Freuler had invted 2,500 of those most prominent in legal, medical, official and sociological circles. The introductory address was made by Dr. Carleton Simon.

The spoken play has been seen all over the world. Despite vicious opposition it had a run of almost a year in New York City alone. The novelization of the play, has had a sale of 300,000 copies in the United States and England and has been translated into and printed in seventeen languages.

"The parent who neglects to have his children see it," said Governor Whitman (then district attorney), "neglects every moral obligation to make secure the health and welfare of future generations."

The Pathe Seattle office has just closed a contract with the new million dollar Pantages theater in Seattle to run "Neal of the Navy" a full week for each episode.

Study Makes for Success

BY THEODORE W. WHARTON*

ON first receiving a request for an article giving the reason for my success, I felt that I had been asked to undertake an impossible task. I lay awake at nights trying to figure out why I had been successful. Suddenly it dawned upon me—Luck. I have been fortunate in finding good story material. I have been fortunate in finding splendid actors and camera men, and last but not least, fortunate in finding first class carpenters, scenic artists, property men, etc. To my mind the first requisite is a good plot. Without it actors, directors, camera men, etc., are useless. Then, the director must study the public taste. Find out what will please all and offend none. He must also consider himself, and not attempt work that does not interest him. For example: Give the same story to two directors. It appeals to one who may see possibilities in it which the other cannot fathom; he may make a good production of it, while the work of the other director goes on the shelf, because the story had not interested him in the first place. On the other hand, many directors make the mistake of discarding the story that has not captured their fancy at first, simply because they have not bothered to read it more than once. I recall an instance. In the days when $15 was the average price paid for a scenario, I was employed by a firm who insisted on their entire staff of directors reading all manuscripts and passing on them. Then if one was found acceptable it was sent to the boss for final reading. A certain story, written with lead pencil on a torn sheet of paper, had been read and cast aside by two directors. A third was reading it and as I came in threw it on my table (we had no desks in those days) with the remark: "Here, Wharton, you like jokes, read this." (It was intended for a dramatic story, by the way, but funny, pitifully funny.) I read it once and threw it down. Later, I saw it still lying where I had thrown it, glanced over it again. This time I saw a point, in fact, three distinct points or suggestions. It would have been absolutely impossible to make the story as intended by the author, but I took it to the boss, who read it and laughed. He had confidence in my judgment, however, and mailed the author a check for $5 and later received a grateful acknowledgment. The upshot of it was that I made three separate single reel productions, none of them in the least resembling the original story, and all of them a trifle above the standard of the day. More luck! I was fortunate in seeing what the others could not.

Theodore Wharton.

Regarding obstacles that I have had to overcome. The first was limit as to expenditure. In the days when only $400 to $500 per reel was allowed, I always refused to attempt to make a production that could not be made properly for less than $1,000 or more. I would lay it aside for the future, and seek a story that could be made correctly within the limit. The second had been censorship—something I heartily approve of, but believe to be very much abused. "I could a tale unfold," but that is another story. If there were one standard, it would be simple, but a picture passed by the National Board might be objected to entirely in Chicago; or Detroit might reject only certain scenes, while Los Angeles, while not objecting to those scenes, would select certain others upon which to base their objections. No two boards in accord! The wonderful intelligence and thorough knowledge of moving pictures shown by a majority of the censors is remarkable. I will cite a case: In a certain locality, where the censors were selected from the police force, a big husky Irish policeman was permitted to cast aside his uniform, put on a suit of store clothes, and act as a full fledged board of censorship. A picture depicting the theft of a jewel from the eye of an Indian idol was shown to him, and he immediately placed his ban upon it. Not because of the theft, or because of the effect on public morals, but "Because it desecrated the Hindoo religion, be-gorry!" I have overcome those conditions by censoring my own productions before wasting time and money on them. So after all, the censorship conditions have had its good result.

You ask about the technique and detail. That can best be answered by the word—study! I have surrounded myself with a library second to none, so far as moving pictures are concerned. I buy and read every book and publication that shows promise of supplying me with knowledge of things that may be useful in my business. Volumes of history and fiction, science and chemistry, furniture, interior decorations, works on applied and the fine arts on costumes, a lifelong habit of keen observation, in fact unremitting reading from the time I was six years old, has been a mine of wealth. The brains of all, from actor to property man, does the rest. My confidence in them inspires confidence in themselves and the best results are obtained.

One thing more. I keep in touch with what has been and is being done, so as not to imitate, except in cases where imitation shows sound judgment and good sense.

In conclusion, I will state that a complete knowledge of business as well as the artistic is the key to success.

*Producer for Pathé, Inc.

New Producing Company

The Vitascope Film Company, a new producing concern, is now filming a military comedy in two reels entitled, "A Training Camp Victory." The story is based on an up-to-date topic of a business man's adventures at the new business men's training camp at Ft. Sheridan and is being directed by J. Kendall Moore. Mr. Moore not only is the director, but plays the leading juvenile role, supported by Gloria Swanson, Robert Bolder and S. A. Rose.

Stedman Still with Morosco

The New York offices of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company most emphatically deny the report that Myrtle Stedman, the popular star who has been appearing under the Morosco banner since its inception, has left to join the forces of another producing company. Miss Stedman is at present actively engaged at the studios of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company in Los Angeles with whom she has a long term contract. A telegraphic despatch from Los Angeles states that Miss Stedman has never had any dealings whatever with the company with which she is supposed to have signed. Patrons of Paramount theaters all over the country will be glad to learn that there is no truth to the story affecting the future activities of Miss Stedman, as this star has become an immense favorite among the "fans." Miss Stedman's success, particularly since she joined the Oliver Morosco forces has resulted in her receiving many tempting offers from competitive producers, but in the case of the most recent announcement in connection with her acceptance of another contract, she states that she does not even know the company involved. Some of Miss Stedman's latest triumphs on the screen have been evident in such productions as "The Wild Olive," "Kilmeny," "Peer Gynt," and others of equal merit. The next production in which this splendid actress will appear for Oliver Morosco will be "Jane," a comedy by W. H. Lestocuque, in which Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant make their screen debut.

Myrtle Stedman.

Pathe's Coming Probert Productions

George Probert, whose portrayal of Oskar Von Guggen in "Innocent" and the cadet in "The Lure" caused such favorable comment by the press and public, and who has been featured in Pathe's forthcoming Gold Rooster play, "The Spender," has been engaged to take the principal role in "Nedra," another Gold Rooster play, now being produced for Pathe by Edward Jose. Probert will be ably supported by Fania Marinoff, who played opposite Clifton Crawford in Pathe's five-reel comedy, "The Galloper," and by Margaret Greene and Crauford Kent, all three screen celebrities.

"Nedra" on the screen is an adatation by George Brackett Seitz of the famous and popular novel of the same name by George Barr McCutcheon, and the swift action of the story makes it eminently suitable for the films. Edward Jose, to whose care Pathe has entrusted this Gold Rooster play, has already made for the Pathe feature program "The Beloved Vagabond" and "Simon the Jester," both by William J. Locke, and "The Closing Net," a Seitz adaptation of Henry C. Rowland's great story. Mr. Jose says there are opportunities for thrills in "Nedra" that it is not often the good fortune of a producer to have handed him.

MORE STARS FOR HORSLEY

Mabel Van Buren, Former Lasky Star, Donald Bowles, Grace Gibson, Marvell Spencer and Carl Le Veniss Among Those Engaged

David Horsley continues to add the names of stars to his already long list. For the past month each week has brought an announcement from him of new acquisitions to his producing staff and this week is no exception. The latest to enter into contracts with him are Mabel Van Buren, Donald Bowles, Grace Gibson and Marvell Spencer, all photoplayers, and Carl M. Le Veniss, a director.

Mabel Van Buren comes to Mr. Horsley from the Jesse L. Lasky studios, where she has been engaged for some time playing leading parts in the Lasky features released on the Paramount program. While all of her characterizations were of a high standard of excellence perhaps her greatest picture success was scored in the role of "The Girl," in "The Girl of the Golden West." In this release she attained great dramatic heights playing the difficult part with so thorough an understanding and finish that critics proclaimed her unsurpassable in the character.

Miss Van Buren's leading man is Donald Bowles, a great stock favorite in Los Angeles, where he appeared with the Burbank theater organization. He has had much experience on the speaking stage. He began his career when he was seventeen with the Herald Square theater company, New York. From New York Mr. Bowles went to Chicago to become leading man for Minnie Dupree, who was starred in Gen. Chas. King's "Fort Frayne." Then Edwin Thanhouser, the film magnate of today, but then guiding spirit of the Thanhouser Stock Company in Milwaukee, engaged him for his company. After playing ninety weeks with the Thanhouser Company Mr. Bowles joined the James O'Neill company in Buffalo and came to the Pacific coast with it. After the San Francisco fire Mr. Bowles went into vaudeville and played over the Orpheum circuit in a sketch called "Thou Shalt Not Judge." Then Oliver Morosco engaged him for his Burbank theater stock company in Los Angeles. Here Mr. Bowles remained for four years and it is this company which he leaves to join Mr. Horsley.

Grace Gibson, another of Mr. Horsley's new players, is considered one of the most beautiful actresses in motion pictures. She was formerly with the Vitagraph Company but later went into vaudeville, which she leaves to return to pictures, this time through the medium of Mr. Horsley's company.

Miss Marvell Spencer, the fourth of this week's acquisitions, was formerly with the Eclair Company. She played the leads in "The Beginning of the End," and was featured with George Larkins in "Red Tape," "The Unpardonable Sin," etc. Miss Spencer is of the ingenue type and shines particularly in characters that require winsomeness and prettiness.

Carl M. LeVeniss, the latest director to join Mr. Horsley's organization, is an old Reliance man. Mr. LeVeniss started in with Thanhouser at New Rochelle and then went to the Relience studio in New York. When D. W. Griffith took charge of the Reliance, Mr. LeVeniss joined the Eclair Company, with which he remained until his connection with Mr. Horsley. Before entering motion pictures Mr. LeVeniss was stage director with some of the famous old stock companies in the East. The experience thus gained he regards as most valuable in his present work.

It is likely that Miss Van Buren, Mr. Bowles, Miss Gibson and Miss Spencer will be the nucleus of the company which Mr. LeVeniss will direct.

That San Diego Banquet

The banquet given in honor of King Francis X. (Francis X. Bushman) and Queen Beverly (Miss Beverly Bayne) at the Cristobal Cafe in San Diego, Saturday, September 11, was one to be long remembered. Many notables of the stage and screen were present as were a number of well known editorial and press syndicate men. Among the most prominent in this capacity was William Randolph Hearst, who is seated directly in front of the first post to the left of the picture. Reading from the center of the table to the right end are the following: Francis X. Bushman, Miss Beverly Bayne, H. F. McGarvie, manager of exploitation of the exposition, his wife; Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Quality Pictures Corporation; Mrs. Charles Abrams, Charles Abrams, Mrs. William Alder, William Alder, John Powers, his wife; Miss Mabel Condon, Don Meaney, manager of productions, Quality Pictures Corporation; Mrs. James F. Kerr, Mrs. Don Meaney, James F. Kerr, assistant to Mr. McGarvie; Leigh Smith and George L. McFarlane, also of the exploitation of the fair.

The banquetters at the Christobal Cafe.

Reading from Mr. Bushman's right are Miss Helen Dunbar, Lester Cuneo, Mrs. Von Name. Guests at center table: H. P. Caulfield, business manager, Universal Film Company; Fred Klay, manager Lasky Company, and Sam Behrendt, in foreground to right. There are many more of prominence here, among them being members of the Balboa Company at the extreme left of the table, but the figures are so small that it is hardly possible to see them.

Certain that the war will last years longer, President Arthur S. Spiegel of Equitable is establishing a chemical department for the manufacture of developing fluids. Amidol and Metol are the two most requisite ingredients. These are extremely scarce now and the new department will concentrate on these two particular substances.

Philo McCollough in "Neal of the Navy"

When Philo McCollough was cast for the part of a Mexican military leader in "Neal of the Navy," which Balboa is filming for Pathe, he went to the public library in Long Beach and examined all the pictures he could find of Mexicans. The portrait of General Villa impressed him as the most characteristic. So he made up to conform to it.

Philo McCullough.

Southern California is filled with Mexicans scouting for their countrymen to go back home and fight for one side or the other. One of these recruiting agents passed the Balboa studio as McCollough was standing there in an indolent pose. He, approaching the actor, offered him an enlistment. As McCullough speaks a little Spanish, he carried his part for a while. Then he revealed his identity.

Philo McCullough is a native Californian. He has been in pictures four years now. He made his start at the Selig studio in the capacity of assistant director. Then he thought he would like to be a player. Since that time he has been in Mutual and Kalem releases.

Coming to Balboa last December, McCullough has been playing heavies. He appeared in several of the "Who Pays" pictures, "Straws in the Wind," and "The Rim of the Desert." Now, he is doing good work in "Neal of the Navy," the patriotic photoplay serial.

"Static Flashes" Discontinued

Static Flashes, the bright little California weekly motion picture newspaper which was started some nine months ago by "Capt. Jack" Poland, its editor and manager, and published under the auspices of the Static Club of America, the cameramen's organization, has been discontinued. The last issue was September 8.

The reasons, as announced, for the discontinuance of this interesting little paper are given by its editor, "Capt. Jack" Poland, who says: "The little paper was too small to become a financial self-sustainer and too expensive for members of the Static Club to continue to maintain as an exclusive club publication. An attempt was made to secure enough money through the sale of stock among motion picture leaders and players to enlarge the paper to eight or twelve pages, and make it a general paper devoted to all branches of the industry and to secure advertising. Those whom it was expected would be interested, however, did not take the proposition seriously, as the paper was too strongly identified with the cameramen and their interests as a club organ. For these reasons Static Flashes as a regular newspaper, for the present, anyhow, is no more. The paper may be published semi-occasionally by the Static Club, although this is doubtful, for it is too expensive as a luxury for the club members, many of whom do not appreciate the value of the publicity the paper gave the cameramen individually and the organization as a successful institution. The paper quits, however, entirely free of indebtedness for printing or supplies, with a clean record."

Thanhouser Secures Gladys Hulette

Edwin Thanhouser, "the wizard of New Rochelle," announces this week that he has secured for one of his stock companies Gladys Hulette, the erstwhile Edison star. Again, in making this engagement, Mr. Thanhouser, evinces his appreciation of legitimate talent. Miss Hulette, one of the most popular and youngest of leading women, has been seen in such Broadway productions as the "Blue Bird" and "Little Women" and has supported De Wolf Hopper, Madame Kalish, Madame Nazimova and Henry Miller. She is known as one of the best screen subjects in motion picturedom and she asks no consideration for her tender years. She is gifted with wonderful magnetism which helps her get through her marvelous store of emotional power. Her face has been pronounced screen perfection, and her thousands of admirers will no doubt be glad to learn that she has joined the New Rochelle organization. Her first release will be scheduled soon.

Gladys Hulette.

This will set at rest all rumors which have been current to the effect that Miss Hulette would withdraw from film work and accept an offer with one of the important Broadway managers.

Chapin-Lincoln Sales Head Returns

"If the opinions of exchangemen are worth anything," remarked H. Grossman, general sales manager of the Charter Features Corporation, sponsor for the Chapin-Lincoln Cycle, upon his return to New York from a tour of the Eastern cities, "then we have in Mr. Chapin and his Lincoln one of the biggest, if not the biggest thing ever successfully matured in the film industry. All were unanimous in voicing without hesitation their belief that the Chapin-Lincoln project, the feature of which seemed so full of possibilities, would even grow far beyond our most sanguine expectations.

"Never in my remembrance, and my experience dates from the birth of motion pictures, have I seen such genuine interest shown by exchangemen in a project. Why, in some cases it amounted almost to enthusiasm. In fact my tour was made at the earnest solicitation of several of the foremost exchangemen in the East, so that they might become more fully acquainted with our proposition."

Mr. Grossman visited Boston, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Washington.

When asked whether he observed any favorable change in business conditions, he answered, "Of course my limited time would not allow me to go very deep into the investigation of that subject, but the general note of the sentiments expressed by the people whom I met was one of confidence and optimistic belief that affairs were much better now than for some time past and were slowly and surely coming back to normal."

Cincinnati Now V. L. S. E. Branch

The second new branch office to be created within as many weeks has been opened at Cincinnati by the Big Four, with Robert S. Shrader, who has been managing the sub-office of the V. L. S. E. in that city, in charge. The new releasing exchange will occupy an entire building at 129 West Seventh street, with quarters that are as commodious and as convenient as those of any branch office in the West.

A former two-story and a half private dwelling, the office of the new branch will occupy a total floorage of 3,500 square feet. Carpenters, masons, electricians, etc., are working day and night to make the necessary alterations and additions, in order to bring the Big Four house to completion at the earliest possible moment.

Large plate glass fronts are being put in that will permit of beautiful window displays. The first floor, of course, will be used for the general offices. In the front of the second floor will be the poster room. In the rear is a film vault containing four windows and a fire proof door. Shelves are being erected to hold 3,000 reels. In the rear of the building is a brick annex which will be fitted up as a projection room, and where pictures will be thrown for a distance of 25 feet from the projection window to the screen.

Mr. Shrader, who will direct the destinies of the Big Four in the Queen City's territory, has made an enviable record for himself in developing V. L. S. E. business there. He will cover the southeastern portion of Indiana, parts of Kentucky and West Virginia, and the southern half of Ohio.

Seven New Mutual Offices

Seven new distributing offices are being established by the Mutual Film Corporation, giving the organization a total of sixty-eight such offices in the United States and Canada.

The new offices are located in: Escanaba, Mich., Fargo, N. D., Cairo, Ill., Wichita, Kan., Fort Smith, Ark., San Antonio, Tex., and Houston, Tex.

All of these offices will be open by October 15, and they are ready to receive correspondence now. The new offices will have the complete Mutual program and Master-Pictures.

They have been established to meet the increasing demand for the new Mutual program and to give better service to territories in which they are located.

The popularity of the Essanay western photoplays has increased so greatly that G. M. Anderson now is putting out a series of two act dramas besides his regular releases of one act Broncho Billy films.

Metro to Release News Weekly

SERVICE BEGINS IMMEDIATELY

METRO'S record for achievement in motion picture progress set a new high mark this week with the announcement that President Richard A. Rowland has executed a contract with H. P. Wayman, president and general manager of the National News Weekly, under the terms of which the Metro Pictures Corporation in co-operation with more than a score of the leading daily newspapers in the most important cities of the United States will release 1,000 feet of news film each week. Under this arrangement Metro at once takes over the entire output of the great organization of associated newspapers and camera-men included in the National News Weekly, which since the middle of summer have been releasing its product through the World Film Corporation.

To give an idea of the importance and high calibre of the newspapers associated with Metro and the National News Weekly in the conduct of this notable enterprise it is only necessary to name them. Included in the list are the Philadelphia Public Ledger, St. Louis Times, New York World, Milwaukee Journal, Buffalo Enquirer, Chicago Evening Post, Atlanta Constitution, Cleveland Leader, Omaha Bee, Cincinnati Enquirer, Dallas News, Baltimore News, Washington Times, New Orleans Times-Picayune, Detroit Times, Minneapolis Journal, and Pittsburgh Dispatch. Several other important dailies in cities where the National News Weekly has representatives are at present completing arrangements looking toward affiliation with Metro and the big organization of which Mr. Wayman is the head. The names of these newspapers will be announced later, as rapidly as the final contracts are signed.

The new "Weekly" will be regularly incorporated in the Metro program during the coming week, or to be exact, with the next issue of the National Weekly. Thereafter it will be released regularly in the Metro program in conjunction with the feature pictures of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., Popular Plays and Players, Quality Pictures Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation and other producing companies, which distribute their output through Metro.

A portion of the Weekly will be devoted to a picture review of the local events in the city and surrounding territory where it is shown. The remainder will be given over to subjects of national interest from the other large cities of the country, where Metro exchanges are located and in which the National News Weekly has clients. Each film will be known by the name of the newspaper in that territory that is affiliated with Metro and the National News Weekly, in conjunction with the words "Metro Weekly."

The new Metro Weekly offers tremendous possibilities to the exhibitors and the newspapers in the same territory to co-operate for their mutual advantage. Each newspaper will be able to give to its readers an entirely new and valuable service, placing local news and the events of the nation on the screen. Residents of each city and the surrounding territory will be able to read about important local happenings in their favorite paper and later see them in motion pictures at their neighborhood theater.

"News Only" will be the watchword of the "Weekly." The new Metro service will not be devoted—except when they are of purely local interest—to processions, parades, monument unveilings, and the usual stereotyped picturizations that are commonly offered, but to happenings that are of wide and genuine news value.

In the twenty cities where Metro exchanges are located, as well as in the others where the National News Weekly has representatives, an expert cameraman will work under the direction of the city or managing editor of the newspaper affiliated with Metro in that territory. There are twenty-five of these cameramen and each will take upwards of five hundred feet weekly of the chief events of news interest in his section. These will be sent direct to the home office of the National News Weekly, 133 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill., where the film will be edited and selections made of the most important news happenings in the twenty-five leading cities and adjacent territory, and this selection made into five hundred feet of news film of national interest. Thus each city will have 1,000 feet of news film, one-half of strictly local character and the other national in scope.

All the Metro Weekly camera-men are on regular salary, none working on the payment-for-footage system generally in vogue. Each man has had special instruction in securing the particular type of negative required and has a keen nose for news. As an inducement for obtaining unusual and exclusive features, each man who sends in local pictures of sufficiently broad interest as to be included in the national weekly, receives a liberal bonus in addition to his regular pay.

ENGLISH NEWSPAPER WRONG

Attacks Upon American Film Manufacturers as Being "Enemies of the Allies" Unjustified, Particularly in Case of William N. Selig

Several obscure newspapers in the British Isles, according to press clippings received in this country, have been publishing undeserved and unjust attacks on American manufacturers of motion pictures. One or two of these publications have rather broadly intimated that the American motion picture industry is controlled by "the enemies of the Allies," and such expressions as "their growing power in England," etc., are liberally interspersed in the text.

While it is not thought that these more radical newspapers will influence thinking and more broad-minded people, yet it may be just as well to correct some of the unjust assertions given publicity in one or more of these newspapers, particularly for the reason that a number of individual manufacturers of motion pictures are singled out for targets for personal abuse.

The Selig Polyscope Company, for example, long ago announced the policy of strict neutrality on the subject of the unfortunate condition of affairs in Europe, and that policy has strictly been adhered to. No films have been put in production that would bear in any detail whatsoever on the warfare in Europe, and no such plays will be released in the future.

It may be well here to outline the personal history of the controlling heads of the Selig Polyscope Company in order that no future misunderstanding so far as this particular company is concerned can occur.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, was born in Chicago, Ill., on March 14, 1864. He is a son of the late F. J. Selig. William N. Selig was educated in the Chicago public schools and was united in marriage to Mary H. Pinkham, of Stockton, Cal., on September 7, 1900. He became interested in photography and invented many appliances used in motion picture photography. He has been actively engaged in the motion picture business since 1896, and is president of the Selig Polyscope Company of Chicago, Ill., Los Angeles, Cal., and of London, England. He was the first motion picture manufacturer to make a pretentious historical photodrama, "The Coming of Columbus," and was the first producer to introduce wild animals in photoplays. He financed expeditions of Prof. Frederick Starr to the interior of Africa, Korea, Japan and the Philippines; of Dr. E. B. McDowell to Africa and India; and of Emmett O'Neill to the Amazon river in 1912.

Mr. Selig is a member of the Presbyterian church; in politics is a Republican; belongs to the Masonic fraternity and his home is in Chicago, Ill. He has probably accomplished as much as any one person in making interesting scenes of the British possessions known to the American people through the mediumship of motion pictures. His business interests in England are extensive and he frequently visits the British Isles. At the time war was declared in Europe, Mr. Selig was in Paris, France. He remained in France and in London for a number of weeks, and in both countries he donated liberally to the Red Cross organizations.

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, was born in Paris, France. For many years he was prominently identified with Pathe Freres before joining the Selig Polyscope Company.

Carl Pierce Host at Dinner

Carl H. Pierce, special representative for Bosworth, Inc., gave a little dinner party last Friday evening at the Virginia grill in Columbus to some of the prominent newspaper executives and artists of the city, after which a private showing of "Hypocrites" was given to the guests who unanimously pronounced it one of the most beautiful and artistic photoplays they had ever seen.

Scene from Mustang's "Breezy Bill, Outcast."

The menu cards were printed on deckled edged white stock, embossed in gold, the name of each guest appearing on the cover. The inscription read: "To those loyal friends who have stood and are standing so faithfully by their conceptions of fair dealing and truth, this slight appreciation is given."

At the tables were favors for the guests consisting of little silver bells for the ladies with which they could accompany the delightful cabaret which the Virginia affords, the beautiful singing of Miss Florence MacCulloch, a noted Columbus dramatic soprano, being a feature of the evening. Each male guest received a Columbus souvenir spoon in token of the occasion. One of the guests asked what was the significance of spoons for the men, whereupon Mr. Pierce asked if "spoons" were not usually a fitting accompaniment of "bells."

Mr. Hague, one of the executives of the Ohio State Journal, made the toast of the evening to the host, declaring: "Here's to the one that put the columns in Columbus," referring to the numerous columns "Hypocrites" has received in the Columbus papers to say nothing of hundreds of articles in the other Ohio papers.

Among those invited were: Max Stearn, owner Majestic theater; his sister, Miss Bertha Stearn; Joseph R. Hague, Ohio State Journal; Mrs. Joseph R. Hague; John M. McCardle, one of the leading musicians of Columbus; Mrs. John M. McCardle; Miss Alice Coon Brown, dramatic editor Ohio State Journal; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Willard, of the Hayden Clinton bank; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Columbus Evening Dispatch; Mr. and Mrs. Raper, of the same paper; J. A. Maddox, manager of the Majestic; Mrs. J. A. Maddox.

The private showing of "Hypocrites" was given with accompanying music by one of the leading organists of Columbus, who later said this about the photoplay: "I was so impressed by that picture that I dreamed of it all night. It is the most beautiful work of art I have ever seen. My wife and daughter were there also—we have talked about nothing else ever since. How any board could turn down a picture of that character is beyond my comprehension. I consider that anyone who misinterprets that picture and pretends to derive therefrom anything but good, is of an unbalanced mind."

Mr. Hague, in speaking to a friend later, said: "I would consider anyone who would place a false concept upon that picture to be a degenerate."

"The Unwritten Law" Next

Edwin Milton Royle, author of "The Squaw Man" and one of America's most prolific writers, is soon to have another of his celebrated plays adapted to the motion picture screen. Announcement from the California Motion Picture Corporation's studio at San Rafael is to the effect that Royle's "The Unwritten Law" is now being produced for early release. It is intended that its showing throughout the country shall closely follow that of "Salvation Nell," the most recent of the California productions, and one which has won unstinted praise from the motion picture press.

In fact, the work of Beatriz Michelena in the title role of "Salvation Nell" is largely responsible for the California Corporation's securing the picture rights to "The Unwritten Law." Mr. Royle had, previous to his negotiations with the present producers, had numerous offers for his play from other leading motion picture concerns. It was Miss Michelena's interpretation of the character of "Nell" that decided him that here was the screen. The part calls for the same versatility and power of emotional impersonation as does "Salvation Nell."

The scenario for the motion picture of the story has been prepared by Capt. Leslie Peacocke, with both Mr. Royle and Miss Michelena in frequent consultation. When negotiations for the play were closed with Mr. Royle, Miss Michelena was in New York City for purpose of seeing the initial presentation there of "Salvation Nell" for the press and the motion picture trade. She consequently delayed her return to California until she had worked out the details of her next production with the author and the scenario writer.

Tooker's Rise Rapid

William H. Tooker, who for the past fourteen months has played the leading male parts in all the productions of the Life Photo Film Corporation, is an actor of long standing on the legitimate stage, having appeared under the management of David Belasco, Klaw & Erlanger, and under the personal management of the late Charles Frohman for over seven years. Supporting such stars as Fanny Davenport, Clara Bloodgood, John Mason, Emma Dunn, Emmett Corrigan and many others of note. Mr. Tooker was well schooled in all phases of dramatic art, which no doubt accounts for his finished work in the motion pictures. Mr. Tooker began his theatrical career as a singer in the old Tiffany theater in San Francisco and from there he went into Grand Opera where he performed with many of the leading singers of the day. Mr. Tooker also had considerable experience in stock theatricals and for over four consecutive years appeared in one theater in Minneapolis. His advent into the field of the silent drama was with Laura Nelson Hall in the feature picture "Dope," which attracted much attention throughout the world, and Mr. Tooker's work in this picture resulted in an offer to star with the Life Photo Company which he accepted and with whom he remained until the firm ceased producing. "The Ordeal," one of the pictures in which Mr. Tooker played the leading character, was ordered shown before the king and queen of England. His work has been pronounced by the critics as being the highest form of dramatic acting they have ever been privileged to witness.

William Tooker.

Six Releases in November

As a result of the disastrous fire which destroyed the studios of the Famous Players Film Company and which necessitated the revision of the Paramount program for the next three months, due to unavoidable changes in the Famous Players release dates, that concern will have six releases on the Paramount program in November in order to regain the dates it lost in September and October through the necessity of having to retake scenes in subjects scheduled for earlier release, which were partly destroyed in the fire. This is the first time since the organization of the Paramount Pictures Corporation that one producer has had six releases in one month.

The November program of the Famous Players includes Marguerite Clark in "Still Waters," by Edith Barnard Delano, scheduled for November 4; Mary Pickford in the much-discussed screen version of John Luther Long's great classic, "Madame Butterfly," November 8; John Barrymore in "The Red Widow," November 11; Marguerite Clark in an elaborate picturization of Mark Twain's master-work, "The Prince and the Pauper," the first work of the great American humorist to be filmed, November 15; Charles Cherry in the international dramatic triumph, "The Mummy and the Humming-Bird," November 18; and Pauline Frederick in an impressive photo-production of Robert Hichens' famous novel and play, "Bella Donna," November 29.

What's in a Name?

The General Film Company, successor to the Yale Feature Film Company of 3931-33 Olive street, St. Louis, last week notified the post office authorities that it had received incorporation papers under the laws of Missouri, and that it was the only firm authorized to do business under that name, says the St. Louis Republic.

The action probably will lead to a legal contest between the new company and the General Film Company, the national organization bearing the same name, having an office at 3610A Olive street, and having offices in nearly all the larger cities in the United States, Canada and Mexico. This firm has not incorporated under the laws of Missouri. The officers of the new company, taking advantage of this condition, obtained incorporation papers.

Sam Lears of the Lears Theater Supply Company, is president, F. M. Call of the Standard Adding Machine Company is vice president and J. D. Bone of Yale Poster Mounting Company is secretary of the incorporation. The new company also will open an office at Kansas City, but for the present will confine its operations to St. Louis and Kansas City.

Mutual Weekly's Quick Work

A terrible cave-in of the new subway construction work at Seventh avenue and Twenty-fourth street, New York City, occurred Wednesday, September 22, about 8 a. m. The Mutual Weekly's cameraman received word of this about 9 a. m. and that same afternoon, this subject was shown as a "Mutual Special Release," in the New York theaters, as well as copies being dispatched to all points throughout the country. The Mutual Weekly is produced by the Gaumont Company, at Flushing, N. Y.

The "Kaleidoscopic Plot"

No program of recent issue has caused the comment that has followed the showing of the Thanhouser picture, "A Disciple of Neitzsche," the first of Mr. Thanhouser's new "Than-o-play" brand of three-reelers.

Phillip Lonergan.

The unique story, the deft handling of deep philosophy, has brought to light the fact that the author, Phillip Lonergan, is the pioneer in an advanced school of photoplay writing. He is one of the regular Thanhouser scenario staff, and a master of conception and technique. Those who know his work are of the opinion that Lonergan can get more action to the square foot than most authors. His idea of a plot he illustrates by coining an apt phrase—"kaleidoscopic plot." The action of the kaleidoscope, the ever-changing view, each a complete, systematic unit that links perfectly with the view that comes before or after it—that, he says, is the structure of the ideal plot. "It is wrong to have a story hinge on just one climax," says Mr. Lonergan. "The public pays equally for every foot of picture, and each foot should contribute equally to the entertainment. I have seen stories where padding was offered as an excuse for creating atmosphere. A good plot, well acted, creates its own atmosphere; action that is plausible and clear can be stripped down to its barest machinery and no audience will ask more than that. To establish the relations of characters is absolutely a matter of action, and in drama particularly so. If the playwright will stop to analyze the matter, he will find that the swifter the action, the better is the opportunity for suspense, surprise and other dramatic elements.

W. N. Selig Acts for Films

A recent release of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial is occasioning widespread interest owing to the fact that it shows a transcontinental telephone conversation between William Randolph Hearst and William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company. Mr. Hearst is shown at his summer home in California conversing with Mr. Selig, who is shown in his private offices in Chicago, Ill. The film is the more interesting to the public for the reason that it presents for the first time a motion picture of Mr. Selig, the man who has accomplished so much for the motion picture art. He is shown seated at his desk, responding to the telephone call, and then conversing with Mr. Hearst, who is thousands of miles distant.

Knickerbocker Again Opens

Despite the subway cave-in directly before its doors, the Knickerbocker theater in New York continues to entertain the crowds drawn there by Triangle plays. As the cave-in, due to the undermining for the new Broadway subway, occurred on Saturday evening, the theater was closed by police orders for that night and the next day. On Monday, however, the box office was transferred from the front door to the side, and the crowds were easily and safely handled.

Orpheum Books Paramount

By a new arrangement entered into by Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and the Paramount Film Corporation, the Orpheum theater on State street, which heretofore has devoted itself to a five-reel, first run program, will begin showing Paramount pictures. Beginning Sunday the first Paramount release will be shown at the Orpheum. Mary Pickford in "Esmeralda" will be shown Sunday and Monday. The next Paramount release will be shown Friday and Saturday. This will give the Orpheum theater exclusive Paramount service every Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, with two releases showing two days each. On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday a program of five first run feature pictures will be furnished by the General Film Company. The performance at the Orpheum is continuous from eight in the morning until midnight. This will be the first time that Paramount pictures will be shown at the price charged by the Orpheum theater.

Players Enjoy Aeroplane Flight

The Eastern Film Corporation, with large studios located just outside of Providence, has engaged Jack Magie, the famous birdman of New England, to appear in several pictures, and before a crowd of one thousand people at Oakland beach on Sunday last, Magie made a sensational flight, carrying with him Wilfred Clarke, who is assuming the leading role in the comedy entitled "The Triple Entente." Several preliminary scenes were taken on the shores of the beach, and then before the eyes of the interested onlookers, Mr. Clarke took his place beside Magie and the airship with the two men ascended high in the air, the picture camera following its many gyrations and dips as it circled the bay. A daring feature during the taking of the scenes for "The Triple Entente" was the flight made by Marguerite Chaffee, leading lady of the Eastern Film Corporation. Miss Chaffee, who holds many records for feats of athletic prowess, is an experienced flyer, and the sight of this young girl as she piloted the flying craft through many intricate dips and turns at a dizzy height held the spectators spellbound. "The Triple Entente," the comedy film showing these scenes, will shortly be released.

Marion Leonard Again in Films

Marion Leonard, who needs no introduction in filmdom, has been engaged to appear regularly in the releases of the Knickerbocker Star Features. This will not interfere with the company's policy of putting Broadway stars in regular service, as it is their intention to feature some male star in each of these releases with Miss Leonard supporting him in the leading female role. Before joining Knickerbocker, Miss Leonard scored an enviable screen reputation with the Biograph, Reliance and Rex companies.

The first appearance of Miss Leonard in the Knickerbocker Star Features releases will be in "The Dragon's Claw," released October 13. Walter Hampden, famous for his work in "The City" and "The Servant in the House" is starred in this production.

Work on the group of new concrete studio buildings at the Keystone Film Company's plant in Edendale, Cal., is progressing rapidly. The administration building will be the first to be completed.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil G. Coward — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 9, 1915 Number 15

Is Britain Trying to Boycott American Films?

THE European madness has reached the motion picture business at last. Film trade papers in England are obsessed with the fear of the alien. It may be an honest fear, inspired by those hallucinations of espionage and treachery under which the tight little isle is suffering now with all the superstitious dread of the middle ages. Or it may be a hypocritical fear, seeking the advantage of the occasion for the boosting of home industry. Whatever the true motive, the British papers are attacking certain American manufacturers because, forsooth, their names do not sound English!

The problem of names has become serious in England since the war started. It is said that gentlemen of somewhat ambiguous cognomens, such as Berg, Shafer, and even Smith, have been subjected to all sorts of suspicion and calumny, on the theory that it is better to punish an innocent countryman and compatriot than to let a possible German escape.

Now, it must be admitted that there are engaged in the film business in America a number of gentlemen whose names might readily be misinterpreted by excited and overwrought volunteer censors. We can see no harm in mentioning some of these names right here: Lubin, Selig, Selznick, Laemmle, Baumann, Zukor, Kessel, and doubtless others.

These men are all American citizens. Furthermore, they are American business men, responsible in large part for one of the biggest and richest industries of all those for which America is world-famous. By sheer merit of their product, they have not only captured this country, but have crossed the Atlantic and established their commercial supremacy in the British Isles and on the Continent. They are so very American in all their personal attributes and wide-awake business methods that not a European, British or otherwise, would have dreamed of calling them anything else until the war gave excuse. We are forced to believe that the British objection to them lies not in their quasi-German patronymics, but in THE FACT THAT THEY ARE AMERICAN.

The British trade has good reason to be jealous of American progress. The British people have become enthusiastic film fans—provided they can see American-made films. So far as motion pictures are concerned, they are—like all the human race—patriotic when other things are equal. They would prefer British films if British films were as good as American films. But they are not.

American-made films have won supremacy abroad by merit alone. Remove them from the British market, and the people of England would have to be satisfied with pretty poor programs. But no doubt the English film manufacturers figure that the public would take even their poor stuff rather than no pictures at all.

We don't believe for a minute that the names of Messrs. Selig, Selznick, Laemmle, Zukor, et al., have anything to do with the situation. Our English cousins are not so silly as that. Their trade paper attacks on these American makers are inspired by the urgings of the English trade, which sees a forelorn hope of getting a little business in its own country.

This is an unfair method of competition over which our Sherman and Clayton Acts and our federal courts have no jurisdiction. Therefore the American manufacturers must continue to rely upon the very thing that has caused this commercial jealousy—the superiority of their product. We don't believe the British picture fans will stand for the boycotting of their most popular brands of film just because their American makers happen to have family names which may seem, to an excited British imagination, to have a slightly Teutonic flavor.

Hypocrites

THE Ohio Censor Board balked when it met a film named Hypocrites. Unfortunate title!—unfortunate, that is, in Ohio. It stared the censors in the face like a materialized accusing conscience. How could they pass it without acknowledging a horrible sense of fitness?

"Hypocrites—the Ohio Board of Censors."

Yet how could they kill it without still further admitting the appropriateness of that haunting title?

Dead men tell no tales; but murdered films rise up to confound their censors before the people. The people accept the testimony; but the evil work goes on. The great, inert public sees, believes, talks; but it does not act.

We scorn the cheap politician and the petty grafter; they are coarse and brutal, utterly ignorant, beneath our contempt; yet they play their game and get away with it because we are "too proud to fight."

We scorn the Ohio Board of Censors; we feel contempt for the narrowness it has exhibited, the ignorance we cannot avoid attributing to it. Yet it plays its game; our contempt does it no injury, because thick hides are notoriously scorn-proof.

We cannot be too proud to fight the Ohio Board of Censors, or too busy to fight it—any of us. There are good men fighting it hard now. They need help. Give it to them. Jump in with both feet and both fists, and make this outrageous institution a horrible example for all other inquisitorial bodies and enemies of free speech. Keep them busy in the courts; push them through all the legal mills available; prove them ridiculous in the light of twentieth century civilization; brand them illegal in the intelligent view of unbiased jurists.

The Ohio Board of Censors has thrown down the gauntlet before not merely "Hypocrites," but the whole motion picture industry. Either accept the challenge and fight to the last legal trench or forget it and let the censors censor undisturbed by your outcries.

"Picture Theater Advertising"

A most comprehensive little volume entitled "Picture Theater Advertising," from the pen of E. W. Sargent, and published by the Chalmers Publishing Company, of New York, has just been issued. The book is well printed, well bound, and treats in a thorough manner of picture theater advertising, the text being illustrated with frequent samples of good and bad advertising and examples of type arrangement and size.

Some idea of the nature of the book may be obtained from such chapter headings as "Advertising Pictures for the House," "Advertising on the Screen," "Newspaper Advertising," "Type and Typesetting," "Copy for House Programs," etc.

Just a Moment Please

That old phrase "They're all doing it now," never had a more apt meaning than when applied to the publicity men getting out house organs or private newspapers of their own.

This week it is Arthur James who busts into the limelight with the Metro Picture News, and a mighty newsy little sheet it is, too, Arthur. Permit us to extend you belated congratulations on its typographical appearance and general breeziness.

But then it ought to be good, with the class of stars and the kind of films James has to talk about.

ANOTHER NIGHTMARE

Speaking of Arthur James, reminds us that somebody in his sanctum went crazy about the same time as our contributor of last week, who sent in a sequel to "The Seven Suffering Sisters," said sequel being made up of the titles of V. L. S. E. films, for we are in receipt of a regular tear squeezer of a story whose plot centers about the titles to a number of well known Metro productions.

If the class will come to attention we'll present the offering for your entertainment. It runs as follows:

"Cora," who would always have "Her Own Way," went down "The High Road" to meet "Fighting Bob," and he, war-like as ever, took "The Flaming Sword" in his hand and swore to kill "Satan Sanderson," to be revenged for "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." However, "The Vampire," who was of "The Royal Family," and always wore the insignia of "The Second in Command," wanted to see "The Shadows of a Great City," and as she was "Always in the Way," her parents let her go with "The Cowboy and the Lady" to see "Marse Covington" in "The Sealed Valley," and there try to make "Her Great Match." But "When a Woman Loves" someone else, as she did, and having "The Heart of a Painted Woman" besides, it is hard for her to get "The Right of Way" over "The Bridge" or "The Bigger Man," who stands between her and "The Middleman," whom she loves, chiefly because she is regarded as "An Enemy to Society." But he said to her "Greater Love Hath No Man," and if you have "The Soul of a Woman" you will be "My Best Girl" and I will buy you a hat with "Four Feathers" on it.

Zounds, men, there's treason in the camp! The w. k. General Film Co., long established and celebrated in many portions of the commonwealth, bids fair to lose its name and reputation in Missouri, all because the Yale Feature Film Co., of St. Louis, has seen fit to change its name to The General Film Company and obtain incorporation papers under the new cognomen. According to a St. Louis daily, the larger concern has never incorporated in Missouri and therefore may have some difficulty in retaining its name.

CAN ANYBODY SOLVE THIS MYSTERY?

The pop. Bennie Ziedman, press agent of Fine Arts Films, writes us that the well known Douglas Fairbanks will arrive in our fair city on October 2nd and that he will appreciate it if we extend the glad hand to him upon his arrival, but neglects to tell us the road over which he is to travel or the depot at which he is to arrive. Gosh Bennie, Chi. is a big burg and we got moren 1 depoo. We'd hate to miss "Dug," and yet we'll be darned if we know just where to look for him.

OUR BURG

Anita King, the Paramount Girl, what is driving her bubble from Los Angeles to Noo Yawk, arrived in Our Burg this wk. en route to the Effete East, and said "Howdy" to a number of our prom. cits gathered at the Strand theater.

Speaking of bubbles reminds us that the pop. Joe Finn is back once more from a trip to Mpls. and the reunion between him and his beloved auto was heart rending. The w. k. contraption when Joe drives blew out a tire and lit up both headlights at the sight of its kind master.

Andrew J. Cobe of the E. E. was a bus. visitor to our midst this wk.

A number of our so called swells was seen dusting off their glad rags this wk. preparatory to the big show on Sat. nite, when Harry Aitken is scheduled to open his new opry house, which he calls the Studebaker, with Try-angle fillims.

M. F. Judell, formerly of the local Mutual offis, has went to Madison, Wis., where he is educating his brain at the w. k. University.

In answer to "Old Subscriber," who writes in to inquire why we never pull any of our wheezes in verse, we're going to cop a line from the stuff of the editor of the Minusa Minstrel and answer: It couldn't be any "verse."

And we're sure you'll agree with us.

Ain't so?

N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"In the Palace of the King"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

WHAT is beyond all question the greatest photoplay ever released under the Essanay trade mark will be offered the exhibitors of the country on October 11, when "In the Palace of the King," adapted from the novel of the same title by F. Marion Crawford, is released.

Fred E. Wright is credited with the direction of this Essanay masterpice and he has surely performed his work well, down to even the smallest detail. Sets of magnificent grandeur are used at frequent intervals and the court-yard scenes, in which the return of Don John of Austria and his victorious army from the field of battle is shown, surpass anything ever attempted in a local studio. Hundreds and hundreds of supernumeraries are used in this spectacular parade and they are lavishly costumed, most carefully drilled and photographed from the best possible angle in every case. This scene goes over with a bang and lends just the right atmosphere for the following scenes in which intrigue, plotting and counter plotting play such important parts.

Another stupendous scene that is worthy of special mention is the ballroom set and the throne-room in the royal palace. Extreme care has been taken to accurately reproduce the royal chambers as described in the novel and surely the effect is regal in every respect. The cameraman, too, is deserving a bit of praise for the care taken, particularly in the big scenes, and photographically as well as from the standpoint of direction alone, the production stands as one of the best Essanay has ever released.

Richard Travers is cast as Don John of Austria, the figure about whom revolves the complications of the plot, and this popular favorite looks every inch the warrior as he rides in fresh from the field of victory to salute Don Phillip II, the king of Spain. E. J. Ratcliffe, as Don Phillip, has a most difficult role to interpret but he never fails to impress by his kingly manner and pompous way. He "gets over" his growing suspicion and final distrust of Don John, whom he believes is plotting to supplant him, in a wonderful fashion, and the horror he depicts upon his features when he discovers he has killed the man who was so great a favorite with the people of the kingdom could scarcely have been more realistic had he indeed just committed a murder.

Arleen Hackett, who plays Delores de Mendoza, proves most acceptable as the sweetheart of Don John, and Nell Craig is sweet and winsome as Inez, the blind sister of Delorez. Lewis Edgard is cast as Adonis, the court jester, and he makes of the "bit" a part that really stands out as one of the principals. Lillian Drew is both beautiful and cunning as Dona Ana, the scheming, plotting princess of the realm, who plans with Don Antonio Perez (Sydney Ainsworth) to pit Don John against King Phillip, in the hope that by the change of rulers they may themselves benefit.

The king watches the triumphal return of Don John.

Shortly after the return of Don John of Austria to Madrid and his welcome by the populace, King Phillip discovers that Don John is in love with Delorez, the daughter of Mendoza, the commander of the king's guard. The king fears that, tempted by his growing popularity, Don John may aspire to the throne itself, and therefore is ever on the watch to catch him in a bit of treason.

Mendoza accuses King Phillip of the murder.

Mendoza, who is devoted heart and soul to "God, the king, and Spain," commands Delorez to have nothing more to do with Don John, but when the girl refuses to obey him plans to bundle her off to a convent. Aided by Inez, her blind sister, with whom she changes garments, Delorez makes her escape from her apartments, in which her father has given orders that she be imprisoned, and visits Don John in his home.

The king and Mendoza later call upon Don John and, suspecting that Delorez is there, demand that he open an inner room, the door to which is locked. When he refuses, the king draws his sword and Don John falls to the floor apparently dead. Realizing the death of the popular favorite may itself result in bringing his reign to a speedy end, King Phillip, too late, decides he has been too hasty. Mendoza, the faithful, offers himself as a sacrifice and in the throneroom of the palace boldly declares it was he who killed Don John.

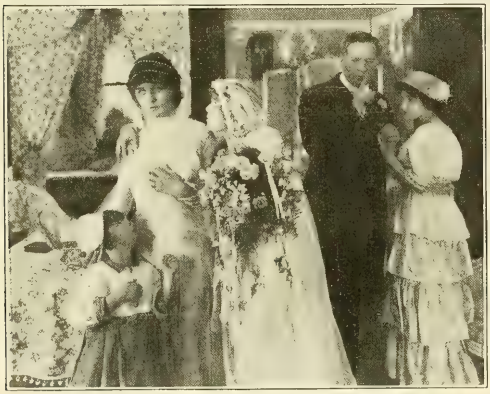
Meanwhile, however, Don John, who has been only injured by the sword thrust of the king, recovers consciousness and marries Delorez. The king is compelled to free Mendoza from prison and to sanction the marriage of Don John, while the latter magnanimously requests that he be permitted by the king to "keep secret the name of the man who attacked him."

"The Price of Her Silence"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FLORENCE LA BADIE, Thanhouser's winsome star, and Mignon Anderson, a screen favorite, are cast in the leading roles of the Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture, in five reels, released on September 30. "The Price of Her Silence" is the title of this romantic drama, depicting the unselfish devotion of a strong willed girl for her younger sister, who is weak. The story is an interesting one and the plot very well carried out.

Miss La Badie, as the elder sister, does some very good acting, and Mignon Anderson, as the younger sister, proves her dramatic ability in many scenes. Arthur Bauer, as the father; Harris Goodwin, as the chauffeur; Thomas Curran, as the artist, and little Helen Badgley as the younger sister's little daughter, complete the well balanced cast.



The little girl is very much in love with the handsome chauffeur. Finally one night they plan to elope. The girl's father catches them, however, and the girl is sent into the house and the chauffeur discharged.

Some days later the girl bids farewell to her father and elder sister and starts out on a yachting trip with her aunt. Before she goes, however, she manages to get word to her lover that she is going and he gets a job as a sailor on the yacht. Once at sea the girl and the former chauffeur spend many happy hours together. One day the boat catches on fire and the girl, the captain of the boat and the young sailor escape in one of the smaller boats.

The girl knows that a captain of a boat can perform a marriage at sea and has the captain unite her and the sailor. They are later cast ashore on a desert island and the captain dies from exposure and the girl's husband is killed by an octopus. A few days later she is picked up by a passing vessel and restored to her father.

The young widow keeps her marriage a secret from her father and sister until the time comes when she knows she cannot hide it any longer. Then she confides in her sister, who takes her to a nearby fishing village, where her little girl is born. They prevail upon a woman in the village to take care of the child and they return to the city.

Five years later on the wedding day of the younger sister a man brings her little child to the house. The girl's father is suspicious and takes the child to the room where the younger and elder sisters are dressing. As the door opens the child rushes into the room to the elder sister and says: "This is the pretty lady who brings me presents." The father is immediately suspicious of her and she is about to disclaim the relationship when her younger sister comes to her and whispers that after the wedding she will confess all.

A scene from "The Price of Her Silence."

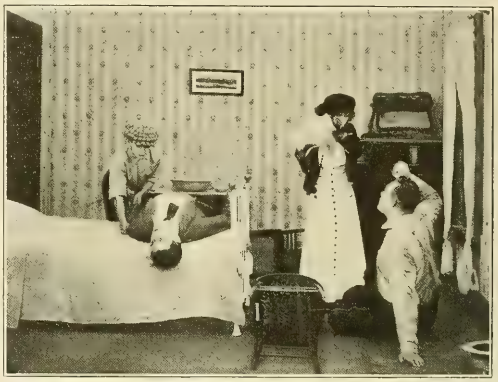
The elder sister takes her niece to a nearby city and opens up a studio. In the studio across the hall from her is an artist who falls in love with her and asks her to marry him, but on account of the suspicion which surrounds her regarding the child she refuses him.

The younger sister's husband brings her to the artist to have her portrait painted. She is having her first sitting when her little girl comes into the artist's studio and while climbing on the ledge of the window sill falls out. Then the mother cries: "It's God's judgment. My child, my child!" and at that time she tells her true story.



In a moment the painter comes back and brings the child with him; she had luckily fallen on an awning and her life had been saved. The elder sister comes into the studio and the artist takes her in his arms and the younger sister is forgiven by her husband.

"Right off the Bat"

Reviewed by Charles R. Condon

THIS is the first release of the Arrow Film Corporation, and if it can be taken as a criterion of the product which is to follow, introduces a concern which will make clean, wholesome pictures whose strength will lie in their true-to-life portrayal of stories gathered from the drama of life, a field more fertile than the most vivid of imaginations.

"Right Off the Bat" contains several thrills and unique situations which bear the marks of a clever scenario man's pen, but for the most part the story deals with the career and romance of a country youth whose skill at baseball wins him a place on a big league team, and overcomes the prejudice and objections of the father of the girl whom he loves. The play convinces through its simplicity. Nothing overpowering or sensational is attempted in it. The story is told with pleasing directness, is interpreted by a clever cast working under good direction, and is surrounded with true small-town environment. The photography is as clear as crystal.

Viola and the boy save Mike Donlin.

Through what channels the picture will be distributed will be announced shortly by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, which has headquarters at 71 W. Twenty-third street, New York. Although "Right Off the Bat" is not a baseball picture, the national sport figures prominently in it, and Mike Donlin, former Giant outfielder and the winner of several national popularity contests, is seen in the leading role and, in the big scene, proves himself a true hero by his prowess at the bat in a big game. Donlin proves to be a real actor in this, his first screen appearance, carrying his part as though entirely ignorant of the presence of the camera.

To Albert S. LeVino belongs the credit for the story, and to Hugh Reticker, the laurels of the direction. The leading feminine role is played by Claire Mersereau, a charmingly pretty little girl whose loyalty to Mike proves his salvation in a crisis. Rita Ross Donlin, Fan Bourke, George Henry, George Sullivan, Charles Mather, John J. McGraw, the Giants' leader, Thornton Friel, Frank Frayne, Jr., and Mabel Wright take prominent parts in the picture.

Mike Donlin again meets Viola Bradley and her father.

Shortly after his father's death, Mike Donlin is offered a place in a machine shop in Winsted by Hiram Bradley, the owner, whose daughter, Viola, Mike had saved from drowning years before. Being good at baseball, Mike takes advantage of the opportunity to join the Winsted nine, also owned by Bradley. As time goes on, the friendship between Mike and Viola develops into love.

On becoming aware of this latter, Hiram Bradley forbids Mike's visiting his daughter, indignantly declaring that while he may own a bush league team, he will not have any bush leaguers in his family. On the day of the big game, Mike is approached by some gamblers with an inducement to "throw" the game. He refuses, and is assaulted. Towards the end of the game things begin to look bad for the Winsted team. They need Mike. Viola learns of his imprisonment, and effects his release. He arrives at the ball field just in time to save the day.

Viola, a few days previous, had wired John J. McGraw, of the Giants, to send out a scout to watch Donlin pitch, signing her father's name. Knowing Mr. Bradley, McGraw took the tip. His man, Evans, likes Mike's playing, and picks him for the big league team. With this for an argument Viola overcomes her father's objections to Mike as a bush leaguer, and obtains his consent to their engagement.

"Tillie's Tomato Surprise"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

LUBIN'S six-reel production to be released on September 27 on the V. L. S. E. program is "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," a surprisingly clever mirth provoker featuring Marie Dressler, the popular comedienne.

There are many exciting moments in this five-reel photo comedy. Some of the feats performed by Miss Dressler in her endeavor to put "life" into the production are—a back somersault down two flights of stairs, a somesault over a barbed-wire fence and down a two-foot embankment, a leap from a new-fangled "jitney bus," a plunge from a railway bridge onto a fast-moving freight train and then a daring leap from the train into a farmyard.

Among the cast who aided Miss Dressler in making this comedy one of the most successful ever produced are Colin Campbell as The Bat, the flying Scotchman; Eleanor Fairbanks as Amber Girs, Sarah McVickar as Aunt Sally, Jim McNaughton as Percy Jitney, Tillie's cousin, and Jim, the monkey, by himself.

As the story opens we see The Bat in his laboratory testing his latest invention. He dons his wings and starts out for a fly. After flying around the country he is spied by Tillie Todd, who is working in the garden. Tillie picks up her rifle, shoots at The Bat and he falls to the ground.

At Tillie's home her cousin, Percy Jitney, bothers her with his attentions. Her mother receives a note from her millionaire Aunt Sally stating that her birthday is near at hand and that she wishes Tillie and Percy to visit her and help celebrate the day. Tillie's mother tells the girl to make her aunt something with her own hands and send it to her for a birthday present. She starts her daughter to work on making a tomato-shaped pin cushion, but the girl soon tires of the work and goes down to the store and buys one just like she had started to make.

Tillie and the bothersome "tomato."

The pin cushion arrives at Aunt Sally's with a note telling her that Tillie had spent three days in the making of it. The woman is overjoyed, but Percy picks up the pin cushion, sees the price mark on the back and shows the same to Aunt Sally. In this way he wins his way into the woman's good graces, but he soon falls out again when at a football game he proves himself a coward, while Sally takes his place and, with the aid of The Bat, wins the game.

Tillie at the football game.

The night of Aunt Sally's birthday party she puts on a pair of wings given her by The Bat and soars into the air. When four days have passed and no word has come from Aunt Sally, her will is read. She has left the tomato to Tillie and the rest of her fortune to Jim, the monkey, and when he dies it will revert to Percy. Tillie is taken aback when she hears what she "has drawn," and Percy, by a clever ruse, makes Tillie believe she has killed the monkey, and every once in a while he will turn up with the tomato pin cushion and say, "Here is your tomato."

Percy puts the detectives on Tillie's trail and at last they come upon her at Aunt Sally's and give chase. After being nearly drowned in a big puddle of molasses, the girl leaps from a railway bridge onto a freight train and from the train she jumps into a big box of feathers and comes out a feathery mass and she is soon surrounded by the detectives and the people from all over the countryside. All of a sudden her aunt drops from the sky, then The Bat, and later Jim, the monkey soars down to them.

Tillie is embracing her aunt when Percy steps up and hands Tillie the tomato, saying, "Here is your tomato." The girl furiously bites at the pin cushion, pulling it to pieces, and a great number of ten thousand dollar bills rain from it. Aunt Sally had placed them there for Tillie. We last see Tillie Todd with feathers and ten thousand dollar bills stuck all over her, embracing her aunt, Jim, the monkey, and The Bat, in turn.

"Just As It Happened"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "Just As It Happened," the two-reel American feature scheduled for release on October 4, one is quick to understand that exactly the proper title has been chosen for this picture, since the scenes portrayed are so true to life and of such frequent occurrence that it is easy to believe the story is told "just as it happened."

The plot of the story concerns David Grey, a young farmer lad, and Jennie, his sweetheart, who is momentarily attracted by a suave city stranger she chances to meet.

Jennie, winsomely portrayed by Lizzette Thorne, causes deep suffering to David Grey, a role acted by Edward Coxen, when she comments unfavorably upon his "lumpy" hands, for David little suspects that she is comparing them with the smooth, soft hands of the city stranger whom she had encountered but a few moments before.

When Dave tells his story of the lovers' quarrel to his kind old mother, the latter relates to him his life as a little lad and how he worked early and late on the farm in his efforts to pay the mortgage following the death of his father, thus explaining to him that the "bumpiness" of his hands was caused by honest toil.

Somewhat encouraged, Dave decides to seek his fortune in the city, believing that there he can earn a handsome living and perhaps eventually acquire hands as smooth as those of the city stranger.

After sub-leasing the farm, Dave visits the city and there encounters "Red Dick," a crook, whose record is known to the police. Though weeks pass without his being able to secure work, Dave regularly writes cheerful letters to his mother at home leading her to believe that success is coming his way.

Dave at last finds himself without lodging, since he is unable to meet the week's room rent and it is then that "Red Dick" appears, persuading him to aid in a robbery which "Red Dick" has planned.

Dave rejects the offer of ready money dishonestly secured and remembering that he has promised his mother to return home for her birthday he steals down to the railroad yards, sneaks in a box car and returns home.

As night falls, following the birthday party given by Mrs. Grey on the lawn of her humble home, the last of the guests depart, Jennie and Mrs. Grey commune together regarding Dave, whose presence had been greatly missed all day.

As the old mother visits the barn to secure some eggs she discovers a man asleep in the straw, and thinking it a tramp, returns to the house for such remnants of the feast as remain and tenderly gathers up a blanket with which to cover the sleeping man in the barn. At that moment, however, the collie dog, who had always been a pet of Dave, chances into the barn and yelps his delight upon discovering the man. It is then and then only that the mother recognizes in the tramp Dave, her boy. Quickly his story of failure in the city is told and the tender mother love tells him that after all his life has not been a failure. Jennie admits that she likes his hands, "bumpy" though they are, and life begins anew.

The return of the prodigal.

Universal's "Fatherhood"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

HOBART BOSWORTH, author and producer of and leading man in the four reel Broadway Universal features released on October 4, has enlarged upon a subject hitherto never or if so, but lightly touched upon in either pictures or stories. Up to this time "motherhood" has been the subject of many photoplays and has played an important part in the carrying out of the plot. Mr. Bosworth has chosen "Fatherhood" as the subject around which this production centers and it is indeed a splendid photodrama.

Helen Wolcott plays opposite Hobart Bosworth and is exceptionally good in her portrayal of Lizzie Mayberry and later Mrs. Gilchrist, wife of Lon Gilchrist played by Bosworth. Joseph Flores as Bud Dalton, Hart Hoxie as Del Beasley and Mrs. Lydia Yeamans Titus as the landlady lend admirable support to the cast. The production is artistically projected and interesting throughout.

A scene from Universal's "Fatherhood."

Lon Gilchrist and Bud Dalton, range riders in Arizona, one day in the middle nineties save a stage coach and its occupants from a small band of marauding Apaches. A child is seized by one of the Indians and thrown into the underbrush cutting its forehead. Lon picks up the child and binds its wound with his neckerchief. His bravery is awarded by a check from the Wells Fargo Express Company, and with this money he gets a good start in life and is soon owner of a large ranch.

In the meantime the child has grown to womanhood and is working as a waitress in one of the cheaper restaurants of a Southwestern city and Lon on his next trip to the city meets the bright and capable Lizzie who waits upon him deftly and he is attracted to the girl. He courts her and she, tired of the insults and drudgery of her life, accepts him and, to her surprise, when she arrives at his ranch she finds that her simple and reserved husband is a man of vast wealth and power. Her husband's business cares compel him to throw her more and more for her amusement upon the society of a splendidly handsome young cowboy.

Lon is forced to go to a rodeo, and because of the roughness of the trip will not take his wife with him. She upbraids him, and her stinging words cut him to the quick. Lon leaves, instructing Del to look after his wife, and she, believing she can no longer live with a man who seems so cruel and unsolving, instructs Del to drive her to the station and leaves a note to Lon of farewell and her wedding ring.

A humorous moment in Universal's "Fatherhood."

In the city, after months, a little baby is born to Lizzie and it comforts her loneliness, and she hopes for a reunion through the little tiny mite which belongs to her and Lon. A post card carries to the old ranchman the news of his fatherhood and he madly rushes to the city in the hope that it means reconciliation. All misunderstandings are swept away and he trembles with the delight of a father as he holds his little son in his arms. He tells Lizzie how many years before he held a little baby so and describes the incident of the stage coach. She rushes to the bureau drawer and takes therefrom a blood stained handkerchief that Lon had wrapped around the baby's head and pushing back the hair from her forehead she shows him the scar.

"Neal of the Navy"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

LILLIAN LORRAINE, William Courtleigh, Jr., and William Conklin, who have done much commendable acting in the Pathe Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy," are seen to better advantage in chapters five and six, than any of the previous episodes. These two chapters are notable for novel scenic effects and interesting developments. In the fifth episode, which is entitled "A Message from the Past," the most attractive scenes are those taking place at the dance on board one of the battleships. In the latter part of this release, the crew of a fruit steamer, bound for Southern waters, is incited to mutiny by Hernandez, but his plan to capture Annette fails.

The scenes of the half crazed crew endeavoring to make the Hardin party their prisoners are remarkably well presented. The realism obtained reflects credit upon Director Harry Harvey. In the beginning of "A Message from the Past," Annette, accompanied by Joe Welcher and Inez Castro, who still professes friendship for the girl, attend a dance given on board the ship of which Neal is one of the crew. Hernandez, disguised, attempts to abduct Annette, but she struggles and both fall overboard. Neal rescues his foster sister. Hernandez escapes.

While drying the map, which she always carries with her, Annette learns the exact location of Lost Island. She decides to visit the island, and sails on a fruit steamer for Martinique. Hernandez follows the Hardin party and induces one of the crew to start a mutiny. Neal has been transferred to a ship sailing for South America. This cruiser receives the call for help sent from the Coronado. Neal is put in charge of the squad sent to quell the mutiny, which he succeeds in doing.

"The Cavern of Death" is the title of the sixth episode. Annette and her friends arrive at Martinique. She receives a note from the Governor, telling her that he was a friend of her father's, and inviting her to attend a reception at his home. Neal obtains shore-leave but does not wish to be a guest at the levee. Inez informs Hernandez that Neal is in Martinique. The South American captures Annette at the levee. He also makes Neal his prisoner.

Hernandez takes them to a cavern, used by a smuggler. This cavern is mined, and after securing the map he leaves Neal and his foster sister with the threat that they will die in one hour. They free themselves and swim a long distance to safety. Believing his victims still in the death trap, Hernandez turns on the current which entirely destroys the cavern.

In "The Cavern of Death" both Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh give an exhibition of their natatorial prowess. They swim a considerable distance while in view of the camera. This chapter is splendidly staged. The destruction of the cavern by dynamite and some under water scenes add much to the interest, which this serial is sustaining admirably.

"Landing the Hose Reel"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THE Selig Polyscope Company has found something absolutely new in the way of screen comedies and on Thursday, October 14, will offer the exhibitors of the country, in the first picture of the series to called "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," a three reel comedy that is absolutely epoch making.

This reviewer has no hesitation in predicting that Bloom Center will become even more famous than its fellow village, Bird Center, celebrated the country over on account of the famous McCutcheon cartoons. If Bird Center was funny, it looks as though Bloom Center is going to be a riot.

It may be possible to assemble a funnier lot of characters all in one picture than the director of "Landing the Hose Reel" has done, but the fact has yet to be accomplished, for these three reels fairly abound in "types," each and every one of whom is a scream in himself or herself, and yet played so naturally that you feel the role is not being exaggerated in any way. In fact, when all is said and done, the success of the Bloom Center series will doubtless rest on that very fact, that the characters are so natural that each and every person who sees them will feel that some time, some where, in his life he knew just that type of individual.

Maibelle Heikes Justice and William Lord Wright are credited with the authorship of the story and surely they are entitled to a large portion of praise, but the director has done his share too, as have each of the many players cast for one of the important roles, for in this series it appears there is to be no star, each character having so "fat" a part that as the story develops he will, for a time at least, occupy the center of the screen to the exclusion of all others.

The "Chronicles of Bloom Center," of which "Landing the Hose Reel" is the first, will appear each Monday for eleven weeks, beginning Monday, October 25, and each picture in the series will be two reels in length, with the exception of the first one, which as stated above is three reels long and scheduled for release on Thursday, October 14.

There is so much action to the three reels of the first "chronicle" that it is well nigh impossible to tell the story, and, anyway, perhaps, the telling of it would take the edge off the fun you will have if you see it for yourself. Briefly, though, the tale revolves about the offer made by Frederick Warren, a New York millionaire with a warm spot in his heart for Bloom Center, the village of his birth, to give Bloom Center a hose reel, provided the citizens of his native town will raise half of the sum necessary to equip the fire department.

Great excitement reigns in Bloom Center when Warren's offer is made known, but this is as nothing compared to the excitement that develops when the citizens hold a mass meeting in Melodian Hall to discuss ways and means of raising their part of the fund. One man proposes a tax on whiskers, and another suggests that a lawn fete be given. Both suggestions are finally adopted, but the tax dodgers get their whiskers trimmed and the lawn fete proves a fiasco, so the villagers find themselves almost bankrupt when the receipts are counted.

A humorous moment in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center."

A ray of sunshine breaks through the clouds of gloom when Warren generously agrees to provide the hose reel, anyway, but the fun begins anew when rival candidates for the important position of chief of the fire department announce themselves. Eventually the great day arrives and the hose reel reaches Bloom Center and is turned over to Chief Pash with much ceremony. Chubby Green and his boy friends plant a few smoke pots at about this time and the new fire company enjoys its first run. When the second smoke pot is discovered Chief Pash decides "somebody is trying to kid the fire department," and accordingly refuses to respond to the alarm when the constable announces that Pash's own home is in flames. Too late, the chief discovers the sad truth, when he finds his home a mass of smouldering embers.

"The Pearl of the Antilles"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE beautiful tropical country which forms the background for the action of "The Pearl of the Antilles" released by The Picture Playhouse Film Company, is, perhaps, its most appealing factor, and makes the picture one which is well worth viewing. This film was produced in Jamaica by Tom Terriss who has won distinction by his interpretations of Dickens' characters. The country has proven a fertile field for the production of pictures, and this director has used to telling effect the magnificent locations provided by nature.

It may be of interest to note that a cove which is the scene of much of the action in this film, is authoritatively believed to be the first landing place of Columbus, who, tradition hath it, was attracted to the spot by the grandeur of a cascade. This cascade, which is one of the most ruggedly beautiful waterfalls imaginable, is the setting for a remarkably thrilling moment in "The Pearl of the Antilles." Tom Terris, playing a character part, and Lionel Pape here enact a realistic struggle.

The picture is based on "The Sword of Honor," a popular English drama, and was adapted to the screen by Mr. Terriss. The story is, for the most part, conventional melodrama, but it deals with some well drawn characters, and these receive thoughtful handling by the effective cast, which includes Tom Terriss, Lionel Pape, Tessie DeCordova, R. Harvey, Rodney Hickok, Ethel Mitchell and R. DeCordova.

After witnessing Miss DeCordova's splendid performance in the titular role, one finds it difficult to believe that this is her very first attempt at acting, either professional or amateur, but such is the case, surprising as it may seem. She is surrounded by players of experience and ability and that this does not prove a handicap gives evidence of her talent.

The story tells of Henry Richmond, a wealthy South-

Brutus overtakes Carson.

erner who lives in Palm Beach and who prefers to have his daughter brought up in simple surroundings, and entrusts her to the care of an old friend in Jamaica. On one of his visits to Jamaica he is accompanied by a man of rather questionable morals, Murray Carson. Carson is attracted to the beautiful girl and abducts her. She escapes from his yacht, unharmed, however, and is reunited with her father. The latter avenges the reflection cast upon his daughter's name by Carson. After killing the explorer, Richmond dies from shock. Pearl and her lifelong friend, Phillip Hudson, marry.

"The Song of the Wage Slave"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

FOUNDED on Robert W. Service's poem of the same title, this latest release of the Metro Pictures Corporation possesses many salient features, among which are spontaneity of action, fine dramatic effects procured through good acting, and a conformity to truth in the scenes depicting different industrial processes. The sets showing operations in the lumber and mining industries, give additional zest to the strength of the play. The picture bears the trademark of the Popular Plays and Players Company.

In this film we do not find the protracted morbidity that attaches to so many films whose stories center about labor difficulties. Neither is any of the appeal or strength lost by leaving out too realistic views of pauper misery. The picture proceeds with the spirit of an absorbing story, holding the attention and interest right through. The sensational is introduced here and there, lending added color to the dramatic situations, and zest to the action.

Edmund Breese gives a creditable performance in the role of Ned Lane, a man of strong character who is perpetually sacrificing himself for the happiness of others, steadfastly working for the cause of labor, and ultimately giving his life to save that of Mildred, the girl whom he has always loved, but who has never returned his affections.

The demented Talek agrees to blow up the Dawson home.

When Edwin Dawson, an enormously wealthy manufacturer, forbids his son, Frank, to marry Mildred Hale, a girl out of his social standing, Ned, in a spirit of magnanimity, marries the girl to save her honor. Not long after, the millionaire dies and Frank, free, returns to claim the hand of Mildred. Ned, seeing where Mildred's love lies, disappears, leaving evidence purporting to his sudden death.

Later, Ned is seen as the leader of an organiaztion of mill hands, operating in a paper mill. Unknown to Ned, the invisible head of the paper trust is Frank Dawson. Finally, Ned, Frank and Mildred become apprised of their several true identities and consternation follows. Soon after Ned meets his death in an explosion, endeavoring to save Mildred.

Helen Martin distinguishes the role of Mildred Hale. Others in the cast are J. Byrnes, Fraunie Fraunholz, Albert Froom and George MacIntyre. The whole performance is thoroughly done, well seasoned, and when served up for the consumption of discriminating spectators, will furnish a delectable five-reel repast to assuage their voracious appetites for better films.

"Darling Dandy"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

RUTH STONEHOUSE, the Essanay star, who has already gained much favor with motion picture fans, plays the title role in "Darling Dandy," a three reel Essanay production to be released on September 27. Miss Stonehouse has been happily cast as Darling Dandy, an orphan girl. The little actress' portrayal of this character is inimitable and it is one of the best vehicles she has ever been starred in. She surely is a "Darling Dandy."

The story, a simple appealing heart interest drama, is written around a little orphan girl without education, but possessing a most lovable character. There is healthy comedy in the production and Miss Stonehouse reveals her humorous abilities to a good advantage. When dressed up in a suit and hat that probably were her mother's before her and barefooted she goes into the country store the little heroine is delightfully comical. John Lorenz as Rev. Cameron, John Thorn as Walter Dixon, a young civil engineer, support Miss Stonehouse, and both do commendable work. The producer has obtained some splendid results in the photography of this production.

Darling Dandy is an orphan and lives alone in a hut in the woods. She has as her companion a much dilapidated rag doll in whom she confides all her secrets and who is her only playmate. The little girl is passionately fond of children, but because of the strange life she leads the children of the neighborhood are afraid of her and whenever she approaches them they flee in terror. The Rev. John Cameron, a young minister of the village, is a friend to all the children and especially fond of Darling Dandy.

The young minister going to call on the girl one day finds her apparently reading a book and tells her that he didn't know she could read. The little orphan shamefacedly closes the book and says she can't and later turns to the front page whereon is the picture of a well built, good looking young man, who Dandy confesses is her "dream man."

The surveyor washes the molasses from Darling Dandy's foot.

Walter Dixon, a civil engineer, bids farewell to his sweetheart in the city and goes out on an engineering job and arrives in the village where Darling Dandy lives. Through a strange situation the girl meets the young surveyor and discovers in him her "man in the book." She goes home and dresses up in some clothes which were in style possibly thirty years ago. In this ridiculous makeup and barefooted she goes to the village store and there sees Walter Dixon and also Rev. John Cameron. In her nervous attempt to be calm the girl accidentaly steps into a pan of molasses and causes much laughter. She runs out of the store and is followed by Dixon. He takes her home and there catches her in his arms and kisses her.

The next morning the engineer is called to the city and leaves no word for Darling Dandy. A few days later he brings a child which belongs to the girl he had wronged, and leaves it on the minister's doorstep. The orphan girl sees it and takes it to her home where it is seen by some of the children and they tell the minister of its presence. John Cameron goes to substantiate the statement he has heard, but the girl warns him away at the point of a gun and it is not until the surveyor and the city girl come for the child that he finds that Darling Dandy has it in her possession. The minister finally persuades her to bring the child to his home that night and the girl places her rag doll in the basket, weights it down with flour, puts a shawl on the top of it and carries it to the minister's home.

The Rev. John Cameron and his friends.

Just as Darling Dandy arrives at the house a bolt of lightning strikes it and the place is soon in flames. Young Dixon and the girl from the city run out of the place and the girl finally drags out the minister and later she brings to him the baby which had been left on his doorstep and he clasps them both in his arms.

"A Disciple of Nietzsche"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THIS drama, having for its theme a discussion of the radical principles advanced by Friedrich Nietzsche, entitled "A Disciple of Nietzsche," merits the prominence given it in being made the first offering of the new brand of films presented by the Thanhouser Film Corporation. It is from the pen of Phil Lonergan. These three act subjects are known as the Than-O-Play, one of which will be released every three weeks.

In this play the author strives to prove that Nietzsche's ideas for the betterment of social conditions while theoretically sound and quite acceptable, fall short of realization when practically applied. From the standpoint of what may be termed brutality Nietzsche has built up a strong argument in favor of his principles. In the play an attempt is made to show that, as nature is not guided by any set rules, this doctrine is speculative-science pure and simple.

Florence LaBadie and Harris Gordon in a scene from "A Disciple of Neitzsche.

The story concerns a man who accepts the principles of Nietzsche, this character represents the "strong." He is aggravated when his daughter brings into his home a poor girl, as he believes that the poverty stricken are so, because they are too weak to be anything else. He also deems it a waste of strength on the part of the strong to uplift the weak, as it only prolongs their life that they may continue to be a burden to the strong, and as the strong must grow stronger it is their duty to conserve their energy.

The father firmly believes that it is best to allow the "weak" to their own devices so that in time they will die off. Since life is only a question of the survival of the fittest, the day will come when all men will be strong, and poverty, weakness, illness, all things detrimental, in fact, will have disappeared from the earth. But later he finds that this "weak" girl grows strong, and not through any help of his. It also happens that his own daughter, the offspring of one, long since proven strong, is capable of doing that which he terms weak. So in the end he is convinced that his doctrine is faulty and he repudiates it.

Evidently the author has given the subject his close attention, for he approaches it with directness, and a confidence which is highly commendable. As a drama "A Disciple of Nietzsche" is thoughtfully constructed, plausibly developed, and sustains the interest admirably. Whether or not it is convincing in its refutation of Nietzsche's principles, must remain a question for individual decision. It is a subject requiring broad treatment and a comprehensive study of the various and conflicting elements which influence the human family.

A scene from "A Disciple of Neitzsche."

At any rate this is a worthy use of the drama, and it is to be hoped that more discussions of this kind will be the basis of screen dramas. To enjoy this picture it is not necessary to be versed in the details of the argument either pro or con, and the best of it is that one may make the play food for profound study or superficial thought, and still be afforded much entertainment.

The production is well directed and the dramatic situations forcefully presented. Florence La Badie plays her part with effective naturalness. The members of the supporting cast which includes Boyd Marshall, Lorraine Huling, Marshall Welch and Harris Gordon, all give splendid performances.

"A Child in Judgment"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE Edison drama to be released October 22, entitled "A Child In Judgment," which title applies to the young wife, deals with the loyalty of a husband, the folly of a wife who desires pretty clothes, and a wicked wealthy employer, in other words the eternal triangle. A new Edison actress makes her appearance in this picture, and the author of "A Child In Judgment" has certainly not been kind to her, for Harriet Forbes is seen as the wife, a woman who is absolutely brainless.

A tense moment in "A Child of Judgment."

Miss Forbes, therefore, cannot hope to carry the sympathy of her audience, and though she does some good work it makes no impression, because of the part in which she is cast. Richard Tucker as John Desmond gives his usual fine performance and Augustus Phillips is a satisfactory Henry Halstrum, the man who attempts to lead astray the wife of his employe. The story does not provide the cast with much opportunity for convincing work. The picture is well directed and produced. There are some highly commendable settings which help greatly the interesting portions of the plot.

Mrs. Desmond first meets her husband's employer at his office. Her husband provides a comfortable home and shows her every consideration, but she longs for pretty clothes and more diversion than her husband's limited income will permit. Halstrom is attracted to Mary and shows her marked attention during her short visit to the office.

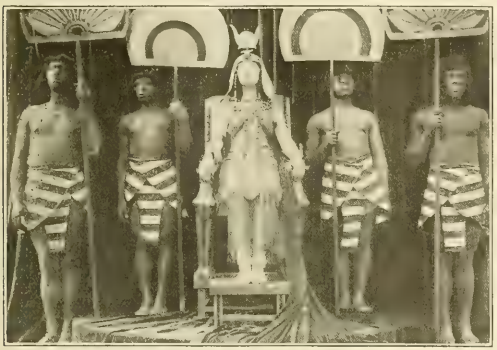
Mary is quite flattered by Halstrom's attentions and encourages him. He decides to have her husband out of the way for a time and sends him on a "business" trip to Chicago. After Desmond leaves, Halstrom writes a note to Mary asking her to call at his office. He then invites her to take lunch with him, and gives her some money, which he says is the amount he intends adding to her husband's salary, that she may purchase suitable clothes to wear at the theater, where she promises to go with him.

Desmond's mother, who lives with them, becomes suspicious when she sees these beautiful gowns and when she learns that Mary has gone to the theater with Halstrom, she telegraphs to her son, telling him to return home at once.

A humorous moment in "A Child of Judgment."

The next day the wife fears to face her husband's anger and seeks protection from Halstrom. There Desmond finds his wife, and when he is convinced that she has been foolish but not wicked he forgives her.

"The Dust of Egypt"



Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN its entirety "The Dust of Egypt" is one of the screen's most artistic presentations. It is a farce of extreme cleverness and delightful charm. Produced by the Vitagraph Company under the direction of George Baker and released on the V. L. S. E. program, this picture carries a story which embodies all that is best in farce comedy, and there is ever present that redeeming touch of pathos, which not only heightens the humorous situations, but also gives the story added flavor and depth.

Among the foremost features of this offering must be mentioned Edith Storey's characterization of the Princess, a part most exacting in its demands upon the natural ability and acquired skill of its delineator. Yet Miss Storey is ever equal to the occasion and displays an effective ease in accomplishing her purpose whether that be the portrayal of an intense emotion, straight dramatic action or pure comedy. In all these divergent constituents of the histrionic art she is consistently excellent, and this performance may be referred to as one of her best contributions to the screen, which, as exhibitors know, is high recommendation.

The picture is based on Alan Cambell's farce of the same name, and it is replete with opportunities for striking scenic and dramatic effects. Mr. Baker has appreciated these opportunities to the fullest extent, and as a result he has produced a film that for magnificent settings and colorful scenic effects, in keeping with the requirements of the general action, approaches perfection in photoplay staging. The lighting, costumes and stage properties are in good taste and further enhance the beauty of the production.

An imposing scene in "The Dust of Egypt."

Antonio Moreno has the leading male role, which he enacts to a degree of satisfaction. In his final scene with Miss Storey, which is wonderful in its artistic voluptuousness, Mr. Moreno does capitally. The straight comedy part is played by Charles Brown. In the first few scenes Mr. Brown gives no great promise, but when he does succeed in making his presence felt he does it in great style, and before long he really competes for leading honors. But the cast is uniformly excellent, all the players render their parts in a manner such as is above adverse criticism. Jay Dwiggins, Cissy Fitzgerald, Hughie Mack and Naomi Childers have important parts.

The story is of a young man who in a dream sees the Egyptian mummy, which has been brought into his house, come to life. She is a beautiful princess. As he is unable to secure hotel accommodations for her, he is forced to keep her in his apartment that night. The next day he takes her to the home of his fiancee, where the princess shows plainly her liking for the young man and her dislike for his fiancee. Her surprise at such modern necessities as the telephone, and her insistence on having her every little fancy gratified, make up a series of clever, mirthful situations.

Needless to say, the young man is overjoyed upon awakening and finding that his fascination for the princess and her many indiscretions, at least they are indiscretions in the twentieth century, was only a dream, and that his engagement to Violet Manning has not been broken.

"Damaged Goods"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

TO deal frankly with the subject treated is a recognized virtue in dramatic construction. Just how candidly Eugene Brieux in his "Damaged Goods" deals with a question that we Americans fear to mention even to our confidants, is now a well-known fact; for when this drama was produced on the speaking stage some time ago, it was so widely discussed that the candor of the play is perhaps its best known quality. In the screen version of this remarkable story none of the author's directness has been forfeited.

But while there is no attempt to hint at facts, neither is there an attempt to "parade" the vices of men, merely for the sake of making the picture one that will appeal to those who patronize plays of this kind just to see how "daring" they are. Throughout the seven reels there is nothing that gives offense, and the many prominent men who have expressed their belief that its power to do good should make both men and women, arrived at the age of worldly understanding, desirous of seeing "Damaged Goods."

From a standpoint of production this film can be highly recommended for its excellence. The American Film Company and the director can well be proud of their efforts. Artistic settings, effective lighting and fine photography, in fact, all the essentials of a high class presentation play their important part. Since its first showing, some time ago, the film has been improved. Some of the scenes were "retaken" and it has been strengthened by re-editing.

The story tells of a young man who has had all the advantages of a moral bringing-up and a splendid home life. At a dinner given in honor of his engagement to the daughter of a noted jurist, young Dupont, urged by his friends, drinks freely. After the affair is over, Dupont, in a dizzy condition, accompanies one of his companions to the apartment of two women. There he spends the night. Some weeks after this he is horrified to learn that this indescretion has cost him dearly, for his body has become contaminated with a dreaded disorder.

His first thought is suicide, but he is saved from this by "the woman." She advises him to consult a famous specialist. This physician warns him that he will not be cured before two years and that should he marry before that time he will be guilty of a crime. Dupont falls into the hands of a quack, who for a large sum, assures him that he will be entirely cured in three months. At the end of this time he marries. When his wife becomes a mother his crime is made known, for the child suffers for his sin. His wife leaves him, and in the last scene he contemplates his end.

This is a forcible story, and considered in the light of straight drama it is uncommonly interesting, its impression is lasting, and its moral effect remarkable. Richard Bennet and his co-workers are quite as effective before the camera as they were in the stage production. Mr. Bennet does exceedingly well with his part, his expression is the more forceful for his artistic repression.

"The Spender"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

A MELODRAMATIC comedy produced by Donald Mackenzie and featuring George Probert, who has figured prominently in many productions on the speaking stage, is the fourth Gold Rooster Play released by Pathe. If one becomes interested in the character which Mr. Probert enacts, then the entire five reels of "The Spender" will be interesting as the play concerns Piere only. The other figures are prominent only in so far as their doings relate to the care-free young Frenchman.

Mr. Probert acts his part with great vim and enthusiasm, which is the manner best calculated to get the most out of role. His performance is most energetic from the outset, and he keeps up the pace admirably. Alma Martin as Nellie McCabe, Sam Ryan as her father and Paul Panzer as Jim Walsh furnish good support to Mr. Probert as Piere Lobert. The production is splendidly staged. The melodramatic scenes in which the strikers set fire to the factory and later storm a small building where Piere and his father-in-law make their last stand against the excited mob, have been finely handled by the director and are thrilling.

Piere Lobert, despite the warnings of his relatives that his father will not put up with his behavior much longer, continues to gamble and drink. He returns home one night

Walsh urges the strikers t[illegible] intoxicated and carries on an argument with the impatient parent, with the result that Piere is told to leave and never return to his father's house. With his valet he immediately goes to a cafe and announces to his friends that he will assume a title and visit America, where he will marry an heiress.

In America he arranges to be presented to Nellie McCabe, whose father is immensely rich. Pat McCabe dislikes the "Duke" and forbids his daughter to have anything to do with him. But Nellie is anxious to marry a nobleman, and besides she loves Piere. They are secretly married. When McCabe learns this he orders his daughter and her husband out of the house. Piere is without funds so he mournfully decides that he must go to work.

He is also without any practical knowledge of business. Unknown to McCabe, Piere secures a job as porter at the McCabe factory, and this gives him pleasure, for he figures that the "old man" is supporting him anyhow. A year passes and the employes decide to strike, as McCabe refuses to concede to their demands. This puts Piere out of work. He returns home and is about to upbraid Nellie for the misfortune her family has brought upon him, when he learns that he is soon to become a father.

This brings a great change over him and when he is told that the dissatisfied workers intend to harm McCabe he rushes to the factory. He finds his father-in-law unconscious in the office and protects him from the men. They set fire to the building. Piere carries McCabe to a small outbuilding where they are safe until the arrival of a troop of soldiers. Upon regaining consciousness McCabe forgives the "Duke" and his daughter, and is overjoyed to hear that he will soon be a grandfather.

"The Diamond From the Sky"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CHAPTER twenty-four of the North American serial "The Diamond From the Sky" contains another of the big spectacular scenes which have marked this serial as one of the most stupendous from the standpoint of artistic stage settings ever offered the public.

This time it is a costume ball given by Arthur Stanley, now known as John Powell, to celebrate his purchase of "the diamond from the sky," a purchase which was consummated as chapter twenty-three ended on the screen.

In the ball room scene hundreds of supernumeraries are used, all garbed in costumes of every imaginable period, and at its climax the ball is interrupted by the entrance of Powell, himself, seated on the back of a snow-white steed. He holds aloft the bauble for which he paid $90,000 while he relates its history, going back to the time, hundreds of years before, when the diamond fell from the sky.

Chapter twenty-four is marked, too, by the first meeting in many months between Esther and Arthur Stanley, whom she has followed across the continent. Immediately following the recognition of Esther by Arthur, she discovers on Arthur's bare arm the pricks of a dope needle, proving that he is a victim of the drug habit.

Esther and Marmaduke leave Arthur with his enemies.

As chapter twenty-four opens, Esther, who believes that Luke has been done a great injustice, dispatches a note by her servant, Quabba, to Marmduke Smythe, asking him to accompany her to the jail where Luke is a prisoner. There Esther encourages Luke and tells him she will do everything in her power to aid in giving him his freedom.

Meanwhile John Powell, who has prepared to give a fete in celebration of his recovery of "the diamond from the sky," arranges a costume ball and Esther, learning of the affair, thinks it a splendid opportunity for her to visit Powell in disguise.

Esther visits Luke in prison.

At the height of the ball Esther secures a private meeting with the man she has come so far to seek and Arthur, upon recognizing her, thrusts Vivian from him and stretches out his arms to Esther and begs her to take the diamond.

When Esther discovers, however, the marks of the dope needle on Arthur's arm she indignantly snatches the diamond from him and flings it from the window.

It falls into a rose bush without and as the film ends an arm reaches forward to snatch it and the title is flashed on the screen, "Where is the diamond?"

"'Twas Ever Thus"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE latest Elsie Janis offering, "'Twas Ever Thus," produced by Bosworth Inc., differs from the former screen plays in which this internationally famous star has been seen. While there is some very enjoyable comedy, and the entire story is treated along farcical lines, there is also much action which is serious, and developments rather dramatic in their nature. Miss Janis wrote the story, which in the course of its argument plays in three different ages, and has three separate plots.

In each the subject is love, and likewise there is a father who threatens to prevent the fulfillment of the young lovers' affection. But in every case love finds a way and father is won over to the cause. In the beginning of "'Twas Ever Thus" love is depicted as it was when men lived in caves and took as wives the women of their choice by brute force. The second period is laid in the days of the Civil War, when women courtesied and men in return bowed low and gracefully, and lastly in 1915, in which "push-on" is the order of the day, romance is still to be found, and love is quite the same, in the essentials, as it was in the ages long passed.

In the second period, which is all romance, and the third, which contains considerable melodrama, the lovers to be, meet, overcome what obstacles exist and finally marry in much the same way as they have in many other stories of the kind. But for all of that the film is entertaining; for Elsie Janis, Owen Moore, Hobart Bosworth and Myrtle Stedman are players who, by virtue of their ability to make their own opportunities and the finish of their acting, keep one constantly interested, and increase the value of the comedy and dramatic situations.

While Miss Janis does commendably in her serious moments she is best as the comedienne so popular on the musical comedy stage, and her occasional indulgence in this style of action brightens the picture greatly and adds color to the entire production. In writing the play Miss Janis has provided herself with opportunities to do this without interfering with the general trend of the plot. In one portion of the picture she becomes a servant in the home of a wealthy publisher, for the experience which is to help her in writing a novel, and in the character of a kitchen slavey she is thoroughly amusing.

A scene from "'Twas Ever Thus."

Many of the subtitles are in rhyme and there also are some slangy ones, in either case they are well placed and aid the humorous possibilities of the action. The piece is beautifully staged. Whether the scene be laid in home of a Southern gentleman, a modern business office or in the cave of some pre-historic man, it has atmosphere and color.

Clipper's "Pardoned"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

HAROLD LOCKWOOD, handsome American leading man, has one of the best opportunities of his lifetime for splendid work in "Pardoned," the three-reel spectacular Clipper feature scheduled for release on October 9.

In this feature, directed by Thomas Ricketts, Lockwood plays a dual role, that of Paul, the son of Governor Brent, and that of Forrest, a handsome youth, who is a very counterpart physically of the governor's son, as a result of which the mixup in identities causes Forrest a great deal of embarrassment.

May Allison is a winsome Kathie, the daughter of Hart, the politician, and Harry von Meter makes a fine Governor Brent, while Eugenie Forde is convincing as Lora, a chorus girl, and William Stowell interprets the role of Basil, Lora's husband.

The mix-up in identities is explained.

While on a summer's outing, Forrest becomes engaged to Aileen, a wealthy young woman residing at the same hotel, but their love is quickly brought to an end when one day a young woman appears on the lawn to accuse Forrest of being the father of her child. Though Forrest energetically denies the accusation and seeks to convince Aileen and her parents of the mistake, the girl produces a photograph showing herself and a man who appears to be Forrest, thus causing Aileen's father to order Forrest never to attempt to see his daughter again.

The fact that he has a double is thoroughly impressed upon Forrest some weeks afterwards, when he sees a perfect likeness of himself published in a newspaper together with the announcement that this man, the son of the governor of the state, is engaged to Kathie Hart, daughter of one of the biggest politicians of that state.

On several different occasions, Forrest is hailed by friends of Paul Brent as "Paul." Laughingly he lets them go on with the belief that he is the governor's son, though he has a hearty laugh over their mistake in each instance.

It appears that Paul is a ne'er-do-well, weak sort of chap who is infatuated by every pretty girl he sees. When his father, for political reasons, arranges the engagement between Paul and Kathie, Hart's daughter, Paul finds himself unable to go ahead with the marriage since he believes himself already united in marriage to Lora, a chorus girl, with whom he had been mated one night when on a drunken spree.

When Paul, one night at a road house, discovers his chorus girl wife in company with another he kills the man, little suspecting that the man is the real husband of the chorus girl.

After killing his rival, Paul successfully escapes and Forrest, who happens to be present, escorts Kathie to her home, the girl believing it is Paul who accompanies her. Later, however, when Forrest returns to the road house after his own car, he finds himself placed under arrest, for the murder has been discovered and he is accused of having committed it.

Governor Brent one day discovers Paul's weakness and learns the real story of the murder at the road house. Ordering his boy to never darken the doors of his home again, Governor Brent visits Forrest in prison and offers to pardon him, providing he will consent to pose as Paul and Marry Kathie Hart, thereby completing the bargain by which Brent is to be nominated for United States senator.

Forrest at first accepts the offer but, later, finding the girl he has escorted home from the road house is the girl he must marry, he balks about going on with the wedding under a fraudulent name.

While Forrest and the governor are discussing the matter, overheard by Kathie, Paul Brent comes storming into the room closely followed by Lora, the chorus girl, who has vowed that his life shall pay for the life of her husband. Before anyone can interfere Lora denounces Paul before all present and then strikes him with her dagger. Forrest's innocence of the murder having thus been established and Kathie having really learned to love him the marriage is arranged, though this time Kathie knows it is Forrest and not Paul Brent whom she is marrying.

Edison's "Gladiola"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE sweet little country girl who, in the face of the opposition of an intuitively wise parent, elopes with a city chap, only later to find that there is another wife, is, to be sure, an oft-used tale in photoplay, but it is doubtful if this theme has ever before been used to such appealing effect as in Edison's "Gladiola," in four reels and for release October 15.

First it is Viola Dana as the country girl, who in this instance is depicted as being really innocent, not ignorant, as is only too often the case, and she is a girl of sufficient strength of character to face unflinchingly the future, which to a certain extent she has shaped for herself. The part is worthy of Miss Dana, who undoubtedly deserves a place among the foremost actresses of the screen. In "Gladiola" she is seen at her best, for the story is entirely good, beautifully presented, and the other members of the cast give her effective support.

Mary Rider wrote the story, which in the opening scenes shows the ideal home life of Tracy Bane with his daughter Gladiola, a farm assistant and their housekeeper. Between Abner and the girl there exists a strong friendship, but Gladiola loves only her daddy. One day she meets Ned Warren, a wealthy "bachelor" from the city. Warren is at once attracted to the little country girl and he indulges in what he believes is a harmless flirtation. But one day they find that love has grown up between them.

Bane advises his daughter to put the city man out of her mind, which she refuses to do. Warren hesitates long before asking her to elope with him, but in a moment of weakness he proposes that they marry and she agrees. A few months after their marriage, Gladiola learns that her "husband" has another wife. She returns to her father, who welcomes her with all his heart. At the farm house her baby is born.

A scene from "Gladiola."

Some time later she receives word that Warren's wife has died. He comes to see Gladiola, and begs her to allow him to right the wrong he has done her, and assures her of his love. Though she is touched by his earnestness and repentance, she refuses to forgive this man who has killed her love and so basely betrayed her. She resolves never to let her child know how its father had deceived her, and sends Warren away. In the end she turns to her ever-devoted Abner.

John H. Collins has given the story an attractive setting, the outdoor locations were taken in the gladiolus fields in Berlin, N. Y. All these are most picturesque. The picture has the true rural atmosphere, and at no time is the illusion broken. Robert Conness as Ned Warren, Pat O'Malley as Abner, Charles Sutton as Bane, and Jessie Stevens as Maria, contribute their fair share to this engaging play, and they are entitled to unstinted praise. "Gladiola" is a meritorious offering. It is a picture of irresistible charm.

Bushman a "White Hope"?

Francis X. Bushman, the Quality-Metro star, who is an expert boxer and wrestler and always keeps in the pink of condition through a trainer that he personally employs, has the distinction of being one of the very few men that ever knocked down James J. Jeffries, ex-champion prize fighter of the world.

Jeffries was employed by the Qualities Pictures Corporation to play a small part in the big feature production, "Pennington's Choice," which the company is now making in its California studio, for release on the Metro program. Among other things Jeffries' part called for a fight scene in which he engages in a personal encounter with Bushman. The two men squared away and sailed in, hammer and tongs, to give the picture the necessary touch of realism.

Bushman and Jeffries were going full tilt in a final rehearsal of the scene the other day in the Los Angeles studio when the ex-champion gave Bushman a sharp blow in the mouth. Bushman received two or three more jabs that could hardly be called "love taps," and it somewhat ruffled his temper. Ducking a vicious swing Bushman came up and let go with a straight arm punch to Jeffries' chest. Jeffries countered with a glancing blow off Bushman's left eye. Both men were sparring in earnest and when Jeffries stepped back a few feet and came forward, his head down, in one of his furious rushes, Bushman squared himself and met the ex-champion with a healthy, full sized right hand swing to the jaw. Jeffries straightened up, reeled, and pitched forward on the floor. It required several minutes and a bucket of cold water to bring the former champion back to his feet.

Mary Pickford in Unusual Role

When the Famous Players Film Company's unique comedy-drama, "A Girl of Yesterday," appears on the Paramount program October 7, Mary Pickford's innumerable admirers will have an opportunity to see the world's most popular motion picture star in the thrilling role of companion to the internationally famous aviator, Glenn Martin, in one of his daring aeroplane flights.

Aside from the delightful mixture of quaint humor and romantic thrills, there are many points of novelty and of unusual interest in this remarkable feature. For the first time in her life, Mary Pickford is seen in actual aerial flight, while conversely, Glenn Martin makes his debut as a motion picture actor. "A Girl of Yesterday" is probably the first screen play to contrast all the phases of courtship in a generation gone by with the most modern of romantic auxiliaries. Another unique feature of this production is the fact that, for the first time in their joint screen careers, Mary and Jack Pickford actually appear in their true relationship as sister and brother. Although they have frequently appeared in pictures together, they have never before been cast in their real identities.

Mary Pickford in a scene from "A Girl of Yesterday."

Uses Aeroplane in Picture

The P. E. Williams Aeroplane Company, of Fenton, is operating in conjunction with the Atlas Motion Picture Company, of Detroit. Mr. Williams operated the machine last Wednesday at the State Fair, where the film that is to be called "The War of Not Yet" was being made. The machine was slow in raising and the camera man almost lost the top of his head, but he "ducked" and remained with his camera. A submarine is used in connection with the aeroplane in the production of the above picture. All productions of the Atlas Motion Picture Company will be released on the Associated program.

Pretty Girls in "The Chorus Lady"

In the forthcoming production of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company of James Forbes' comedy-drama, "The Chorus Lady," one of the most popular American plays ever written, fifty of the prettiest girls in Hollywood and Los Angeles, Calif., will be seen on the screen. Many of these young women, home during the late summer from school, were enthusiastic over the chance to act before the camera and several of the scenes of the photoplay production show a large musical comedy chorus rehearsing.

"The Chorus Lady" promises to be one of the most successful of all Lasky productions. The story, which is familiar, tells of the trials and tribulations, the successes and sorrows of life behind the footlights in a humorous, human way. The principals will be members of the Lasky all-star company. Miss Cleo Ridgeley, who did splendid work in "The Puppet Crown," "The Marriage of Kitty," and other Lasky productions will have the title role. Miss Marjorie Daw, the fourteen-year-old protegee of Miss Geraldine Farrar, who promises a brilliant dramatic future for her, will act the role of the little sister in the play. Miss Daw's charm and beauty lend themselves excellently to the character and her naturalness already has made her a popular photoplay star.

Billy Quirk in Harvard Films

Billy Quirk, the famous screen star, has been engaged by the Harvard Film Corporation, which has its own studio, offices and laboratories at 231-33 Tenth avenue, New York, and has been established since 1912, to star in and direct its comedy productions soon to be released on one of the regular programs. Billy Quirk, as everyone is aware, has been acting for the silent camera now for over seven years, starting with the Biograph under D. W. Griffith in comedies, playing opposite "Little Mary" Pickford. Leaving, he joined Solax, then Universal and Vitagraph, where he played for over a year in comedies. In the Harvard films he will appear in a brand new character of his own creation. Supporting him will be Marie Weirman, late star with the Universal, Lubin and Vitagraph, and Tammany Young, the creator of "Bill" in the Mutual series, "Bill, the Office Boy," and a Griffith and stage star of renown.

J. Tears Reardon is the president of the Harvard Film Corporation. He personally supervises all the work done at the Harvard laboratories. Frank P. Donovan, the well-known writer of film news and formerly editor of the film department on the New York Star, and Photoplayers' Weekly, and an advertising and publicity man of ability, is manager of productions and assistant director.

A scene from Lubin's "Jim West, Gambler."

William H. Clifford Joins Famous Players

William H. Clifford, who enjoys the unique distinction of being the only man who ever relinquished the prerogatives of the director for the power of the pen, has resigned from the New York Motion Picture Corporation to assume charge of the scenario department of the Famous Players Film Company. Mr. Clifford is already in New York where he has begun work on the preparation of several important scripts for immediate picturization.

Though previously a member of the theatrical profession, Mr. Clifford has never acted before the camera, his directorial activities marking his initial entry into the film business. It was in the days of the old Imp Company when he and Tom Ince presided over the destinies of Mary Pickford and King Baggot in a studio which would be considered too small for a single set today. Mr. Clifford's first picture was "In the Sultan's Garden," of which Mary Pickford was the star.

Griffith Joins Board

Another notable has been added to the roster of members of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, in the person of D. W. Griffith, famous director of film spectacles. J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the board, on September 25 received the following telegram from Mr. Griffith:

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 25, 1915.

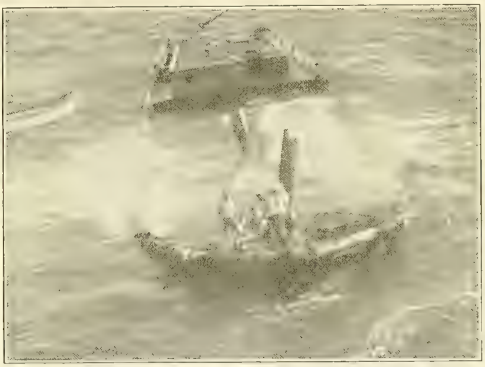
Membership Committee
Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc.
18 East 41st St., New York.

Thanks for the opportunity you offer me. Consider it a very great honor to be able to accept and will do all in my power to co-operate. Am mailing check. Best wishes for the good cause. D. W. Griffith.

Cour with Producers Service

Eugene J. Cour, formerly with the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, has been appointed managing director of the Producers Service Company. Mr. Cour is superintending the completion of the new laboratories of the company giving them a much increased capacity. Mr. Cour for a number of years has been connected with the Chicago newspapers, both in an ediorial capacity and as manager of photographic departments. Two years ago he turned his attention to moving pictures and as a camera operator in the central west and south has achieved some notable beats for his company. He is taking into his new field the spirit and enterprise of his newspaper training.

"Boots and Saddles" and "The Undertow," which Eugene Walters wrote, and which were given stage productions several seasons ago, are to be filmed by the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation.



News of the Week as Shown in Films

Harry K. Thaw arrives in San Francisco after cross country drive. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Pageant to raise money for university at Dallas, Texas. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Wreckers board schooner dismantled by hurricane, Key West, Fla. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

World's biggest jack-knife bridge constructed at Chicago, Ill. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Solemn ceremonies at burial of victims of Submarine E-13 sunk by Germans. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Scene of dynamite explosion at Ybor City, Fla. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By Captain Jack Poland

New things continue to occur in motion picture fields of this glorious Golden West—California. The latest announcement is that the New York Motion Picture Company, headed by that prince of producers, Thos. H. Ince, has purchased another large tract of some eleven acres of land at Culver City, midway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica, and will erect thereon in the immediate future a handsome group of studio buildings, stages, etc., for the better convenience of their five hundred players. The location is ideal and the new site is in the heart of electric car transportation on the main automobile boulevards between the city and the beaches. The Inceville studios will be retained and used for open locations and special scenic conceptions.

Static Flashes, the newsy little paper which has been published for almost a year under the direction of The Static Club of America, as a motion picture paper and publicity organ, was discontinued last week for purely financial reasons, much to the regret of many friends of the club and cameramen. Officers of the club state that the paper will be published now and then when something special occurs.

Cameramen of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Pacific Coast studios, are elated over the fact that the Big U organization, showing its appreciation of the better class of photography, has announced that in future the names of deserving cameramen will be displayed in the cast on Universal programs. This is an ambition that has beat in the heart of every representative artist-photographer and will result in better work and higher class photography in Universal pictures. This was one of the real objects of the publication—Static Flashes—recognition of the efficiency of cameramen. With this prestige ever before him, the cameraman of ability and intelligence will strive for better things and to advance the cause of his employers, his director, and the industry, and will endeavor on all occasions to make the best pictures possible. Several of the large and representative producing companies have already taken this step of recognition of the work of their cameramen and the idea is growing.

One of the entertaining social events of the early fall in motion picture circles was the marriage last Friday of Miss Laura Oakley, a talented actress and chief of police of Universal City, and Milton M. Moore, cameraman and assistant director of the J. Warren Kerrigan Company, whose work on Universal program pictures during the past few years has won substantial recognition. On the return of the happy young couple to the studios at Universal City friends, including everyone from heads of departments, stars, players and cameramen, extended royal greetings, bands played, Indians and cowboys danced and pranced, felicitations were exchanged and gladness and happiness wished upon the newlyweds. Both will continue as permanent specialists with the Universal Company.

Mabel Normand, known as "Queen of the Movies" in comedy life, star of Mack Sennett's Keystone Film Company, and a popular favorite among her associates and fans everywhere, came very near making her last appearance as the result of an accident at the studios about ten days ago, when she was struck on the head by some heavy object thrown during the making of a wedding scene—a Keystone comedy. For nearly two weeks Miss Normand has lain at the point of death, for several days being unconscious. News from her bedside, coming direct from her physician, states that she has passed the danger point and is now on the road to recovery.

The apartments of the dainty little comedienne have been deluged with floral offerings and notes of inquiry, as well as letters from friends, all wishing for her quick restoration to health.

Miss Kathryne Arbuckle, the talented daughter of the Hon. James Graeme Arbuckle, Knight of the Royal Order of Ruth Roland, of Balboa, and her chauffeur, whom she says is "a bear."

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago

	Bid	Asked
American Film Manufacturing Co.	85	95
Biograph Company	47	56
Colonial Motion Picture Corp	1½	4½
General Film Corp., pfd.	43	48
Mutual Film Corp., pfd.	51½	55
Mutual Film Corp., com.	50	54
North American Film Corp., pfd.	65	...
North American Film Corp., com.	64	78
New York Motion Picture Corp.	69	73½
Thanhouser Film Corp.	1¾	2¾*
Triangle Film Corp.	9	9¼*
Universal Film Mfg. Co.	150	...
Vogue Films, Inc.	105	...
World Film Corp.	3¼	3¾*

* Par $5.00

Vogue Films, Incorporated—Is the latest manufacturing company to enter the motion picture field. The company was organized to supply the production of comic films under a contract with the Mutual Film Corporation and which are to be distributed through the Mutual. The work is to be done at Los Angeles and the first releases will be made in December. The company was organized on a hyperconservative basis of $100,000, all common. Only a small amount of stock was allowed to reach the public and this was all absorbed in about two or three hours' time. A premium of five points is now bid for the stock and there is none offered on the market.

Triangle Film Corporation—Made a new high record in sales at 9¼ during the week ending September 25. The first releases were shown at the Knickerbocker theater in New York City to a crowded house.

World Film Corporation—Sales have been made as low as 3¼ and the market seems to have lost some of its buoyancy.

New York Motion Picture Corporation—After being quiet for about a month and a half, was fairly active during the past week with sales at between 69 and 72.

Mutual Film Corporation—The preferred has again come into activity on reports of increased business and a policy based on the building up of a substantial surplus account before any probable distribution to the common stockholders.

American Film Corporation—Is in good demand, although difficult to obtain. If plans at present in embryo are carried out, this company will shortly be the largest in the world in point of output, with one of the cleanest records, in the matter of earnings and dividends, of any in the United States.

Isabella the Catholic, and Vice-Consul de Espana at St. Louis, and a sister to Maclyn Arbuckle, the celebrated star with Crane, Ross, Bingham and Taliaferro in the "New Henrietta," is one of the newer lights who has joined the Universal Pacific Coast studios. Miss Arbuckle is an actress of ability and is quite an addition to the Hollywood social set of the motion picture colonies. She comes from a distinguished Southern family whose name is identified with great achievements and developments.

The new Essanay-Chaplin picture, "Shanghaied," which has been causing members of Charlie's organization much work, worry and real dangers, is now completed. This is said to be the greatest screen melodramatic comedy ever attempted by Charlie Chaplin, and Managing Director Robbins believes it will cause even greater delights to Chaplin fans than any of his other productions. Photoplayers Weekly, which for the past year has been published in magazine form, has been purchased by J. Frederick Ryan, a well-known newspaper man, former theatrical specialist, lately with the Movie Magazine of Los Angeles as business manager. The paper will hereafter be issued as a weekly newspaper devoted to all branches of the industry.

Director William C. Dowlan of the Universal, is now busy on his new production, "The Devil and Idle Hands." This is a befitting title for Sir William, for he is known as one of the most tireless producers of the Universal organization. He is a result obtainer and his pictures show ability that means a great future.

Much interest is being centered in the reorganization of the Photoplayers Club of Los Angeles. Steps are being formulated which may mean the re-establishment of this once popular club as a favorite place of rendezvous for motion picture people. Under the right leadership little difficulty would attend the reorganization. But it must have a strong man at its head as president, who will surround himself with a staff of officers and directors of ability and worth. The names of successful men in the profession have been mentioned, and if possible to secure either of them as president, with the others on the board of directors, a club of great benefit and much social distinction can be organized. Among the leaders mentioned for president are Phillips Smalley, noted as a producer of the Universal; David Wark Griffith, directing head of the new Fine Arts Films; Henry Woodruff, Dustin Farnum, Courtenay Foote, Colonel Thos. H. Ince, director general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation; Fred J. Balshofer, of Quality Pictures. Francis X. Bushman, Charlie Chaplin, H. M. Horkheimer, of the Balboa Features; Otis Turner, of the Universal; Frank E. Woods, of the Fine Arts Films; Mack Sennett, Keystone director-general; De Wolf Hopper, Rollin S. Sturgeon, of the Vitagraph, and others.

With either of the gentlemen as its president and a board of directors of the same caliber, the Photoplayers Club could be re-established and become one of the notable organizations of the West. There is no place more suitable for a club devoted to the interests of the players than Los Angeles, the headquarters and rendezvous for more celebrities of the screen and stage than any other city in the world.

Judging from the elaborate preparations in connection with the staging of the first subject to be produced by Pallas Pictures, the new Paramount organization, the initial release will be one of unusual magnitude, for a regular program offering. The play with which this concern will make its debut is "The Gentleman from Indiana," starring the popular Dustin Farnum, who has signed a long-term contract to appear under this banner.

An immense street set built for this production has created considerable interest among residents of the Occidental boulevard and daily sightseeing expeditions to the studio grounds have been organized. The street is an exact replica of the main thoroughfare of an Indiana county seat, and from the court house hitchracks to the hotel, with the wooden canopy over the walk, it is Hoosier, every inch. Seen from the outside, its spires, belfries, rooms and chimneys loom against the sky in a lofty mass in comparison with which the ten-foot fence around the grounds seems a mere footboard.

Over 50,000 feet of lumber were used in constructing the buildings along the street, and the roadway itself enlisted twenty-five teams, which hauled in 200 yards of dirt. This traffic lane is especially typical with its winding, hoof-hammered narrow gauge trail in the center and with the expanse of rough on either side which reproduces in living stone the wheel tracks made during the last rains. Trees, carefully uprooted from vacant premises near by have been "planted" at commanding intervals.

Director Frank Lloyd will introduce a sensational novelty by staging a genuine rainstorm at night in the street, with lights inside the store windows and the water streaming down the panes. The scenes in the street will enlist the services of over 500 people at a time. A special camera tower 60 feet high is to be erected just outside the grounds to secure effective perspectives, especially during the Whitecaps riots. Earl Sibley was the technical man.

Pop Lubin visits D. W. Griffith at the Fine Art's California Studios.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS

By William Noble.

MISSOURI.

The Baxter theater of Novington, Mo., is a town booster and helps to keep its home town cleaned up, and keeps the crowds coming by giving free tickets to the theater to every child under fourteen years old bringing in fifteen old cans to the theater. Nineteen merchants gave prizes also, ranging in value from 25 cents up. They also gave a grand prize to the child bringing in the largest number. One hundred and eighty-three children took part in the contest. A total of 48,882 old tin cans were turned in.

Circuit Judge Kinsy on September 21 at St. Louis, Mo., denied a temporary injunction of the Epoch Producing Company, which sought to restrain the Cherokee theater from producing a drama called the "The Birth of Our Nation." The Epoch Producing Company is producing the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Olympic theater. The petition claims the play of the defendant company infringes on the copyright of the Epoch Company.

An injunction suit to restrain the picketing of the old Hippodrome theater, now known as the New Grand Duchess, a motion picture house, conducted by the Weimer Theater Company in St. Louis, Mo., was filed Wednesday in the circuit court. The defendants are the Motion Picture Operators Union No. 143, Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, Local No. 2, and the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' Union No. 1. Differences between the electrical workers and other unions regarding the nature of the work to be done by stage hands and by the electricians have caused the trouble.

TEXAS.

Complete in every detail, "The Spirit of the Fair," showing Miss Katherine Milliken, the most beautiful girl in the entire state of Texas, was shown at the Old Mill theater, in Dallas, Texas, Tuesday, September 21, to packed houses. Manager Ben Lewis invited a number of newspaper men and officials of the city and the Sate fair to witness the initial performance, and the picture was pronounced to be an exquisite gem. The picture is an allegory in design and effect and shows Miss Milliken as a spirit hovering over the various exhibition buildings and through the grounds of the State fair. "The Spirit of the Fair" will be released Sunday, September 26, in dozens of Texas moving picture theaters, beginning with the larger houses in Dallas.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

Eugene Cour, our old friend of the weekly news film, blossoms out this week as managing director of the Producers Service Company with offices in the Security Bldg.

Aaron W. Gollos left for New York September 28 on the century. Aaron is making history and says he'll have a big story to tell when he gets back next week.

J. A. Kent, publicity and sales manager of the Great Northern Film Company, was a visitor at MOTOGRAPHY'S office on Friday, September 24. Mr. Kent was in Chicago to make arrangements with a local feature exchange to handle the "Big Bear" products in this territory.

E. H. Brient went to Des Moines last week but is back on the job in the Mallers building again.

Charles C. Pyle, sales agent for the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, is negotiating one of the biggest deals of his career. More about this will be told when the details have been worked out.

Jones, Linick and Schaefer are preparing notices to tenants of the Mayer property on State street south of Jackson, to the effect that after January 1 the buildings will be torn down. The $600,000, 1,800-seat house which J., L. & S. will erect on the ground will be known as the Strand.

Barnard Balaban and Richard Spencer, the "Movie Inn" magnates, left last Sunday in a flivver to motor to New York City. Having eaten at the Movie Inn we wish them no hard luck. Brother Abe Balaban is now busier than "Hamburger running a six-reeler with a crowd outside." Abe picks out the show for the Circle in the morning, is at the restaurant from 10 till 7, then out at the theater from 7 till 10, and nothing to do till tomorrow.

The "Man Trail," Essanay's adaptation of Oyen's popular story, filled Ascher's Lakeside theater three times last week. The music in this theater still continues to sound sour. Manager Perry is to be complimented in picking films that will hold the crowd in spite of the orchestra.

George L. Cox returned from St. Louis Wednesday with a handful of news clippings commending the picture "The Making of John Hays" now running at one of the St. Louis theaters. Mr. Cox in making the picture used as extras some of the biggest financiers in the Southwest, who were all so startled to meet a man who could "boss" them around that they gave him a banquet. Two of these wealthy men wanted to establish a local moving picture studio, promising the financial backing necessary. It is not believed Cox will accept, as two of the big eastern companies have been making him inducements unsuccessfully recently.

Commend me to Carl H. Pierce of the Bosworth Company, who is making such a splendid fight against censorship in Ohio, as a letter writer "par excellence." When he doesn't tell one how nice he is, he says "enclosed find ad." Write some more Carl. More power to your good right arm in your efforts to put sense in censorship.

That guy Ralph D. Small is some broker, believe me. He put over a new $100,000 film company last week without a whisper reaching the trade and the stock is all gone already. Vogue films got off to a good start under his careful manipulation.

The Photoplay Releasing Company gave a private showing of its latest purchase, "Vengeance of the Wilds," a strong five-reel animal picture with a romantic story woven through it, at the Colonial on Monday, September 27. The house was well filled by exhibitors and booking agents who commended the picture highly. George Norwood Gollos is in charge of the bookings at the company's office.

Samuel S. Hutchinson left for his old stamping ground near Santa Barbara, Cal., early this week.

John R. Freuler, plump and smiling, boarded the Century Friday for New York. He has some plans for perfecting the Mutual program which haven't reached print as yet, but which will be greeted with enthusiasm by exhibitors when announced.

Miss Katherine McGuire, winner of "the most popular girl in Mississippi trip to the San Francisco fair," is spending a few days at the ad man's home. It has never before been our pleasure to meet such a dyed-in-the-wool picture fan. She bought her own railroad tickets from Frisco to San Diego to see Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne crowned and says Bushman holds the crowds out in Vicksburg at twenty cents admission for three full evening shows. Verily, these picture shows have a tremendous hold on the people.

The Alamo theater, Vicksburg, Miss., wants to run "The Diamond from the Sky" but can't get it up from New Orleans until 5 p. m., thereby losing the matinee, and at the price charged for the film cannot afford to run nights only. Some day this distribution thing is going to be worked out better, as there are doubtless a great many other films in other towns that cannot make money for the exhibitor or renter for the same reason.

Andrew J. Cobe of New York had a meeting with former representatives of the Alliance Film Co. at the Congress Hotel Monday, September 27.

Arthur Bard of the Associated Film Service was a Chicago visitor on Wednesday.

The home of the Oliver Morosco photoplays.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Charles Clary is playing the part of a Franciscan Monk in the Triangle feature, "The Penitents." The whole company, including the star, Orrin Johnson, Signe Auen and Paul Gilmore, spent several days at Chatsworth, taking scenes. Clary's part in "The Penitents" promises to stand out as prominently as did the priest in "The Rosary."

Jose Collins, recent star of the Winter Garden, "Ziegfeld's Follies," and seen at a later date in a production of the World Film Corporation, is to be seen in a big Equitable production early in November. Miss Collins has taken up screen work to occupy her mind. Her husband recently joined the Royal British Engineers and has gone to the Dardanelles. Red Cross work takes up a part of the dainty star's time, but the studio work will keep her fully active.

How could the police patrol do otherwise? True, Miss Laura Sawyer was speeding, but when he halted her and received such a smile, there was nothing more to do than to caution.

Maurice Costello has just begun work on one of the most important productions of his career as a Vitagraph star in "Saints and Sinners," a domestic drama, picturized from an original story by Ouida Bergere.

Many years' experience as leading man for Sarah Bernhardt forms part of the record of Ernest Maupain, noted French actor, and one of the leading men for Essanay, who has the part of Mendoza, commander of the King's Guard, in Essanay's six-act feature photoplay, "In the Palace of the King," dramatized from the famous novel by F. Marion Crawford.

James Bradburry, the veteran comedian, who scores such a hit as the manager of a burlesque troup, in Hoyt's "A Black Sheep," with Otis Harlan filmed, as a Selig Red Seal Play, will be seen in a large number of comedy parts in forthcoming Selig productions.

Sadie Lindblom, owner and leading lady of the Liberty Company at San Mateo, California, is gathering some good artists around her. Fred Montague is the director, and in Camille Ward she possesses a splendid "heavy" woman, and in Beatrice Thorne a capable character actress. Ann Goldsby plays utility parts and K. O. Rahmn is the cameraman. Emory Johnson takes the leads.

The original photoplay by George Scarborough, author of "The Lure" and other successful plays on Broadway, in which Ethel Barrymore is being starred by the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., for release on the Metro program, has been changed from the title previously announced of "Her Honor" to "The Final Judgment."

Helen Starr has lately joined the forces of the Universal Film Company and will write publicity matter for that firm. She is a newspaper woman of experience, has in the past handled publicity matter for the Republic and Mutual press departments and has sold many scenarios. Miss Starr has played in stock companies and productions and understands both the acting and publicity end of the movie game.

By defeating the Lubin baseball team in the beginning of the season and by scoring a second triumph over the Edison team in winning the last of a three-game series on last Saturday, September 18, the Vitagraphers feel they are entitled to be known as the "Champions of the Motion Picture Industry."

House Peters, the universally popular leading man of distinctive rugged American type, begins his engagement with the Lubin Company auspiciously by being cast as Mr. Lewis' leading man in the role of Steve Ghant in "The Great Divide," the character which was made immortal by Henry Miller.

Henrietta Crosman, Broadway star, who at present is being filmed by Director Edward J. Le Saint in the production of "The Faddist" at Universal City, in which she is to be featured in the leading role, is filled with enthusiasm over her motion picture work.

Richard C. Travers, Essanay leading man, narrowly escaped death in an automobile accident at the Naval Training Station, near Waukegan, Ill., when he turned a sharp corner going at high speed.

Niles Welch, who played opposite "Little Mary" Miles Minter in "Emmy, of Stork's Nest," a five-part photoplay just completed by the Colombia Pictures Corporation for the Metro program, scored so notably in the part assigned to him that arrangements were at once made for Mr. Welch to play similar parts in future productions in which Miss Minter will be featured.

Miss Hazel Daly, a high school girl scarcely eighteen years of age, has been selected as leading lady to Tom Mix, the producer-actor who turns out thrilling western pictures for the Selig Polyscope Company. She was selected from numerous applicants, some of whom have won big reputations for themselves in the silent drama, because of her personality and beauty. She has never had any great amount of motion picture experience, although she has worked as an "extra" in the Chicago studios.

Jacques Jaccard, former director of the Kerrigan-Victor Company, who this week returned to the Universal City studios, within a few days will start work on a second western Victor release of one-reel subjects. Peggy Courderay, Raymond Russell, Frederick Church and George Marshall will play the principal roles in these productions.

Frank Dayton, who, in "The Market Price of Love," takes the part of the aged millionaire who marries one of his young employes, is the oldest member of the Essanay company in time of service.

Director George Terwilliger, with his company of Lubin Players, returned to Philadelphia on Wednesday of this week fresh from a conquest of big things at Newport and Narragansett, Rhode Island, where he has just completed the filming of a great multiple reel war picture of his own writing, "The Peril," which will mark the advent of the newer Lubin productions.

A woman's auto club is to be formed in Santa Barbara by the feminine members of the American studios there. Among the members are Miss Lottie Pickford, Miss May Allison, Miss Neva Gerber, Miss Nan Christie, Miss Anna Little, Miss Charlotte Burton, Miss Eugenie Forde, Miss Carol Holloway, Mrs. Lucille Warde, Miss Beatrice Van and Miss Helene Rosson.

There are few professions which call for such versatility as does that of motion picture player and producer, and there are few photoplayers so gifted with that necessary versatility to such a marked extent as is Richard Stanton, latest addition to the Universal City producing staff.

Richard Stanton has completed his first picture for the Universal and is now engaged on a photoplay in which he takes the part of a socialistic foreman who saves his employer's daughter and corrects evils in the factory. Stanton is also directing the story and has Myrtle Gonzales playing opposite him. Miss Gonzales was with the western Vitagraph for a long time.

Edgar Moore, the most popular man about the Balboa studio, has been putting in his week's vacation at the San Francisco exposition. To the picture fans Mr. Moore is unknown, but the members of the Long Beach motion picture colony like to be on good terms with him. He's the company auditor and pays off.

Managing Director Mack Sennett, of the Keystone Film Company, welcomed Joe Jackson and Bert Clark, the two new Keystone comedians, when they arrived at the Los Angeles studios from New York City recently.

Tom Chatterton has joined the Universal and the Big U has secured another fine actor-director. Chatterton only played in pictures with one firm, the New York Motion Picture Corporation, but he was with Mr. Ince a long time and during his last year at Santa Monica he directed and took his own leads.

A. W. Thomas, the well-known author and his bride, Neil G. Caward, of Motography, and Tefft Johnson, the motion picture actor, were guests recently at the Selig Chicago studios.

Miss Ruth Stonehouse, leading player for Essanay, has just returned from an automobile trip to Elkhart, Ind., in her 90-horsepower car. She drove the machine herself and made the journey, a distance of 286 miles, at an average speed of 50 miles an hour along country roads.

Because of painful, though not serious injuries received while playing leads with the Kerrigan-Victor company at the Lake Tahoe studios, Helen Leslie, who this week returned to Universal City, will take a rest of several weeks before returning to her work before the camera.

Bessie Barriscale is thanking Thomas H. Ince for a very pretty dressing room. Miss Bessie had two days off and when she returned she found her room all kalsomined and paneled with oak.

Cleo Madison and her company of Universal players are this week to leave the Universal City studios for a stay of a few days at Mount Baldy, where they are to stage the exterior scenes in the production of a one-reel comedy-drama entitled "Liquid Dynamite," written by Olga Printzlau Clark.

Marshall Farnum, who staged "Kreutzer's Sonata," is now with Equitable at the Flushing, L. I., studios, producing "Creeping Tides," in which Alexandra Carlisle will make her camera debut.

William Russell, the Blair Stanley in "The Diamond from the Sky," was recently made a deputy sheriff of Santa Barbara county. Just to make good as a peace officer, Mr. Russell has caught one automobile thief and had a hand in returning a stolen saddle horse to its owner.

On moving picture day at the Panama California Exposition the Universal comedians, and especially the Curtis Joker Company, kept vast crowds amused by an improvised comedy which was staged with President A. G. Davidson in the cast.

Dal Clawson, cameraman for Blanche Ring in the Morosco filmization of "The Yankee Girl," nearly passed out the opening day of the California deer season. Trailing fresh tracks up the Sespe canyon he dropped flat in the heavy grass just in time to escape five bullets sent whistling over his head by a hunter he had seen drawing a perfect bead on him with a Winchester. It was not, however, a case of being mistaken for a deer, for the next moment a doe sprang up ahead of him and came leaping past him with the hunter frantically pumping shot after shot from his magazine. Dal would have liked to have taken a shot himself, but remembered the law protects does, so he contented himself with attaching a red bandanna to his gun barrel and wigwagging a distress signal to the careless hunter, in order to arise from his cramped position without being cut down.

Dal Clawson

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by makers, Motography has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	9-27	The Seymour House Party	Biograph	1,000
D	9-27	Darling Dandy	Essanay	3,000
D	9-27	The Mysterious Visitor	Kleine	2,000
D	9-27	The Guilt	Kalem	3,000
D	9-27	Tony and Marie	Lubin	1,000
D	9-27	The Runt	Selig	2,000
T	9-27	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 77, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-27	The Butterfly's Lesson	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	His Wife's Story	Biograph	2,000
D	9-28	The Convict's Threat	Essanay	2,000
C	9-28	Foiled	Kalem	1,000
C	9-28	In Zuzuland	Lubin	400
C	9-28	The Wayville Slumber Part	Lubin	600
C	9-28	Her Slight Mistake	Selig	1,000
D	9-28	Through Troubled Waters	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	9-29	The Country Parson	Biograph	3,000
C	9-29	The Parson's Horse Race	Edison	1,000
C	9-29	At the Old Swimming Hole	Essanay	1,000
D	9-29	The Man on Watch	Kalem	2,000
D	9-29	The Dragon's Claw	Knickerbocker	3,000
D	9-29	The Last Rose	Lubin	2,000
D	9-29	Rags and the Girl	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

C	9-30	Winning the Widow	Biograph	1,000
C	9-30	Off for a Boat Ride	Essanay	1,000
D	9-30	Voices from the Past	Lubin	3,000
C	9-30	Why the Boarders Left	Mina	1,000
D	9-30	The Agony of Fear	Selig	3,000
T	9-30	The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 78, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	9-30	The Plague Spot	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-1	Brutality	Biograph	1,000
D	10-1	The Ploughshare	Edison	4,000
D	10-1	Broncho Billy Misled	Essanay	1,000
D	10-1	The Curious Case of Meredith Stanhope	Kalem	2,000
D	10-1	When the Wires Crossed	Lubin	1,000
C	10-1	The Fox Trot Finesse	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-2	Her Renunciation	Biograph	1,000
D	10-2	The Butler	Edison	1,000
D	10-2	The Family Divided	Essanay	3,000
D	10-2	The Runaway Box Car	Kalem	2,000
C	10-2	The Cello Champion	Lubin	1,000
D	10-2	A Mutiny in the Jungle	Selig	1,000
C	10-2	A Queen for an Hour	Vitagraph	2,000

Monday.

D	10-4	The Old and the New	Biograph	1,000
D	10-4	Tides That Meet	Essanay	3,000
D	10-4	The Fashion Shop	Kleine	2,000
D	10-4	The Pretenders	Kalem	4,000
D	10-4	Think, Mothers	Lubin	1,000
D	10-4	The Sultana of the Desert	Selig	2,000
T	10-4	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 79, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-4	The Reward	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Worth of a Woman	Biograph	2,000
D	10-5	The Old Sin	Essanay	3,000
C	10-5	Whitewashing William	Kalem	1,000
C	10-5	Love and Swords	Lubin	1,000
D	10-5	The Girl and the Mail Bag	Selig	1,000
D	10-5	The Barriers of Prejudice	Vitagraph	2,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.
THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.
SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday.

C	10-6	Black Eyes	Edison	1,000
C	10-6	The Fable of "The Statesmen Who Did Not Make Good"	Essanay	1,000
D	10-6	The Man in Irons	Kalem	2,000
D	10-6	Jim West, Gambler	Lubin	3,000
C	10-6	Fits and Chills	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-7	Her Soul Revealed	Biograph	1,000
C	10-7	Snakeville's Weak Women	Essanay	1,000
D	10-7	The Telegrapher's Peril	Lubin	2,000
C	10-7	The Honeymoon Roll	Mina	1,000
D	10-7	The Bridge of Time	Selig	3,000
T	10-7	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 80, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-8	Miss Sticky-Moufie Kiss	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-8	Billy's Stratagem	Biograph	1,000
D	10-8	An Unwilling Thief	Edison	3,000
D	10-8	Broncho Billy, Sheepman	Essanay	1,000
D	10-8	The Finger of Suspicion	Kalem	1,000
D	10-8	The Son	Lubin	1,000
C	10-8	Miss Sticky-Moufie Kiss	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	Bob's Love Affairs	Biograph	1,000
E	10-9	The Manufacture of Coin	Edison	1,000
D	10-9	Suppressed Evidence	Essanay	2,000
D	10-9	The Water Tank Plot	Kalem	1,000
C	10-9	Think of the Money	Lubin	1,000
D	10-9	The Tiger Slayer	Selig	1,000
D	10-9	Youth	Vitagraph	3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Aug.	9	Chalice of Courage	Vitagraph	6,000
Aug.	16	A Bunch of Keys	Essanay	5,000
Aug.	16	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Aug.	23	Wheels of Justice	Vitagraph	4,000
Aug.	23	House of Thousand Candles	Selig	5,000
Aug.	30	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Sept.	6	Mortmain	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept.	13	The Man Trail	Essanay	6,000
Sept.	20	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	5,000
Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	9-27	The Terror of Twin Mountains	American	2,000
C	9-27	Gustave Gebhard's Gutter Band	Falstaff	1,000
C	9-27	The Amateur Camera Man	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	The Road to Fame	Thanhouser	2,000
S	9-28	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	9-28	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	9-28	Love, Mumps and Bumps	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	9-30	The Protest	Centaur	3,000
C	9-30	Love's Strategy	Mutual	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-1	Stanley's Search for the Hidden City	Centaur	2,000
C	10-1	A Perplexing Pickle Puzzle	Centaur	1,000
T	10-1	Mutual Weekly No. 39	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-2	A Fool's Heart	Eclair	2,000
D	10-2	Hearts in Shadow	American	1,000
C	10-2	The Oriental Spasm	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-2	Man Afraid of His Wardrobe	Mustang	3,000
C	10-2	Mixed Males	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-3	As in the Days of Old	Reliance	2,000
C	10-3	His Lordship's Dilemma	Gaumont	1,000
D	10-3	The Mystery of Eagle's Cliff	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	10-4	Damaged Goods	American	7,000
D	10-4	Just As It Happened	American	2,000
C	10-4	Cousin Clara's Cook Book	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-4	The Corsican Brothers Up to Date	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Light on the Reef	Thanhouser	2,000
S	10-5	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	10-5	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	10-5	Mother's Busy Week	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-6	Sunshine and Tempest	Rialto	3,000
C	10-6	Just Like His Wife	Mutual	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-7	Rhoda's Burglar	Centaur	2,000
C	10-7	Dicky's Demon Dachshund	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-7	Mutual Weekly, No. 40	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-8	Breezy Bill, Outcast	Mustang	2,000
D	10-8	The Sting of It	American	1,000
C	10-8	A Change of Luck	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	Pardoned	Clipper	3,000
C	10-9	Curing Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-10	The Queen of the Band	Reliance	2,000
	10-10	Title not reported	Casino
D	10-10	The Has-Been	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	9-27	Judge Not, or the Woman of Mona Diggings	Broadway	6,000
C	9-27	Snatched from the Altar	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	9-28	Her Prey	Gold Seal	2,000
	9-28	No release this week	Rex
C	9-28	Billy's College Job	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

C	9-29	An All Around Mistake	Imp	2,000
C	9-29	Married on Credit	L Ko	1,000
T	9-29	Animated Weekly No. 186	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	9-30	No release this week	Laemmle
D	9-30	The Sheriff of Red Rock Gulch	Big U	2,000
C	9-30	The Orr Mystery	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	10-1	The Wolf of Debt	Imp	4,000
	10-1	No release this week	Victor
	10-1	No release this week	Nestor

Saturday.

D	10-2	The Ghost Wagon	Bison	3,000
	10-2	No release this week	Powers
C	10-2	An Innocent Villain	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-2	Her Three Mothers	Laemmle	3,000
	10-2	No release this week	Rex
C	10-2	A Mortgage on His Daughter	L Ko	1,000
D	10-2	The Broken Coin No. 15	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	10-4	Fatherhood	Broadway	4,000
C	10-4	When a Man's Fickle	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Silent Battle	Gold Seal	3,000
	10-5	No release this week	Rex
C	10-5	The Unnecessary Sex	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-6	The Woman Who Lied	Victor	3,000
	10-6	No release this week	L-Ko
T	10-6	Animated Weekly, No. 187	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	10-7	No release this week	Imp
D	10-7	The $50,000 Jewel Theft	Big U	2,000
C	10-7	The Acrobat's Dream	Powers	500
C	10-7	The Hero of the Gridiron	Powers	500

Friday.

D	10-8	The House With the Drawn Shades	Rex	2,000
	10-8	No release this week	Victor
C	10-8	Eddie's Little Love Affair	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	The Queen of Jungle Land	Bison	3,000
D	10-9	The Third Partner	Powers	1,000
C	10-9	Fifty Dollars for a Kiss	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-10	Alas and Alack	Rex	1,000
D	10-10	Marianna	Laemmle	1,000
C	10-10	A Bath House Tragedy	L-Ko	2,000
D	10-10	The Broken Coin, No. 16	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000

Associated Service.

Release Week of

Oct.	4	Piercing the Veil	Alhambra	2,000
Oct.	4	Good Out of Evil	Santa Barbara	2,000
Oct.	4	Love's Probation	Ramona	2,000
Oct.	4	The Wolf's Den	Navajo	2,000
Oct.	4	Woman's Past	Federal	1,000
Oct.	4	Getting the Goods on Father	Empire	1,000
Oct.	4	An Innocent Kidnaper	Banner	1,000
Oct.	4	Song of the Sea	Decr	1,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Sept.	8	Money Master	Kleine	5,000
Sept.	15	The Fixer	Kleine-Edison	1,000
Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	13	The Silent Voice	Metro	6,000
Sept.	20	The Bigger Man	Metro	5,000
Sept.	27	An Enemy to Society	Metro	5,000
Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept.	2	Infatuation	American	4,000
Sept.	9	The Wolf-Man	Reliance	4,000
Sept.	16	The Man From Oregon	N. Y. M. P.	5,000
Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	6	The Foundling	Famous Players	5,000
Sept.	6	Esmeralda	Famous Players	4,000
Sept.	9	Out of Darkness	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	16	Peer Gynt	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Sept.	13	The Case of Becky	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	20	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Sept.	23	'Twas Ever Thus	Bosworth
Sept.	27	The Explorer	Jesse L. Lasky
Sept.	27	The Voice in the Fog	Jesse L. Lasky
Sept.	30	The Fatal Card	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Sept.	20	The Toilers of the Sea	Balboa	3,000
Sept.	20	Some Baby	Phunphilms	1,000
Sept.	20	Pathe Daily News, No. 76	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	20	Pathe Daily News, No. 77	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	20	Neal of the Navy, No. 4	Panama	2,000
Sept.	20	Simon, the Jester	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept.	20	Hot Stuff	Starlight	1,000
Sept.	20	Strange Occupations	Globe	1,000
Sept.	27	The Lost Secret	Balboa	2,000
Sept.	27	Exploring Ephraim's Exploit	Pathe	500
Sept.	27	An Intimate Study of Birds No. 8	Pathe	500
Sept.	27	Pathe News No. 78	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	27	Pathe News No. 79	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	27	Neal of the Navy No. 5	Panama	2,000
Sept.	27	The Spender	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept.	27	Considerable Milk	Starlight	1,000
Oct.	4	New Adventures of Wallingford	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	4	Fresh From the Farm	Phunphilms	1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 80	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 81	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	4	Picturesque Zeeland (Holland)	Photocolor	500
Oct.	4	Altar of Heaven (Pekin, China)	Globe	500
Oct.	4	Neal of the Navy, No. 6	Panama	2,000
Oct.	4	The Closing Net	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	4	Pretty Rough on Aunty	Starlight	1,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	27	Salvation Nell	California
Sept.	27	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 12	World Comedy
Sept.	27	Little Mademoiselle	Shubert
Sept.	27	The Lure of a Woman	Armstrong
Sept.	27	The Master of the House	Triumph	5,000
Oct.	3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert
Oct.	3	The Price	Triumph
Oct.	10	The Family Cupboard	Brady
Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Hearst-Selig—September 27.—Mexican suspects captured on charge of sniping at Santa Maria Ferry, Texas; U. S. soldiers scour territory at Los Indios, Texas; women's swimming championship of New England at Boston, Mass.; railway employees have picnic at Hagerstown, Md.; 1,500 poor children have steamer ride on Hudson river, New York; fans cheer Red Sox team in crucial game in fight for flag against Detroit at Boston; Admiral Winslow is appointed commander of Pacific fleet and Admiral Howard transferred from active duty; University of Pennsylvania football candidates are coached in first real workout at Port Deposit, Md.; bench show for various breeds and classes of canine held at Chicago; temporary roadway over new subway construction in Seventh avenue, New York, collapses.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 78—Hearst-Selig—September 30.—Aviator Niles entertains crippled children at San Francisco Fair; Vernon Castle receives coaching on polo field at Hinsdale, Ill.; parents and children from city slums harvest crop in hop fields of Kent, England; Henry Ford discusses subsea craft with President Wilson; suffragettes active at Panama-Pacific Exposition; U. S. naval cadets report for football practice at Annapolis, Md.; volunteer business and professional men shoulder muskets at Fort Sheridan, Ill.; fire wipes out great part of Hampton Beach, N. H.; recruiting campaign started at London, England.

Broncho Billy Misled—Essanay—October 1.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. In a fight Marguerite's father kills a man and the girl hides her father. Broncho Billy, however, waits outside and the girl leads him to believe that she has hidden her father in a wood shed. She rushes to the outer building and Marguerite throws on the lock and makes him a prisoner and her father makes his escape on Broncho Billy's horse.

The Old and New—Biograph—October 4.—Featuring Edward Cecil and Isabel Rea and a strong cast. The young efficiency expert returns from college and sends his father on a vacation. He then discharges the old bookkeeper, who goes home and tells his wife he had been granted a holiday. Meanwhile the young man's sweetheart, learning what he has done, comes to the office to plead for the old employe. Later he forgets the safe combination and he rushes to the bookkeeper's home and arrives just in time to save the old man from suicide. The old man's memorandum is destroyed, but instinct lingers in his finger tips. The vault door is opened and the girl who has been locked in the vault is saved just in time.

Tides That Meet—(Three Reels)—Essanay—October 4.—A strong cast featured. Estelle Dalny goes for Red Cross duty into Mexico and later her half-brother, Rupert Ellston, a surveyor, overhears that his sister has been kidnapped by an outlaw. He meets with one Lopez Deligardo, who tells him that if he will kill Bourne Carringford, Ellston's best friend, he will save his sister. For Estelle's sake, Ellston shoots his comrade and flees. Estelle, freed, nurses Carringford, who was not killed, and later they are married. Ellston joins the rebels and falls in love with Felicita de Lome. He later sees Carringford and surrenders. Felicita appeals to Carringford, explaining that with Ellston shot him to save his sister and then there is a happy reunion between Ellston, his sister and Felicita.

The Reward—Vitagraph—October 4.—Featuring S. R. Drew and Virginia Pearson with an all star cast. Jack Waldron, son of a well-known railroad president, wakes up to find himself in a dilapidated suit of clothes and nothing else. On his way home he finds a pocketbook and returns it to the young woman who has dropped it. She gives him her card and Jack goes home, but is ordered out. He puts on the tramp's suit again and secures a job at the girl's home as a chauffeur. Later his father forgives him and after establishing his identity he and Mary, the girl, are married.

The Worth of a Woman—(Two Reels)—Biograph—October 5.—Featuring Vera Sisson, G. Raymond Nye, Jose Ruben and Madge Kirby. Holmes, accompanied by his wife, goes west. In a mining town they see a man maltreating a dancing girl. The man is Barlow, the proprietor of the dance hall, and the girl is his wife. Holmes becomes infatuated with the girl and Barlow warns the Easterner away from her. The girl runs for protection to Holmes' cabin and Mrs. Holmes shields her from Barlow's wrath. Later Barlow sells out the saloon and leaves town and the girl decides to go with him. Holmes, his eyes opened, begs his wife's forgiveness and makes a fresh start.

The Old Sin—(Three Reels)—Essanay—October 5.—Featuring June Keith, John Lorenz, and a strong cast. Richard Bannon, a rising young lawyer, marries Cherish Stanton, a chorus girl, knowing nothing of her past. Five years later he is made district attorney and among the guests at a party he gives is Dan McAleer, in whom Cherish recognizes the man of her past. Later McAleer tells Bannon to make Cherish tell him a story, which she does. The telephone rings and Bannon hears Cherish fire a shot and then he shoots McAleer, only to learn that the maid has saved Cherish, for the bullet had lodged in McAleer's watch. McAleer begs Cherish's forgiveness and later Bannon clasps her to his heart.

Love and Swords—Lubin—October 5.—Featuring David L. Don and comedy cast. Honus Inkwell, pickle trust magnate, and Mike Grapefruit, head of the talcum powder trust, are good friends until they meet the charming Countess Lillian. Honus goes to the countess and tells her how much he loves her. The countess has her maid fill a water bag with boiling water and she and her lover place the water bag on the chair and cover it with a thin cloth. Honus sits down, but soon hurries out, and Mike is treated to the same dose as Honus. Later Mike and Honus challenge each other to a duel and when they arrive at the duelling grounds they find men digging two graves, a wagon drives up with coffins and tombstones, but just then a girl enters and the duel is ended.

The Girl and the Mail Bag—Selig—October 5.—Jessie Baird, the postmaster's daughter, handles all the registered mail. Hankey, a gambler, seeing the money being sent away from the mining town, orders Pete, his pal, to board the stage and throw the mail bag off at Deer Creek. Jessie becomes suspicious and arrives at Deer Creek just before Hankey does, and finds the mail bag and takes out the money and puts a rock in its place. Pete and Hankey accuse each other of treachery, and Jessie gets the drop on both outlaws and brings them to justice.

Barriers of Prejudice—(Two Reels)—Vitagraph—October 5.—Featuring Anne Schafer, Carleton Weatherby and Marguerite Reed. Gerald, son of an aristocratic and wealthy woman, despite his mother's opposition marries Meg, adopted daughter of a poor fisherwoman. Mrs. Howe finally succeeds in winning her son away from his young bride and keeps from him the fact that Meg has given birth to a child. Anne, the fisherwoman, goes to the Howe mansion and pleads with Gerald to return to his wife and child. On learning the story from her he turns against his mother in favor of Meg. He leaves Mrs. Howe, but in the end the baby reunites them all in peace and happiness.

Black Eyes—Edison—October 6.—Featuring Raymond McKee and Jean Dumar, with a strong cast. One evening Willard's partner persuades Willard to accompany him to a prize fight. The same evening Mrs. Willard goes to a neighbor's to play bridge and arrives home after her husband. He calls her down for being so late, and then they both promise to "never do it again." kiss and make up. About a week later Willard is again persuaded to go out and has his partner send home a telegram. The same evening his wife goes to a bridge party, and while quarreling with another woman she receives two black eyes and, having heard of one Professor Scarab who guarantees to remove black eyes in fifteen minutes, she goes to him, as also does her husband, who has received a beautiful black eye. Willard and his wife encounter each other and after he convinces her he is not a ghost she promises faithfully never to play bridge again.

The Fable of the Statesman Who Didn't Make Good—Essanay—October 6.—Featuring Harry Dunkinson and Frankie Raymond. Once there was a bluff who hated work, so became a statesman. In due time he married a widow and ten days later came home much saturated in a deep-seagoing hack. In the morning wife had the statesman up on the carpet. "Madam," says he, "during a long career as a servant of the People—" "Nix! Nix!" said his wife. "From the Rockbound hills of Maine to the Everglades—" he began. "To adjust yourself with wifey you must come down to cases." So he went out and got a $22 hat to square himself with wifey.

Jim West, Gambler—(Three Reels)—Lubin—October 6.—A strong cast featured. Jim West is a keeper of a gambling house and among the habitues is Stephen Morey. One night after losing all his money, Morey goes into the side room and kills himself, and Jim's wife leaves with her little daughter Helen. Later Morey's wife dies and gives her son, Frank, his father's ring. Jim later takes up religion and gets a call to a church in the same city in which his wife resides. Frank, who is in love with Helen, takes her to her father's church one day and there is a joyful reunion. The elders of Jim's church learn that he is a gambler and he is dismissed, but his wife, however, is reconciled to him. For a longer review, see another page of this issue.

Her Soul Revealed—Biograph—October 7.—Featuring Charles Perley, Augusta Anderson and Laura La Varnie. The Rev. John Sterling, after fighting the dangers that lurked in the tenements, at last calls in the Board of Health. The owner of the buildings determines to get rid of Sterling and he sets an actress friend of his the task of compromising Sterling. The girl pretends an interest in his mission work, but through a letter Sterling learns of the plot and denounces the woman, who through association is now in sympathy with the tenement worker. An epidemic of diphtheria breaks out and he finds her fighting humanity's battle and knows that she is the woman sent from heaven to be his mate.

Snakeville's Weak Women—Essanay—October 7.—Featuring Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd. Sophie Clutts is made coppess of Snakeville. She catches a city chap flirting and casts him in jail, but he makes love to her, and wins her sympathies. Protesting male citizens arouse Sophie's ire and they are all locked up and the wives of the village wait in vain for their husbands. The women march to the jail, jump on Sophie, pull her hair and finally knock down the lockup door. The husbands pile out, but the city chap is caught under the door with Sophie on top of him. He manages to crawl out and takes Sophie in his arms and she gladly takes off her star.

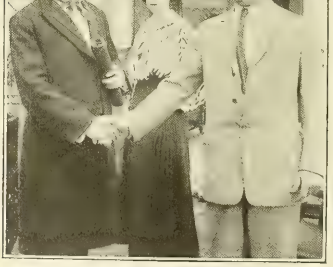
The Honeymoon Roll—Mina—October 7.—Featuring William Seider and Rena Rogers. The story deals with two newlyweds who come to the city for their honeymoon with a fat bank roll. A city for their honeymoon with a fat bank roll. A city for their honeymoon with a fat bank roll. A

The Bridge of Time—(THREE REELS)—SELIG—OCTOBER 7.—Featuring Harry Mestayer, Guy Oliver, Virginia Kirtley and Eugenie Besserer. Ralph Kennard, the last of a distinguished family, falls in love with one Marie Waters, whose brother Bob is a chauffeur. Kennard, dazzled by the loveliness of Marie, has his friend, Dick Darcy, perform a mock marriage. Some nights later two women friends and Darcy go to Kennard's home in a taxi which is driven by Bob Waters. Marie is hovering near the house, and her brother sees her and asks her what she is doing, and she then confesses that she and Kennard are man and wife. When Bob is told it was not a real marriage, he seizes an old sword from the wall and stabs Kennard, who falls bleeding to the floor. In delirium, Ralph Kennard's soul crosses the "Bridge of Time" and returns to the body of a wicked ancestor, Sir Ralph Kennard. It is in the Elizabethan period and Sir Ralph is believed to be dying, while Sir Richard D'Arcy and two women are in the apartment below. Sir Ralph orders his servant to bring the maid he wronged, that he may wed her before he dies, and Bob, now a sturdy yeoman, and his sister enter and a marriage ceremony is performed. Sir Richard D'Arcy plots against the life of Sir Ralph Kennard and also that of Queen Elizabeth. Bob overhears the plans and, together with Sir Ralph, is instrumental in saving Queen Elizabeth's life, but in so doing Sir Ralph loses his own. Then Ralph Kennard regains consciousness and comes back across the "Bridge of Time," and upon learning that he will recover a real marriage ceremony is performed and Marie is made his wife.

Old Good-For-Nuthin'—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 7.—Featuring Edwaina Robbins, Jay Dwiggins and Bobby Connelly. Hiram Garrison, who lives with his sister, Cynthy, and known as "Old Good-for-nuthin," is the best friend the boys have in town. Hiram finds Freckles, whose mother has just died and who is about to be sent to the poor house and brings the boy home with him. Cynthy is finally prevailed upon to adopt the little fellow. Later Cynthy's old sweetheart returns one day and the financial comfort of all concerned is assured by his presence.

Billy's Stratagem—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 8.—Featuring Claire McDowell, Edna Foster and Inez Seabury. Billy and his sister are playing outside the stockade when they hear a war whoop and see a band of Indians coming toward them. He drags his little sister and helps his aged grandfather to bar the gate, but soon the Indians force the barriers and pursue the children to the cabin. In the inner room Billy lays a fuse of shavings to his father's store of powder, drags his sister through the window, runs around the house and slams the door on the Indians within. The terrific crash that follows marks the end of the Indian raid.

The Son—LUBIN—OCTOBER 8.—Featuring Octavia Handworth and Jack Standing. Harlow is detained in his office by a rather beautiful adventuress, Mrs. Fenner, while his wife is waiting for him. Later in the days that follow Mrs. Harlow goes into a half insanity because of Harlow's absence from home and his visits to the woman,



Mrs. Fenner. One night his son, Gene, sees him take Mrs. Fenner to a cabaret and the next day he goes to her and asks her to give his father back to his home. The son thinking to keep his father from the woman, goes to call on her a few times. When he hears his father make an engagement with her, he determines to get there before he arrives, and when his father comes there is a big scene, and he accuses the woman of inveigling his own son by her wiles. She turns on him and tries to kill him, but the son separates the two and the repentant father goes home to his wife.

Miss Sticky-Mouñe Kiss—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew featured. Wade Buchanan marries Miss Claymore and nicknames her "Miss Sticky-Mouñe Kiss" because she talks only "baby talk." At their wedding breakfast she puts four lumps of sugar in his coffee and after that their desserts are mostly rich jams and preserves, and she calls her uncle "Junky-unky." She greets him every morning with baby talk, and, excusing himself one morning, he goes down to the beach and goes out into the ocean, dress suit and all, until he disappears.

Bob's Love Affairs—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 9.—Featuring Alan Hale, Mame Kirby and a strong cast. Bob Lane can't forget his childhood romance with one Dorothy. However, his friend Jones tells him to get married and at a party he proposes to three girls, all of whom reject him. He later goes to the sea and writes to Jones his thoughts about women. He sees a beautiful girl and later she sees the letter he had written to Jones which ends, "Women are playthings for fools," and being enraged goes boating with Jones. Their boat capsizes and Jones saves himself, while Bob rescues the girl and he learns that she is his boyhood love.

The Manufacture of Coin—EDISON—OCTOBER 9.—This film, taken in the Philadelphia mint by permission of the United States Treasury Department, shows the old gold and silver turned into coin and bars of gold bullion, and the process of melting gold scraps into ingots. It shows the making of twenty-dollar gold pieces, and then the counting of the coins and the weighing of them. The way in which they are prepared for shipment and then sent under heavily armed guards is also depicted.

Suppressed Evidence—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 9.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. The wife and mother in love with her vocal instructor places her husband's revolver and a note in her lover's coat pocket. The professor telephones to the husband to meet him and he is about to shoot the husband when the latter wheels on the music teacher and in the struggle kills him. The husband is arrested for murder, but for the sake of their little daughter he hides the note and keeps his wife's connection with the slaying silent. Fifteen years later he is pardoned, and he goes home, gets the note and shows it to his wife, and she craves his forgiveness. The daughter, now grown up, proves a means of a reconciliation and a happy family reunion.

Think, Mothers—LUBIN—OCTOBER 9.—Jack Standing and Mary Charleson featured. Nora Murray is in love with Frank Noble, a good but poor man. She meets Lansing, a clubman, who takes her out to cafes and roadhouses with her mother's consent and her mother tells Noble that she is out. He goes home to his parents on the farm. The mother still wants Nora to marry Lansing, which she does. Three years elapse and Lansing goes to his club every night and goes out with chorus girls. Nora calls her mother on the phone and tells her to come to her. When she arrives, Mrs. Murray takes Nora in her arms and asks her forgiveness for the unhappiness she has caused her. Her forgiveness is given as the story ends.

Think of the Money—LUBIN—OCTOBER 9.—Billie Reeves featured. Bill and Jane are left their uncle's money on condition that they marry each other within thirty days. As Bill has a wife and Jane a jealous husband, it looks as though they can't comply with the condition of the will. Bill visits Jane and his wife goes along as his valet, and Jane's husband pretends to be the butler. Bill has epileptic fits and Jane acts like a vixen, and her husband puts up such strenuous objections that the deception is unmasked. Just then the executor sends word that in the event of either being already married the money is to be divided.

The Tiger Slayer—SELIG—OCTOBER 9.—Frank Holden, a surveyor on Graham's tract of land in the jungle, is in love with Graham's daughter, Helen, as also is Martin, chief clerk in the office. Graham sends Holden on a dangerous mission into the interior of the jungle, and later he leaves Helen and goes himself into the interior to pay his help. In his absence Martin attacks Helen, but she escapes into the jungle. She is followed by a tiger and is saved just in time by Holden and a tiger slayer he has secured.

Youth—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 9.—Featuring Antonio Moreno, Frankie Mann, Donald Hall and Mlle. Valkyrien, Harold Harcourt, a sculptor, employs his wife, Elena, as his model. While striving for the great prize, a statue of "Youth," he finds that Elena lacks that undefinable "something" which spells youth and tells her she is too old. Ione, a young girl, visits them and she poses for the statue. Julian, a former suitor of Elena's, comes into her life and she is about to run away with him when her husband's marvelous statue stays her and later his conscience at last awakened, he smashes the work of art he has created, in expiation, and secures his wife's forgiveness.

Fits and Chills—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 10.—Comedy cast featured. Farmer Brown's three hired men are in love with the hired girl, Rose. Joe decides to become one of Brown's patients, as Brown is interested in the study of medicine and suddenly develops fits. Bill observes the tender nursing his rival is receiving from Rose and fakes up a severe attack of chills, while Tom knows that he is the one favored by the girl. Brown discovers that the fits and chills are both fakes and makes up a cure which would kill a horse, and after suffering, Joe and Bill only get the ha, ha, for Rose marries Tom and thus ends the rivalry.

Mutual Program

Breezy Bill, Outcast—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG.—Jack Richardson, famous American "heavy," makes his debut as lead of the new Mustang brand in this picture, supported by Helene Rosson and William Stowell. The story is one of cattle rustling. Breezy Bill, a western desperado, compelling his daughter, Marta, to dress as a man and aid him in his raids upon the cattle owned by his neighbors. The girl is finally captured by the sheriff and ere she is shot down her real identity is discovered, when the sheriff takes her to his mother's home and sets out to capture Breezy Bill. Eventually the cattle rustler is captured and the sheriff arranges to care for Marta as his wife. N. G. C.

The Vivisectionist—(TWO REELS)—GAUMONT—SEPTEMBER 17.—To find material for his book on the psychology of women's minds, a writer deliberately makes his wife jealous by feigning an interest in an actress, whom in reality he never sees. He studies the effect of the emotions in his wife's agony at seeming to lose him. Discovering that her husband has tortured her for his science, the young wife leaves his home, with her love for him dead. She is injured in an accident and taken to a hospital. At the same time the actress kills a friend of the psychologist and the latter is accused of the murder. The actress' dying confession of her crime frees the psychologist from the law, and the forgiveness of his cruelty by his wife on her sick bed restores them to their former state of happiness.

Mutual Weekly, No. 38—Mutual—September 23.—Construction of a railroad in the war zone for the transportation of supplies and munitions; quantity of arms captured in several engagements with the Germans by the allies; fire along the docks at New Orleans, La.; George Cram, eighty years old, pardoned by Governor Whitman after serving twenty-five years of a life sentence in Sing Sing for murder; Count Bernstorff, German ambassador, visits Secretary of State Lansing to discuss the torpedoing of the Arabic; celebration of Admission Day in San Francisco, Calif.; explosion of dynamite at Ybor City, Tampa, Fla., which wrecked a dozen buildings and killed two persons; the arrival of Harry K. Thaw at the San Francisco Exposition after an auto trip across the country.

A Perplexing Pickle Puzzle—Falstaff—September 30.—Raphael Rembrandt is an expert painter in several different capacities, and is also a detective as a side line. Lena, who owns a prosperous delicatessen store, is troubled with the theft of pickles, and puts the case in the hands of the detective-painter. The latter's efforts prove unavailing, however, and the mystery remains as dense as ever. But this is not because he did not try hard.

Seeing America First—(Split Reel)—Gaumont—September 28.—The subject of this half-reel is "Asheville," and includes a view of the famous $90,000 dairy and other interesting features of Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt's estate at Asheville, N. C. The second half of the reel comprises the "Keeping Up with the Joneses" cartoons, by Harry Palmer.

The Road to Fame—(Two Reels)—Thanhouser—September 28.—The theatrical manager is convinced that his leading woman will some day achieve fame on the stage. He also thinks she will make a fine wife for him, but on asking the question, learns that she has secretly been married some months before to a man of high social position. She does not care whether she succeeds or not, and retires to live a happy home life. On going to live with her husband's parents she is treated coldly and becomes more and more unhappy. She overhears a conversation, and from what her husband says, takes it that he is ashamed and tired of her. When the young man next sees his wife she tells him that she only married for money, and is going back to the stage. He believes this, but the father happens to glance out of the window and sees the woman tear up the check he had given her and then burst into tears. The old man, however, believes it best not to tell his son of this. Finally, the star's manager is instrumental in effecting a reconciliation between husband and wife after a successful performance of "Camille," and the father loses his prejudice on seeing the real worth of the actress.

As in Days of Old—(Two Reels)—Reliance—October 3.—John Van Dyne, being left property by a wealthy friend, leaves for the West. In the party are his wife and little daughter Elsie, Matthew Warren and his nine-year-old son Henry, who is possessed of a beautiful voice, and a vicious ne'er-do-well, Silas Kirby. Silas is banished from the party for stealing, and in revenge incites the Indians against them. In the ensuing fight all but Elsie and Henry are killed. Later the children are taken to the settlement of "Running Dog" and adopted by Jim Ring. Kirby believes the children are dead. Finding the papers bequeathing the Mohawk mine to John Van Dyne, he obtains possession of the property through a dishonest lawyer. Van Dyne's lawyer discovers Elsie and brings her back east to be educated. Later the heart-broken Henry is also brought east by a musician. Twelve years later Kirby, alias Simeon Wells, poses as Elsie's guardian. Finally Henry, a rising singer, brings the villain to judgment by revealing a significant scar on his forehead, and relating the story of the Indian massacre.

The Mystery of Eagle's Cliff—Thanhouser—October 3.—A young scientist, wishing to make an expensive expedition, calls on a rich old man for some funds. Although the wealthy man is somewhat of a miser, the scientist is successful in borrowing the money after explaining that his chief ambition is to do something for the sake of his little daughter, whose picture he shows to the old man. On leaving, the younger man drops the locket, and the other, knowing how greatly he prizes it, starts after him. As the man is near sighted, he stumbles over a high cliff and is killed. Three days later the body is found. On returning from his trip, the authorities at once apprehend the scientist, but luckily his little daughter finds at the bottom of the cliff the old man's pocketbook which contains a note given by the scientist for the money. This completely exonerates the scientist from the charge of murder.

Just As It Happened—(Two Reels)—American—October 4.—Edward Coxen and Lizzette Thorne are featured in this story of the country boy who patiently sought his fortune in the city that he might live up to the lofty ideal held by his sweetheart. The story is told as it finally indicates "just as it happened." A longer review will be found on another page of this issue.
N. G. C.

The Change of Luck—Cub—October 8.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry and his companion, Hank, have not a cent between them. They are wandering along the street when Wild Ike comes along and shoots up everybody and everything in sight. Jerry and Hank beat a hasty retreat and Wild Ike pursues them. They flee into the woods and here see a sign offering $500 for the capture of Wild Ike. Jerry decides to make up as Wild Ike and Hank will turn him over to the sheriff, collect the reward and then split fifty-fifty with Jerry. Ike overhears their plans and makes Jerry after blowing up Hank so that there will be no trade clothes with him, and with visions of getting the reward escorts Jerry to the sheriff's office interference. However, Hank arrives just as he is collecting the $500, exposes the job, has Ike locked up and with Jerry takes the five hundred.

Mother's Busy Day—Beauty—October 5.—Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell are seen at their best in this one-reel comedy featuring Lucille Ward as mother and Rae Berger as dad. Dad proves a flirt and mother has a busy time keeping track of him. Bobby, the son, causes no little excitement at the beach by his pranks and mother has a busy time keeping him out of jail, and finally decides to get a governess to look after him. Just at that time Jimmy, another son, returns home, bringing with him a surprise in the form of a wife. Since he fears to confront his mother with the surprise, Jimmy decides to work in his wife as the governess for Bobby, but when father begins to flirt and mother interferes, Jimmy is compelled to make known the truth, bringing mother's busy day to an end.

N. G. C.

The Sting of It—American—October 8.—Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorne are featured in this melodrama, the story of which concerns Mark Pelton, whose young wife is addicted to drugs. She writes a letter to her father accusing her husband of cruelty. The father keeps his daughter's letter, knowing that Pelton has sacrified himself in every way for Laura. Pauline, niece of Laura's father, is kept in ignorance of the letter and some time later is wooed by Pelton, her uncle having died in the meanwhile, leaving herself and Pelton as his joint heirs, providing they marry. The discovery of Laura's letter threatens to break up the marriage, but when Pelton discovers that Laura would marry another who is seeking her fortune, he explains the situation and brings about a reconciliation which results in his final marriage to Pauline.

N. G. C.

Curing Father—Beauty—October 9.—Rae Berger, Nan Christie and John Sheehan are featured in this one-reel comedy picturing Bob and Nellie, who cannot induce Nellie's father to give his consent to Nellie's marriage, chiefly due to the fact that he is a dyspeptic. Nellie convinces Bob that if her father's dyspepsia is cured he will consent to their marriage, so Bob disguises himself as a doctor and, having read that dyspepsia is only imagination and that if one is put to work and starved until really hungry a cure can be effected, he succeeds in bringing Nellie's father to a point of starvation and then feeding him a hearty meal. The father promises Nellie that the first day he is able to eat a square meal she can marry Bob. They succeed in securing his consent to their marriage.

N. G. C.

Pardoned—(Three Reels)—Clipper—October 9.—Harold Lockwood and May Allison are pictured in this three-reel melodrama that hinges

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address

Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

upon the strange likeness of two men, one of them a weakling, the other a manly man. Eventually the strange mix-up in identities is cleared up and happiness reigns for all. A longer review will be found in another page of this issue. N. G. C.

The Queen of the Band—(Two Reels)—Reliance—October 10.—Zoah, queen of a band of crooks, plans to lay hands on a priceless Kaffire diamond that has been shipped to the firm of J. Jacard & Son. Through clever planning, she and her accomplices get the jewel from the store by secreting it in the cavity of an antique locket. Ramar, the detective, however, sees her leave the store, recognizes her as a crook and learns her address. Later he and his assistant enter the house as paper hangers and hear a conversation which incriminates the gang. The two men are discovered and barely escape a horrible fate by the timely arrival of the police.

Universal Program

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 186—Universal—September 29.—Governor Whitman awards baby prizes at Yonkers, N. Y.; Southern League game at New Orleans, La.; U. S. Lightship, raised after two years in Lake Erie, reaches port at Buffalo, N. Y.; thirteen girl swimmers fight for championship honors at Boston, Mass.; novel launching of steamship at Manitowoc, Wis.; motorcycle race at Interstate Races at Detroit, Mich.; horse race at Syracuse, N. Y.; Queen Alexandria of England inspects Marquis of Zetland's hospital yacht; two German ships interned by U. S. after seeking refuge at Norfolk, Va.; Indian soldiers at play near Argonne firing line; Henry Ford visits New York navy yard to help plan United States defense; New Yorkers show how they can mobilize at Van Cortlandt, New York; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

When a Man's Fickle—Nestor—October 4.—In which Phil is continually throwing down his latest love for a new and more beautiful girl, thus leaving a trail of broken hearts behind him. However, he finally falls into the clutches of two angry fathers, after both Billie and Dolly, unknown to each other, have accepted his proposal and one girl finds him in the other's apartment.

The Silent Battle—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—October 5.—William Lovett, Sr., is greatly disappointed in his son and heir, for it seems evident that the boy will never be other than a drunkard and spendthrift. To add to his disgraceful conduct, one night "Wild Bill" meets Audrey Parkinson, his childhood friend, and in his drunken condition tries to force his attentions on her. She repulses him and informs him what a disgrace he has become to his friends. Shortly she returns with her father to their western ranch. After refusing to sign a contract drawn up by his father's secretary, which grievously affects his pride, Bill says that he will not accept the terms, and leaves, promising to return when he has made a man of himself. In the west, through the help of Audrey, who is secretly watching his actions, he secures a position, defeats the curse of drink, and finally succeeds. Later he marries Andrey and the father's joy is full at the success and victory of his son.

The Unnecessary Sex—Imp—October 5.—John is a writer who cares not for the fair sex. With two old servants—men, of course—he takes a house in the country where he can finish his book in peace. Later, through a child which he cannot do other than adopt, John becomes enamoured of Violet, and they decide that they both make an ideal papa and mamma for the baby.

The Woman Who Lied—(Three Reels)—Victor—October 6.—With Mary Fuller as Cleo. In the dressing room of Cleo Martell, an actress, there takes place a quarrel in which Harry Parker is killed by Gordon, Cleo's lover. Later circumstantial evidence accuses Jack Stanley of the crime and he is sentenced to prison. Gordon finally marries Helen, Jack's sweetheart, and thus gets control of her money, which he lavishes upon Cleo. Jack escapes from the prison and flees west. Three years later Helen is the mother of a little girl. Gordon has tired of Cleo, and to avenge herself the latter tells Helen that her husband is a criminal, thus clearing Jack. Through the little child the two women forget their enmity and fall into each other's arms. Cleo, Helen and the child move west during Gordon's absence. There is a pathetic meeting between Helen and Jack, and later, when Gordon comes west and tries to have Jack sent back to prison, Cleo forces a written confession from him. Then the posse, taking him for Jack in retreat, shoots him dead. The confession absolves Jack and he is set free.

The Fifty Thousand Dollar Jewel Theft—(Two Reels)—Big U—October 7.—Old Tom Sparks, one of the oldest detectives on the force, is disappointed when his services are rejected in favor of those of two younger men on a $50,000 jewel robbery case. The old man demonstrates his worth, however, when he cleverly rounds up the crooks after the best men on the force have failed. He refuses a reward of money, but accepts that most dear to him, namely, the chief's promise that he will never hesitate to put him on the most baffling cases in the future.

Eddie's Little Love Affair—Nestor—October 8.—Eddie and his sweetheart have had a quarrel and both leave for college without seeing each other again. Eddie is offered to substitute as professor of languages. Eddie, being her teacher, has the upper hand over the girl and tries to force her to ask his forgiveness, while she, thinking he is to blame, remains unforgiving. Eddie at last relents and slips a note under Elsie's door arranging a meeting at the bridge at 8 that night. Professor Sneeks writes his lover to meet him at the same bridge on the same night. The principal follows the two pairs of relenting lovers to the place, but is ultimately put to speedy flight by the arrival of Dan Cupid.

The Queen of Jungleland—(Three Reels)—Bison—October 9.—Philip Blackton, a victim of craving for drink, is taken to the African jungles by his explorer uncle, Colonel Rand, where in the excitement the boy loses his madness for drink. In the wilds Philip runs across a golden-haired white girl with whom he falls instantly in love. When he ardently declares his love, however, Lola always breaks away, but he finally learns the cause of her reluctance, namely, that she claims that her mother is a negro and that her father, Blake, is the white leader of a band of natives. Philip suspects something wrong, and in the end the truth is forced from Blake, revealing that he is not her father nor the negro her mother, after which Wambi, a negress, knifes Blake. The latter had been the cause of the death of both the girl's father and mother. The end of the picture shows Philip, his little jungle wife and their baby.

Fifty Dollars for a Kiss—Joker—October 9.—In which Silas, a rube, is done out of a reserve $50 by Betty, a clever book agent. Betty charms the farmer until he feels constrained to kiss her. Her chum gets the photo of the foregoing scene, and the extortion of the money is easy. Meanwhile Susane has taken the milk to the creamery for inspection. The milk proves to be largely foreign fluid, mostly water, and even a frog is found therein. She is fined $50, but as we have seen, the fifty has already taken flight, and Silas and his wife are relegated to the hard comforts of a prison cell.

The Third Partner — Powers — October 9. — Christy Brehm, a young attorney, is commissioned secretly by old Justus Miles' law partner to act as a private detective to Miles to circumvent a suspected plot to kidnap the old man. If Miles is out of the way for a few days a certain bill can be put through with success. Brehm is installed in Miles' country home as his secretary and is not long in falling in love with Myra, the old man's daughter. Feeling his delicate position, he does not declare his feelings to Myra, and she, angered at his coolness, turns her attentions to Fred Hilton, the scoundrel who has been employed to kidnap old Miles. Brehm defeats the schemers, however, ejects Hilton from the house, wins the girl, and is made third partner in Miles' law firm.

Marianna — Laemmle — October 10. — Pietro Roma, maker of plaster figures, together with his blind wife and his granddaughter, Marianna, are struggling for existence in one room of a tenement owned by John Callahan. Marianna, with a pushcart, markets her father's products. John Callahan has long has had his eye on Marianna, but the girl repulses his advances. One day Marianna is arrested for peddling without a license. Callahan sees his chance and pays the $10 fine. He then takes her to his apartments. Marianna notices a picture of an elderly woman, beneath which there is a small shrine, kneels before it and tells her beads. Old Pietro arrives and is about to knife Callahan when the latter points to the kneeling Marianna. Pietro softens and the crime is averted. Later Marianna is married to her lover, Tony, and the two receive the blessing of old Pietro.

A Bath House Tragedy—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—October 10.—While wife is getting reduced by the steam process, hubby follows a swell chicken into a bath house. Her sweetheart is Hank, the lifesaver, which fact hubby does not know until he has to take refuge from Hank's ill temper in the steam room. Many unpleasant features come to a climax when hubby finds his wife flirting with a fat gentleman. In the excitement a rubbing table gets loose with Hank and some cops on it, rolls out on the roof and skids around on the eaves. However, wife loses twenty pounds through fright, which ought to be a healthy enough reduction for anyone.

Alas and Alack—Rex—October 10.—One summer's day, Jess, the wife of a poor fisherman, notices a beautiful yacht anchored near her home and plans what she could do with a million dollars. On the yacht is Charles Holcomb and his wife, who showers all her affections on a lap dog, thinking little and caring less for the welfare of her husband. Tired of her continual nagging, Charles rows ashore and comes upon Jess and her child. Amazed at the pretty woman having to work so hard and wishing to learn more of them, he begs permission to pick a bouquet of daisies. After doing this, and with no excuse to linger longer Holcomb returns to the yacht filled with pleasant thoughts of how such a wife would suit him. As the yacht sails away he sits dreaming over the daisies, while Jess is dreaming of the handsome man and his beautiful craft. The meditations of both, however, are rudely disturbed by the painful realities of their fateful allotment.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Regeneration—(Five Reels)—Fox.—Featuring Anna Q. Nilsson and Rockcliffe Fellowes. The story simply narrates the reformation of a youthful gang leader by a girl settlement worker. He has been born and bred on the bowery, kicked about the streets, hardened into a criminal mould and lives carefree and reckless. The appearance of the girl changes the whole current of his existence and he becomes under the guidance of Marie Deering, the little settlement worker, a new man and useful citizen. The fruition of their love is blasted by her sudden death, but he vows to be faithful to her memory and remain what she has made him.

Metro

The Song of a Wage Slave—(Five Reels)—Metro.—In which Ned Lane, in love with Mildred Hale, marries her with the noble intention of saving her honor. She really loves Frank Dawson, a millionaire's son, whose father had broken off the match between the two and sent Frank away. Later Edwin Dawson is killed, leaving

Selling Tickets by Electricity

The system used by the most successful theatres (including the Strand, N. Y., etc.,) throughout the country.

Write for booklet, Dept. M.

Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
Longacre Building, Times Square, New York

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Book Our New
5 REEL FEATURE
"The Exposition's First Romance"
Peerless Film Exchange
CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

To the Trade:

Expert film editing—proper titling.

If there is any hope for your picture, I will save it.

Roskam Film Hospital
220 West 42d St., New York City
Telephone Bryant 930

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

Frank free. Ned parts with the girl, leaves her free to marry Frank, and then disappears, leaving evidence that he is dead. Later in life Ned fights against the unjust labor conditions, back of which is Frank. The distressing discovery of Ned's identity is made, and he finally sacrifices his life to save Mildred's. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Masterpictures

The Price of Her Silence—(Five Reels)—Thanhouser—September 30.—Featuring Florence LaBadie and Mignon Anderson. A younger sister is secretly married and does not confide in anyone until after her husband is dead and she knows the secret can be kept no longer. Her elder sister takes her to a fishing village, where her child is born and later the elder sister unselfishly takes the child as her own to shield her younger sister. Through a strange coincidence the right parentage of the child is later found out and happiness is the result. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

North American

The Mad Millionaire—(Chapter Twenty-Four of "The Diamond From the Sky")—(Two Reels)—American.—Hundreds of supernumeraries appear in the ballroom scene which is the feature of chapter twenty-four of this serial. Esther and Arthur finally meet, and after Arthur has thrust the diamond upon Esther, she hurls it from the window and it is picked up by some person unknown outside. For a longer review see another page this issue. N. G. C.

Paramount

The Explorer—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Featuring Lou Tellegen as Alec McKenzie about to leave to penetrate the heart of the African jungle, and is in love with Lucy Allerton. She asks him to take with him on his expedition her brother George, who faces disgrace. George proves to be a thorough "rotter," and the lives of the men in the party through him are jeopardized. Later he dies by a hero's stone for his fault. McKenzie returns to England and Lucy accuses him of having sacrificed her brother, but the doctor of the party breaks his word, pledged to McKenzie to conceal the boy's fault, and Lucy understands.

'Twas Ever Thus—(Five Reels)—Bosworth. Featuring Elsie Janis, Hobart Bosworth, Owen Moore and Myrtle Stedman in a story illustrating the different methods of love making as practiced since the world began to the present day. The cave dweller period shows the savage wooing of a maiden by her lover after the fashion then in vogue. The Civil War story introduces Miss Janis as Prudence Gordon of Boston, who ventures into the South and wins the love of a Confederate surgeon. In the third episode she figures as Marion Gordon, author of a novel refused by a wealthy publisher, who tells her to get experience of life first hand, and in the finish she marries the son of the publisher. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News, No. 76—Pathe—September 22.—Freight steamer Nevada is christened at Manitowoc, Wis.; the Eccles lumber mills is burned to the ground at Baker, Oregon; Canadian soldiers guard the international boundary line at Niagara Falls, N. Y.; careful scrutiny of people crossing Mexican border at Brownsville, Tex.; James F. J. Archibald, who was stopped in England while carrying a letter from Dr. Dumba, the Austrian ambassador, lands at Hoboken, N. J., as a result of washout, streets are flooded in Syracuse, N. Y.; two New York brokers on 10,000-mile canoe trip arrive at Rocky River, Ohio; labor-saving harvest machine demonstrated at Portland, Oregon; Mardi Gras festivities at Coney Island, N. Y.; Paris Pathe fashions; man in Lexington, S. C., grows four bales of cotton to an acre, thanks to the use of nitrate fertilizers.

Pathe News, No. 77—Pathe—September 25.—Eight dead and many injured when two blocks of Seventh avenue, New York, fall into the new subway construction; Miss Gladys Sutherland and Newton Hamilton are crowned king and queen of children's parade at Yonkers, New York; Henry Ford discusses with Secretary Daniels his plan for a gasoline-driven submarine; cartoon, "The Jitney Submarine"; Hilda Fitzgerald christens the cutter Ellinton at San Pedro, Calif.; ex-President Taft plays a game of golf at the Seattle golf grounds at Seattle Wash.; dog show in Asbury Park, N. J.

The Spender—(Five Reels)—Pathe.—Gold Rooster Play featuring George Probert as Piere, who upon being disinherited by his father, decides to assume a title, visit America, and marry some heiress. He wins Nellie McCabe. Pat McCabe is not in sympathy with this and orders his daughter and her "Duke" out of the house. After a year of hard work in a factory Piere comes into his own. He saves the father-in-law's life and is forgiven. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Dust of Egypt—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—Featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. Soon after Lascelles returns to his apartment, late at night, a friend brings in an Egyptian mummy and asks him to keep it for a time. In a dream Geoffrey sees the mummy case yield up its body in the form of a beautiful young girl. He is quite put out, as he is forced to allow the princess to stay at his apartment for the night, and as he is engaged to be married, he fears this will be misunderstood. The next day he takes the princess to the home of his fiancee. Her adventures there are very amusing, and end up in a row between Lascelles and his fiancee. He finally takes the princess back to his quarters, where he awakens from his dream. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—Chapter five entitled "A Message from the Past." At a dance given on one of the battleships anchored off Newport, Hernandez attempts to kidnap Annette. She struggles with him and both fall overboard. Annette is rescued by Neal. The South American is picked up by Fonto and the Brute Man. Annette learns the exact location of Lost Island. Intent upon visiting the island she sails for Martinique on a fruit steamer. Hernandez follows her. The crew mutiny and threaten the passengers. Neal, now on a ship bound for Southern waters, is sent at the head of a squad to save those on the Coronado, by his commander, who has received the call for help from the fruiter. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—Chapter sixth entitled "The Cavern of Death." Arrived at Martinique, Annette attends the levee given by the Governor, who was a friend of her father. Neal is granted a shore-leave. Hernandez learns this and succeeds in capturing both Annette and her foster brother. He takes them to a cavern used by a smuggler, which is mined. After securing the yellow packet he leaves them. They escape and after swimming for some time reach safety. Hernandez believing they are still in the death trap turns on the current which blows up the cavern. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Universal Special

The Broken Coin—(Sixteenth Installment)—Week of October 4.—Realizing that it would be dangerous to let Kitty go, now that she knows of the script, Count Sachio takes her to Grahoffen. Later both Kitty and Roleaux escape from the palace, but are speedily caught by the guards. Sachio and King Philip decide they are too dangerous to have about, and determine to send them back to America. Count Frederick happens to overhear Sachio bribe some deckhands to stow them in the hold of the boat. Frederick, in a fast torpedo boat, overtakes the liner just as Kitty and Roleaux have escaped from the hold. The two, about to leave the top of the ladder, are again seized and knocked unconscious as the episode fades.

Fatherhood—(Four Reels)—Universal—October 4.—Hobart Bosworth featured. The story of a cattle rancher who marries a girl a few years younger than himself. His wife is unaccustomed to the surroundings she is brought to and he is ignorant of woman's nature, and this brings about a misunderstanding. The husband leaves his wife to go to a rodeo and she, angered, returns to the city, where a baby is born to her some few months later. This tiny mite later effects a reunion between husband and wife, and she returns to the rancher, and the rancher is happy in the love and peace known only to a husband and father. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

Tillie's Tomato Surprise—(Six Reels)—Lubin—September 27.—Featuring Marie Dressler. This comedy deals with the exciting experience one Tillie Todd has with The Bat, her cousin, Percy Jitney, her Aunt Sally and Jim, the monkey. She presents her aunt with a tomato pincushion which is later the cause of many exciting experiences. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

World

The Little Mademoiselle—(Five Reels)—World.—Featuring Arthur Ashley and Vivian Martin. Lili Breval, a French girl, comes to

New York from France to make her home with her uncle, a wealthy automobile manufacturer. His son, Etienne, is in love with Gabrielle D'Ornay. They go on a trip and Lili wanders away from the station and is left behind. She encounters Jim Pemberton, who has just been discharged from a garage, and who understands French, and he and the girl start for Buffalo on foot. Jim enters an automobile race in one of the towns they go through and he wins the race and obtains money enough to take him and Lili to Buffalo. They arrive and join the Brevals, and later Henri Breval consents to their marriage. For a longer review see page 697 of the October 2nd issue.

Triangle Program

Released Week of September 27.

The Iron Strain—(Five Reels)—Triangle-Kay Bee.—Featuring Dustin Farnum, Enis Markey and a strong cast. Octavia Van Ness, a San Francisco social butterfly, is taken into Alaska for her health, where she meets "Chick" Hemmingway. She repulses his advances and he steals the girl, enters into a forced marriage with her, and installs her in his cabin. Six months elapse and the girl, now strong and well, is still antagonistic to "Chuck." Kitty Malloy, the queen of the Arctic cabaret, arrives in the village, and Octavia's jealousy is excited and for the first time she loves her husband. They return to California and are reunited with the girl's parents.

My Valet—(Two Reels)—Triangle Keystone.—Featuring Raymond Hitchcock, Mack Sennett, Mabel Normand and Fred Mace. The bachelor goes to the coast on a pleasure trip, taking with him his valet, and after arriving in California they are driving along the highway when a girl rides past on a runaway horse. The bachelor saves her and a foreign admirer with whom she had started out for the gallop returns home and tells her parents what had happened. Just then the girl comes in and shows her parents the man's card. The girl's parents recognize in him the son of an old friend who when young had become betrothed to the girl. They send a note to the bachelor reminding him of this and inviting him to be a guest at their home. The bachelor has his valet change places with him, and when once arrived at the house and he discovers that the girl is the one he rescued in the morning he desires to change back, but his valet threatens exposure. Later when the bachelor saves the girl from drowning and the foreign count and the valet are taken to jail the young bachelor and his fiancee—from youth—pledge the troth of grown-ups.

The Lamb—(Five Reels)—Fine Arts.—Featuring Douglas Fairbanks and Seena Owen. Mary discovers a yellow streak in her Lamb, Gerald. Later he goes out to Arizona, where the girl and her friends are enjoying a visit at a ranch. He is left behind out on the desert, and after spying an aviator who is flitting over the country, they are captured by Yaqui Indians and held prisoners. Gerald's sweetheart and an automobile party are captured by the Indians and Gerald and Mary are left alone together, and it is then the real qualities of the Lamb assert themselves. Just when they are at the point of death the American troopers come riding over the sagebrush and cactus and the lovers fall into each other's arms.

Released Week of October 3.

The Coward—(Five Reels)—Ince Production.—Featuring Frank Keenan and a strong cast. Colonel Winslow hopes for a great future for his only son, Frank. When a recruiting station is opened in the Virginia village at the outbreak of the Civil War, Frank, admitting he is a coward, refuses to enlist, but under threat of death the son joins a local company. That night, however, he is terrified, and after fleeing is given refuge by his negro mammy in her kitchen. His mother, who has been called in by the negro mammy, is comforting him when the colonel comes in and discovers Frank. The colonel then goes to the army and becomes Private Winslow in the company in which his cowardly son had deserted. Frank hides in the attic and a crowd of Union officers take possession of the house. He throws off his fear, obtains the plans of the Union forces and, after delivering them to the Confederate army, father and son are reunited after the battle and all's well.

The Martyrs of the Alamo—(Five Reels)—Griffith Production.—A strong cast featured. Santa Anna, dictator of Mexico, comes to San Antonio, Texas. Later the wife of Captain Dickinson is insulted by one of the dictator's officers and her husband is thrown into jail. Then are introduced Bowie, Crockett and Silent Smith, who later, with an army, capture the mission and fort. Afterward, in trying to hold the Alamo, all the defenders, with the exception of Silent Smith, Mrs. Dickinson and her baby, and the old soldier's daughter, are killed. Houston, hearing of the fate of the defenders of the Alamo, gives battle to Santa Anna's army, which is routed by the few hundred Texans and Santa Anna is captured.

Associated Service

Released the Week of October 4.

An Innocent Kidnaper—Banner.—Jones wins an automobile on a lottery ticket while he is away on a hunting trip, and his wife writes Jones that she has a great surprise for him and he takes it for granted that it must be a Jones, Jr. In the meantime Mrs. Jones has gone to attend her sick mother and leaves Bridget in charge of the house. She invites her friends, the O'Reillys, to come, and they arrive with their newly-born babe, which they put on Mrs. Jones' bed. Jones arrives, finds the note his wife left, takes the baby and goes to show it to his club friends. Mrs. Jones returns home and runs into Jones with the baby in his arms, and he gets into an awful scrape, but everything is straightened up when the O'Reillys come and claim their child.

Getting the Goods on Father—Empire.—Mother favors the match between Billy and Rena, but father thinks Billy is too young, so the two young people call in the assistance of two young friends. Dad meets Rena's girl friend and is later confronted by Billy's pal, who poses as the irate husband. At this time Rena telephones her mother that dad is in a scrape, and she arrives and takes a hand herself. Later dad gives his word that the young couple have his full permission if the cause of the mix-up is withheld from mother and the young people agree.

Good Out of Evil—(Two Reels)—Santa Barbara.—The two step-sisters live with their respective parents. The father loves his little girl, as does the mother her's. The skeleton in the closet is the mother's fondness for drink and her hatred of the child of her husband's former wife. The cabin is accidentally set afire, and the father is killed and his little girl is blinded for life. Years later the children, grown to womanhood, are in sordid surroundings, while the mother has become an absolute slave to drink and in her frenzy brutally ill-treats the blind child of the dead man. A young artist and his brother meet the two sisters in one of their rambles and after a romantic courtship they are married.

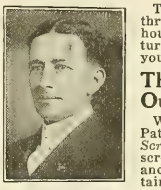
A Woman's Past—Federal.—Featuring Will Rex, Al Ray and Margaret Harmon. Mary Ryan, a woman of the underworld, grows ill from overwork. One night while her companion, Joe Hand, sleeps, she leaves for Arizona, where she meets Charles Fox. They become engaged, Mary concealing her past. Later, Hand has drifted westward and, after robbing the postoffice, seeks refuge in the cottage which is Mary's. Mary introduces Hand as her cousin and he becomes jealous when he sees the affection existing between Fox and the girl. He starts to tell of Mary's past, when the sheriff enters and captures him. The girl denies the story and Fox believes her. Later, however, she confesses to him and he leaves her in disgust. He repents and starts to return, and arrives just in time to take a pistol from her hand and she happily sinks into his arms.

The Wolf's Den—(Two Reels)—Navajo.—Major Harper and Alice, his daughter, occupy a small cottage on the outskirts of the town. Arnold Gray, who is in the secret service, is in love with Alice, but she, believing his proposals to be actuated more by charity than love, refuses him. Some time later, when the major loses his last few dollars in a gambling house, they are forced to move to an attic room in the tenement district which is owned by Monsier Loubert. The next day Alice, in her walks in the park, is accosted by an aged Italian and asks him to come to her little attic studio and pose for her. About this time Major Harper's health fails and the Italian asks Alice to meet him that evening and he will give her a wonderful tonic. The evening comes and Alice goes to meet the Italian, and the room she goes to is in the back of Monsieur Loubert's hall. The old Italian goes out into an adjoining room and returns with his disguise off and appears as Loubert himself. Just then Arnold, at the head of his men, breaks into the joint and finds Alice lying in a faint. He takes off his secret service star, and pins it on Alice's breast and tells his men that Alice is his appointee, and it was through her he had gained the information for the raid. Later explanations follow and a reunion.

Piercing the Veil—(Two Reels)—Alhambra.—The cripple brother's abnormal mentality leads him to cry out his warning to his mother when

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

MINUSA



You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. — New York
Houser Building — 19 W. 23rd St.
Calgary, Canada — Chicago
Grand Theatre Bldg. — 154 West Lake St.
San Francisco — Pittsburg
117-19 Golden Gate Ave. — 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Let Us Send You Our New Proposition on the

Bartola Orchestra

Add Dignity to Your Theatre
Improve Your Music. Write to

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
Bartola Musical Instrument Co.
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

Goes Posters

POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE

GOES—CHICAGO

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement

in

Motography

his sister becomes stenographer to a wealthy owner of a steel works, but the mother, thinking it one of his "queer" spells, tells him to forget it. The steel magnate detains his stenographer in his office and when he attempts to take her hand she threatens to brain him with a typewriter. The employer overpowers the girl and drags her to a panel in the wall and throws her, a prisoner, into a concealed chamber in the steel works. The girl's brother begins to doubt her chastity and his abnormal brain pictures for him a portion of the struggle in the employer's office, and finally he succeeds in inducing his other brother to start out with him in search of their sister. They arrive at the steel works and cripple brother finds the combination and opens the panel. In a fight which ensues the steel man is thrown, a crumpled, broken mass, to the bottom of the stairs, and his sister is forced to remain at home and not seek to make her own living.

Love's Probation — (Two Reels) — Romona.— Nolan Hall, an eastern young man, after leaving college goes west. As time passes, he longs for congenial companionship and decides to advertise for a wife. Myrtle Colwell, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Colwell, wearies of society and her parents try to force her to marry a titled foreigner. She sees Nolan's advertisement in the paper and determines to answer it in person. She sends a wire to Nolan, and when she arrives she and Nolan are married. She regrets her hasty action, and one day during the absence of Nolan she starts for home. She meets Pedro, a Mexican half-breed. He tries to talk to her, and she turns back and takes refuge in the cabin. Nolan, who witnesses the incident, feels sorry for the girl and induces her to be his guest for a week, and at the end of that time, if she doesn't wish to stay, he will not hold her. Nolan is accidentally shot and during his illness Myrtle cares for him, and later when her mother and father arrive and try to force her to return with them, she decides she loves this new life and her husband.

Miscellaneous

The Pearl of the Antilles—(Five Reels)—Picture Playhouse Film Company.—Produced by Tom Terriss. A wealthy Palm Beach resident prefers to have his daughter brought up among simple surroundings, and entrusts her to the care of a friend in Jamaica. He decides to pay her a visit there, and is accompanied by Carson, a famous explorer, of rather questionable morals. Carson is attracted to the young girl and abducts her. She escapes from his yacht unharmed, however, and returns to her father. When Carson refuses to clear the girl's name in a public statement, her father kills the explorer. After this he dies of shock. Later "The Pearl of the Antilles" marries her lifelong friend, Phillip Hudson. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Right Off the Bat—(Five Reels)—Arrow Film Corporation.—Featuring Mike Donlin in this baseball comedy drama written by Albert S. LeVino. From the time Mike was able to throw a ball he showed a great liking for the "national game," and was looked up to by the other boys for his natural ability on the diamond. By an act of courage Mike wins the affection of Viola, whose parents are well-to-do. When a young man he is the only support of his mother, and increases his mechanic's wages by playing baseball. He gets a job as pitcher on the Winsted league team, and his love affair with Viola progresses. At the end of the season he is idealized by the Winsted fans, for his splendid playing has resulted in the team finishing in first place. Through Viola's efforts he is given a chance with the New York Giants. He makes good and overcomes the objections which some of Viola's relations held against him. For a longer review see another page in this issue.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

William Wolbert, actor of many parts and erstwhile director with the Kalem and Universal companies, is a newcomer at the Vitagraph Company, where he will produce dramas and comedies. Wolbert has an excellent reputation and in his first play will have the assistance of William Duncan, Mary Anderson, Webster Campbell and George Holt. All have strong parts.

Marcia Moore, who has been engaged by the Universal to take Cleo Madison's place in the Rex Company under Joseph De Grasse, was born seventeen years ago in Chicago.

Isidore Bernstein, conceiver and builder of Universal City, is contemplating a similar enterprise at Flushing, L. I., to be known as "Equitable Corporate."

J. H. Washburn, known in all sections of the United States as a versatile actor and theatrical manager, is enacting the role of the "Bandmaster" in Hoyt's "A Milk White Flag," to be released as a Selig Red Seal Play.

Eugene Pallette, Reliance Mutual star, is back at the studios at Hollywood again after an absence of two months.

During the absence of Grace Cunard, who recently underwent an operation at one of the Los Angeles hospitals, the Francis Ford Feature Company has temporarily suspended production of "The Broken Coin" serial to stage a two-reel comedy drama entitled "Guilty or Not," written by Francis Ford, who will also direct the production, besides playing one of the leading roles. The place made vacant by the absence of Grace Cunard will be filled by her sister, Mina Cunard.

Edgar Lewis, newly associated director of feature productions for the Lubin Company to be released through the V. L. S. E. offices, after a careful consideration of more than two hundred plays on hand at the Scenario Department of the Lubin Company, has selected for his first Lubin production, William Vaughn Moody's great play of the Great Canyon, "The Great Divide."

Glenn Martin, the internationally famous aviator, who makes his screen debut in the Famous Players' Film Company's production, "A Girl of Yesterday," starring Mary Pickford, was in New York recently.

Lenore Ulrich, late star of "The Bird of Paradise," will be seen in "The Better Woman" soon, on the Equitable program. "The Better Woman" was produced by Triumph, producing for the Equitable program.

Grace Cunard has left the Sisters' Hospital and is resting at home for a few days preparatory to taking up her part in "The Broken Coin." The popular little lady was operated on twice and it left her very weak, but with her usual pluck and determination refuses to hold the series back.

Muriel Ostriche, Clara Whipple, George Soule Spencer and ten other principals of Equitable left for Cape Cod this week to stage several scenes in "The Fisher Girl," which will characterize Miss Ostriche's first appearance on the Equitable program.

King Baggot recently posed for a picture in the Rockland County jail, which first became known to New Yorkers in connection with the Cleary murder case.

Myrtle Stedman took the part of a bronchial patient last week (in real life). She decided to get away from it and employed a little Christian Science successfully.

Helen Holmes is back at work again at the Universal and is happy at getting her old-time leading man with her. This brings together once more the combination which made the Kalem "Hazards of Helen" series so popular, Helen Maloney and Director J. P. McGowan.

R. A. Rowland, president of the Metro, is under the impression that a new word must be coined to be used instead of the word "audience," when referring to a group of people assembled to view a motion picture. Here is a good opportunity for some one to gain undying fame by coining a new word and thus break into the dictionary.

Claire Whitney of the Fox Film Corporation, left for Kingston, Jamaica, W. I., last week to take several roles in important productions which Herbert Brenon contemplates producing during his stay on the island. Miss Whitney expects to be away for at least five months.

Perhaps the first instance of a woman star directed by a woman producer is the Popular Plays and Players-Metro feature motion picture, "My Madonna," with Mme. Petrova in the leading role, produced by Mme. Alice Blache.

Palm Garden, New York, will be the scene of the first big ball of the season on Friday evening, October 1, 1915, when the St. John's Club, an organization composed of young men in all branches of the motion picture industry will give a "Movie Ball." An attractive and interesting feature of this entertainment will be a competition for valuable prizes by members of the club and all others attending who believe that they can give correct imitations of the many movie stars. The committee has been successful in obtaining donations from several of the large motion picture companies and promises from several of the well known professionals to attend.

Lillian Lorraine, the famous Pathe star, wishes it known that her suit for divorce which she brought against Frederick Gresheimer will soon come to trial and that she will be perfectly happy when the divorce is obtained. She also wishes to state that stories involving her and her good name that have put her before the public in a wrong light are without the least foundation.

Valli Valli, the musical comedy star, who was featured in "The High Road," a Rolfe-Metro feature, has been re-engaged for another Rolfe-Metro feature, "The Woman Pays." In the cast are Marie Empress, John Bowers and Edward Brennan. Edgar Jones is the director and Carl Gregory the camera man.

Rena Rogers, formerly with Universal, makes her initial appearance with Mina Comedies in their release of October 7, "The Honeymoon Roll." Her vivacious manner and cute personality makes her very valuable in comedy pictures, and it is said that her work in "The Honeymoon Roll" is most clever.

That sound as of a battleship being rolled along the street which has recently disturbed Times Square is only the ordinary movement of an erstwhile invalid. It is F. Worthington Butts, president and general manager of the Greenwich Lithograph Company, going through the town in his yellow Lozier speed-car. Mr. Butts, after a long siege of illness, during which on several occasions undertakers' estimates were furnished, is now in prime conditions and wants all doubters to know it. He is one of the most popular figures in motion picture circles, having been identified with the display end of the business since its inception. "Worthy," they call him for short, and worthy he has shown himself of the esteem of the hundreds of friends who will be glad to learn that they may cancel their florist orders.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Colorado

The new Thompson motion picture theater at East Colfax avenue and Adams street, Denver, seating 600, was opened to the public September 11. The theater cost $20,000 and occupies a position 45x100 feet. The interior is devoid of posts or pillars and the general color scheme is a light green. The balcony in the rear of the auditorium is one of the attractions of the new playhouse. It will seat over eighty people. At either end of the elevation have been placed boxes each accommodating from five to ten persons. A row of tiny chairs have been placed in the forward end of the balcony for the little folks. John Thompson is the owner.

Connecticut

Manager N. C. Lund, of the West End theater, opened his new playhouse on State street, near Clinton avenue, Bridgeport, which has been in the course of construction for the last six months, to the public September 13. The house has accommodations for 1,600, has 14 exits, ten of which are double doors, being one of the finest in the part of New England.

Illinois

George Bousey is remodeling the Grant Jones building on Main street, Kankakee, into a moving picture house.

Indiana

The Gem theater in Hobart is being remodeled.

Iowa

Paul R. Whitney of Albert Lea, Minnesota, has purchased the Colonial theated in Oelwein.

M. E. Vaux of Neola will open a picture show at Bagley.

Massachusetts

Alhambra Moving Picture Company, Lowell; J. Allison Cowie, Oscar F. Muller, Maximillian Rabus; $10,000.

Michigan

The South Lansing Photoplay Company, organized to operate a motion picture theater at the south end, named officers September 15 as follows: President, A. A. Lauzun; vice-president, C. A. Hervy; secretary-treasurer, F. J. Lamb, and directors, B. F. Hall, Jr., and T. H. English. Walter Jacobs has been made manager of the enterprise which will open in a Washington avenue, Lansing, location about November 1.

The new Strand theater on Monroe avenue, Grand Rapids, opened September 18.

Motion picture theater owners in Ishpeming must remove all cloth signs from in front of their theaters as these signs are barred by the recent rules and regulations drawn up and promulgated by Fire Marshal John T. Winship, who has served notice that they will not be tolerated. The only sign that will be permitted will be paper ones and these must be enclosed in glass.

A petition, signed by four hundred and fifty-six persons, has been presented to the city council, asking that the moving picture theaters be closed on Sunday in Charlotte.

Minnesota

Crystal theater in Minneapolis is now open all night. It is run for the benefit of the people who miss their owl cars.

The Orpheum theater in Duluth will shortly open as the Orpheum-Strand with high-class photoplays. D. J. Robson will be manager.

Missouri

A deal was recently closed whereby Joe Leininger purchased from J. I. Johnson his one-half interest in the Trio theater in Chillicothe and is now in full control. A few weeks ago Mr. Leininger purchased from Walter Fields his one-half interest. Mr. Leininger will continue to give the theater-going public the best motion pictures obtainable.

Montana

Butte is to have another first class picture theater.

Nebraska

Don Slattery has purchased the Comet theater in Shelton from A. W. McMillan.

September 15 Severn's new theater, the Crescent, in Holdrege was opened.

E. J. Monaghan, well know in Omaha theatrical circles, has taken a five-year lease on the new motion picture theater, the Boulevard, which is to be erected by Hugh McCaffery at Leavenworth street and Boulevard. Work on the theater will be started within a short time.

New York

William A. White & Sons has leased Weber's theater, at the northwest corner of Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, Manhattan. The house will be opened within the next week or ten days with a series of high-class motion pictures.

Kineticartoon Corporation, Manhattan. Motion picture film and apparatus, etc.; cap., $100,000. Incorporators: G. E. Joseph, E. A. Zema, G. B. Read, 165 Broadway, New York.

Ziegfeld Film Corporation, Manhattan. Theatrical, motion picture and music hall business; cap., $50,000. Incorporators: W. K. Ziegfeld, Ansonia Hotel, New York City; W. E. Koch, 612 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn; I. Cochran, 6 Temple court, Brooklyn.

Whitman Amusement Co., Inc., Manhattan. Motion picture and theatrical; cap., $200,000. Incorporators: F. C. Simons, Great Neck, L. I.; M. P. Winne, 557 W. 171st street; S. S. Slater, 107 W. 76th street, New York City.

Ohio

Charles Detchru has been granted a building permit and will erect a $2,000 picture theater on East Federal street, Youngstown.

The Feature Theater Company, Cleveland, $30,000, B. W. Price.

Pennsylvania

A moving picture theater will shortly be opened in the Buchanan block on Long avenue, near Castle, by James Passias and Gus Caravasias. It will have a seating capacity of 350 and cost $10,000.

The explosion of a film in the operator's booth of the Lyric theater, 1211 Carson street, Pittsburg, caused a loss of fifty dollars.

These 6 Spoons

and A SUGAR SHELL

sent prepaid for

$1.00

All Spoons Standard Size

¶ Hundreds of exhibitors have found a way to use these beautiful spoons with profit to themselves.

¶ Through these exhibitors tens of thousands of the spoons have found places in the homes of motion picture theatre goers.

¶ Exhibitors who are using Motography's Souvenir Spoons as business-getters claim no superior knowledge of showmanship—they simply are getting away with our attractive proposition. You can do the same.

¶ If you own a motion picture theatre you can increase your daily and weekly revenue by asking for plans. The following telegram shows how one exhibitor works:

CLASS OF SERVICE	SYMBOL
Day Message
Day Letter	Blue
Night Message	Nite
Night Letter	N L

If none of these three symbols appears after the check (number of words) this is a day message. Otherwise its character is indicated by the symbol appearing after the check.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT
GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT ELECTRICITY IS OUR MOTIVE POWER VICE-PRESIDENT

CLASS OF SERVICE	SYMBOL
Day Message
Day Letter	Blue
Night Message	Nite
Night Letter	N L

If none of these three symbols appears after the check (number of words) this is a day message. Otherwise its character is indicated by the symbol appearing after the check.

RECEIVED AT JACKSON BOULEVARD AND LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

SEP 28 8-22 AM 1915

A968A 45 NL 1EXA P DALLAS TEX 27 M.C.K. PRESIDENT
MOTOGRAPHY MONADNOCK BLDG CHICAGO ILL
SHIP SEVEN HUNDRED CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG SPOONS AT ONCE MADE A BIG CLEAN UP TODAY WILL SEND YOU COPY OF MY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT WOULD LIKE TO HAVE YOU MAKE SPOON OF PETROVA BIGGEST DRAWING CARD
I EVER HAD
T P FINNEGAN HIPPODROME

¶ You should have a set of the spoons before you pass judgment. They represent artistic and enduring quality and when properly used get you the money. Address.

Monadnock Bldg. MOTOGRAPHY CHICAGO

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

KATHLYN WILLIAMS
WITH SELIG

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 16, 1915 No. 16

LUBIN

PRESENTS

THE SCREEN'S MIGHTIEST MIRTHFUL COMEDIENNE

MARIE DRESSLER

IN A NEW "TILLIE" PHOTOPLAY

IN 6 ACTS

TILLIE'S TOMATO SURPRISE

WRITTEN BY ACTON DAVIES

PRODUCED BY HOWELL HANSEL

AIDED AND ABETTED BY

TOM McNAUGHTON, Co-Star In "THE SPRING MAID" AND "SUZIE" - COLIN CAMPBELL, THE SCOTCH COMEDIAN, SARAH McVICKAR, ELEANOR FAIRBANKS AND JAMES THE FAMOUS LUBIN MONKEY

BIG FOUR FEATURE PLAY V L S E

TWO HOURS OF HOWLS, YELLS, SCREAMS, GUFFAWS, LAUGHS, CHUCKLES AND ROARS

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 27 THROUGH THE V.L.S.E.

Siegmund Lubin

Notching up the TRIANGLE STANDARD

You read last week what the New York newspapers thought of the first week's Triangle Plays. It was said then that the mark set was too high for safety—that we couldn't hold the pace. We didn't have any such fear. We knew what was coming. This is what happened after the second showing:

"The public has no cause to complain that the TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION has not lived up to its promises. Everyone of the pictures shown is itself worth going to see. 'Old Heidelberg' with Dorothy Gish, proved one of the gems of the series thus far shown." —New York Sun.

"The new program is calculated to be even more far-reaching than its predecessors. 'Stolen Magic' is one of the best comedies that has yet reached the screen." —New York American.

" 'The Coward' draws an audible gasp from the audience." —New York Times.

" 'Old Heidelberg' struck a high mark in scenic and photographic art." —New York World.

And by this time you know that both Philadelphia and Chicago Newspapers have glowingly concurred in the New York verdict.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

Clara Kimball Young and Chester Barnett in a scene from World's "The Heart of the Blue Ridge."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 16, 1915 No. 16

Patents Company Must Be Dissolved

GOVERNMENT SO ORDERS

JUDGE OLIVER B. DICKINSON, in the United States District Court in Philadelphia, on Friday, October 1, rendered a decision in favor of the United States Government in its suit against the Motion Picture Patents Company, the General Film Company and affiliated corporations and individuals, charging them with violations of the Sherman law regulating interstate and foreign commerce, thus bringing to an end the legal battle begun in August of 1912.

The decision, in addition to being rendered against the Motion Picture Patents Company, lies against the General Film Company, the Biograph Company, Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, the Kalem Company, Incorporated, George Kleine, the Lubin Manufacturing Company, Pathe Freres, the Selig Polyscope Company, the Vitagraph Company and individuals interested in the above companies, namely, Frank L. Dyer, Henry N. Marvin, J. J. Kennedy, now president of the General Film Company; William Poelzer, Samuel Long, J. A. Berst, Siegmund Lubin, Albert E. Smith, George K. Spoor and W. N. Selig.

There was one other defendant named, the Melies Manufacturing Company, but Judge Dickinson decided the proof was insufficient to show the Melies Company was part of the combination, and dismissed the complaint as against it and excluded it from his findings.

Although recommending that the defendant corporation be dissolved under the Sherman anti-trust law, Judge Dickinson made no mention of how the dissolution of such a vast corporation was to be effected. He merely requested that a decree embodying his findings be submitted to him for his approval. Upon the attaching of his signature to such a decree the Motion Picture Patents Company will immediately have to take steps looking to a dissolution unless it obtains a stay of proceedings from the United States Supreme Court.

It is understood that the company and all its integral parts will file an appeal. This will carry the case at once to the United States Supreme Court, for, because of the procedure adopted in the District Court, when the government and the defendants agreed to waive an opinion by three judges and have one pass on the entire case, the usual procedure of carrying a case to the United States Circuit Court will probably be abandoned, and an appeal will be made direct to the Supreme Court in Washington.

It was in August, 1912, the government first took official cognizance of the Motion Picture Patents Company on the complaint of William Fox in behalf of his Greater New York Film Rental Company. Fox, through his counsel, Gustavus A. Rogers, of 160 Broadway, alleged the Motion Picture Patents Company was trying to force him out of business, and after six months the government acted.

Edwin P. Grosvenor, of the firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, was appointed special assistant to the attorney general to conduct a prosecution and he drew a bill that alleged that virtually all the manufacturers of moving picture films had formed a monopoly in 1908 for the sale and distribution of their products.

Under an iron-clad agreement between these manufacturers, it was charged, the Motion Picture Patents Company was formed and made the holding company of nearly all the patents that have been made and were used in the manufacture and projecting of films. The concern, the complaint then set forth, compiled a list of every moving picture film agency, distributor and exhibitor in the United States and no exchange was allowed to distribute films to any exhibitor who was not "licensed" by the Motion Picture Patents Company and did not pay a license fee for a projecting machine.

Furthermore, it was charged, the combination drove out of business a number of smaller exchanges and exhibitors with whom it did not care to bother, through the simple process of shutting off their supply of films. The "licensed manufacturers," the component parts of the combination, would not supply films to any but "licensed exchanges" and in turn the "licensed exchanges" would not supply photo productions to any but "licensed theaters."

In this way, the bill charged, a practical monopoly of the entire output of moving picture films was obtained. The Motion Pictures Patents Company's attorneys retorted that perhaps their client might be a combination, but certainly it was not illegal because those holding patents to projecting machines and the other inventions necessary to successful photoplay productions, certainly had the right to do what they wished with their own properties, and to license whom they pleased to use them.

That was the main part in which Judge Dickinson differed with the defendants. He held in his opinion that the granting of a patent did not confer upon the licensee to do with it that which the law condemns, namely to "freeze out" a trader with whom it could not come to terms for one reason or another.

The court further found that the defendant went considerably beyond what was necessary to protect its patent rights and that its acts in so doing constituted a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

After the suit was brought hearings were held that extended over a period of two years during which hundreds of witnesses were examined and investigations conducted in a number of different cities. Exhibitors and film exchange men from all over the country were called to testify both pro and con, and last December the parties were finally satisfied with their mass of testimony that covered six printed volumes and laid the matter before Judge Dickinson.

It took the court nine months to examine the evidence and make its decision, and in his opinion Judge Dickinson went through the entire history of the case from the very inception of the Motion Picture Patents Company.

In his decision Judge Dickinson says: "We would feel constrained, on the the authority of this case alone, to find that the agreements and acts of the defendants in the present case went far beyond what was necessary to protect the use of the patents or the monopoly which went with them, and that the end and result, which would be expected to be and was accomplished, was the restraint of trade condemned by law.

"That all the contracts enumerated in the government's petition and the combination there described were a conspiracy in restraint of trade and therefore illegal, and that they constituted, with the exception of the operations of the Melies Manufacturing Company, a monopoly in violation of the anti-trust laws." With reference to the Melies Company the court said:

"The Melies Manufacturing Company has denied (as have all the defendants) that it was in any sense a party to the combination charged. We have gone over all the proofs without finding any which go to make good the charge against this particular defendant. It is, therefore, excluded from the findings made and the petition as against it is dismissed."

On the very important question of patents and their relation to monopoly, which in the opinion of the legal profession constitutes one of the chief values of this decision, the court said:

"It is the right of patentees through having exclusive sale of the patented article to control and in that sense to monopolize the trade in it. It is wrong by an illegal restraint of trade to monopolize it or any part of it. On the other hand, it cannot have been intended to make it unlawful to acquire that the right to which the law has conferred. On the other hand, it cannot be that the grant of patent right confers a license to do that which the law condemns."

The decision also recognized the claims of the defendants as to the value of their corporations:

"We would not be justified and would certainly have no wish to deny the presence of the very laudable motives, which defendants avow in their answer, some of which were to gratify the desire to allay bickerings and recriminations among themselves, to advance and improve the art, to protect the morals of the public, and, as they frankly admit, to make money for themselves.

"Certain it is that the end and purpose of the plan was to dominate and control the trade in all the accessories of the art and, in order to assure this, to control the entire motion picture business. We are driven to this conclusion, not only because that is the plain meaning of what they did, but also because they themselves categorically declare the latter to be the imperative need of the business and one which they alone could not supply. The need was for a single directing and regulating head.

"This extended even to a censorship of what was shown. The United States could not, and the States would not, interpose for the purpose of regulation, and the defendants claim the credit of having performed this neglected duty of the State. In doing all that was done the defendants not merely deny the illegality of either end or means, but also lay claim to commendation. We only mention this to make clear the fact that they did monopolize, and the only question left is whether this monopoly is a lawful monopoly or was accomplished through an unlawful restraint of trade."

GET DURLAND RIDING ACADEMY

Famous Players Secure Mammoth Structure and Will Reconstruct Building at Once for a Temporary Motion Picture Studio.

The Famous Players Film Company has leased for a number of years Durland's Riding Academy in Fifty-sixth street, New York City, which, according to the terms of the contract signed last week, is immediately to be turned into a motion picture studio. The work of reconstructing the building, which is famous the world over as the rendezvous of New York's most exclusive set, is already being pushed with the greatest possible speed in order that the producers may begin active work at the earliest feasible moment on the big feature productions which they are contemplating.

The leasing of this building for motion picture purposes by the Famous Players is the result of the efforts on the part of that oranization to find, within the heart of the city, a suitable substitute for the Twenty-sixth street studio, which was destroyed on the night of September 11 by the most disastrous fire in the history of the industry.

The mammoth structure just secured is ideally fitted for the requirements of the motion picture producer. The huge riding ring, with its high peaked roof, is larger than the drill floor which the Famous Players converted to its own needs in the old Ninth Regiment armory. The roof being supported entirely by steel girders, spreading from wall to wall, the full sweep of the whole floor is available for stage purposes, which makes possible the presentation of the largest interior scenes that the most spectacular of motion pictures could require.

The stalls which line the former arena will be ripped out and the space devoted to the storing of scenery, for which it is ideally suited. Practically the entire second floor of the building is given over to lockers, dressing rooms and shower baths which will be perfectly adapted to the needs of the stars and other players, with but minor alterations, which are already being made.

The front portion of the building, which was formerly used for offices and dwelling purposes, is being renovated to accommodate the executive and directorial staff of the film producers. The mechanical work on the films themselves, that is, the developing, printing, assembling and cutting, will not be done in the new building. Immediately after the fire, all this work was transferred to the American Film Laboratory, in Ninetieth street, of which Edwin S. Porter, treasurer and general manager of the Famous Players Film Company, is vice-president. The old academy will be devoted simply to the staging of features and to the executive needs of the company.

The acquiring of the academy building will in no way affect the plans of the company for the erection of the largest studio in the east upon its newly purchased tract of ground on Marble Hill, New York, where thirty-one city lots are to be devoted to the uses of the producers.

The Famous Players studio at Yonkers, which has served as production headquarters since the destruction of the Twenty-sixth street building, will continue to serve in that capacity until the completion of the renovation of the academy, when it will be temporarily abandoned.

KEYSTONE CENSORS DEFEATED

Pennsylvania Board After Refusing to Pass Two V. L. S. E. Feature Productions Is Compelled to Change Its Decision.

After having unequivocally barred two of the strongest photoplay features now before the public, "Mortmain" and "The Blindness of Virtue," released through V. L. S. E., Inc., the Pennsylvania Board of Censors has reversed itself and will permit these two productions to be shown.

The change in attitude is due—first to the quick action of the legal representatives of the "Big Four" in forcing the issue on the decree, and second to the very thorough and intelligent discussion which ensued between these representatives and members of the board.

In the case of "Mortmain," the first intimation the producers had that the feature did not meet with the approval of the Pennsylvania judges, was received on Thursday afternoon, September 2.

The Philadelphia office advised Mr. Irwin that the censors had decided that "Mortmain" was unsuitable for the screen, not on the ground that it was "immoral," "improper," "sacreligious," "obscene," or "indecent," but solely because they regarded the picture as being too powerfully dramatic. As a matter of fact, it was stated that the board admitted that the picture was absolutely clean, and free from even the slightest suggestion of immorality.

The action which followed the receipt of this information was sure and fast. Mr. Irwin enlisted the services of prominent Philadelphia attorneys, Messrs. Conlin, Brenton & Acker, and instructed them that they were to proceed with the utmost firmness and dispatch. Thy were further instructed to be prepared to take the case to the highest court in the state, in the event of an adverse decision.

The attorneys were a close second to Mr. Irwin in the dispatch with which they worked. They immediately served upon J. Louis Breitinger, chairman of the Board of Censors, a notice demanding a review, as provided for by the statute in Pennsylvania, before an appeal can be taken to the Court of Common Pleas. Furthermore, they insisted that this review occur without delay. They also demanded that this review should be witnessed by a disinterested authority. The review was given the following afternoon, with Mr. Breitinger and Dr. Oberholtzer both present. The dramatic critic of the Ledger, notwithstanding the assurance that had been given, was refused admission.

Mr. Breitinger and Dr. Oberholtzer, however, were just as strict in their viewpoint of "Mortmain" after the second showing as the first. They conceded that the feature could not possibly, by any strength of the imagination, be regarded as harmful to the morals of the public, but took the stand that so dramatically intense was it that it was not to the best interests of the community to permit it to be shown.

The V. L. S. E. attorneys immediately filed notice of appeal. The hearing was set for the morning of Friday, September 10. The censors were represented by a special deputy attorney general and an assistant attorney general.

The Vitagraph Company had left no stone unturned to assemble the most convincing evidence of the propriety of its feature. Mrs. Otis Skinner was on hand to testify to the exceptional merit of the picture, as was the editor of the Public Ledger, and an editor of the Saturday Evening Post. The latter witness was prepared to testify that his periodical never published any story until it had passed a board of editors, whose principal function is to bar the objectionable. This board set a seal of enthusiastic approval upon "Mortmain" when it was submitted for their columns.

This evidence was to have been supplemented by the testimony of the publishers of the book, which for twelve years has had a phenomenal sale; by Arthur C. Train, the author, and by Miss Margaret Bertsch, head of the scenario department of the Vitagraph Company. Mr. Train was to have been called to outline his purpose in writing "Mortmain" and to establish that this purpose was most commendable.

Miss Bertsch was in a position to state that the scenario had followed the book faithfully, save for the addition of a little more romantic interest.

The endorsement of several of Philadelphia's most widely known surgeons also had been obtained. These specialists had viewed the picture and had given it as their opinion that the theme of the production not only was based upon actual surgical facts, but that its technique in bringing out these facts was absolutely correct in every detail.

The legal representatives of the board asked for an adjournment, immediately following which counsel for the Vitagraph, together with Miss Bertsch and other authorities of prominence, met in a conference to discuss the subject informally. As a result of this conference, the board withdrew from its former position and declared that the picture could be shown.

Representatives of the Essanay Company in their contention against the blacklisting of "The Blindness of Virtue" followed a somewhat similar course, obtaining the whole-hearted support of notables in the world of art and literature, as well as clergymen of all denominations.

The attorneys established beyond dispute that there was nothing in the screen version of the widely known work that could be called offensive or detrimental to public morality, but rather that it is an extremely powerful sermon.

World Film Corporation has appointed William Copley to the position of purchasing agent of the company. Mr. Copley comes to World Film with an excellent reputation for just that kind of ability and experience which are required in the service of a corporation of the magnitude and ramifications of World Film.

Herrington Uniting Exhibitors

Fred J. Herrington, national president of the Exhibitors' League, left New York on Saturday, September 25, feeling decidedly optimistic as to the future efforts of the league to bring all of the exhibitors in the country together in one strong band. The reason for his optimism was the annexation on September 24 of the organization of the exhibitors of Greater New York. This is a big step towards the securing of the entire state of New York, for with New York City in and Lee Ochs and Sam Trigger canvassing the exhibitors throughout the state, urging them to join the national body, the greatest part of the work is done.

Fred J. Herrington.

Mr. Herrington arrived in New York on September 21, and was busy every minute until the time of his leaving on Saturday evening. Sunday he spent in Philadelphia, where a smoker was given by the Philadelphia League, of which Charles Segall is president, for the purpose of having the proprietors and managers of the Philadelphia theaters meet the national league president. Through the courtesy of the Fox Film Corporation, "Wonderful Adventure" was shown. "It certainly was gratifying," Mr. Herrington said in an interview with a representative of MOTOGRAPHY, "to feel that all of the old guard in New York was with us. The meeting opened at about 11:30 and lasted until 3. Eighteen of the twenty-five members of the executive board were present. When the question of joining the national league was proposed, there was not a dissenting voice. Both President Ochs and Chairman Sam Trigger said that from the start it had not been a question whether or not they should come in, but when.

"I am working hard now on the Cleveland convention, to be held on October 19 and 20. If we can get Cleveland, and I think we can, I feel sure that the other Ohio exhibitors will follow. After that I want to see Bill Sweeney and the boys in Chicago with us. I have pretty good assurances that six or seven of the northwestern states will vote in soon. I do not hesitate to say that within eight or nine months we will have a bigger, stronger organization of exhibitors than ever existed before. With a compact body, united for a common purpose, we can then cope with censorship as it should be met."

Mr. Herrington, as is commonly known, is against censorship, first, last, and always. The screen, he says, should have the same freedom granted by the constitution to the press. Then if an immoral or obscene picture is shown, it is a matter for the law to handle, not something to be clipped, cut and censored according to the individual opinions of the various censorship boards.

All Ohio exhibitors should attend the Cleveland convention. It will have something of importance for every one of them.

"FALSTAFF GIRL" A BEAUTY

Louise Emerald Bates, Ziegfeld Prima Donna, Signs Thanhouser Contract and Will Appear in New Style of Pictures

There is wailing and gnashing of teeth along Broadway, in the vicinity of the while lights, also several managers are cursing moving pictures for their inroads on the ranks of talent—for Louise Emerald Bates has forsaken Broadway and gone forty-five minutes thence, to Thanhouser's at New Rochelle. Miss Bates has accepted an engagement to become Edwin Thanhouser's "Falstaff Girl," in which Riley Chamberlain, Arthur Cunningham, Claude Cooper and Frances Keyes are now cavorting.

Louise Bates has been for the past few years one of the most magnetic figures in musical comedy. She was the prima donna in "The Passing Show," and played the lead with Julian Eltinge in "The Fascinating Widow." She is a blonde beauty with one of those spontaneous personalities that looks as if it is going to break out any second. She is blessed with the kind of a figure that Ziegfeld catches audiences with, and a smile that continually plays tag all over her facial features.

By featuring her in Falstaff comedies, Mr. Thanhouser will set a precedent, for Miss Bates is peculiarly fitted, naturally and by training, to introduce a style of work as yet unknown in pictures.

Pathe has acquired the picture rights to "Arsene Lupin," the famous Frohman play which enjoyed such a long run on Broadway several years ago. The cast and producer will be announced later.

Holbrook Blinn of the World Film enjoys a summer outing at a camp of film stars at Wadsworth Wigwam, Lake George. He exercises by playing baseball and is seen catching the curves pitched by Mary Mannering and also canoeing on the lake.

Mutual Re-organization Goes On

MANY NEW BRANDS

THE Mutual Film Corporation's widely heralded new $8,000,000 program is the work of an army of stars and a remarkable battery of studios. President John R. Freuler's promise, made some time ago, that $8,000,000 was to be spent in the re-organization and enlarging of the Mutual's program seems to have been adhered to in every sense of the word. Constantly increasing business recently made it necessary for the Mutual to open branch offices in seven new cities, bringing the total number of branches in the United States and Canada up to sixty-eight.

Not only have many of the producing companies, now releasing exclusively through the Mutual, been enlarged since the reorganization scheme began, but twelve new brands have been added to the Mutual program. Included in them are the American "Beauty" (No. 2 Company), Casino All Star, Centaur, Centaur Star Features, Clipper Star features, Cub Comedies, Falstaff (No. 2 Company), Mutual Comedy, Mustang, Novelty, Rialto Star features, and the "Than-o-play," the latter designating the three reel subject produced at the Thanhouser studios for realease in the regular Mutual program. To these will be added a number of others within the next few weeks, among them being the Vogue Comedies, to be produced at the studios of the Vogue Film Company, a newly organized manufacturing company backed by several prominent capitalists of the West. The company recently completed arrangements for the securing of studios near Los Angeles and work on the first release has begun.

Two of the most important manufacturing concerns in the motion picture industry have joined forces with the Mutual since the reorganization scheme began under the able direction of President Freuler. First of these is David Horsley, producer of the Cub Comedies, Centaur two reel pictures, featuring Captain Jack Bonavita and the celebrated Bostock collection of jungle animal performers, and the three reel Centaur Star features, for which Crane Wilbur, America's popular screen star, was recently engaged as the lead.

Then came the famous Gaumont Company, with studios in Flushing, Long Island, which is producing the popular Casino All Star comedies, featuring such noted Broadway stars as W. C. Field, Cissy Fitzgerald, George Sidney of "Busy Izzy" fame, Francine Larrimore, star of many Broadway successes, and numerous others.

The Gaumont Company is also producing the Rialto Star features, being released in the regular Mutual program, presenting such well known stars of the speaking stage as Ivy Troutman, Fania Marinoff, Sunshine and Tempest, and many others of equal note. To the Gaumont productions appearing on the regular Mutual program was recently added a weekly split reel comprised of "See America First" and the animated cartoons of Harry Palmer, under the title of "Keeping up With the Jones" which is daily being syndicated in 150 newspapers throughout the United States.

Recent of the companies to manufacture for the Mutual program is the Mustang Film Company, producers of the three reel "Buck Parvin" stories of Saturday Evening Post fame and other Western protoplays, now being released in the regular Mutual program. At the present writing, arrangements are being completed with various other well known manufacturers and important announcements are to be forthcoming from the Mutual within a very short time.

The aggregation of players now appearing in releases on the regular Mutual program, is conceded by many to be the greatest galaxy of stars of the speaking stage and the studio, ever gathered together under one banner. No less than sixty players, each of whom has won a distinct success, either on the stage or in motion picture work, have been secured for the Mutual program since the reorganization began some two months ago.

Some idea of the numerous players now appearing in Mutual releases and the companies they are under contract with may be gleaned from the following list:

David Horsley productions:—Crane Wilbur, Captain Jack Bonavita, George Ovey, Margaret Gibson, Leona Hutton, Ella Oswald, Joseph von Meter, Donald O'Brien, John E. Brennan, Louise Fitzroy, Janet Sully, Goldie Colwell, Gordon MacGregor, Jefferson Osborne, Ray Lincoln and several others to be announced in the near future.

Mustang Film Company:—Arthur Acord, Anna Little, E. Forrest Taylor, Louise Lester.

American Film Company, Inc.:—Harold Lockwood, May Allison, Harry Von Meter, Eugenie Ford, Charles Bartless, William Stowell, Edward Coxen, Vivian Rich, Neva Gerber, Winifred Greenwood, Helene Rosson, Queenie Rosson, Perry Banks, Lidette Thorn, Molly Shafer, George Field, Charles Newton, Frank Borzage, Beatrice Van, Joseph Sheehan, John Steppling, Rae Berger, Webster Campbell, Lucille Ward and William Carroll.

Gaumont Company:—Florenz Tempest, Marion Sunshine, George Sidney, W. C. Fields, Cissy Fitzgerald, Francine Larrimore, John Levering, Joseph Reinhardt, William Roselle, Flavia Arcaro, H. W. Pemberton, Sidney Mason, Charles U. Travis, Lucille Taft, Madge Orlamond, William Stieff.

Thanhouser Film Corporation:—Gladys Hulette, Louise Emerald Bates, Winifred Kingston, Inda Palmer, Morgan Jones, George Harris, Tulla Hough, Ethel Jewett, Eleanor Spaulding, Burnett Barker, Francise Keyes, William Caroll, Riley Chamberlain, Lorraine Huling, Mignon Anderson, Florence La Badie, Riley Chamberlain, Helen Badgley, Harry Benham, Kathryn Adams, Wayne Arey, Morgan Jones, Hobert Whittier, Morris Foster, Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham.

Reliance Motion Picture Company:—Adoni Fovieri, Ninon Fovieri, Ralph Lewis, George A. Beranger, Margie Wilson, Alberta Lee, Richard Cummings, Dorothy Gish, William Hinckley, W. E. Lawrence, Al. Filson, and a number of others, who are appearing in the two and three-reel Reliance releases on the regular Mutual program.

The Mutual's regular weekly program now consists of twenty-eight reels, supplied exhibitors without any extra rental charge whatever. This program consists of two three-reel subjects, five two-reel releases, eleven single reels, including dramas and comedies, the regular Mutual Weekly, and the Tuesday split reel subject "See America First" and the animated cartoon "Keeping up with the Jones."

The daily releases on the regular Mutual program is made up as follows:

Monday:—An American two reel subject, a Falstaff comedy and a Novelty comedy.

Tuesday:—A two reel Thanhouser drama split, a one-reel cartoon and a single reel "Beauty" comedy.

Wednesday:—A Reliance, two reel drama, Rialto or Centaur three reel photodrama, and a one reel Novelty comedy.

Thursday:—A two reel Centaur subject, featuring Captain Jack Bonavita and the Bostock animals, a one reel Falstaff comedy and the Mutual Weekly, presenting up-to-the-minute news events.

Friday:—A two reel Mustang western drama, a one reel American drama and a single reel Cub comedy, featuring George Ovey.

Saturday:—A three reel Clipper, Than-o-play or Mustang drama, and a single reel "Beauty" comedy.

Sunday:—A two reel Reliance drama, a single reel Casino All Star comedy featuring a Broadway comedian and a one reel Thanhouser drama.

In several instances, however, this program of daily releases is only in a tentative state and is subject to change until the regular program is completed. To this program will shortly be added a single "Vogue" comedy, the release date of which has not yet been definitely decided upon, and several other important releases now being contracted for.

Important announcements in this connection are to be forthcoming from the President Freuler's office within a short time.

Lubin Company Goes West

Make-up came off early, scripts were folded up hurriedly and nearly the entire acting force at the Lubin plants at Betzwood, Indiana avenue and Glenwood avenue, ran over to the Broad street station to bid "pleasant journey" to Director Edgar Lewis and his group of sixteen who left for the Grand Canyon of Arizona this week, to begin work on the "exteriors" of "The Great Divide."

A special car was attached to the through Chicago train and every detail for the comfort of the players was looked after under instructions from Messrs. Singhi and Lowry. Miss Clayton's stateroom was a bower of American beauty roses, while in House Peters' room was much of the Peters' brand tobaccos and an abundance of "first aid tonic."

Director Edgar Lewis and his company leaving for Arizona.

In addition to Director Lewis, Miss Clayton and Mr. Peters, there was Mary Moore, Marie Sterling, Warner P. Richmond, Hayden Stevenson, Ray Chamberlain and Ford Obeck, four camera men, two carpenters and a scenic artist.

Fine Cast for Pathe's "At Bay"

George Fitzmaurice who is producing for Pathe "At Bay," George Scarborough's fine play, has signed up a splendid cast for the picture. Florence Reed is his leading woman and she is supported by Frank Sheridan, Charles Waldron, Lester Chambers and De Witt Jennings. Fitzmaurice started work on his production September 28.

Renee Kelly, Metro Star, a Favorite

Renee Kelly, the vivacious and clever little actress, who was featured with Henry Kolker in "The Bridge, or The Bigger Man," recently produced at the studios of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., by Director John W. Noble, for release in the Metro program, has started on the road for her second season in "Daddy Long Legs," and is being featured by Henry Miller in the part of Judy Abbott, the heroine. Although Miss Kelly was born and raised in this country, she is perhaps better known in London, where she is a prime favorite. Three years ago Miss Kelly was visiting friends in London when the leading woman in the comedy "Ann" was taken ill while the company was in rehearsal at the Criterion theater.

Renee Kelly.

Miss Kelly was offered the part by Sir Charles Wyndham, and with only five days' notice and rehearsals, she appeared at the Criterion and made an instantaneous hit. The critics of London, with one accord, declared she was the best comedienne that America ever sent over. Miss Kelly returned to this country and appeared in several big successes, but an attractive contract called her back to London, where she was featured as co-star with Kenneth Douglas in "The Inferior Sex" and in John Galsworthy's "Strife." Her first New York engagement was with Maxine Elliott at the Maxine Elliott theater in "The Chaperon." Later she supported Cyril Scott in "Modern Marriage." Her work in "The Bridge, or The Bigger Man" has won the praise of motion picture reviewers and established Miss Kelly as a consummate screen artist. Miss Kelly previously worked in pictures under the direction of John W. Noble, during his connection with the Imp-Universal studios.

Fox's Valeska Suratt Film

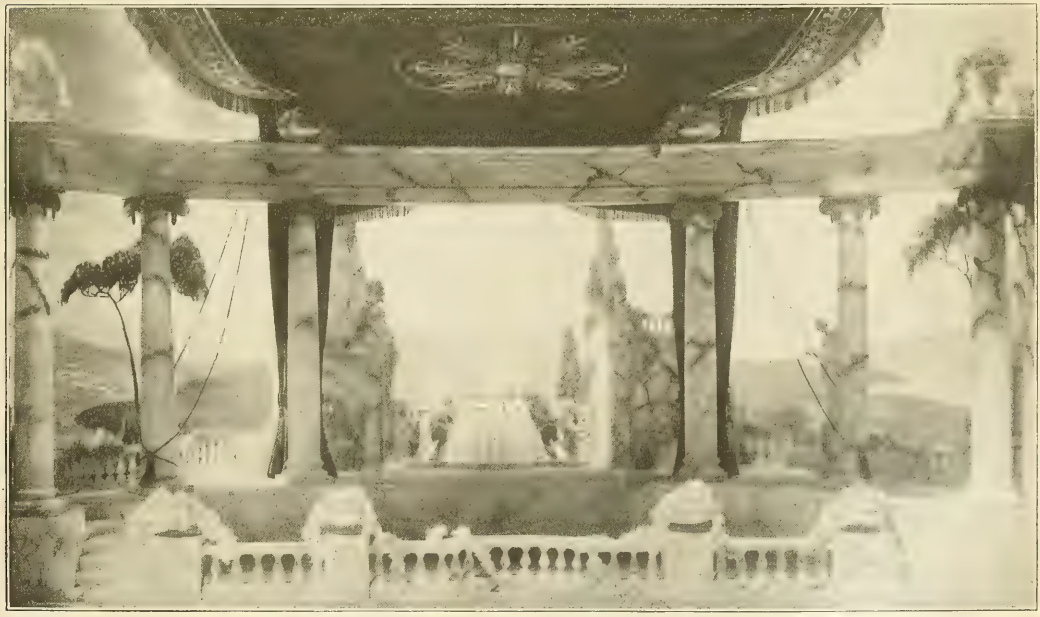
William Fox has at last announced the title and the interesting details of the spectacular, sensational motion picture drama in which Valeska Suratt makes her debut on the screen. The name selected is "The Soul of Broadway," which was conceived, written and produced by Herbert Brenon. In "The Soul of Broadway," Miss Suratt is supported by a cast headed by William E. Shay and numbering among others Sheridan Block, Maud Allen, Gertrude Berkley, George Middleton and little Jane Lee. In it Miss Suratt wears 150 gowns, each more amazing than the other. This means that in "The Soul of Broadway" Miss Suratt changes her gowns, including parasols, shoes, hats, stockings, etc., with every forty feet of film.

G. D. McIntyre, formerly general manager of the sales company, has been appointed assistant director to Barry O'Neill, now making "Bought" at the World Film studios.

The New Strand's Stage Setting

BY E. C. DIVINE*

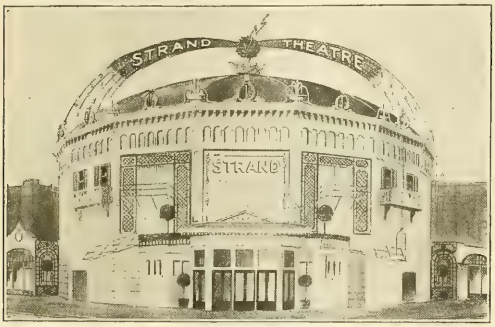
THE problem of designing an adequate moving picture setting is a new one, for the reason that only the most advanced and enlightened managers of moving picture theaters have realized the fact that they must provide a thoroughly well-designed and artistic setting in order that the splendid numbers they are offering to the public may have an adequate background. Only within the last year or two has the manager desired the scenic artist to tackle the problem, and the scenic artist has little or nothing to go on.



In the original large settings, the artist and manager were generally satisfied with a handsome picture sheet in a well-designed frame, surrounded by draperies or flowers, generally set rather near the front of the stage, an unpretentious setting at best, but with the advent of such pictures as are now being placed before the public, and with the coming of the highest ideals in the moving picture field, the same qualities that made them successful in the field of the legitimate drama have been applied to the solution of the moving picture problem.

When splendid pictures, high class orchestras and eminent soloists are placed together on the same bill, there is need of a much more elaborate scenic background. To the designing of this background, the scenic artist has given a great deal of careful thought. The one great problem that faces him is the elimination of the picture sheet when the stage is being used by the orchestra and singer. To merely cover the picture sheet with a handsome drapery is not sufficient, for the fact still remains patent to the audience that this is a moving picture theater.

In the set that is being installed on the stage of the New Strand theater, at Wabash avenue and Seventh street, Chicago, a successful attempt has been made to overcome this last difficutly. As the spectator views the stage, there is no suggestion whatever that there is or will be used a moving picture screen. The setting is one of great beauty. Every detail has been carefully considered; coloring, lighting, mass, shadow, the effect of detail upon the whole, all tend to create the atmosphere of a magnificent Roman garden. One does not even see where the picture sheet will be. It it only after a clever manipulation of the lights and of heavy satin draperies that the moving picture appears on a screen that seems to have come from nowhere.



In order that you may understand how this effect is produced, it is necessary to describe the setting. From a great marble base there arise six marble columns with gold caps. Upon these columns there rests a graceful curved cornice, making one-half of a peristyle. Overhanging this peristyle there is a great satin drapery in the form of a canopy which does not wholly conceal the sky. A vast cyclorama, 60 feet high by 105 feet long, encircles the whole stage and goes far up in the flies to the gridiron floor. Sitting in the first few rows of the orchestra, one can look up through and beyond the setting and still see nothing

*President of the Strand Theater Company.

The beautiful stage setting that will be revealed upon the opening of the new Strand theater but a great expanse of sky. In the canopy lies the secret of this new moving picture setting, for the canopy is so placed that the picture sheet may slip down unnoticed behind it, and when not needed may be drawn silently up into the flies. The picture sheet only appears when wanted and is never obtrusive. Behind the two center columns great satin draperies are folded and girded with silk cords and gold tassels. After the orchestra or singer has left the stage, the lights begin to dim. As they lower almost to the vanishing point, the satin curtains begin to close over the center opening. There is a moment of darkness, the picture sheet is lowered in place, and the curtains part again silently, and upon the screen is flashed the latest photoplay.

The exterior of the re-converted Globe theater, now The Strand.

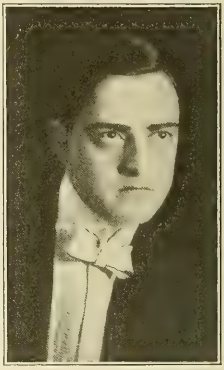
Many months have been given to the working out of this most successful setting. It is shown in the New Strand theater for the first time in the United States, indeed in the world. Chicago is fortunate to possess a scene that is vastly more artistic, and incidentally expensive, than anything that has been placed in any moving picture theater from coast to coast.



The National Film Corporation of Baltimore, Md., is the latest producer to join the roster of the Associated Film Sales Corporation.

Douglas Bronston, who adapted the scenario of Pathe's "Neal of the Navy" and Harry Harvey, who is directing the photoplay.

Executive An Actor

W. Ray Johnston, who under the Hite regime at the Thanhouser plant held a prominent position, his friends have just discovered, is now actually appearing in the pictures themselves, thereby obtaining an excellent opportunity to study the technical end of the business, a part that ofttimes the executive overlooks. Mr. Johnston went into the studio at the suggestion of Mr. Thanhouser, who believed that the experience thus gained would benefit Mr. Johnston in his important executive work. Though he has appeared altogether in some twenty-five or thirty subjects, the first one in which he took a real lead was "Innocence at Monte Carlo" in which he played the leading male role opposite Mignon Anderson. Other pictures in which W. Ray Johnston will be instantly recognized are "His I. O. U.," "The Picture of Dorian Grey" and "The Game," in which he had the heavy lead in a cast that included Morris Foster and Ethyle Cooke. After spending several months in the studio Mr. Johnston expects to return to his executive position full of new ideas and more capable than ever of carrying out the tasks assigned him.

W. Ray Johnston.

Chicago Sees "Vanity Fair"

On Tuesday morning, October 5, at 10 o'clock an invitation showing of the seven reel Edison masterpiece "Vanity Fair" featuring Mrs. Fiske was given at Orchestra Hall, on Michigan avenue, Chicago, the home of the Strand Theater. A capacity audience gathered to behold the offering and went away enthusiastic over the superb photography, the lavish stage settings, the careful costuming and the excellent acting. The picture abounds in "bits," each one of which has been carefully conceived and cleverly executed, and a lover of Thackeray will find that the famous book has actually come to life on the picture screen, for it seems impossible for another manufacturer to improve upon the work of the Edison director responsible for this production. A complete review of the picture will be found on another page of this issue.

Quality Loans Playter

Through the courtesy of Kolb and Dill Inc., Wellington Playter, who has signed a contract with them for a year to play characters and leads, was loaned to the Quality Pictures Corporation for a period of two weeks to play the role of Jules Blondeau in the production of "Pennington's Choice." Mr. Playter, who has made quite a reputation for himself in Famous Players and Universal productions, is an unusual type of man, weighing close to 225 pounds and standing six feet two in his stocking feet. He is a man of powerful physique and unusual dramatic ability. His dramatization of this character has been done splendidly and has helped wonderfully in making "Pennington's Choice" one of the best productions Mr. Bushman has so far appeared in.

Billie Burke Likes Picture Acting

PANTOMIME IMPROVES HER PLAYING

BILLIE BURKE is having "the happiest experience of her life." That is a rather broad statement—coming, as it does, from the Inceville publicity department—but the truth of it is attested by the fact that she said so herself during the course of an interview she granted this week in her elaborate dressing quarters at the big N. Y. M. P. plant in the Santa Monica mountains.

. . "I am having the happiest time of my life," said the titian-haired star, after she had greeted her visitor with the winning smile that has made millions love her. "I really never believed it could be possible for me to so thoroughly enjoy the experience. Of course I knew it would be a new sphere for me in which to work, but I did not think for a moment that I would be able to combine work with pleasure. And yet I cannot remember when I have ever had a better time. Mr. Ince has been so lovely to me that I feel like a queen. His patience has been little short of remarkable. You know what I didn't know about moving pictures when I came out here would fill many volumes. In fact, I had only twice gone to a picture theater.

"They can say what they like, but I was truly nervous the first time I stepped in front of the camera. Maybe I didn't indicate it, but I was. Perhaps it was because I had no lines to speak; perhaps it was because I had to act within prescribed lines—sidelines, I heard Mr. Ince call them—and perhaps it was because I was afraid that I would stare into the lens. But Mr. Ince persuaded me to place confidence in him. I did and I realized, on the second day, that the nervousness had completely left me.

"Oh, I think it is just wonderful, this photoplay business. I admire everything I see about the studio, admire it with a sincerity, and yet, frankly, I can't help laughing at some of the things I have seen. For instance, the way they take the scenes. First they make you say goodbye and exit and then maybe an hour or two later, they make you enter. You know what I mean. Backwards!

Thomas H. Ince directing Billie Burke in a scene from her forthcoming Triangle comedy.

"But I like it; yes, like it immensely, not only because of its novelty, but because of its educational value. Oh, how I wish I had known several years ago, what I know now about pantomime. Within these few weeks, I have learned more about pantomime than I ever could have hoped to learn on the legitimate stage in a life time.

Another scene showing Ince directing Billie Burke.

I can see now how much better I could have played certain of my parts had I possessed the knowledge of pantomime that I do now."

"What was it, Miss Burke, that impelled you to desert the stage for the studio?" the charming star was asked. "Was it the big money or the . . ." "No! Not the big money! I'll tell you what decided me. When I was in Los Angeles, playing in 'Jerry,' Mr. Ince sent for me and invited me to visit his studios. I had never been inside a plant in my life and this fact, together with the fact that I had admired Mr. Ince's work—for a picture directed by him was one of the only two I had ever seen—made me accept the invitation. I was actually dazzled by the magnitude of Inceville. I had never realized that such a vast outlay of money was utilized in building the settings for pictures.

"Mr. Ince was very kind to me. He has such an ingratiating personality, you know, that I just simply couldn't get a word in during my visit. He kept on talking and telling me what a wonderful success I would be on the screen and how so many millions of people could see me, people whom I could never hope to play to otherwise. He was a veritable gatling gun in his eloquent plea. His words set me thinking. I slowly awakened to the realization that one thing he had said to me was true—that I would be able to reach millions, perhaps, who, unless, I appeared on the screen, would never be able to watch my work. So I signed a contract. That's the story. I'm glad I did it."

The subject in which Miss Burke is starring is a little less than half finished. Principal among the scenes photographed this week were those depicting the main street of a small Scotch village and which demanded the erection of some thirty dwellings. More than one hundred people took part in these scenes, while horses, mules, jaunting carts and other accessories lent additional realism.

Margaret Greene New Pathe Star

Margaret Greene, who is being featured in "Nedra," the Pathe Gold Rooster Play produced by Edward Jose from George Barr McCutcheon's well known novel, is one of the better known of Broadway's younger stars. She is a New York girl and though only twenty-three years old, has held a series of remarkably fine engagements.

Margaret Greene.

She starred in "Tipping the Winner" at the Longacre Theater, was leading woman in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" at the Astor Theater; leading woman in "Broadway Jones" with George M. Cohan; leading woman in "Ready Money" at the Maxine Elliott Theater; leading woman with Cyril Scott in "The Fatted Calf;" leading woman in "Common Law," and starred with Willard Mack in the Palace Theater.

Very few girls of her age can point to a record as good as that.

New York Approves "Damaged Goods"

A gathering of 2,000 of the most distinguished of New York's scientists, clergymen, surgeons, social workers and persons of prominence, official and unofficial, attended a private advance showing of "Damaged Goods" as the guests of the Mutual Film Corporation at the Broadway theater in New York, Monday, September 27. This showing brought remarkable expressions of approval and constructive criticism from the big representation of thinking people there present.

The advance showing was made in a degree unique by a departure from the usual formalities of such an occasion in the introduction of the subject. Dr. Carleton Simon, one of the nation's most authoritative specialists on nervous diseases and a serious student of the questions of social hygiene, addressed the audience with a brief exposition of the history and significance of syphilis, the dread disease which is in fact the motif of this decidedly unusual drama.

No better example of how frankly the people of the day have come to face the problem could be presented than in the audience which had only approval and interest for this picture.

The audience sat in absorbed silence through the presentation of the picture. Occasional gasps of astonishment arose from groups where the picture's startling story of fact fell with particular force. Touches of humor here and there lighted the darkness of the tragedy plot. At the end, when the closing title flashed on the screen behind a "dissolve" of "the girl of the street"—known to the picture as "the product and the cause"—a storm of applause broke out. Many members of the audience remained seated in silent consideration of the gripping enactment that had passed across the screen before them until long after the main body of the audience had passed out.

Most striking facts and statistics were presented in Dr. Simon's address. He sketched the history of the disease, its influences on races and civilizations, its modern significance and the immensity of the problem which it today presents in ever American community. "The time has passed," he said, "for hypocritically concealing the ravages of this most awful of human afflictions. We must face it just as the nation's abroad have had to face each other in battle to the death. It has destroyed and is destroying men and women, homes and happiness. It gnaws as a social ulcer. Science can, by the aid of spreading enlightenment, wipe it out eventually, we hope."

From a number of those present statements of opinion on the remarkable photoplay were elicited:

Charles Leroy Edson ("The Man from Arkansas") said: "This film will do more for the 'single standard' of morality and personal purity among the young than all the sermons that could be preached by word of mouth. Every youth who sees it will look on woman through different eyes. Nothing that a preacher can say will take the romantic glamor from a pretty prostitute, but this film will make the young man say 'I'm cured.' Its message not only saves men's souls, but it saves their bodies, too—which I am materialistic enough to hold rather important."

Rev. Dr. Fred Hovey Allen declared: "A most forcible and striking lesson. Its value to society is immeasurable if society will look at it. It is strongly yet delicately presented."

Dr. J. H. Brache remarked: "Your picture will do a great work and save many innocents by showing God's punishment for sin. Millions are suffering from the disease now."

William H. Marquard, White Cross Hospital and Relief Association, said: "Wonderful, but too true. A beneficial production."

Edwin Ball, M. D., expressed himself: "Would that every young man and woman could see this play."

Philip K. Nussbaum said: " 'Damaged Goods' should be seen by every man and woman, whether young or old, as it points out a tremendously important and vital moral."

Among others in the audience were: Dr. R. P. Lytle, Samuel Bell Thomas, Abraham Flexner, F. W. Marquard, Thomas Dunn English, Homer J. Hildreth, A. Livingston Norman, Dr. Sprague Carleton, Dr. D. N. Neuberger, Rev. Dr. J. B. Remensnyder, Dr. F. D. Derby, F. J. H. Kracke, Wendell P. Barker, J. J. Rosalsky, Mark Alter, Robert E. Greacon, Isadore Montifiore Levy, Ruins of Famous Players' Film Company studio in New York.

W. G. Gilley, Rev. Horace E. Clute, Sterling Potter, Dr. E. De Forest Norwood, Rev. Arthur J. Kerry, W. P. Barremore, Walter Storey.

The picture contains, incidentally, an authoritative display of the secret tragedies hidden behind hospital walls. The scenes in this phase of the story were taken in one of the biggest western hospitals. The picture is also a striking expose of the the "quack" doctor and his criminally vicious promises. The office of the typical quack is depicted.

There are thrills, smiles, shudders, tears, surprises and suspense through all the story. It tells the story as no speaking stage presentation could dare to attempt.

Arthur Cozine

Arthur Cozine was born in Brooklyn, New York, April 6th, 1894, and is a descendant in direct line from the John Cozine who landed in New York in 1623. He attended the public schools of Brooklyn and finished his education in a private high school. He first went to work for his father, but moving pictures were an irresistible attraction and the business suffered, as every moment he could get away from work, he spent at the Vitagraph studios, watching the modus operandi of motion pictures. When the late William V. Ranous picked him out of an army of extras to play a "bit" opposite Lillian Walker, in "The Lady of the Lake," he determined then and there to devote all his time to posing before the camera.

Arthur Cozine.

Recognition came slowly, but his advancement was none the less sure and when he was selected by Director George D. Baker to play juvenile leads opposite the late John Bunny, his status as a full-fledged motion picture actor was established. A few of the pictures in which Mr. Cozine is seen in prominent parts include "In the Land of Arcadia," "The Buddy Series," "Fixing Their Dads," "Heavy Villians," "Boys of the I. O. U.," "The Jarr Series," and "A Night Out," with May Robson as the star.

Mr. Cozine is an ardent boxing enthusiast and most of his time away from the studios is spent in the gymnasium punching the bag or engaged in friendly bouts with several of the well-known younger boxers of the present day.

President Fred J. Balshofer of the Quality Pictures Corporation, has taken a two weeks' leave of absence. He has departed for the Sierra Madre mountains with his guide, Pedro Leon, where he will hunt deer, mountain quail and ducks. Last year Mr. Balshofer succeeded in winning the grand prize for bringing home the largest deer shot during the season. He is in hopes of breaking the record again this year.

NOTED AUTHOR WRITES SCRIPTS

Richard Le Gallienne Is Persuaded to Write Picture-play for Equitable—Famous Stars Will Vote Who Will Act It

Richard Le Gallienne has at last succumbed to the jingle of the screen dollars. He has just completed a sensational five-act scenario for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, entitled "The Chain Invisible," which he constructed with a foreword of more or less interest both to the producing company and the public at large.

"'The Chain Invisible,'" says Le Gallienne, "is founded on the proposition that a healthy, normal man and woman, each entirely different from the other in birth, breeding, education, tastes, temperament and disposition must inevitably fall in love with each other—provided—they are constantly thrown into each other's society and have absolutely no opportunity for conversation or intimacy with any other human being.

"This theory is advanced on the belief that such falling in love is merely the inexorable working of nature—that two people so living are bound by an invisible chain which merely stretches if they chance to be separated afterwards. But the chain never breaks."

Le Gallienne, who has withstood all advances by film companies in the past, decided to arrange the Equitable scenario after seeing two of that company's finished pictures, "Trilby" and "The Price."

To quote a well-known cartoonist, now that Equitable has the scenario it is in a quandary as to what to do with it. Of the great number of stars on the Equitable roster, General Manager Feist was at a loss as to who should play the two principal roles. In order to get the principal parts into the right hands, it was decided to have twenty copies of the scenario written and one given to each of the noted players associated with Equitable, and then have the players themselves vote as to who should play the important roles.

Among the noted players who will be asked to vote are Robert Edeson, Kathryn Osterman, Lenore Ulrich, Florence Reed, Clara Whipple, Lily Cahill, Robert T. Haines, Margarita Fischer, Edwin Arden, Brandon Tynan, Alexandra Carlisle, Katharine Kaelred, Gail Kane, Charles J. Ross, Hilda Spong, Molly McIntyre, Helen Ware and Thomas A. Wise. The men will have two votes each, the women one, which will even up the matter of counts.

In "The Chain Invisible" Mr. Le Gallienne has created six roles which will require expert handling. They are an American, an English traveler, a sea captain, Robert Dalton, a tourist, his wife and their daughter.

"Salamander" Cast Completed

The B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation has exercised excellent judgment in selecting the players to appear in "The Salamander," a visualization of Owen Johnson's novel and play which it will shortly release. The cast is one of more than ordinary excellence, for it contains the names of such prominent artists as Ruth Findlay, John Sainpolis, Iva Shephard, Edgar L. Davenport, J. Frank Glendon and J. Albert Hall.

In some of the big scenes in the photoplay, the services of several hundred people have been utilized. The producing of the feature has been entrusted to Arthur Donaldson, conceded to be a master director.

House Peters Signs With Lubin

House Peters, the latest of the galaxy of photoplay stars to be enlisted under the Lubin banner, has had a career of mighty note, filled with romance, adventure and success. At a decidedly early age in his life, mother and father Peters decided that a little youthful training in the wilds of Australia would not be amiss for their promising son, not because he had shown a tendency to be incorrigible, but because both Mater and Pater realized that for a youth who showed the ambition of young House, experience would be by far the prime teacher.

House Peters.

After some years in Australia, his path in quest of fame lead him back to England where he appeared with Wilson and Barrett in "The Silver King," resuming the stage career which led him to America where with Ruth Chatterton under the management of Henry Miller he appeared successfully in "Susan's Gentleman," a sketch of his own writing. Then followed engagements in "The Money Moon" and with "Bought and Paid For," until the lure of the motion pictures attracted him and his first appearance was made in a production of "The Bishop's Carriage." Since that time Mr. Peters has appeared with distinguished success and accredited himself with a meteoric rise to popular favor which ranks him today as a leader among motion picture idols. Mr. Peters' first appearance with the Lubin Company will be in the role of Steve Chent in Wm. Vaughn Moody's great Western American play, "The Great Divide."

Farrar's Telephone Interview

Two hundred and thirty miles from Boston, her voice in clear, bell-like tones traveling over the wire across four states, Geraldine Farrar sang an interview into the office of the Boston Post last week and discussed the music for the photoplay, "Carmen," for which she posed for the Lasky Feature Play Company.

Miss Farrar sang to her own accompaniment on the piano, the notes of which were heard distinctly in the Post building in Boston, while Miss Farrar played in the music room of her home, at West Seventy-fourth street, New York City.

Never had Miss Farrar sung into the telephone before and never in the history of Boston journalism had such an interview been granted or obtained. In Boston on October 1 the Lasky Company presented for the first time on any screen the photoplay version of "Carmen" in which Miss Farrar appears as the star, and it was requested of the company's representative in Boston that an interview be obtained from Miss Farrar as to the music setting for the photoplay. Without hesitation the prima donna's house in New York was reached by long distance telephone and Olin Downs, music critic of the Boston Post, carried on his interview, in the course of which Miss Farrar played the piano and sang selections from "Carmen" to illustrate her explanation of the method of arranging the music for the photoplay version.

Soon after the Boston premiere of "Carmen" the photoplay will be seen in other leading cities of the United States. On November 1 it will be released through Paramount Pictures Corporation and within a month will be seen by nearly a million persons throughout the country.

"The Golden Claw"

Bessie Barriscale, whose rapid rise to fame in filmdom is conceded to be little short of remarkable, will make her debut under the Triangle banner in a forceful five-part Ince-supervised sociological drama entitled "The Golden Claw." The production has just been completed at the Inceville studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and will be offered as the third Ince subject through the medium of the new $2 pictureplays project. It is to be presented in lieu of "Matrimony," which, with Julia Dean as its star, Ince originally had planned for his third release. As a consequence of the substitution, "Matrimony" will not be shown until the sixth week, the fourth and fifth subjects thus far scheduled being respectively "The Disciple," starring William S. Hart and "The Winged Idol," with Katharine Kaelred.

"The Golden Claw" is from an original photoplay by C. Gardner Sullivan, the young literary genius, who, by his prolific writings, has stirred the country since his affiliation with Producer Thomas H. Ince. It is one of those intense dramas of society that, if well produced, always finds favorable comment awaiting its presentation and has been given such a costly and painstaking setting that Ince expects it to surpass all his previous efforts along this line. It strikes a terrific blow at mercenary marriages and yet saves itself from being too "preachy" by unfolding the tale of a love-awakening in the heart of a woman that is compelling in its interest.

The principal support to Miss Barriscale is contributed by no less illustrious figure of the legitimate stage than Frank Mills, popular as a leading man in both England and America. Mr. Mills is under contract with Producer Ince and "The Golden Claw" will serve as his medium of debut on the screen. Other principals in the cast are Wedgwood Nowell, a well-known stock favorite of the middle west, Truly Shattuck, erstwhile prima donna of light opera, and J. Barney Sherry.

Mona Darkfeather with Centaur—1

Princess Mona Darkfeather is another of the recent additions to David Horsley's players at his studio in Los Angeles. She has joined the company putting on the Centaur features, in which the Bostock animals are the featured players, and which is directed by her husband, Frank Montgomery. Princess Darkfeather's name is familiar to all followers of motion pictures, who remember her for her Indian characterization. She was a member of the original 101 Bison Company some years ago with her husband. Later she was with Kalem, Universal and other organizations.

Triangle Opens the Studebaker

BY NEIL G. CAWARD

AN epoch making event in filmdom occurred on Saturday evening, October 2, when the Triangle Film Corporation threw open the doors of the Studebaker theater, on Michigan avenue, Chicago, thereby adding another to its galaxy of de luxe theaters showing the Triangle program.

The event marked real history in Chicago, as it did in New York when the Knickerbocker theater opened with the same films, for it was the first time that motion pictures, less pretentious than a spectacular nine to twelve reel production, were ever offered at $2 prices. That it is going to be successful few could doubt after witnessing the enthusiasm of those who attended the opening and overhearing their favorable comments.

Notables in all walks of life graced the occasion with their presence and not alone city officials, bankers and brokers, jurists and editors, society queens and debutantes, film magnates and screen stars were present, but also a great throng of dyed-in-the-wool film fans, lovers of good pictures and admirers of the famous triumvirate, Griffith, Ince and Sennett. In the throng which packed the Studebaker to the last seat on Saturday evening were such well known individuals as Judges Trainer and Burke, C. F. Hately, George Bowles, Henry Walthall, Richard Travers, Victor Eubank, Richard Nehls, Charles Ziebarth, George Magie, George Cox, Roie Seery, Ralph Bradford, and representatives of all branches of the film industry, the press, the stage, the city hall, the bench, the leading clubs, and the "400."

The Studebaker, refurnished, redecorated and spick and span throughout, was gay with the Triangle colors, and the trade mark that has been made known to the public through countless newspaper advertisements and lavish use of billboard space, greeted one from the programs, the drop curtain, the seats, and the headdresses worn by the girl ushers.

In the center of the house and at the rear a new concrete projection booth has been erected and the equipment installed therein under the supervision of H. H. Goldberg, who is in charge of the projection of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial, is up-to-the-minute in every respect. The booth is eight feet high and has inside dimensions of 11 by 10 feet, with a projection aperture 6 feet 8 inches from the floor. It contains two specially constructed Simplex machines, equipped with several unusual and made-to-order devices, which have a throw of 72 feet. The screen, an alabastine sheet 18 feet in size, erected some 19 feet back of the curtain line, is fastened in a shadowbox of excellent construction and the whole is masked by some black gauze-like drapes which are drawn aside as the picture goes on the screen. This screen, like the projection booth, was built under the supervision of Mr. Goldberg and is satisfactory in every particular.

There were no ceremonies peculiar to the inauguration of a new undertaking, but when the hour of eight arrived the lights were dimmed, the orchestra struck into the opening bar of the musical accompaniment of "The Iron Strain" and the picture went on the screen. The Ince feature was followed by the Keystone picture "My Valet" and the program was concluded by the Fine Arts offering of "The Lamb." All of these pictures were reviewed at length in the last issue of MOTOGRAPHY at the time of their showing at the Knickerbocker in New York, so it is unnecessary to comment further upon their worth, other than to say that the entertainment as a whole met with praise on the part of everyone and bids fair to increase in popularity as time goes on, for large audiences have gathered at every showing this week and the word is spreading about the city that Triangle films are worth while.

As a single production the Ince offering "The Iron Strain" seems to meet with the most favor from Chicago audiences, but when it comes to the question of individual stars there can be little doubt but that Mack Sennett carries off the steller honors of the opening week's bill, despite the fact that he goes against such popular favorites as Dustin Farnum, Raymond Hitchcock and Douglas Fairbanks.

Following the invitation performance at the Studebaker on Saturday evening a supper dance was given in the Crystal Ball Room of the Blackstone Hotel, which was attended by many who were present at the debut of Triangle films in the Studebaker.

Screen Club Holds Election

At the election of officers held on Saturday, October 2, the ballot resulted as follows: Billy Quirk, president; Harry Myers, vice-president; Ad Kessel, second vice-president; Robert Edeson, third vice-president; Harry Ennis, corresponding secretary; Robert E. Welsh, recording secretary; and John Race, treasurer. The newly elected members to the board of governors are: C. A. Willat, George DeCarlton, Hopp Hadley, and Arthur Leslie. The members elected last year who will remain on the board are: King Baggot, J. Gerhardt, Frank Powell, and Jules Bernstein.

The un-elected candidates for office were: Paul Scardon for president, Tefft Johnson for vice-president, Daniel Frohman for second vice-president, Harry Spingler for corresponding secretary, George D. Proctor for recording secretary, and Arthur Ashley, William Tooker, Harry Morey, and William Steiner for the board of governors. Carl Laemmle was nominated for the vice-presidency but withdrew his name. John Race had no opposition for the office of treasurer.

Jeanne Eagels for Pathe Picture

Arnold Daly, who is producing the "Ashton-Kirk" series of features for Pathe, has engaged Jeanne Eagels for his new picture "The House of Fear." Miss Eagels started in upon a theatrical career at the tender age of twelve, and as she says "played almost every kind of a part in stock and repertoire" for four years in the West. Then came musical comedy for two years, with Richard Carle and "The Pink Lady," and then a season with Billie Burke at the Lyceum. Last season she played the lead with Julian Eltinge in "The Crinoline Girl." She has been engaged for a new stage production to be seen in New York soon.

Miss Eagels is a girl of pronounced charm and should make a hit on the screen.

Guy Coombs of Metro

Guy Coombs, one of the best known leading men on either the speaking stage or in motion pictures, who joined the Metro forces to play the lead with Mme. Petrova, the star in "My Madonna," produced by Popular Plays and Players, will be seen hereafter in feature productions of that corporation. Mr. Coombs is one of the "young veterans" of the silent drama and early was induced to desert the speaking stage for the pictures. For three years he was the leading man in the Kalem stock company, when he became the idol of thousands of motion picture fans. He spent one year directing productions at the Kalem studio. Incidentally, he is one of the few successful directors who prefer acting before the camera to directing productions behind it.

Guy Coombs.

When "My Madonna" was completed last week Mr. Coombs was immediately engaged for the leading male role in the Popular Plays and Players forthcoming production, "Barbara Frietchie," in which little Mary Miles Minter will be featured. Mr. Coombs was elated with the part given him in this production as it was in "soldier roles," while playing with the Kalem stock company, that he came into motion picture prominence.

Mr. Coombs early adopted the stage for a career and while still in his teens he was playing on Broadway in many notable productions. His rise in the profession was rapid and because of his clean cut appearance, strong personality and knowledge of dramatic technique, his services were always in demand.

Pathe's "Seeing America"

Pathe is to cover the United States from coast to coast for a series to be called "Seeing America First." Miss Helen Greene, a young lady who has figured in the society columns of the metropolitan papers, has been engaged as "Polly Pathe," and she will be chaperoned on her long tour by Frances Fisher Byers, a newspaper woman of long experience, who will attend to local publicity while on the tour.

All places of real historic and scenic interest in each state in the Union will be visited by these ladies, together with a Pathe cameraman who will film the best of everything. It is estimated that the itinerary will cover some 40,000 miles and methods of transportation will include railroad trains, trolley cars, automobiles, muleback, carriages, sailing vessels and steamboats. The trip will require some six or eight months to complete.

Arrangements have been made in practically every state whereby the most prominent citizens, from the governor down through mayors and city chambers of commerce to local school boards, will welcome "Polly Pathe" and grant every assistance. Women all over the United States will be especially eager to see "Polly Pathe," as it is said thousands of dollars have been spent on her gowns.

Studio a Melting Pot

The new Charles K. Harris picture, "For Sale, a Baby," which is being produced by Perry N. Vekroff at the Kinemacolor studio at Whitestone, and which will be released through the World Film, is not only a study on the subject of race prejudice. It is a melting pot in itself. In its cast and directing force are representatives from four nations of Europe, some of whom are the warring nations.

Arthur Donaldson, who plays the role of "Jacob Cohen," the pawnshop keeper, is Swedish, having been born in Sweden and educated there in music. Miss Sonia Maselle, the charming Russian girl who plays "Rachel Cohen," Jacob's wife, was born in Warsaw, and was held a political prisoner in the land of her birth before she came to America. Mr. Vekroff, the director, is a Bulgarian. He was educated in court circles for the diplomatic service, and served for some time as a secretary to the king. Miss Camille Dalberg was born in Germany, and is half German. The other members of the company, including Miss Florence Hackett, the vampire woman; Miss Gazelle Marche, the ingenue; Mrs. Dora Adams, Jack Johnston and George Henry are Americans.

Noble Finishes "One Million Dollars"

John W. Noble, director of many notable Rolfe-Metro features, has just made an unusual record by completing the big five-act picture, "One Million Dollars," in which William Faversham is starred, in less than three weeks. For a time it appeared that Mr. Faversham would not be able to finish the picture, as a previous contract called for his presence in Pittsburgh this week, where he opens the theatrical season in his big stage success of last season, "The Hawk." But by working day and night under high pressure, Mr. Noble succeeded in finishing the picture in time for Mr. Faversham to take a brief vacation and rest of several days aboard his yacht before beginning his theatrical engagement. One of the secrets of Mr. Noble's success in effective and expeditious directing is his masterly handling of big situations, where his discipline counts. He is a strict disciplinarian, a training he received while a student at West Point. After leaving the army, Mr. Noble took up the stage for a career, joining a small stock company in Denver. He wrote several vaudeville sketches and played "big time" in them. He was getting along famously on the stage when the possibilities of motion pictures attracted his attention. His first work was with the Thanhouser company, where he was engaged to act and assist in directing pictures. Afterward he became a half owner in the Ryno Film Company. Mr. Noble's first well-known work was directing Norma Phillips for the big serial, "Our Mutual Girl." That series ran for more than a year, which was then a record for a serial picture. B. A. Rolfe was attracted to the excellent work of Mr. Noble and engaged him to direct feature productions.

John W. Noble.

Morosco Star Is Honored

Myrtle Stedman, the popular star of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, has received the distinction of being the first woman elected a member of the newly organized Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, which is composed of prominent people and firms in the various branches of the industry.

As soon as she read the advance announcements of the formation of the Board, Miss Stedman immediately wired her application for membership, and is very much pleased over the fact that she is the first woman to be enrolled with this new organization. When notified of her election, she immediately replied by wire, expressing her appreciation of acceptance of her application, and added: "I consider the Board of Trade another big step towards the advancement of motion pictures and feel that a great honor has been bestowed upon me in electing me the first woman member. I believe in the principles for which the board stands, namely, the advancement of the industry and the fighting of unjust legislation."

That the women interested in the motion picture industry should prove a big factor on the Board of Trade can be appreciated. Many women occupy prominent positions in connection with the output of film, and that they should have a voice in this all-important body will readily be conceded.

Miss Stedman, who, despite the rumor which has gotten out to the contrary, is appearing under the Oliver Morosco management under a long-term contract, is one of the most energetic young women connected with the film business. Her activities toward the betterment of conditions affecting the thousands of the "weaker sex" employed in the industry have gained her considerable laudatory comment from people prominent in and out of the industry.

Arthur Bard Visits Chicago

Arthur Bard, general manager of the Associated Film Sales Corporation of New York, hustled into Chicago last week and opened a temporary office at the Sherman hotel, by engaging the public stenographer of the hotel as his secretary and office assistant. Instructions were left at the desk to refer all matters, messages and business for Mr. Bard to the public stenographer, and the result was Mr. Bard was able to handle business appointments in other parts of the city, while his "office" at the Sherman went right on attending to his callers.

During his stay in Chicago Mr. Bard granted a brief interview to a representative of MOTOGRAPHY, during which he briefly reviewed the history of Associated, as well as described his own career in the film industry, and the gradual birth of the idea that led to the formation of the Associated. Mr. Bard declares he has a constantly growing list of reputable manufacturers arranging to release their product through his distributing medium, and predicts that within a reasonably short time Associated films will be known and demanded by exhibitors because of their quality and merit. Many of the manufacturing companies now releasing through Associated, Mr. Bard states, are soon to move their producing forces to California, and it is even hinted that ere long all of them will be working under one roof, thus greatly reducing the costs of production.

V. L. S. E. Opens Sub-Office

The formal opening of the newly organized subdivision of the Big Four, at 811 East street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., occurred this week under the auspices of F. B. Spurrier, who will be in charge of the V. L. S. E. affairs in that territory, under the management of J. S. Hebrew, the Philadelphia branch manager. The establishment of this office is made necessary by the constantly increasing business of V. L. S. E. in this section, and is the third expansion of this organization within as many weeks. Other recent changes in the sales force of the Big Four, include the appointment of J. M. Duncan, as manager of the Detroit office, succeeding R. R. Hutton, who has been transferred to Cleveland, and the addition of J. P. Pruell to the staff of the Cleveland office. Mr. Duncan was formerly located in Cleveland, where he did able work.

Pierce Goes to Coast

Carl H. Pierce, the Bosworth, Inc., special representative, who has been in Columbus recently for the purpose of getting "Hypocrites" passed, was recently called to the studio at Los Angeles for a short conference. Mr. Pierce left Columbus last Sunday, taking in the different exchanges on the way, stopping first at Cincinnati, then at St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver and San Francisco. He expects to return to Columbus about October 20.

Lariat Brand on Associated

The Lariat brand, produced by Otis B. Thayer at the Garden of the Gods studio, located at Colorado Springs, Colo., will be released on the Associated program. In the future, Lariat pictures will feature Miss Gertrude Bondhill.

Statement of the ownership, management, circulation, etc., of MOTOGRAPHY, published bi-weekly, at Chicago, Ill., required by the Act of August 24, 1912.

NOTE—This statement is to be made in duplicate, both copies to be delivered by the publisher to the postmaster, who will send one copy to the Third Assistant Postmaster General (Division of Classification), Washington, D. C., and retain the other in the files of the post office.

NAME OF	POST OFFICE ADDRESS
Editor, PAUL H. WOODRUFF	7025 Yale Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Managing Editor and Business Manager, ED J. MOCK,	6549 Harvard Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Publisher, ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION,	1251-1256 Monadnock Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

OWNERS: (If a corporation, give names and addresses of stockholders holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of stock).

ED J. MOCK	6549 Harvard Ave., Chicago, Ill.
B. C. SAMMONS	Blue Island, Ill.
JOHN CROCKER	Maroa, Ill.

Known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders, holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities:

There are no bonds, mortgages or other securities outstanding against MOTOGRAPHY.

ED J. MOCK, Business Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this thirtieth day of September, 1915.

(Seal) LEONA J. EKSTROM.

My commission expires Aug. 17, 1918.

"Legit" Stage Doomed by Films

HODKINSON PREDICTS ITS END

THAT the best of the world's literature and drama, accompanied by the finest music, brought to the people in film at prices they can afford to pay, will mean the survival of the "legitimate" theater only in the largest centers was the statement of W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the man who first conceived the "photo opera," when soon after the premiere of "Carmen," in which Geraldine Farrar made her screen debut at Symphony Hall, Boston, on Friday evening, October 1.

"Motion pictures have come to say," he said, "and, because they can control the market of writers and actors, motion picture producers will soon control the spoken play, presenting their stars on the stage as well as the screen. The future of the film will be in shaping public opinion, just as the printing press does now. In fact, the two are so closely allied that it is hard to tell where the publishing business stops and the motion picture business begins. That is why the Paramount producing companies are striving for the best. Because of ridiculous censor conditions in some sections, they are often forced to give only as much of the best as they are allowed to. By all means, there should be some restrictions, but they should be administered by people who not only know literature and art, but really understand films and the aims of the better companies.

"The tendency to sensationalism shown in some quarters will kill itself anyway. Those who make cheap, sensational films will either exhaust their material and stop or they will educate their peculiar public to a point where it will be impossible to get anything 'raw' enough to satisfy it.

"Today the motion picture is a universal language. It has proved its worth, and under the constructive guidance of what in the past has been the minority which knows what will come, does not guess and plans to meet developments, it will go on to further victories.

"The time has come for this fourth largest industry in the United States to adopt definite policies and principles which are known from personal experience to be right, and since the whole trend of the business has turned this way since the formation of the first company which stood for bigger and better pictures, bigger and better theaters, longer engagements, fine music and all the accompaniments of the best form of entertainment, it is only reasonable to suppose that its future will be greater than its past.

"Theories which I have advocated for years, undoubtedly instilled in the minds of some of the biggest motion picture men the firm belief that I was crazy, but companies which they head have since adopted them, and I sincerely believe them to be right.

"When it proved impossible for him to convince the company with which he was associated that long pictures made from good plays and operas with big stars and fine supporting casts would come in the logical sequence of events, Adolph Zukor, thinking along the same lines, and Daniel Frohman, organized the Famous Players Film Company, presenting James K. Hackett in "The Pirsoner of Zenda" and Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth." It was only natural that those men should become associated and the alliance of Famous Players, Lasky and Morosco brought Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Geraldine Farrar and many others together as Paramount stars.

"It is our ambition to bring to the people of the smallest towns, unable to see good plays, the best of everything," Mr. Hodkinson concluded. "The same motive inspires our stars, who reach a far greater public on the screen than they ever could on the stage. We do not believe in charging $2 for motion pictures. As we are selling films and not stock, we don't mind saying so. They are essentially for the great public, and so far as we can, counting on 10 per cent of the population as our patronage, we will bring them to that public."

An Interior "Exterior"

A picturesque woodland scene, complete to the smallest detail, was staged this week inside of Essanay's Chicago studios for a scene in "The Raven," the six-act feature from George C. Hazelton's romance of Edgar Allan Poe.

First a huge wall painting of a forest glade, done by Essanay's staff artist, was put up, and in front of this was constructed a grassy clearing with a stump of a tree and a rock in the foreground. The rock is just at the edge of a pool of water, which also was constructed especially for this scene.

Taken "close-up," the ensemble appears on the screen to be a real spot in a woods, and it is so realistic that the spectator, unless he knows the scene was "built," does not detect the deception.

In this scene Henry B. Walthall, Essanay's leading man and conceded to be the best emotional actor in motion pictures, sits on the rock with Warda Howard. Mr. Walthall is the Poe of the romance, Miss Howard is Virginia. There is a love scene, and, in glancing into the water, Poe sees a skeleton where Virginia's reflection should be. Startled, he draws back, and the skeleton fades into the reflection of Virginia.

The scene is a remarkable illusion, and the photography is perfect.

Sigmund Lubin at Universal City, with wife and party. Director General Henry McRae is the party eying the lion.

Preparation and Team Work in Producing

BY FRED E. WRIGHT*

FROM the cheap productions of one-reel photoplays, the scenarios of which were oftentimes written on the backs of old envelopes—to the six-reel productions of today, costing thousands of dollars, would seem to be a story of industrial progress covering generations—instead of barely a decade. In the early days a couple of muslin "flats," covered with cheap wall paper served both as a living room in the slums and a drawing room in the palace, the only difference being the size of the figures on the paper. A chair or two, a bronze, a vase, or a picture purchased at the nearest ten-cent store—together with half a dozen people at five per day—who acted and perhaps assisted in the setting of the stage and the result was considered a very satisfying artistic triumph. Little of our talent had theatrical experience. Actors of the legitimate "pooh-poohed" the picture proposition and predicted its early collapse. They refused disdainfully to lend their services to productions that they felt would degrade and belittle them in the eyes of theatrical managers.

Fred E. Wright.

I insulted many of my professional friends by offering to cast them in my early pictures. Observations of the rapid growth of the business soon won some of them over but many came like martyrs to the block—after their honored profession had landed them in a state of starvation and their dreams were of irate landladies that were and romantic beef stews that were not!

Our early audiences were called "low brows"—the motion picture was considered an amusement to catch the nickels and dimes of the poor—with as little future as the game of "ping pong."

Those who considered themselves the better class—whose curiosity got the better of them—"gumshoed" their way into picture houses, looking over their shoulders to see if any chance acquaintance might see them.

Newspapers held aloof from acknowledging the growing industry. Their columns were filled with assertions that moving pictures were causing the youth of the land to be drawn into damnation! A crime committed by a youthful desperado was blamed on the pictures. Cigarettes, the time-honored cause of all crimes, became an innocent habit and motion pictures were promoted to their time-honored place.

*Director of Essanay Productions.

Many clergymen whose hearts were bursting with indignation, sweated by the hour in hoarse denunciation and added another commandment to the biblical eleven, "Thou shalt not enter a motion picture theater!"

The motion pictures faced the same opposition that befalls all great industries—Morse faced it with his telegraph—Watts with his steam engine—Stephenson with his locomotive—Fulton with his steamboat. It gave a new fad to the little men and little women who do nothing for the world save worry over the eternal conundrum of how people shall exercise the five senses that the Creator has given them—Censorship!

But in spite of all, the moving picture has grown from the poor, little, cheap one-reel production—with a very ordinary story, to the great pulsating drama, picturing actual life, of six, eight, ten and twelve reels—from the cheap nickel show for the so-called "low brow," to a Broadway attraction at $2.00—for all kinds of brows.

Today our carpenters and scenic artists vie with each other in the creation of magnificent and costly settings. Antique shops are searched for rare and priceless bric-a-brac, bronzes, tapestries and paintings. Furniture of carved mahogany and draperies of silk and velvet are used by the vanload. Celebrated writers obtain high prices for writing the stories. Theatrical Broadway, once howling with derision, is now groaning over the loss of its stars. Even its skeptical managers are hotfooting it into picturedom.

Newspapers have given recognition. The clergy, with slight exception, has returned to the original version of the biblical commandments. It is pictures—pictures everywhere. They have in less than a decade leaped forward until they are the third of the greatest industries of the world. I am proud to be a unit of that marvelous industrial growth—no matter how small may have been my contribution.

Some of the men behind the pictures—(Left to right), Harry A. Zech, head cameraman; Emil W. Kuauf, scenic artist; H. Smith, studio carpenter; Gus Smith, Al Way, property man; Herman R. Lutzenberger, chief electrician; Fred McWithey, Joseph Demsky, chief carpenter; Arthur S. Dowd, assistant director, Fred E. Wright.

When barely sixteen years of age I told an eminent tragedian that I "knew Shakespeare." I do not know whether he believed me or not, but he gave me a job. I was so filled with the sublime ambition that I forgot to ask him the salary. I never did learn! I was paid in irregular amounts—at irregular intervals. At that time a regular salary was a dangerous precedent to establish in the theatrical business. Little as I got in ready money, I have much to thank him for. It was a marvelous school of experience and, besides, he always somehow managed to pay the hotel bill and I never had to walk the ties.

A like period was spent in the romantic school with Frank Mayo—afterwards followed seasons with traveling combinations under the management of A. M. Palmer, Shook and Collier, and Tom Crossen. With perhaps the exception of three seasons, I directed productions for fifteen years before entering the picture field. This includes directing in stock theaters in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Denver and Seattle.

About seven years ago a film man with sublime

Each one was made to feel that he or she was individually as important as any other person in the production.

courage offered me a position as producer of western pictures on a great Oklahoma ranch. There were to be huge droves of cattle and multitudes of cowboys and Indians—in fact, all the figures in the proposition ran way up in the thousands—I declined! It seemed to me that nothing less than a major general was required for the outfit and my military training had been sadly neglected.

Though I refused the offer the deadly photoplay germ had done its fell work—a week later I was busy making my first picture for the "Columbia," one of the pioneer independent companies. Later I produced and released pictures for the National Film Company, afterwards joining the forces of Pathé Freres. I was with Pathé for several years and joined Essanay when Pathé ceased producing on account of the present war.

Seventy-five per cent of my work in producing spectacular multiple reel features is summed up in the one word "preparation." The theme of the story is studied from every possible angle and discussed with the author scene by scene, often being rewritten several times as weak spots are discovered. The scenario is like an architect's design. The plans upon which we build our structure are not arbitrary but always subject to any changes that suggest themselves as an improvement. They must be free from inconsistencies and absurdities, all in all a story of real life with natural action. It must be picturized truth—it must be believable, told with as few subtitles as possible, and understandable by people of all nationalities.

Following the completion of the scenario comes the selection of the exteriors—the planning of the interiors—the costuming of the characters.

Carpenters, scenic artists, property men, electricians and costumers are called into consultation. I explain thoroughly the requirements of the story. I seek of them an expression of their own ideas; we work together; for I need team work in the mechanical department, and their team work goes far indeed towards making a picture a success. I do not look upon them as mere stage hands—they are a staff of competent assistants with valuable ideas that I want in the structure of my picture.

My camera must have its opportunities. The camera man is generally looked upon as a more or less reliable individual, who can thread film in a box, focus a lens and turn a little crank a certain number of times a minute. I expect considerably more, he must be an artist with grey matter that can be used in producing beautiful photographic effects.

The last thing in the preparation is the selection of the cast of competent artists to enact the different roles. I take great care that they are competent and I expect them to use brains in their characterization—in doing so I allow every freedom of thought possible. I want natural action, free from theatrics. I inflict upon them no unnatural gestures. If they are to love or hate, storm or rage, laugh or cry—I want them to do it as they would when confronting similar situations in their own lives. Together we analyze the story scene by scene—every point is thoroughly explained to them.

Finally, when everything is under way—while waiting for the first day of production—I mentally plan every scene over and over in perhaps several different ways. Thus I reach a decision as to the most effective presentation and do not have to experiment with my people when taking scenes on the studio floor. From start to finish it is team work—every artist or mechanic contributing brains for the success of the picture. If one fails, that one is courteously removed and another selected. I am neither temperamental nor a megaphone soloist. I want every one comfortable around me, the least possible friction and the spirit of good fellowship and again—team work!

Extra people are handled in the same way. They are made to understand what they represent, why they are gathered together and what they are to do. The hundreds of extras used in my recent production, "In the Palace of the King," understood thoroughly their part of the story, and each one was made to feel that he or she was individually as important as any other person in the production. They were not brought into scenes like droves of cattle. When they cheered the leading man they knew why they cheered, they thoroughly understood and became part and parcel of that team work which makes the picture the successful production that it is.

In my work with Essanay there has been another important factor that makes great pictures—the co-operation of the company and its executive heads. George K. Spoor, the president of the company, and Homer A. Boushey, are part of the team work that makes great pictures. They took pains to see that I was supplied with the materials, they denied me nothing that I asked for—the result was up to me. From its first inception to the final view of the completed photoplay on the screen, it has been under my supervision and if the picture is not successful I, alone, am to blame.

I can remember the time when it was a much debated subject among the manufacturers whether the public wanted two-reel pictures. State rights had been exploited on photoplays of three reels, which proposition was considered a gamble. No one could conceive that the public would devote over thirty minutes watching any one story on the screen. Today many firms are crowding the market with five and six-reelers—the successful plays and great works of fiction are eagerly bought at exorbitant royalties. Many of these are not adapted to picturization. So eager are the manufacturers to get into the market that they jam the pictures through. Ninety per cent of the present multiple reel features are poorly written and directed with amateurish and slipshod methods. Big money is paid for royalties, impossible salaries paid to stars that twinkle not—but everything else that costs money, that would make a real feature, is subject to the most rigid economy.

The public now seem to be willing to accept anything and everything, and with that condition of affairs, the poor, trashy features that some manufacturers are releasing at shirtwaist bargain counter prices —will be selected by the exhibitor in place of the costly and artistic productions, but despite this, when that period comes—"the survival of the fittest"—great things will be done by the producers, things that will astonish the world, for there is no limit to the possibilities of the photoplay and no end to its future as the principal amusement of mankind.

Dual Role for William Farnum

William Farnum, who plays a dual role in the latest of the William Fox one-a-week productions, which is named "The Wonderful Adventure," and is from the fertile pen of Capt. Wilbur Lawton, is described by a writer in a popular magazine as "the most unneutral chunk of masculinity I ever met." "He may be an actor," continues this enthusiastic critic, "but when God made him He molded the actor from the cast of which fighting men are made." All this is true, although William Farnum doesn't like it. He is anything but a "pug" with a chip on his shoulder, as certain enthusiastic personages have tried to make out. He is however a man who throws himself heart and soul into a part, which he may be enacting for William Fox, and if there's a fight scheduled (and there usually is)—well, William is there with both husky fists.

In "The Wonderful Adventure," however, Mr. Farnum enacts more peaceful roles. As John Stanley, an upright, manly civil engineer, a master of men, and Demarest, the broken-down "dope-fiend," this remarkable actor achieves unusual results. Picture, if you can, "Big Bill" Farnum as a decrepit, trembly-handed victim of drugs; yet so wonderful is his make-up and so painstakingly has he studied the dual roles that the contrasts between Stanley and Demarest is as marked as the difference between night and day.

In connection with "The Wonderful Adventure," in which Dorothy Green and a company of well-known Broadway stars appear in support of Mr. Farnum, too much credit cannot be given to Frederick Thomson, the producer, for the unique photographic effects he has introduced and the general power of the production. For instance, Mr. Farnum is seen shaking hands with "himself," viewing his own "dead body" and opening a door for "himself." This latest William Fox production develops all the resources of the camera under the skilled direction of Mr. Thomson, who is now hard at work on another big feature picture for Mr. Fox.

SECOND COMPANY ORGANIZED

Another Producing Company Engaged by David Horsley to Stage Centaur Features With the Bostock Animals

In order to further increase the producing efficiency of Director Frank Montgomery's company making the Centaur features, in which the Bostock animals are the principal actors, and to alleviate the rush consequent to turning out a two reel picture every week, David Horsley has organized a second company, under the direction of Carl LeVeniss, to produce every two weeks a two reel animal drama of the same type as has been shown in the past Centaur releases.

The task of turning out a two reel picture a week is possible under normal conditions, but with animals taking the place of human players the work assumes extraordinary proportions and Mr. Horsley found that one company could not maintain the schedule if the pictures were to be of the standard of quality which he has set. Hence the formation of Mr. LeVeniss' company.

The pictures turned out by Mr. Montgomery will now appear every two weeks and will be alternated in the Mutual release chart with those made by Mr. LeVeniss, who will also spend two weeks time on each subject.

Mr. LeVeniss' company, besides the Bostock animals, is made up of Donald Bowles, a well known stock favorite; Grace Gibson, considered one of the most beautiful leading women in motion pictures; Marvell Spencer, well remembered for her ingenue characters in different motion picture productions; Victor Rothman, Susie Hamilton, H. Turner, Chandler House and Betty Anderson. The first picture is called

A scene from Selig's "Landing the Hun" 2e Reel."

"Rhoda's Burglar" and is released Friday, October 7, on the Mutual program.

The release for the following week (October 14) is a Montgomery picture entitled "Stanley's Close Call," the second of the "Stanley" series. In the cast are Roy Watson, Edward Roberts, Charles Gay, Leo Hayes, Mr. Tietz, Princess Mona Darkfeather, Anna DeLisle, Agnes Stanley, and the Bostock animals.

New Gaumont Star

Francine Larrimore, the charming ingenue lead of "Some Baby" at the Fulton Theater, has been engaged by the Gaumont Company to appear in the next Rialto star three-reel feature on the Mutual program.

Francine Larrimore.

produced by William Haddock. The title of this photoplay, in which one of Broadway's most popular current stars will be seen, is "The Devil's Darling." Miss Larrimore will play the role of an innocent girl who comes under the influence of a wicked adventuress who tries all her wiles to force the younger girl to sell her soul, to no avail.

Francine Larrimore is an American girl, pure and simple, although she boasts the distinction of foreign birth, having been born in Rouen, France, the almost infinitesimally small number of actresses who find themselves starred in their first performance, Miss Larrimore belongs because of her instant success when she appeared four years ago in the A. H. Woods production of "Over Night." She did not appear in New York in that production, but became the idol of the entire United States as she toured it with her company. Miss Larrimore makes her bow to the screen in "The Devil's Daughter." Although she has always been urged to enter the pictures, since the managers everywhere knew that she would be a wonderful subject for the camera, she has steadily refused.

Associated Making Progress

D. L. Burke, of Los Angeles, Cal., owner and producer of the Deer Brand pictures, and vice-president of the Associated Film Manufacturers, Inc., arrived in New York last week from the Coast. After acquainting himself with the details of progress made by the new association at its headquarters in the World's Tower building, Mr. Burke said:

"From the stock of unanswered letters I note on Mr. Bard's desk, inquiring for our products, I am convinced that the public is not only grasping for new things in films, but is anxious to ally itself with new and better economic policies on the commercial side of the moving picture business; and from the contracts signed up by exchange men for both program and features I think the Associated will be a success from the very beginning. Our general manager, Arthur Bard, has done remarkably well in the short time he has been here. This is not my first visit to New York, as I have been here before and sold a good many negatives in the New York market, and I will always try to furnish the world with new and up-to-date ideas in the film business.

"Our producers are all old timers in the picture game, and men who have made a success of business life, and I see no reason why they cannot put the moving picture business on a higher plane than ever before. Our manufacturers have a number of old time stars, and as necessity requires they acquire new ones who are springing up every day."

Rotberg Joins Association

The Associated Film Sales Corporation has secured the services of Mr. Rotberg as general office man. In securing Mr. Rotberg it has succeeded in getting a man who is thoroughly experienced in the film business. Although only 25 years of age, Rotberg has had a very wide experience in this line. He started in the film business as an errand and rewinding boy, and from then on worked in film laboratories, and in the meantime attended and graduated from Pierce's Business College and Temple University in Philadelphia. He then secured a position with the National Film Company of Philadelphia as bookkeeper and systematized the entire office. When the Kriterion Film Corporation was formed, he was called to New York to systematize the exchange office. Mr. Keen of the Associated has now secured his services, and he is busy starting a system for the home office and will later take a trip through the country to cooperate with the exchangemen in reviewing and perfecting any lack of system that may be necessary.

Arthur Maude Joins Horsley

Arthur Maude has been added to David Horsley's staff of directors at the Los Angeles studios and is now at work on a three reel feature called "The Blood of our Brothers," starring Crane Wilbur. This is the second of Mr. Horsley's three reel subjects and will be released October 27 in the regular service of the Mutual program. It was originally planned to have Jay Hunt direct this picture but the plan had to be abandoned when Mr. Hunt was required in the East to cut and assemble the negative of "The Protest."

Arthur Maude is a cousin of Cyril Maude, the famous actor, and has a great deal of motion picture experience. Recently he was leading man, playing opposite Bessie Barriscale in "The Devil," "The Reward," "The Cup of Life," and other features.

Injunction Granted Selig

The Selig Polyscope Company was notified last Monday that a temporary injunction had been granted the Selig Company in its suit recently filed against the Mutual Film Corporation and the American Film Company, Inc. The Selig Company seeks to restrain the above mentioned concerns from distributing a play entitled "The House of a Thousand Scandals," which the Selig Company alleges is an infringement on the Selig Red Seal Play "The House of a Thousand Candles," written by Meredith Nicholson.

Lowry and Singhi Engaging New Talent

LUBIN PLANT REORGANIZED

FACING one another, at opposite sides of a spacious flat top desk in the inner offices of the Lubin Manufacturing Company sit the two men who predict and plan the destiny of that organization. On one side, upon entering the office, there will come the inevitable "How are you?" from F. W. Singhi, vice president of the Lubin Company, while in chorus you will always hear "Hello" from Ira Lowry, the treasurer of the company. Both Mr. Singhi and Mr. Lowry enjoy enviable reputations as men of rare business ability, as well as good fellows of the "glad to be known" style.

For the past four years under the direct guidance of Mr. Lowry, the Lubin Manufacturing Company has grown with tremendous strides. Prior to Mr. Singhi's re-association and election to office in the Lubin Company he was instrumental, in the earlier days, in no small measure in the great success which has been attained by Lubin. Now with his return to active duty there comes the combination of brains, the two successful young men working with a concentrated effort to make Lubin standardized as a trade mark name, meaning the best in motion pictures.

Recently Mr. Singhi and Mr. Lowry have scoured the theatrical and motion picture fields fortifying their organization with additional talent. Through their ardent efforts they have enlisted the service of Edgar Lewis, one of the most prominent of present day motion picture directors who will be remembered for having produced such successes as "Northern Lights," "The Littlest Rebel," "Captain Swift," "Samson," "The Nigger," "The Thief," "The Bondman," and numerous other successes. His first effort with the Lubin Company will be in the filming of William Vaughn Moody's great play of American western life "The Great Divide."

Messrs. Lowry and Singhi have also contracted with John H. Pratt, a director who produced "The Garden of Lies," "Shore Acres," "The Fighting Chance," "The Girl from Alaska," and whose initial production with the Lubin Company will be "The Rights of Man or War's Red Blotch," an original script in which Richard Buhler, the country famed portrayer of Shakespearean characters, will make his first appearance as a Lubin star in conjunction with Rosetta Brice. Mr. Pratt, Miss Brice and Mr. Buhler form a combination to be known as the Lubin Quality Trio.

Other players assembled under the Lubin banner by reason of flattering offers made by Messrs. Singhi and Lowry in their determination to secure none but the best, are House Peters, formerly of the Famous Players; Lasky, New York Motion Pictures and California Motion Picture Company; Mary Moore, the remaining member of the famous Moore family of photo players, including Matt, Tom and Owen; Carrie Reynolds, a light prima-donna, who has for the past seven years appeared with pronounced success; Edwin L. McKim who directs D. L. Don, a favorite comedian of the speaking stage; Warner Richmond, former leading man with the Kalem and Edison Companies.

Nor has the scenario department escaped the watchful eye of either Mr. Lowry or Mr. Singhi. Realizing the tremendous importance of this department they have entered into contract with a number of world famed playwrights and have secured for their scenario staff such well known photoplay writers as Mark Swan, the writer of "Her Own Money" and other Broadway successes; Anthony P. Kelly, who is responsible for the adaptations for photoplays of "The Thief," "Samson," "The Man of the Hour," "The Wishing Wing," "The Soul of a Woman," "Destiny," "Body and Soul" and other successes; and Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, the author of "Hager Revelly."

The reconstruction and repletion of the entire scenic department and wardrobe rooms are being completed under the competent and watchful eye of Allen Farnham, the new technical director for the Lubin Company.

The new western Lubin studio and factory at Coronado, Calif., recently opened, completes the chain of Lubin enterprises across the continent and marks a fitting completion to the work of intelligent reorganization that has been begun and is being successfully carried to completion by these two energetic minds of the film industry, Ferdinand Singhi and Ira Lowry.

VOGUE FILMS, INC., FORMED

New Comedy Producing Company Is Formed Under Famous Managing Director and Will Shortly Release a Mutual Program

Announcement is made of a brand new comedy producing company—Vogue Films, Inc.—which will have its first release on the Mutual program in November.

The advent of this new company is without undue noise or preliminary trumpeting, having completed its organization without a hint of the plan reaching the trade. Studios have been obtained in Los Angeles, and work is already in progress, although actual turning of the crank on the first picture will not take place until next week.

There will be no announcement as to comedians until later, except that they will be of the artistically eccentric kind, set in stories that have understandable plots. The resultant comedy situations will be legitimate ones—a departure from the often seen "laughs for laughs' sake" construction.

The managing director of the new organization is admittedly one of the master-producers of the country, and equally well known abroad. He will devote his entire time to Vogue Films, an assurance that the exceptional quality marking his work will be given to the forthcoming comedy releases.

"The releases which the Vogue Films, Inc. will give us will be valuable additions to the Mutual's $8,000,000 program," President John R. Freuler announces. "Comedies very new in every way are promised, bringing out elements of comedy which have been hitherto neglected in motion pictures. The leads will be known eccentric comedians."

The entire financing of the company was arranged in the West.

Harry I. Garson, manager of the Broadway Feature Film Company of Detroit, was in New York City last week and secured "The Magic Toy Maker" and the K & R Kiddie Series for Michigan.

William Duncan of Vitagraph

William Duncan can be summed up in few words: fine actor, splendid athlete, good sportsman. He is a Scotchman, having first seen the light at Lochee, near Dundee. His father and ancestors as far back as he can trace them, were quarry owners in the Trossachs. When Duncan, Senior, migrated to New York and became a contractor, Duncan Junior was ten years old. At school and college he excelled at all kinds of sports and particularly at boxing, wrestling, shot putting, weight lifting, and football. Later, he won several amateur contests and also boxed professionally.

William Duncan.

Mr. Duncan became physical director and manager of McFadden's Physical Culture Health Home and later established his own school of physical culture. He then accepted a vaudeville engagement, and later joined the Faupaugh stock company at Philadelphia. This led to numerous other stock and road engagements and finally he organized his own company and played all over the country for six years. He also wrote several plays which have been produced.

His first motion picture was done with the Selig Company in the West. In California he met Rollin S. Sturgeon at the Vitagraph studios at Santa Monica and it was mutually decided that the best place to put his trunks down was in the V. studios.

For one and a half years now he has been playing leads and much excellent work culminated in his wonderfully fine performance in "The Chalice of Courage" under Mr. Sturgeon's directions.

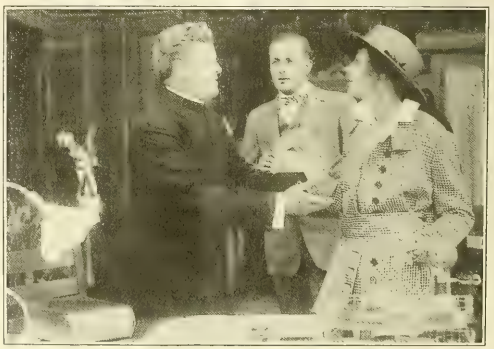
Mutual's New Publicity Plan

The Mutual Film Corporation is establishing newspaper co-operation as a boost to its publicity. This time it is in connection with the Gaumont Company's weekly split-reel animated cartoon release "Keeping Up With the Joneses."

"Keeping Up With the Joneses," as a newspaper cartoon has appeared in dailies all over the country for a long enough time to have established it firmly as a family possession among newspaper readers all over the country. The pictures of the ludicrous happenings to the Jones family, drawn by "Pop," are syndicated by the Associated Newspapers.

The Mutual has arranged with many of the papers carrying the "Jones" cartoons in cities where the animated pictures are to be shown, to reciprocate in the matter of publicity. A trailer attached to the cartoon comic bears the names of the newspapers in which "Keeping Up With the Joneses" may be seen. In return, the newspapers mentioned are giving space in their columns to the "Jones" family in motion, printing the names of theaters in which they may be seen and giving the funny pictures general reading publicity.

Fifteen prominent dailies of the larger cities have already expressed their willingness to co-operate with the Mutual publicity scheme. These are the Atlanta Journal, the Chicago Daily News, the New York Globe, Washington Star, Seattle Sun, Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph, Philadelphia Bulletin, Milwaukee Journal, Los Angeles Express, Kansas City Star, Dallas Times-Herald, Cincinnati Times-Star, Buffalo News, Boston Globe, and Omaha World-Herald. Others are signing up through the Associated Newspapers.



Unique Theater Advertising

The Palace Theater of Santa Barbara, California, has hit upon an exceedingly novel idea for not only advertising "The Diamond From the Sky," the North American serial which it is showing, but also the city of Santa Barbara itself. During the running of recent chapters of the serial story an envelope containing a bit of the negative was given each patron, the envelope bearing an announcement to the effect that the bit of negative showed a scene of the serial yet to be shown at the Palace, while within was found a card telling the recipient some facts about the number of pictures in a foot of film, and some other statistical data. The card also bears the suggestion: "Your photographer can make a print or an enlargement from the enclosed negative worth sending to friends. Tell them it was made in Beautiful Santa Barbara."

The idea of the souvenir originated in the fertile brain of Paul Gyllstrom, press agent of the Palace and when the idea was presented to President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company he readily granted his permission and gave instructions at the studio to have excess film negatives saved for the purpose.

Kleine's All Star Cast

George Kleine's film version of Owen Davis' "The Sentimental Lady" featuring Irene Fenwick, now in course of work, will contain as usual a supporting cast of finished artists. Richie Ling, Ben L. Taggart, Jack Devereaux, John Davidson, Frank Belcher, Thomas McGrath, Lila Barclay, Anna Reader and Della Connor are names long familiar to theater-goers.

A scene from Lubin's "Jim West, Gambler."

Board of Trade Already Busy

WILL FIGHT FILM "PIRATES"

THAT the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America will be an active and aggressive force and that it plans to lose no time in the carrying out of the objects for which is was formed was evidenced last week. The duping of films is one of the evils which the Board of Trade purposes to stamp out. When the indictments against the Chaplin Film Company were sprung, and the wholesale film piracy which it revealed, J. W. Binder, executive secretary, and William M. Seabury, general counsel of the board, immediately called upon the U. S. district attorney's office in the Department of Justice and offered to assist Harold S. Content, the assistant district attorney who has charge of the indictments against Abraham George Levi and Philip Lewis, in every way in the procuring of evidence and in the running down of other offenders who are known to be engaged in the duping of films. The Board of Trade did not sit down and pass resolutions. It got into the fight right away.

This is the first case of this kind which has been brought under the amended copyright law and Mr. Content feels confident that he will be able to secure convictions, as the amended law makes the offense a penal one and punishable by a term in prison, whereas heretofore a fine was the worst that an offender had to face.

With the Board of Trade enthusiastically behind him Mr. Content should be able to set such an example to film pirates and dupers of film that the evil will be speedily eliminated. The board also has data which it will lay before the United States District Attorney bearing on the same subject which will be of the utmost assistance to him in the prosecution of this and other cases which will be brought before him.

Though the Board of Trade has only been organized a few weeks, applications for membership have been pouring in in a way that gives every promise of overwhelming success for this long hoped for consolidator of the film trade into the compact body for which there has been so much need in the past, and which those who had the best interests of the film industry at heart had almost despaired of ever being able to bring about.

Manufacturers, exchangemen, supply houses, exhibitors, trade press and class six, popularly known as the "Big Six," including every branch of the film industry, are making inquiries every day and sending in their dues and initiation fees. And while no concerted effort had been made as yet to bring the trade into the organization, hundreds of applications have been flooding the office at 18 East Forty-first street, New York, all last week. Among the many may be cited D. W. Griffith and Rufus Steele. The latter is writing some of the most trenchant articles on the film industry and has taken a wonderful interest in the art.

But while it is the desire of the board that the organization shall be as large and embracive as possible, constant and careful watch is being kept on any and all applicants and the board reserves the right to reject all applications which in its estimation are not legitimate or satisfactory. Within a week the board will be in a position to start an active campaign for the dissemination of information about the objects and aims of the organization. Literature of this character is being prepared and will be sent out in a few days. There is every reason in the world why every honest person who is connected with moving pictures in any legitimate way should be a member of this Board of Trade and not a single reason why he shouldn't. The way has been made easy, the rates commensurate with the interest of every class and in no case are they onerous. The board has even seen fit to make several sub-divisions to meet conditions which were not thought of at the time of its organization.

ENLARGING LASKY STUDIO

Laboratory With Capacity for 600,000 Feet of Film Per Week Begun at West Coast Studios. New Stars Join Company.

With the return to Hollywood, Calif., recently of Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the Lasky Feature Play Company, and Jesse L. Lasky, president of the big concern, it became known that one of the reasons for their conferences in New York with Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the company, was the consummation of elaborate plans for the enlargement of the Lasky studios at Hollywood.

The largest addition to the plant, it is said, will be a great laboratory with capacity for 600,000 feet of film a week. All prints will be made in the west. Mr. DeMille, while in the east, visited the plant of the Eastman Company inspecting the new daylight system of developing, which will be inaugurated at the Lasky studios.

Victor Moore is at the Lasky studios to appear in Paramount Pictures produced by the firm. His next production will be "Chimmie Fadden Out West," second of a series of "Chimmie Fadden" productions. Another famous star who just arrived at the Lasky studios is Miss Edna Goodrich, who upon her first arrival in town took one long exhilarating breath of air, sat down, removed her hat and said that she was at last out of danger.

Miss Goodrich made the trip from London, England, where her house has been transformed into a hospital for British wounded, to Los Angeles with only a few days stop at New York en route. She was glad when she had reached her destination.

Mr. Lasky's return trip to Hollywood from New York was his twelfth roundtrip journey between these cities in less than a year.

D. W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the eighth month of its run at the Liberty theater, New York City, with the current week. It is the only attraction in the Broadway district that has continued through from last season without a break in the run, and is one of two attractions that held the boards last season which is still in evidence. This best exemplifies its popularity with the theater-going public.

Adele Farrington of American

Miss Adele Farrington has been engaged especially for the lead in "This Is the Life," the third of the famous "Buck Parvin" series from the pen of Charles E. Van Loan, now in production at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Co. Inc. Miss Farrington essays the role of Mrs. Addie Gribble, a lay person afflicted with an unconquerable ambition to shine as a motion picture star. The author has woven into the story a perfect cascade of gems from his storehouse of fun, and Director William Bertram has made an accurate and effective transition to the screen.

Adele Farrington.

As Mrs. Gribble, Miss Farrington insists that she be permitted to perform all sorts of remarkable stunts that her rise to stardom may be the more quickly accomplished. And the director lets her have her way, with the result that "This Is the Life" is filled with thrill after thrill. She is lowered from the roof of a burning building and left suspended in mid-air while flames and smoke encompass her and then forced to endure the ordeal of a good drenching from a hose in the hands of the local fire fighters.

Virginia Foltz Returns

Dashing Virginia Foltz, one of the stage idols of a few seasons ago, daughter of Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, the Los Angeles attorney, and now a prominent figure in the Los Angeles smart set, has been coaxed out of her retirement by the lure of the films and has joined Pallas Pictures. She makes her first appearance in "The Gentleman from Indiana" in support of Dustin Farnum.

Virginia Foltz, prior to her marriage two years ago to a well known realty man of California, was known from coast to coast for her "Pepita" in "Mme. Sherry," a part she played for three straight seasons. Prior to that she toured South America at the head of "The Merry Widow."

Miss Foltz is a native daughter of California. Her voice attracted early attention and after studying at Los Angeles College, a favorite institution with the fashionable families in the early days but since discontinued, she attended the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, which she followed with three years' study in Florence, Paris and other musical centers on the continent.

Virginia Foltz was one of the beauties with the famous Weber & Fields Company when that remarkable organization was at the zenith of its popularity, and figured importantly in "The Wizard of Oz," "Babes in Toyland" and other light operas. The return of Miss Foltz in the cast of "The Gentleman from Indiana" suggests the superior personnel which motion pictures are able to attract through offering women the opportunity to lead both a domestic and a professional life. Her advent into the moving picture colony occasioned much surprise among her many friends in Los Angeles society.

ODD TRIBUTE TO PARAMOUNT

Stanley Theater Company of Philadelphia Writes Request That Price of the Service Be Increased Twenty Per Cent

An indication as to the co-operation between the Paramount Pictures Corporation, its exchange and its exhibitors is evidenced in a letter received by William E. Smith, of the Philadelphia Paramount exchange, from Stanley V. Mastbaum, of the Stanley Company, one of the largest motion picture theaters in the East.

In behalf of the Board of Directors of the Stanley Theater Company, which operates the Stanley theater, Philadelphia, I wish to send to you their thanks for the kind consideration you have given this theater since the exhibition of the first release of the Paramount program. The Stanley theater has used this service exclusively and uninterruptedly since the beginning.

I would ask that you give the necessary instructions that our weekly price of pictures used at the above theater, obtained from your exchange, be increased twenty (20%) per cent, beginning October 1, 1915.

You may think this letter a little unusual, but it is done for the purpose of bearing a portion of the burdens of the producers of these fine pictures and to extend our share of help to them so that they will be able to do greater things for the Paramount program.

From present indications and your published list of future releases, I have no doubt the Board of Directors of the Stanley Theater will be able to write you very shortly another letter containing the same welcome news about an additional increase in price of your service.

(Signed) Stanley V. Mastbaum,
For the Directors of the Stanley Company.

It was only recently that Marcus Loew signed with the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company for 42 solid days bookings on Paramount pictures, stating to Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, and Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Company, that the integrity of Paramount was such that he did not care to even look at the pictures before they were played at his chain of houses.

Edison Finishes "The Magic Skin"

"The Magic Skin," the second Edison release on the Kleine Edison program scheduled for October 13, was given its finishing touches last week at the Edison studios in Bronx Park.

Everett Butterfield, a newcomer in the ranks of picture players, will be seen in the familiar role of the idealist and dreamer. Butterfield is now playing the juvenile lead in "The Last Laugh" at the Thirty-ninth Street theater, New York. He is an actor of unusually wide experience, having handled more than seven hundred different parts during his stage career. He is well remembered for his work in "Ready Money," "The Misleading Lady" and "The Man of the Hour." The leading feminine role in "The Magic Skin" has been placed in the competent hands of Mabel Trunnelle.

The dance which the Vitagraph Benevolent Association is to give on the evening of Wednesday, October 27, at McLoughlin's Bayside Casino, Sheepshead Bay, proceeds of which are to go in aid of the hospital promises to be a success.

Pictures the Drama's Salvation

A NEW POINT OF VIEW

THEATRICAL managers have from time to time attacked the motion picture industry upon the ground that motion pictures are the ruination of their business. President Richard A. Rowland, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, in an interview given this week in his offices in the Heidelberg Building, points out to these producers the error of their way, and predicts that motion pictures will eventually prove the salvation of the spoken drama.

"Motion pictures have done a great many things to the spoken drama which the wisest prophets failed to anticipate," said Mr. Rowland, "and they are on the verge of doing greater, bigger, farther reaching things than they have done before. To be specific, I believe firmly that the world was wrong when it said that motion pictures would ruin our spoken drama. That motion picture competition has temporarily crippled the speaking stage there is no doubt, and that this condition will obtain for some months to come I grant, but the future of the spoken drama and the financial rewards for theatrical managers lie with motion pictures. Motion pictures went to the stage, took away its celebrities and put them on the screen. What has been the result? These celebrities have become more celebrated and known to millions where before they were only known to thousands. Then motion pictures have taken talent from the spoken stage and made it so famous, and brought the millions so close to the personality of these players, that they can return to the spoken stage and be tremendous successes throughout the country because the publicity of pictures has made their names household words.

"Take Mme. Petrova. Who in the realm of the spoken drama had guessed the supreme genius for pantomime that the screen has brought out, developed and fixed in the minds of millions of men and women? Is it surprising that one of the two great theatrical managements wants to send her from coast to coast in a stage play? They know that the Petrova talents, developed on the screen, will fill theaters in all the cities of the country.

"Then there's Francis X. Bushman. Would any wise theatrical firm hesitate to place this sovereign of the screen as the star of a stage play if they could get him?

"Take for example little Mary Miles Minter. On the stage she was successful as a player who helped the star. The screen has developed her talents, crystallized her magnetism and concentrated her talents until she is known and loved by the millions in the United States and abroad. Good a play as it is, will the public come to see 'Emmy of Stork's Nest' for any other reason than that Mary Miles Minter is the star in it?

"The screen star means more to the public than the stage star, because, for some reason, which is too evident to need definition, there seems to exist an absolute friendship coupled with a well developed hero worship in the public's attitude.

"It is this that will give to the spoken stage later on the supreme pantomimist with such public followings that managers will be eager to present them. And the screen star, for less money, will play long enough each season on the spoken stage to satisfy his own natural craving for flesh and blood contact with his audiences, and the drama will have the material which pictures have taken away, but it will be bettered, developed and, above all, known.

"I believe the time will come when theatrical managers will be willing to pay to have their stars exploited in screen dramas, and when they reach that point it will be better business to go after the screen stars themselves.

"Motion pictures may be a trouble to the spoken drama at the present time, but it does not cheapen talent by developing it, and advertising it as nothing else in the world can develop and advertise. The screen will prove the salvation of the spoken drama at a not far distant time."

MARGUERITE CLARK RECEIVES

Management of Third Street Theater of Easton, Pa., Gives Reception in Honor of Famous Players Star

Under the auspices of the management of the Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., a huge reception was tendered Marguerite Clark, the Famous Players Film Company's star, and her director, J. Searle Dawley, on Tuesday night. The elaborate executive offices of the theater, which is the handsomest in the city, were exquisitely decorated with plants and myriads of cut flowers.

The most conspicuous feature of the affair, with the exception of the star herself, was a magnificent portrait of Miss Clark which, mounted in a gold frame, formed the key-note of the mural decorations. But even the painted idealization of the diminutive actress failed to compare in interest with the real Miss Clark, who was the vivacious center of an admiring throng.

Over two thousand gravure photographs of Miss Clark were distributed to the ladies who attended the function. The social set of Easton was prominently represented at the reception which was one of the largest gatherings in the history of the city.

Miss Clark was delighted with the action of the theater management, which had already extended every possible courtesy to her, and she was particularly gratified by the fact that many of the wealthiest and most prominent families of the prosperous little city were among those who assembled to do her honor.

"It is not so much the fact that they came to see me, though that in itself is very charming of them," declared the guest of honor, "but it is the unmistakable proof of the popularity of motion pictures with the most refined and best bred people in town, that particularly pleases me. If any motion picture theater in Easton had attempted to hold a reception for any film star a few years ago these people would have been insulted by the suggestion that they attend.

"The fact that they responded gladly to the invitation of the Third Street theater shows that the feature picture has won over the most recalcitrant members of society to the once lowly film show."

Miss Clark's presence in Easton was occasioned by the filming of "Still Waters," in which she is soon to star on the Paramount program. The splendid scenes obtainable along the Delaware in the neighborhood of Easton and the conveniently located canal, which parallels the river at this point, made the city an ideal headquarters from which to conduct the filming of this story of canal life.

All Easton has been agog over the presence of a company of motion picture players and there is no doubt that every inhabitant of the city, from the youngest to the oldest, who can muster the necessary admission price will see "Still Waters" when it is exhibited at the Third Street theater.

Marc MacDermott of Edison

Strikingly preeminent in ability when the now vast photodrama was in its infancy, the influx of men of attainments from the speaking stage to the screen has in nowise displaced Mr. MacDermott as an impersonator of rare worth. His face, strong in its suggested character strength of itself, makes a lasting impression, aside from the myriad roles he has enacted in the some six years he has continuously appeared in Edison film. Heroic in height and build, Nature has favored this character creator, enabling him to forcefully and convincingingly present roles which are denied many who might possess the experience, range and impersonating ability which Mr. MacDermott does.

Marc MacDermott.

There is something about his portrayals which suggest strongly the heroic figures whose names have come to be beacon lights in theatrical appreciation. Likely this intangible something springs from years of experience in the classic drama, in Shakespeare, in Suderman's plays, with such brilliant associates as Richard Mansfield, Mrs. Campbell, and Joseph Brooks—in roles which are unthinkable unless a player be possessed of instinctive refinement of feeling, flexible to an uncommon intellectual insight and breadth. And fully as much due, no doubt, to a man having lived every moment of an unusually well rounded out life which carried him, professionally, over Europe, all America, and Australia, as in the case of Mr. MacDermott.

Personality, without which no lasting screen success is attainable, invests every role he lives with a touch of character, even though, by chance, it should be the not liked "straight" role of the profession. Which touches upon the remarkable versatility that practically allows him to undertake everything from grimmest tragedy, sinuous villiany, heroic natures, to comedy of the altogether too rarely seen delightful kind.

Knickerbocker Release Changed

That there's many a slip in the producing game has been ably demonstrated in the instance of the Knickerbocker Star Feature, "The Dragon's Claw," which will be released October 13.

It was originally planned to release this feature near the end of September, and the picture was taken with that thought in view. Under the skillful direction of Stanner E. V. Taylor, the work progressed rapidly and well; the work of the cameraman ended and the cast was discharged. But while the negative was at the factory, disaster befell the feature, when over 1,200 feet of it was destroyed by fire. This has made necessary the re-engaging of the cast and the retaking of scores of scenes.

Fortunately, Knickerbocker Star Features, believing in preparedness, was not caught entirely off its guard, but had its next feature far enough under way to shove its release date ahead to September 29, the original release date of "The Dragon's Claw."

The name of the new feature is "The Girl from Tim's Place," a picturization of Charles Clark Munn's well-known novel of the same name. It is a story of the Maine woods and abounds in the most beautiful backwoods scenery. Following its policy of a star in each release, Knickerbocker Star Features presents Maude Fealy in the leading role of "Chip."

Kleine Adds More Comedians

The list of professional funmakers in George Kleine's comedy company headed by Bickel and Watson is growing steadily. Already it includes, in addition to Bickel and Watson, almost every type known to the American theater. Recently the famous vaudeville team of Crimmons and Gore were added, following the engagement of Snitz Edwards and Maxfield Moree.

In the opinion of many there is no better known team of slap-stick comedy comedians than Bickel and Watson, whose work in the early Ziegfeld "Follies" shows did so much to insure the success of Florenz Ziegfeld's unique entertainment. Their subsequent vaudeville tours were triumphal marches, as they have invariably been the laughing hit of any bill that bore their names.

Snitz Edwards, who has spent nearly thirty-five years on the stage, will be remembered for his work as the leading comedian in "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "The Silver Slipper," "The Man Who Stood Still," "High Jinks" and others. Edwards weighs just 102 pounds, making a splendid foil for Florence Morrison, who tips the scales at more than 300. Edwards has been repeatedwly referred to by newspaper critics as "the first of the eccentric German character comedians to popularize the style of German dialect so prevalent today."

Crimmons and Gore almost equal Edwards' record of years devoted to the amusement of mankind. Their own particular style of slap-stick is unlike the inimitable "music professor" of Bickel or the uproarious "tramp" of Watson, yet blends perfectly with the various other types of the company.

One of the recent acquisitions to this notable list of funmakers is Maxfield Moree, who can do a little Broadway "souse" or a vacant-eyed lunatic with equal ease and humor.

Reports from the various branch offices of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., indicate that more than the ordinary amount of inetrest is being shown in the recent Tom Terriss release, entitled "The Pearl of the Antilles." This picture, it will be recalled, was taken some months ago and is one of the two pictures which Mr. Terriss and a large American company of picture players filmed in Jamaica, West Indies.

Studio Deluged with Applications

JOB HUNTERS ABUNDANT

"MOTION picture stars get the mash notes and letters of approval," remarked E. D. Horkheimer, secretary and treasurer of the Balboa studio, recently while discussing some of the lighter sides of the business, "but it remains for the main office to receive the quaint and queer correspondence. The letters that we get every day are funnier far than the comic supplements or the jokes you hear on the stage." Before going into the moving picture producing business at Long Beach, California, Mr. Horkheimer was interested in a varied line of endeavor and he traveled far and wide, as a result of which he thought he had met all the different sorts of people the world holds. "But evidently I didn't," he said in continuing. "Look at that," and he pointed to a stack of letters a foot high, from all parts of the country. "They're from men, women and children who want to get into the pictures. Each one imagines that the future of the screen depends on his or her appearing on it. Of the hundred million people in our land, I believe that ninety per cent yearn to be picture players. It seems more like a plague that has gone over the country and infected everyone than anything else I know of. Boys and girls used to get stage struck, in former days. But now they're going picture crazy. Even grandmothers haven't proved immune."

E. D. Horkheimer.

"Here's one," Mr. Horkheimer went on, picking up a letter at random, "from a woman in Lula, Missouri. She says she is forty-three and feels that because of her big success in the local minstrels recently given by the Ladies' Aid, she could play such parts as Ruth Roland did in the 'Who Pays' series. To prove that she made good, a clipping from the town paper is enclosed.

"Then, here's another from a girl who says she waits table at a railway station restaurant in Florida. All the traveling salesmen have assured her that unless she will appear before the camera the world will miss the greatest acting since the days of Mrs. Siddons. She has just seen Jackie Saunders in 'Ill Starred Babbie' and is sure she could do as well, if not better. A modest young fellow tells us he won the Charlie Chaplin contest at amateur-night in his home town. As he is only making $4 a week driving a milk wagon, he feels he is wasting his time. This lad is willing to do imitations for us at the same stipend, as a starter, if Balboa will pay his transportation from Kennebec, Maine."

Long Beach, where the Balboa studio is located, attracts many wealthy tourists from all parts of the country. Some of them are retired farmers from the Central States. One would naturally not think them ambitious to shine in the films. But you never can tell about human nature. Not so long ago, one of them ventured into the Balboa office and asked to see the manager. Mr. Horkheimer, though a busy man, always makes it a point to listen to everyone, for that enables him to observe and get good types for productions.

This one was an Iowa hog-raiser. He confided to Mr. Horkheimer that he had enough money in the bank to keep himself and family in ease and a Ford. But to get down to business, and he grew confidential, he had written a piece for the pictures called "The Corn Husker's Revenge." Believing his caller merely wished to sell the scenario, Mr. Horkheimer asked him to leave it for inspection. But he was wrong. This man would take no chances. What he came for was to see about getting it produced and he wanted to play the leading part, using his wife, two daughters, a son and their husbands and wives and the grandchildren for the rest of the parts. He departed disappointed when told that the Balboa company could not consider such a proposition.

People with all sorts of schemes which they believe have important bearing upon the development of motion pictures are regular visitors at the studios. The inventor always makes demands on the manager's time. He may have a new camera, a celluloid substitute or a color process which is sure to revolutionize the film industry, from his viewpoint. These people have everything but money. The picture producing magnate is expected to furnish that.

"I have listened to some of the wildest proposals

ENGLAND SEES "ETERNAL CITY"

Hall Caine Sees Famous Players Adaptation of His Great Masterpiece and Cables Congratulations to Adolph Zukor

Hall Caine was perhaps the most interested spectator in the throng that crowded the Marble Arch Pavilion in London within the last fortnight, when the long-heralded screen adaptation of his "Eternal City," which was made by the Famous Players Film Company with Pauline Frederick as the star, was presented to the British public for the first time. At the close of the performance, which was warmly received, Mr. Caine cabled the feature producers congratulating them upon their unsurpassed production.

"Personally, I think it is a wonderful production," declared Mr. Caine to the London representatives of the company. "It follows my story with an exactness that is remarkable. The pictures of the 'Eternal City' convey just the idea and infuse just the atmosphere that I strove to impart to the book. I am delighted with the film and I only hope that those who see it in the picture theaters will derive as much pleasure from seeing it on the screen as I myself did."

"The Eternal City," which opened at the Astor theater in New York last April for its memorable run, was proclaimed at that time to be one of the foremost features ever produced in this country. The British press, upon the occasion of the initial presentation of the great drama, was no less enthusiastic in its praise.

imaginable," said Mr. Horkheimer in telling about his odd visitors. "Were we to begin to try out their filmless cameras, disappearing stages, thrill devices and actor-proof inventions, there is no telling where we would be in thirty days. The most of these people are dreamers of the wildest sort. Their theories have not even passd the experimental stage. Sometimes, when we let them down easy, they turn on us as ungrateful for not jumping at their offerings."

Cummings Risks Life in Air

Irving Cummings, the hero in "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American's serial photoplay, has won new laurels as a daredevil of the first magnitude. He has done stunts in automobiles for previous chapters of the big picture that were believed impossible, fallen from racing horses, battled for his picture life in raging waters and dared all other mundane terrors.

Now he has challenged the air and—

In a forthcoming chapter of the McCardell novel, Mr. Cummings as "John Powell" makes a sensational escape in an aeroplane, rising high above the hills near San Diego and circling through the air at a dangerous angle, just like a regular hero.

Of course where there is a hero there must of necessity be a villain. In this instance it is Blair Stanley, the character to which William Russell has offered a marvelous portrayal. The villain tampers with the machine in the hope that an accident might bring death to John Powell and clear the way for his assumption of the rights and titles invested in the Stanley name and "The Diamond from the Sky."

Unknowing, John Powell takes out the aeroplane. The preliminary tests accomplished, the great planes angle out carrying the heir to the Stanley fortune over the beach to the ocean. Then the work of the villain appears.

A strain develops in one of the big steel muscles of the air craft and there is a dramatic realization by Powell of impending danger, too late however to prevent disaster.

The aeroplane pauses in its flight, tips unsteadily, rights, falls and rises again to apparent safety, then turns almost over and begins to drop, drop, drop until it is nearly in the water. A tremendous effort carries it again into the air, but only for an instant. The steel muscle snaps and down to the earth plunges the heir to Stanley fame and fortune.

Mr. Cummings handles the aeroplane with an ease and abandon of a skilled aviator although he took only a three-week term at the student camp of the Curtiss aviation school on Angel island.

Essanay After Chaplin "Pirates"

Motography, last week, chronicled the arrest of Abraham George Levi, a moving picture broker of 145 West Forty-Fifth street, New York City, on a charge of violating the criminal section of the copyright infringement law in respect to an Essanay-Chaplin picture. Since then two seizures of fake films also have been made in Chicago and two in Duluth and others are expected to follow. George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, has engaged legal talent to hunt down all such cases and to prosecute them vigorously.

"We will continue to prosecute all the Chaplin film pirates until every one is driven out of the country," said Mr. Spoor. "We are making a fight for picture honesty and request that all who know of the faking of films notify us so as to assist in the work of driving out all of the dishonest dealers.

"It is of great importance not only to Essanay to have these men properly punished, but to all picture manufacturers and all exhibitors, as all must suffer from the operations of fraudulent dealers.

"Some so-called film exchanges also are offering to the public: Charles Chaplin in "The Mix-up" (4 reels), "Ambition" (4 reels), and "The Review" (3 reels). Charles Chaplin states that he never appeared in any of the above pictures, and never appeared in any four reel motion picture."

It is declared that some one, realizing the great demand for Chaplin films, has gathered together scraps of some of his earlier plays, and assembled them, to foist them upon an unsuspecting public.

The Essanay company has warned the exhibitors that these are not Essanay-Chaplin pictures and is notifying them so that they will not be misled nor be placed in the position of misleading the public.

J. Frank Glendon of Rolfe Studios

One of the latest additions to the ranks of motion picture leading men is J. Frank Glendon, who has been for a number of years a shining light upon the operatic, dramatic and vaudeville stage. He is a native of Shoteau, Montana, where his father was a methodist minister. Until the age of twenty he lived the life of a western boy, which includes a good deal of time spent on horseback, throwing a lasso and shooting with a rifle.

J. Frank Glendon.

From the red schoolhouse at Shoteau he went to finish his education at Wesleyan University in Helena, Montana. He studied vocal music at the college and became a local celebrity. He left town suddenly one day with the Roscian Opera Company, who needed a singer of basso roles very much. Thus started his stage career which has extended for a period of ten years. He continued singing in opera for several years until the opera business began to wane. He then took to playing leading parts in dramatic productions and stock companies. As the movies continued to get in their awful work on the stage drama he found refuge in vaudeville. In 1914 he plunged into the silent drama.

Mr. Glendon went back to vaudeville once more for a brief season. He finally decided to turn his back upon the stage and henceforth be a votary of the silent drama. His first feature engagement was to play the leading part in "The Salamander" for the B. S. Moss Company. He is at present playing the lead opposite Emmy Whalen at the B. A. Rolfe studios.

Pavlowa's "The Dumb Girl of Portici"

BY H. H. VAN LOAN

ONE of the biggest treats the moving picture audiences have had since the industry became a power in the amusement world is in store for enthusiasts when Anna Pavlowa, Russia's favorite daughter makes her screen debut in a picturization of Auber's famous opera, "Masaniello," which will be known in filmdom as "The Dumb Girl of Portici." This production will be released early in November and will be of great interest to everyone, for it has some of the most novel effects yet obtained in filmcraft. In addition to this, it will introduce Pavlowa to screen, not only proving to the countless numbers of Americans who have never seen her performances that she is a great actress, but showing that she is one of the most dramatic actresses of modern times. The part which Pavlowa will take in this great production is the role of "Fenella," the dumb girl of Portici, and one which is most difficult for a dramatic actress to portray. It is a most peculiar role and the opera, although given at the old Academy of Music several times, has lain dormant for years because of the inability of those who controlled the rights to find a prima donna whose ability was equal to the role. For this same reason it was given but one performance at the Metropolitan Opera House, after which the management placed the manuscript on the shelf, where it has rested ever since.

Mme. Pavlowa.

To play the role of Fenella requires not only that the singer be a dramatic actress but a dancer as well. In the past it was usually found that the actress who could portray the dramatic end of the role could not dance. To add to the difficulties the part requires perfect pantomime work, for the leading character is that of a dumb girl.

So it is not difficult to understand why the opera has been seen so few times on the American operatic stage. While some of the best prima donnas of the past have balked at the role, yet it is just the character for one possessing such remarkable ability as Pavlowa.

The great ambition of Pavlowa, since she was a small girl, was to play the part of Fenella. She is peculiarly fitted for just such a part, for her own work is pantomime; she is the supreme danseuse, and, since she began her work before the camera, has shown to those in charge of the production that she is a remarkable dramatic actress.

Phillips Smalley, the husband of Lois Weber, the author of the scenario and the directress of the picture, says: "I think Pavlowa is going to show to the world that she is one of the greatest dramatic actresses of the present day. She has surprised and astounded us all by powerful acting she has done in some of the scenes, and when the picture is released we are going to introduce a new Pavlowa to the world —a Pavlowa who is equally as good an actress as she is a dancer."

The production has been a little over two months in the making, and was staged in Chicago, at the Sans Souci Gardens and at Universal City, California.

The firm which was fortunate enough to lure the great dancer to the screen is the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. The contract was signed by Carl Laemmle, president of the organization, and Pavlowa in New York City, after she had made a journey to Universal City for the purpose of seeing for herself just what facilities the Universal had for staging a production of such tremendous size as "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

It was stipulated that the "interior" scenes were to be taken in Chicago, while the dancer was fulfilling her regular engagement at the Midway Gardens. Then, after her annual engagement was finished, she was to go to Universal City, where the "exterior" scenes were to be filmed.

The contract was lived up to by all parties concerned. The Universal built a temporary studio in Chicago in the Sans Souci Gardens which adjoin the Midway Gardens, at a cost of $20,000. Here Pavlowa spent the intervening hours when she was not playing at the Midway, appearing in the scenes which were to piece together one of the greatest films ever shown on the screen. She arrived at the studio early and remained ofttimes until a few minutes before the curtain arose on her ballet. Pavlowa's interest in the camera and the production was most keen and in enthusiasm she resembled a child with a new toy. The work she found delightful, in fact so much so, that she has signified her intention of doing another picture in the near future.

A big scene from Universal's production of "The Dumb Girl of Portia."

When Pavlowa's engagement at the Midway Gardens was finished she journeyed to Universal City in a special car, with her entire company and the Universal players. For five weeks she devoted every hour of the day to completing the film, and sometimes worked late into the night, in order that her director might be able to start a new scene the next day.

The arrest of Fenella.

The picture was completed within the time limitation and September 18 found Anna Pavlowa on her way to Chicago to start rehearsals for her regular annual tour.

It is interesting to note that "The Dumb Girl of Portici" was picturized for the screen by a woman: directed by a woman and portrayed by a woman. Lois Weber found it no simple task to prepare this opera for the screen and the difficulties which confronted her from time to time would have discouraged one of less persistency than this able woman.

The expenditure on this production, it is said, was prodigally lavish, and it is estimated that fully $300,000 will have been spent before it is given its first exhibition. In addition to Pavlowa's big company of almost fifty high priced dance artists, there will be a multitude of supernumeries and a number of costly principals. The finest "sets" were used, some of which cost $10,000, and when it is considered that they only appear in the picture for an instant, and have no direct bearing on the action of the piece, an idea may be gained of the extent to which the Universal has gone to give the public a production worthy of so famous a woman.

The incomparable Pavlowa has never been seen in anything on the legitimate stage that has equalled this production, and she says the first showing of this picture will mean almost as much to her as did the night she appeared in the Metropolitan Opera House, five years ago.

Milwaukee's Odd Theater

What the Little theater in New York, the Little theater in Philadelphia, and the Fine Arts theater in Chicago, are to the public, in presenting high class dramas, so the New Toy theater is to the people of Milwaukee in presenting the photodrama.

This beautiful and cozy house which seats but 400, will present only two shows a day, a matinee and a night performance, including an intermission, which will run for about two hours and a half.

One of the best symphony orchestras in Milwaukee has been engaged to play for all the productions. The house will show Big Four features, having contracted for the entire year's releases of that company. The production chosen for the opening is Essanay's much-talked-of play, "The Blindness of Virtue." The house has for its patrons, only the most exclusive set of Milwaukee.

Another quality theater which V. L. S. E. had the distinction of opening during the past week, and where V. L. S. E. features will be shown exclusively, is the Strand, Duluth, Minn., formerly the Orpheum, devoted to vaudeville. This theater will be conducted along the lines of the theaters of the same name in New York and Chicago. There will be an orchestra of twelve pieces and the most effective staging of all productions shown. The christening production was the famous feature, "Graustark," followed for the second half of the week by "The Juggernaut."

Signs Flora Zabelle

Flora Zabelle, star of many successful musical comedies and a stage favorite popular throughout the country, who made her greatest hit in "The Red Widow," the celebrated fun-feast by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, has been engaged by the Famous Players Film Company to make her screen debut in the title-role which she created on the stage, in the feature adaptation of that comedy, to be the Paramount Picture of November 11. Miss Zabelle will be supported on the screen by several other members of the original cast of this popular production. So singularly clever was the work of George D. Mack in the comic role of Popova and of John Hendricks in the part of Baron Scorpiof, the chief of Russian police, that the Famous Players decided the photoplay would be incomplete unless these inimitable comedians could be secured for the purpose of repeating their clever performances on the screen. Another important acquisition to the screen cast of this notable subject in Denman Malley, who has appeared for the last five years in important comedy roles with Lew Fields, and who has been engaged for the role of Cicero Hannibal Butts, the characterization originated on the stage by Miss Zabelle's husband, Raymond Hitchcock.

Flora Zabelle.

Metro's "The Yellow Dove"

"The Yellow Dove," a big novel which is the latest from the pen of George Gibbs, and which is to be published by D. Appleton and Company during the present month, has been accepted from the manuscript by the Metro Pictures Corporation for production on the screen, and Francis X. Bushman will be the star.

TRIANGLE BILL PLEASES

Second Week's Offering at New York Knickerbocker Surpasses Opening Program in Opinion of Society Folks Who Throng Theater

The opening performances of the second Triangle week at the Knickerbocker theater, New York, were witnessed by gatherings as noteworthy as those which characterized the first week. Among those seen Sunday afternoon or night, October 3, or Monday evening, October 4, were Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Count Bettini, Mrs. Gardiner Brown. Harry E. and Roy Aitken, Charles O. Baumann, Adam and Charles Kessel, Ingalls Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Harris, Miss Debaril, Hamilton Holt, Miss Holt, H. J. Whigham, J. A. McKay, Mr. and Mrs. James Montgomery Flagg and many others. Monday evening is developing at the Knickerbocker as Fashion Night. All the balcony loges were occupied, and many beautiful costumes were worn.

Eddie Foy, the seven little Foys and Polly Moran

The bill, it is universally agreed, surpassed the first week's entertainment in all-around excellence. Head and shoulders above the other offerings in sheer emotional power stood Thomas H. Ince's wonderful filming of a Civil War story, "The Coward," in which Frank Keenan and Charles Ray played the principal parts. The construction of this piece is along the best lines of classic emotional drama, not an unnecessary or episodical scene, strongly marked characters, closely knit plot, and progressive rise to a terrific climax and then down to a poignant and tear-compelling denouement. The climax comes when Keenan, who has replaced his cowardly son on the battlefield, unwittingly shoots and wounds the boy who has just redeemed himself by an act of reckless gallantry. The lad's fall from a galloping horse into a river made the spectators fairly gasp with astonishment. Young Ray, in his wonderfully sincere portrayal of the youth, fairly shared honors with the star.

"The Coward" deservedly has the place of honor on the bill, winding up a program that begins with Eddie Foy in "A Favorite Fool," and includes the Griffith-supervised "Old Heidelberg" and the Sennett-Hitchcock farce, "Stolen Magic." "A Favorite Fool"

Raymond Wells and Dorothy Gish in "Old Heidelberg" turned out to be one of the best filmizations of circus life recently attempted. Mr. Foy and his seven children were congenially cast, while Polly Moran was equally happy in the role of mother of the young brood. The heavy part was well played by Charles Arling, and Mae Busch had an interesting bit, that of a circus-struck girl. As to "Old Heidelberg," with its delightful German atmosphere, spectacular showing of court and university life, and attractive love story, that Griffith product, directed by John Emerson, was voted by most of the women folk extremely pleasing. There are some stirring battle scenes in it as in "The Coward," but these in "Old Heidelberg" are mostly interludes or cut-backs and the main interest centers in the romance of the handsome young prince acceptably played by Wallace Reid and the simple "Kathie" girlishly set forth by Dorothy Gish. Others who distinguished themselves in it were Raymond Wells as a duelist, Carl F. Fornes as the prince's tutor, and J. W. McDermott as the prince's pal. "Stolen Magic," a farcical tale of snakes and a magic book imported from India, exhibited Raymond Hitchcock to even happier advantage than his first week's offering, "My Valet." Mack Sennett and Mabel Normand were towers of strength to the star, and the minor parts were all well done.

Scene from Triangle Film Star production "The Coward"

Conspicuous among the third week's pictures at the Knickerbocker will be Thomas H. Ince's "The Golden Claw," with Bessie Barriscale as the star. Mr. Ince will have to do wonders to surpass "The Coward," but he promises some interesting surprises.

Douglas Fairbanks returned East Sunday night, October 3, from Los Angeles, where he had been screened in "The Lamb" and "Double Trouble" for the Griffith studio. On Monday he was at Riverdale, in and about the Triangle studio on the outskirts of New York, getting ready to work in his new comedy vehicle, "His Name in the Papers." The young star took very modestly the chorus of praise for "The Lamb," which scored such a tremendous hit at the Knickerbocker opening.

Carlyle Ellis has been appointed western press representative of the Triangle. On Monday, October 4, he started for the Coast where, for the present, he will make his offices at the Triangle branch exchange in Los Angeles.

Breese Hazards Life

Edmund Breese, the eminent dramatic actor, whose popularity has been growing ever since he began "roughing it" in the adventurous characters he has portrayed in the Popular Plays and Players of Metro picturizations of Robert W. Service's stirring poems, beginning with "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," has scored again in the adaptation of "The Song of the Wage Slave," now scheduled for release in the Metro program. The picture teems with thrilling episodes and shows Mr. Breese at his best. In "The Song of the Wage Slave" Mr. Breese is called upon to exemplify many occupations that are absolutely hazardous in their undertaking. His adventures carry him down into the mines, where he swings a pick with "the best of 'em"; next he is a lumberjack, superintending the dynamiting of a log jam; again he is a prospector flirting with death on the ragged edge of a dangerous cliff. Breese is thoroughly at home in these heroic parts, his characterization of them being an artistic triumph. His sturdy nature and robust physique stand him in good stead, for few actors could possibly withstand the hardships or accomplish the feats he does, in the picturization of the Service poems. The fine highlights and shadows of emotion are faithfully portrayed by this capable actor, who possesses the rare gifts essential for an adequate presentation of the chief character in Service's powerful poem.

Edmund Breese.

New Diffuser System

The completion of the big new stage at Universal City raises the area of stage space at those studios to a point somewhere between three and three and one-half acres.

This latest of the stages to be constructed at the Universal's Pacific Coast studios is regarded as the last word in picture stages. Built with a concrete foundation, over which is laid a hard pine floor and covered with the most up-to-date diffusing system, by means of which the stage can be transformed from an exterior, or sun-lighted studio, to an interior electric lighted one, it is regarded by Los Angeles film men as perhaps the most modern picture stage in use among the western companies.

The stage is nearly three hundred feet long by 125 feet in width and is one of five studios at present in use by the twenty-five companies at work at the picture city.

"Post" Admits Its Error

S. J. Vaughn, representing the Gaumont company, mailed to the Saturday Evening Post, a recent article, which appeared in MOTOGRAPHY from the pen of S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., in answer to an article that had appeared in the Post, on the subject of "Trick Photography." Mr. Vaughn sent the story to the Post without any comment whatever.

Last week Mr. Vaughn received a reply from one of the editors of the Post, reading as follows:

Thank you very much for allowing us to see Mr. Hutchinson's answer to our recent article, "Trick Photography." We are extremely desirous that no inaccuracies or misstatements should find their way into the columns of The Saturday Evening Post, and when they do, we are glad to have the matter called to our attention.

Calvert on Vacation

E. H. Calvert, one of Essanay's leading directors, has gone on a hunting and fishing trip to the Ozarks, in Southern Missouri, after several months of strenuous work. Mr. Calvert is an expert with the gun, having been one of the best marksmen in the army. A West Point man, he retired as a captain after fourteen years service, to go on the stage. Mr. Calvert spent the summer at Chattanooga, Tenn., where he directed the series of "Tish" photoplays by Mary Roberts Rinehart as well as several other photoplays, in some of which he himself took the leads. He then went to "The Pines" near Waukegan, Ill., where he directed "The Man Trail," Essanay's six-act photoplay taken from the recently published novel by Henry Oyen. Since then he directed "The Circular Path" and "The Outer Edge," two three reel dra- has featuring Henry B. Walthall and Warda Howard, as well as several other plays.

Pathe Director Pleased with Reviews

George Fitzmaurice, whose Gold Rooster play "Via Wireless" was recently released by Pathe, has been reading with much interest the many complimentary reviews which have been written about the picture. One thing in particular has interested him, almost without exception the critics have praised the remarkable scenes in the gun foundry, showing the casting of a gun. "The highest compliment I could get," says Fitz, "those foundry scenes were all taken in the Pathe studio in Jersey City."

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7039

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.

Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 16, 1915 Number 16

The Decision Against the Patents Company

THE United States District Court has declared, through Judge Dickinson, that the Motion Picture Patents Company is a combination in restraint of trade. At least one of the defendants in the case is quoted to the effect that no appeal will be taken, and that the company will be dissolved.

The Patents Company was organized seven years ago on the assumption that ownership of patents constituted legalized monopoly—a view held at the time by many eminent authorities. It is safe to say that a considerable number of corporations founded on similar lines are operating in various industries. The rejection of the theory by the court therefore gives this case extraordinary commercial importance, and it would be interesting to see it carried before the Supreme Court for final adjudication.

But interesting as the decision may be to industry in general, we must not overestimate its effect on the business it directly affects. The "independents," to resurrect a rather passe term, are naturally pleased; the principle they contended for has won. It means an open film market for the exhibitor; but that advantage most exhibitors have enjoyed for some time. It means that the theater owner no longer need pay a "royalty" to the patent owners involved in the case; but no theater owner has been required to pay such a tax for a long time.

Altogether we cannot see that the decision as it stands has any practical effect on the industry. Whatever influence it has will be one of those "psychological" affairs. The case lasted over two years—long enough so that the acts condemned had been abandoned in the expediency of natural evolution long before the decision was rendered.

The companies and individuals actually named in the decision will, of course, be put to some inconvenience. This is regrettable, as is anything tending to divert anyone's attention from the major work. But at the worst, the inconvenience will be an office affair merely; a labor of rearrangement, of redistributing interests. The exhibitor will know little about it and care less.

We hardly think even the old-time enemies of the Motion Picture Patents Company will feel in their hearts that any vicious ogre has been slain. To be sure, they will probably make advertising capital out of it. That is their privilege, and doubtless good business. But the company was formed at a time when a stern hand was needed, and firm regulation was the order of the day. Even the court says:

"We would not be justified and would certainly have no wish to deny the presence of the very laudable motives, which defendants avow in their answer, some of which were to gratify the desire to allay bickerings and recriminations among themselves, to advance and improve the art, to protect the morals of the public, and, as they frankly admit, to make money for themselves.

"Certain it is that the end and purpose of the plan was to dominate and control the trade in all the accessories of the art and, in order to assure this, to control the entire motion picture business. We are driven to this conclusion, not only because that is the plain meaning of what they did, but also because they themselves categorically declare the latter to be the imperative need of the business and one which they alone could supply. The need was for a single directing and regulating head.

"This extended even to a censorship of what was shown. The United States could not, and the states would not, interpose for the purpose of regulation, and the defendants claim the credit of having performed this neglected duty of the state. In doing all that was done the defendants not merely deny the illegality of either end or means, but also lay claim to commendation."

Obviously this is not intended as a eulogy of the defendant, but merely as evidence of combination. Nevertheless, it bears out the thought that, in the mysterious processes of evolution, the Motion Picture Patents Company performed an important and not wholly undesirable function. Even the antagonism it developed in the days of its greatest activity has acted as a spur to prosperity. It has served its purpose, and we believe a useful one. Now, if it be decided not to appeal the case, it can dissolve without serious injury to anyone, and enjoy the spiritual immortality of a vigorous maker of industrial history.

Join the Fighters

"WE did not sit down and pass resolutions—we got right into the fight." The words, savoring strongly of John Paul Jones and Admiral Farragut, emanate from the office of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Incorporated, and they indicate exactly the way the new organization is going after things inimical to the industry—of which there are a plenty.

The Board of Trade looks good. Its active men are live wires, eager to use their potential energy. We think every motion picture man eligible to membership should get in; not because the board needs him, but because he needs it.

The new organization has already assisted greatly in handling the duping situation. It is about to tackle censorship and legislation. Its committees are full of ability and fight, and they are going to make things hum. A year of this activity will make considerable difference in the conditions the industry has to meet.

We are plugging for the Board of Trade because we admire its purposes and the energy it already displays. We think it offers the motion picture man, whatever his classification, the best chance he ever had to fight all the things that are spoiling for a fight. No need to list what they are; we can all think of a dozen conditions that ought to be changed—that must be changed. The Board of Trade can do the job. Get in with it now, before the real fun starts, and help to tear things loose. Get up a little interest in the work and we'll make these biased legislators and silly censors and little grafters think of burned fingers when they hear the word "film."

The organization is what you need. Get behind and push.

The Exhibitor's Creed

I believe in giving my patrons a square deal. I believe in advertising, first, last, and all the time. I believe in returning cuts, slides and photographs to my exchange promptly. I believe that prices should be maintained. I believe in fresh paint and soap and water. I believe in keeping my piano in tune.

Just a Moment Please

Expect next Monday will see all the lads at their desks as usual, now that Mayor Thompson has clamped the lid on Chicago and the saloons will all be closed over the Sabbath day.

—

Personally, we should worry about the lid.

—

Since we always take cigars.

—

But there's some as will.

—

A round-robin signed by Ken McGaffey of Lasky's; Ken O'Hara of Inceville; Bennie Ziedman of Fine Arts; Frederick Palmer of Keystone; M. G. Jonas of Universal; H. O. Stechhan of Balboa; J. C. Jessen of the M. P. News; C. W. Pope of the Morning Telegraph, and Clarke Irvine of the M. P. World, has reached us from the Cafe Bristol, 4th and Spring streets, Los Angeles, conveying best wishes and informing us that the Scream Club was then in session. The meeting seems to have been an important one for the following mail brings us a full set of Misrules and Irregulations as compiled by Screamer Richard Willis. If you don't believe the club is a Scream, give a look at its dope sheet. Willis writes:—

SEEING THAT WE ARE A DISUNITED AND UNORGANIZED ORGANIZATION—SO TO SPEAK—I SUGGEST THAT IT IS INADVISABLE THAT WE SHOULD HAVE EVERYTHING IN IMPROPER ORDER AND TO THIS UNDESIRABLE END I HAVE NO PLEASURE IN SUBMITTING SOME MISRULES AND IRREGULATIONS WHICH I PROPOSE, SECOND AND CARRY UNANIMOUSLY.

1—THE PRESIDENT HAS NO AUTHORITY WHATEVER AND THE OFFICERS NO RIGHTS.
2—NO OUTSIDERS, SUCH AS OWNERS, DIRECTORS, ARTISTS OR CAMERA MEN ADMITTED EXCEPT BY UNANIMOUS INVITATION. THIS CLUB MUST BE KEPT SELECT.
3—TO —— WITH KNOCKING.
4—NO BAD LANGUAGE, ALOUD.
5—DUTCH TREAT AT ALL TIMES; DIVVY UP FOR VISITORS. IF A SCREAMER IS HARD UP HE GETS IN ON THE DIVVY; NO FUDGING.
6—THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE CLUB SHALL BE IN THE SCREAMER SAINT'S PALATIAL OFFICES IN THE WRIGHT-CALLENDER BUILDING. THE MEMBERS MUST TAP (KNOCKING BEING TABOO) BEFORE ENTERING; THE OFFICES BEING EMINENTLY RESPECTABLE.
7—WE SHALL NOT SAY TO EACH OTHER'S FACE WHAT WE MENTION BEHIND EACH OTHER'S BACK.
8—SLINGING THE BULL IS ALWAYS IN ORDER.
9—OUR PASS-WORD SHALL BE "THE TRUTH IS NOT IN US."
10—OUR MOTTO SHALL BE "AUT SILLIER AUT NUTTUS."
11—OUR CLUB SONG SHALL BE "MY STUDIO, 'TIS OF THEE."

—

THAT RIDING ACADEMY.

We lamp by the press sheets that the Famous Players have taken over a well known riding academy for its temporary studios. Gosh we hope none of the "talent" come down with the Charley Horse in the new surroundings.

—

Odds of 8 to 5 that Lloyd and Bennie are already "feeling their oats."

—

OUR BURG.

The big show at the Studebaker Opry House come off as planned last Sat. Nite and all the bon ton and elite of Our Village was there. Congratulations Harry on the Opning.

Bill Selig, our w. k. and pop. fellow townsman has hopped the rattler for that sunny Calif.

Ralph Bradford of Mpls and thereabouts was lamped on Main St. on Sat last, he having come on for the big doings of Sat nite.

Ben Beadell and Frank Hough was hosts to a squad of their friends at Walt Bermingham's pop. opry house on Mich Ave on Tues a. m. of this wk. the occasion being the first showing of the Edison fillim "Vanity Fair."

—

Speaking of chauffeurs, have you ever lamped Ed Gaylor wheeling his chariot up to the curb preparatory to dismounting? We witnessed the spectacle on Clark street tother day and take it from us Ed is a regular Barney Oldfield. N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"A Black Sheep"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

OTIS HARLAN, the well known stage comedian, makes his film debut in Selig's five-reel picture, "A Black Sheep," which is to be released through V. L. S. E. on October 18. The story of "A Black Sheep" was written by Charles

The "Black Sheep" discovers his cousin, Percy, at Ada's house.

Hoyt and the production of the picture was given to T. N. Heffron, who obtained some splendid results in excellent photography and very good interior settings.

This five-reel photo comedy is chock full of humorous situations and the sub-titles which have been cleverly compiled are very successful as "laugh instigators." One instance of the comedy which is apparent throughout the picture is when Goodrich Mudd or "Black Sheep," borrows twenty-five cents off the sheriff, then orders drinks for the by-standers and after the drinks are gone "Black Sheep" turns to the sheriff, returns the twenty-five cents and then states that he always pays his honest debts first. Supporting Otis Harlan as Goodrich Mudd, known as "Black Sheep," are Rita Gould as Lida, a burlesque queen, Miss Grace Darmond as Ada Steele, Mudd's cousin, Jack Rollins as Percy Vere, another cousin of "Black Sheep," John Charles as Jarvis Smith, an attorney, and James Bradbury as manager of the burlesque troupe. All of these people do excellent work and are well cast.

Goodrich Mudd, known in Tombstone as "Black Sheep," meets and falls in love with the queen of a burlesque company and the first night they are there he wines and dines Lida, the burlesque queen. The same night Tombstone's bad man steals the receipts of the burlesque company's night's performance and as a result the company are stranded in the hotel. Their trunks and clothes have been taken from them and they have no clothing but their performance clothes.

About this time a lawyer comes to Tombstone looking for "Black Sheep," and when he sees him he informs him that he is heir to $2,000,000, but to secure the fortune he must first live at the Mudd mansion in Chicago; secondly acquire culture; thirdly place a wreath on his grandfather's grave; fourthly marry his cousin, Ada Steel, within ninety-nine days; fifthly if Ada turns him down marry someone else in ninety-nine days, and sixthly, if he declines these terms the fortune goes to his other cousin, Percy Vere.

"Black Sheep" takes up his abode at the Mudd mansion in Chicago and with him he brings all of his friends. He manages to acquire culture and one of the most humorous moments in this production is when he comes back to call on his friend clothed in his "culture." After some trouble and being mixed up with two lady crooks and held prisoner by them Mudd arrives on the night of the ninety-ninth day just in time to marry Lida, the burlesque queen, for his cousin Ada has turned him down and the fortune is theirs and his "culture" so called, is forgotten.

"Bred in the Bone"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A SPLENDIDLY produced, well rounded story on an interesting theme is offered exhibitors in "Bred in the Bone," the Reliance Mutual Master-Picture, scheduled for release the coming week.

Paul Powell is the director of the production which is in four reels and Dorothy Gish and William Hinckley head the well-balanced cast. Miss Gish is unusually good as Mercy, the little Quaker maid born with a love for the stage, and rises to dramatic heights in the big scenes of the last reel when she is attacked by Al Filson, as the manager of the company in which she rises to stardom.

Mr. Hinckley makes a likeable sort of chap of the Quaker boy who loves Mercy, but is given no very great opportunity to display his real ability. W. E. Lawrence, as the leading man of the troop of players, has a splendid role and grows better and better as the film progresses. His best work is done in the drunken scenes in the last reel when, intoxicated and enraged, he sets forth to wreck vengeance on the manager he knows intends to bring harm to the little star of the troop. After shooting the manager Lawrence registers the varying emotions in a wonderful manner and after sobering up long enough to see Mercy safely restored to the arms of her Quaker sweetheart, he brazenly calls up police headquarters, tells of the murder and then, overcome by strong drink, sinks into a drunken stupor.

That the potential traits of heredity will generally run their natural course, before environment and education can fully manifest a corrective and salutary effect, is the theme of the story and the producer gets it over in a most convincing fashion.

Harvey, the "heavy," and Bella, the "ingenue," of a fly-by-night troop of players, quarrel and the heavy flees, leaving his wife behind to care for their tiny babe as best she can. When a few days later the troop "busts" Bella decides to abandon her baby and with her scanty remaining funds makes her way to another city where there seems a possibility of her securing a position. Accordingly the babe is abandoned on the doorstep of a childless old Quaker couple, and upon being found, is taken in and adopted.

Years later, Mercy, the foundling babe, is attracted by the sight of a visiting troop of thespians and the love of the stage which is bred in her bones, leads her to the stage entrance of the little village theater just in time to see one of the company discharged. She immediately applies for and is given the place in the company, and that night departs with the troop. Her departure well nigh breaks the heart of the old Quaker couple who have grown to love her, and the Quaker lad next door who likewise worships her.

The girl returns home.

As time passes Mercy finds success on the stage and eventually becomes a star, though in signing new contracts she always insists upon a position being found for the leading man of the first troop, who was the one responsible for her being given a chance "on the boards." A crafty manager, who admires Mercy's growing beauty, induces her to sign a new contract at a really exhorbitant salary, for the purpose of placing her under obligation to him. Mercy's maid, an aged woman of the stage herself is taken ill one day and Mercy cares for her with real tenderness. A letter received from Mercy's Quaker sweetheart results in the maid's learning that the newly created star is her own daughter, for the maid is none other than the mother who deserted Mercy years before.

Jealously guarding her secret, the maid permits Mercy to lavish love upon her and the day before she dies writes to the Quaker boy that Mercy is in danger and he had best come to the city after her. That very day the manager visits Mercy alone in her apartments and attempts to take advantage of her. The leading man of the company, drunk with liquor and rage against his manager, appears at that moment and shoots Mercy's unwelcome caller. The Quaker lad appears a few seconds later and the leading man insists upon his taking Mercy back to the country, where she is warmly welcomed by her foster parents, while he calmly calls up police headquarters, describes the murder and then falls over in a drunken stupor.

"Vanity Fair"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

WITH Mrs. Fiske impersonating Thackeray's immortal character of Becky Sharpe comes the elaborate Edison production of "Vanity Fair," for release on the Kleine-Edison Feature Service program. The time consumed and the expense incurred in creating an atmosphere of old England has been liberally rewarded, for the costumes and sets are imbued with the finery and elegance of the time.

It goes without saying that Mrs. Fiske is superb in her farfamed role of Becky Sharpe, registering the satire, frigidity, and selfishness of that woman in an entirely screenable manner, and it is pleasing to note that the cinematograph is again the means of perpetuating a famous character in the history of the drama.

The great ball on the eve of the Battle of Waterloo.

In constant contrast to Becky, is the amiable, pure, and ever-trusting Amelia Sedley, (Helen Fulton) into whose home the orphaned Becky is invited. Through Amelia's family, Becky ascends in the direction of exalted social heights, Rawdon Crawley being her final prey, the successful victim of her matrimonial ventures.

At first, when Sedley loses his fortune, the engagement between Amelia Sedley and George, the son of old Osborne, is severed at once by the latter, who will not have his daughter marry into poverty, but through the unremitting efforts of Captain Dobbin, the malice of Osborne is overcome and George marries Amelia. Thereupon Becky sets out for Queen's Crawley, marries Rawdon Crawley and plunges into the thick of her wild career.

When George dies upon the battlefield of Waterloo, he is still faithful to Amelia, although he is one of the many that have been drawn into the vortex of Becky's wiles.

Dramatic situations abound in this story. Throughout the seven reels things have been tastefully handled by the Edison Company. Richard Tucker is excellently suited to the part of George Osborne. Other Edison notables comprising the cast are William Wadsworth, Robert Brower, Bigelow Cooper and George A. Wright.

"The Man of Shame"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

WILTON LACKAYE has unlimited opportunities for dramatic and emotional work in "The Man of Shame," the five reel Broadway Universal feature scheduled for release this week, for he is cast not alone as hero of the story, but also as heavy, and in many scenes appears twice, once as himself and again as his enemy, so that there can be no question about his being the featured personage in this melodramatic subject, produced under the direction of Harry C. Meyers.

Wilton Lackaye and Rosemary Theby in a scene from "A Man of Shame."

"The Man of Shame," is an adaptation of the French novel, "Roger La Honte," by Jules Mary, and the story is a costume production, with all its scenes laid in France about the time of the Franco-Prussian war. The settings are in most cases absolutely convincing, and whoever picked out the locations for the exterior scenes, is to be congratulated, since despite the fact that they are all taken in and about New York city, they seem typical of France. Mr. Lackaye is supported by Rosemary Theby, who has unusual opportunities for emotional acting in the role of Julia, wife of Lucien de Norville, and Evelyn Dubois also is seen to advantage as Marie Greville, later Roger's wife.

As the story runs Roger La Roque, a French soldier and gentleman of leisure, is enamored of Julia, a beautiful adventuress, who in reality is the wife of Lucien de Norville, though every one believes her single.

Julia has broken the hearts of a score or more of men, but just as Roger is falling under her spell, he is called away to war, and in the camp encounters Louversan, a gambler, with whom he quarrels. After he has exposed Louversan as a cheat, Mr. Lackaye plays both these roles, that of Roger, and that of Louversan, and is particularly good in the scene in which he quarrels with himself, the director deserving no little credit for the skill with which the scene is managed.

Following his exposure, Louversan swears vengeance on Roger, and the latter, returning to Paris shortly afterwards with Lucien, invited to the latter's hame, where he learns for the first time that Julia is the wife of Lucien.

Roger points out to Julia that their love affair must end immediately, due to his loyalty to Lucien, but Julia resents his attitude and vows to be avenged. This results in Louversan and Julia forming a partnership to revenge themselves upon Roger, since both greatly hate him.

Some years later, after Roger has married Marie Greville, his uncle's ward, and becomes a banker, Louversan sets about his revenge by sending Julia to Roger with a request for a loan of one hundred thousand francs. At first Roger refuses, but at length yields to her entreaties, and gives her the money, though he knows that in so doing he is weakening his bank.

Louversan then induces Gerbier, an old man who has deposited a large sum with Roger, to withdraw it from the bank, and Roger, finding he is embarrassed, has to ask for more time in which to pay over the sum to Gerbier. Louversan unfolds to Julia a plan to take a hundred thousand francs from Gerbier's safe, and have Julia return the sum to Roger, but when Louversan goes to steal the money he finds it necessary to kill the old man in order to secure the gold.

Next day, upon the discovery of the murder, Roger is arrested, since his letter asking for more time to pay Gerbier has been found among the letters belonging to the latter. At Roger's trial, circumstantial evidence is all against him, and Lucien, who defends him, drops dead from heart failure, upon the discovery that Roger has received one hundred thousand francs from Julia on the same night as the murder.

Roger is sentenced to life imprisonment, but finally is enabled to escape. His wife meanwhile has seen Louversan, and noted his remarkable resemblance to Roger. When her husband returns home, therefore, she suggests that Louversan may be the real murderer, and Roger sets about to prove that such is the case.

Discovering he is being followed, Louversan plans to have Roger rearrested, but just as he thinks his plan successful, Julia turns against him and admits that Roger is innocent. Louversan is arrested, and Roger is restored to his family, as the picture ends.

"The Closing Net"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WRITERS of crook plays have a habit of reforming their central characters in what seems to be an early portion of the story. There is usually much to interest one in a clever crook, and when the interest is centered upon such a figure and many suspenseful situations are expected, something happens to make the crook reform. From that point on he is continually at his wits end to keep "straight," as the first robbery in his near vicinity is laid to him. This is the case with "The Closing Net," a five-part Gold Rooster play adapted from the story by Henry C. Rowland, which appeared first in the Saturday Evening Post.

A scene from Pathe's "The Closing Net."

But whether at the business of reforming or not, it must be admitted that Clamart, alias the "tide-water clam," holds the attention and brings interest to a point of excitement in his clashes with his former associates, crooks of international fame. This story is filled with tense situations, and these receive able presentation. Edward Jose produced "The Closing Net," and he has brought forward all that is best in the story, and staged it splendidly.

The story concerns itself with one Clamart, the illegitimate son of a wealthy merchant. He has been reared, to the age of fourteen, in an orphan asylum. From the time he escapes from the orphanage, Clamart has been associated with crooks. When he becomes a young man, he is sought, but never captured, by the police. In Paris he meets a group of "society" criminals. Clamart and the beautiful accomplice of Chu Chu, Leontine, are mutually attracted.

Together they plan a scoop. The house they enter happens to be that of Clamart's half-brother, whose father, in a moment of repentance, has instructed him to try and find Clamart and give him what assistance he can. He can be identified by a peculiar birthmark. In paying court to Leontine, Clamart arouses the half-brother. The girl escapes. Clamart is shot. The legitimate Clamart discovers the birthmark and at the insistence of his wife, gives him a home.

Clamart strives to lead a worthy life. Chu Chu, jealous of him, robs the Clamart home. Suspicion immediately falls upon the former crook. Clamart secures the jewels stolen by Chu Chu, and the latter swears to kill him for this. After a series of adventures, Clamart meets Rosalie, with whom he falls in love. To save her lover, Rosalie shoots and kills Chu Chu, when he is besting Clamart in a struggle. Clamart and Rosalie marry.

Howard Estabrook, Kathryn Browne-Decker, Bliss Milford, Madeline Traverse and Arthur Albro comprise a cast that is adequate in every respect. Mr. Estabrook has an attractive part, which he portrays in a highly satisfactory manner, and Kathryn Browne-Decker is a beautiful and ever-graceful figure as Edith.

"Two Spot Joe"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

ANOTHER Mustang brand picture in two reels is to be released October 15. "Two Spot Joe" is the title of this drama of a western mining town and the acting is admirably handled by all of the players. There are many good Western scenes which add much to the realism of the picture.

The cast includes Anna Little who does splendid work as Jean Carroll, wife of Tom Carroll, which part is ably portrayed by Jack Richardson; Louise Lester as Stella, a woman of the dance hall, and E. Forrest Taylor who in the role of "Two Spot" Joe is exceptionally convincing.

The story itself is one which draws lines of comparison between strong and weak men and carries a strong moral lesson to the minds of its witnesses. It deals with the lives of an Eastern man, his wife, "Two Spot" Joe, a true man of the West of generous heart and honest respect for a woman, and a girl of the dance hall. Credit for the direction of the production is due to Donald MacDonald.

Tom and Jean have been recently married. Tom is out of work and can find no opening for him and at last he decides to go out West and after bidding farewell to his wife and mother he leaves to seek his fortune in the mountains and promises to send for them at an early date. Tom who is of a weak character arrives in the small western town and here is soon lured into the dance hall life. He squanders his money on Stella, a dance hall girl, and even writes his mother for more money, telling them he wants to stake a claim. The mother sends the money she has on hand and as a result she and her son's wife have to take to sewing to support themselves.

Stella has Tom so thoroughly under her influence that he not only spends all of his money on her but all of his time with her and he boasts loudly of this. One day he takes from his pocket a locket containing a picture of Jean, his wife, and his mother and as all of his money is gone he stakes this in a poker game. Joe wins the locket and keeps it supposing the picture of the younger woman to be Tom's sister.

Back in the East Tom's mother passes away and Jean starts out to seek her husband. Tom is arrested and put into prison for holding up a stage coach and Joe manages to steal the keys from the head sheriff and release Tom, gives him a large amount of money and tells him to take Stella and beat it out of town.

A tense moment in "Two Spot Joe."

Joe meets Jean on her arrival and later he tells her that Tom had died in trying to save the lives of men in a burning mine. The girl then tells him that he was her husband and Joe is surprised and very taken aback for he realized that he loves the girl deeply. That night he writes a note telling her of his deception and starts out for the mountains.

Tom, who has been drinking heavily, hears that Jean is living with "Two Spot" Joe and he immediately starts out for Joe's home. On his way, however, he accidentally stumbles and crashes down a deep precipice to his death. Joe passes some time later and discovers Tom's body. He loses no time in returning to the town and arrives just as Jean is opening the letter he had left for her. After taking the letter from her and destroying it he tells the girl of his love for her.

"Tides That Meet"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "Tides That Meet," the three-act feature announced by the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, for release, on Monday, October 4, Director Berthelet makes his debut as an Essanay producer.

Unquestionably the new director of films has set a high standard with this production, and one over which exhibitors will rejoice, for his picturization of this story from the pen of Clinton Dangerfield, is striking in its treatment and shows unusual care on the part of the director.

The story of this feature is laid in Mexico, and yet, despite the fact that it was all taken in and about Chicago, Mr. Berthelet has put real Mexican atmosphere into it. All the exteriors are so realistic that one who has actually visited Mexico might easily be fooled into believing that the company really traveled to that war scourged republic for the purpose of taking the picture. The director's handling of the lighting of his scenes is particularly commendable, while all the settings, props and furnishings are carefully chosen. Unusual care has also been taken with trifling bits that go toward giving real Mexican atmosphere to the picture. For instance, one is given a view of a country road, down which an automobile, bearing several of the principles wends its way. The road is just an ordinary one, located somewhere on the outskirts of Chicago, and then after the auto passes, the director introduces a splendidly made-up old Mexican wood carrier, who steps into the picture just long enough to register, ere another scene is flashed on, and yet in that tiny flash you get the impression that this is Mexico.

One of the exciting moments in Essanay's "Tides That Meet."

Again, another woodland road is shown, down which two of the principals ride on horseback, and though this is only an ordinary Cook county road, you get an impression of Mexico through an old ox-cart that is driven into view, just as the riders pass from the screen, and though probably no more than ten feet of film is utilized for showing this old ox-cart, its impression and atmosphere are lasting, and tend to make the picture as a whole convincing.

Bryant Washburn is cast as Rupert Ellston, in this production, which for a change gives Mr. Washburn an opportunity of playing a hero role, rather than that of a villain, a fact that will no doubt tend to still further increase his popularity with his countless feminine admirers.

Washburn is every inch the hero, and does really splendid work in those scenes in which he registers horror in being compelled to shoot down his friend Bourne Carringford, in cold blood, in order that he may secure the aid of Lopez Deligardo, in rescuing Estelle Dalny, his half sister.

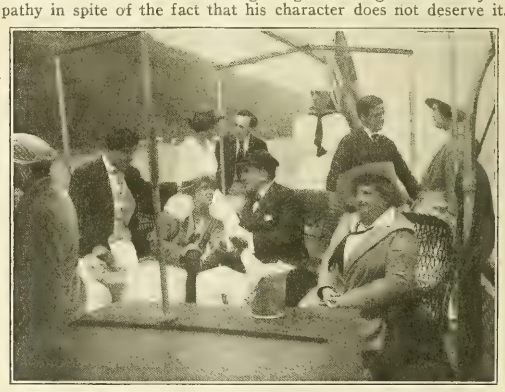
Ann Kirk is entirely satisfactory in the role of Estelle Dalny, and Edmund F. Cobb makes a manly Carringford, while John H. Cossar is convincing as Lopez Deligardo, and Jack Meredith is positively villainous as Jacoba, a Mexican bandit.

The story in brief tells how Estelle Dalny goes into Mexico on Red Cross duty, and is later followed by her half brother, Rupert Ellston, who is a surveyor. When Rupert learns that Estelle has been captured by Jacoba, the outlaw chief, he finds upon inquiry, that the only man who can aid him in rescuing his sister is Lopez Deligardo, another Mexican outlaw.

Upon consulting Lopez, he is told that aid will be given him only upon the condition that he kill Bourne Carringford, an American, who has incurred Lopez's displeasure. Though Carringford is one of Ellston's best friends, the latter deliberately shoots him, since he is desperately in need of Lopez's aid.

After Ellston and Lopez have rescued Estelle from the clutches of Jacoba, Ellston flees the country, but is forever haunted by the face of the man he killed. Later he returns to Mexico and joins the rebels, hoping to be killed in battle. Estelle, meanwhile, is called upon to nurse a badly wounded man, and discovers by chance that he is no other than Carringford, who was only badly wounded by Ellston's shot.

Carringford little suspects that Estelle is the sister of the man who shot him, marries the girl, and some months later, upon confronting Ellston turns the would-be murderer over to Martinez, a rebel chief, who stakes him out to a post in the boiling sun.



Ellston has fallen in love with Felicita de Lome, and the girl, learning of his plight, appeals to Carringford, explaining that Ellston shot him only to save his sister Estelle. Later, when Carringford confirms the story told by Felicita, he rushes off to save Ellston, and a happy reunion follows between Ellston and his sister, and the same man and his sweetheart.

"The Master of the House"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

SENTIMENT is the chief element in Edgar James' "The Master of the House." The five-reel Equitable release, which features Julius Steger, who has scored many successes on the vaudeville and legitimate stages. "The Master of the House" was his most popular play, which one can readily understand after viewing the pictured version; for its ending marks a most touching reconciliation. The public has long since shown its desire to see Mr. Steger in just such a part as he has in this play.

Julius Steger is seen as Frederick Hoffman, a character who, in the beginning of the story, brings one to remark that oft repeated adage, "there is no fool like an old fool," as he becomes infatuated with a girl who deliberately seeks to fascinate him and whose methods of obtaining this end are apparent and all of amateurish. After his awakening, of course, he suffers terribly in his longing to be again with his "old-fashioned" wife and his two children. Mr. Steger's good acting wins the sympathy in spite of the fact that his character does not deserve it.

Aboard the yacht—one of Bettina's extravagances.

The story itself presents nothing above the ordinary, but it is so well produced and enacted that "The Master of the House" is an entirely worthy offering. Joseph A. Golden as the director deserves a large share of the credit for the appeal which the picture makes. Margot Williams is the "Woman." Her appearance and interpretation of the part are most agreeable. Austin Webb, Ralph Morgan and Grace Reals do splendid work in their important roles.

Hoffman is so absorbed in his work and home that after a time he begins to feel bored with both. His wife gives much of her time to charity work, and that she may accomplish more, decides to employ a secretary. The secretary, Bettina, is little interested in her work. She is a butterfly in every sense. Longing for wealth and gay times she determines to have both by winning the affection of the master of the Hoffman home. She soon interests Hoffman in herself. Then by arousing his jealousy and sympathy she leads him into believing that he is in love with her.

The result is that he leaves his wife for Bettina. His life with her is in striking contrast to his former life. She is extravagant and frivolous to the extreme. Some time later, his old friend, Allison, learns that she is practically robbing Hoffman and carrying on an affair with another man. Allison proves this to his friend. Hoffman suffers a physical breakdown. Penitent and considerably aged he returns to the wife whose sterling qualities he now appreciates, and is forgiven.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THERE are three new characters introduced in "A House of Cards," chapter twenty-five of the North American serial "The Diamond from the Sky." They are important characters in this chapter and although they appear only for short periods in this particular story their work registers well. Two of the new characters are an Italian dance hall girl and her friend, who dance in a beer garden and through whom DeVaux manages to secure aid in his attempt to get "The Diamond from the Sky." The other new character who is introduced is a contractor through whom Quabba gets a job to fix the roof of the jail and thereby communicate with Luke, who is a prisoner there.

Blair Stanley attacks Durand just as he secures the gem.

There are some wonderful scenic beauties projected in this chapter and excitement keeps up throughout. The famous gem is stolen by Durand and when he is lying broken and dead on the grounds of the Powell mansion the jewel is taken from his clasped hand and disappears.

As this chapter opens the last revelers of the Belshazzarian feast depart and Arthur Stanley is sorrowfully regretting the fact that Esther had seen the marks of the dope needle on his arm. Vivian Marston left alone with him is anxiously trying to discover where the diamond is. At this time the gardner finds the jewel hanging on a rose bush. Blair Stanley and Durand rush down to get the "Diamond from the Sky," but the gardener refuses to give it to anyone but Arthur. He comes down after it and then places it in his wall safe in his bedroom.

Esther and Marmaduke Smythe depart for Richmond and the girl once arrived in the eastern city goes straightway to see Hagar who has recovered from her recent lapse of memory. Esther relates to the woman her experiences in Los Angeles and then she and Hagar go to take up their residence at Stanley Hall.

Back in Los Angeles DeVaux meets a beer garden dancer and her friend Quabba and a friend of his meet a contractor who tells them he is looking for someone to help him fix the roof of the jail. Quabba says he will take the job and the next morning he goes to the jail and manages to communicate with Luke Lovell and get to him a saw and a coil rope. When we last see Luke Lovell he has managed to saw through one of the iron bars of his cell window.

Durand plans to steal the precious jewel from Arthur's safe and that night while they are playing cards he manages to dope Arthur's wine and soon Arthur becomes drowsy and is taken to his room where he falls into a dead stupor. Durand tells Vivian that he is going to take the diamond and that she must not interfere. DeVaux manages to get some old Italian's clothes through his dancing girl friend and in this lisguise he waits under the window while Durand goes to Arthur's room. Blair Stanley hearing Durand in the room stealthily follows him. He opens the door and just as Durand gets the diamond from the safe Blair attacks him. Vivian comes to the door at this moment and Arthur, awakened by the crash of Durand falling through the open window, jumps out of bed and they all rush down-stairs. Durand is broken and dead and DeVaux, who is standing near terror stricken spies the jewel clasped in the dead man's hand, unclasps the cold fingers and grabs the jewel.

"Emmy of Stork's Nest"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

SURROUNDED by an atmosphere of the real, the appealingly human and natural, Mary Miles Minter, whose performance is naturalness itself, is a winsome, thoroughly engaging little figure in her latest screen appearance as Emmy Garrett in "Emmy of Stork's Nest," a Columbia feature for release through Metro. Miss Minter will be remembered for her splendid work in "Always In the Way," in which she appeared for the first time as the featured player, and it would seem that she is seen to better advantage in this picture. Judging by her fine portrayals in both of these plays, she has a brilliant career before her; for Miss Minter acts before the camera with effective naturalness and repose, and she combines with her beauty an ability to impart personality and feeling to her part.

The story is based upon the novel of the same name by J. Breckenridge Ellis. Its simplicity and pathos are the strongest points about it. The characters are all well drawn. The big-hearted half wit; the spineless Silas; the crushed Crissy; manly Benton and the bullying Bije, all serve to bring forward the lovable character of Emmy. The part of Bije is a bit over-done, but Charles Prince handles it skillfully and makes it as real as possible. The country which serves as a setting for the action is real farm country. Run-down, but not squalid, houses, horses more gentle than they are sound of limb, and well used wagons and harnesses, with a number of other accuracies elaborate the air of simple rusticity.

A pleasing moment in "Emmy of Stork's Nest."

William Nigh is the director who has given the story such an artistic and helpful setting. Niles Welch as Benton Cabot; Martin Faust as Jim Whitlicks; Mrs. Brundage as Crissy; Wm. Cowper as Silas and Mr. Bresee as Hiram Garrett are the players who distinguish their parts and who excellently support the star.

Benton Cabot's father dies leaving him nothing but a run-down farm in Scragg county, near Stork's Nest. He makes the best of what resources he has and determines to earn a living on his farm in the mountains. There he meets a beautiful little girl, one having had no advantages of education, but a child of nature. Ignorant of farm methods and unable to live in the tumble-down house, Cabot accepts employment with Bije Stork. The latter is anxious to marry Emmy and he has her grandfather's consent.

The girl and Cabot become friends. Friendship soon grows to something more. Stork, a powerful bully, humiliates the city chap before Emmy, who at first is highly amused, but later concerned by Cabot's discomfort. By misrepresenting an episode, Stork causes Emmy to believe that Benton does not care for her, and she agrees to marry Bije. The latter is wanted by the sheriff for counterfeiting. He flees, taking Emmy with him. Cabot learns this and follows them. He overtakes Stork and Emmy. When matters are explained the girl acknowledges her love for Cabot.

The plot is commonplace, but a number of developments which appeal to the heart and the sympathetic interpretations make this a beautiful picture. An actor whose name does not appear in the cast, but who makes a favorable impression despite that handicap, is the young bear. This agile though clumsily built cub is Miss Minter's pet.

"The Land of Adventure"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

CENTRAL AMERICA, that land of overnight revolutions and favorite stamping ground for salesmen of arms and ammunition, is the locale in which Harry Beaumont, scenario writer and director, has placed two energetic young Americans that they may exhibit their strategy and courage in things more or less military. Romance is also an important factor in "The Land of Adventure," the three reel Edison release for October 22. This comedy drama has plenty of zestful action, and the desire of the author to make it nothing more than good interesting fiction is laudable.

The story plays in New York, on shipboard, where the "soldiers of fortune" are spied upon by two individuals in the employ of the revolutionist, who are of the type that probably inspired the term "greaser" and in a Central American republic. The soldiers of fortune are Eddie Renolds and Billie Drew, who are invited by the President of Panzuelo to come and help him put an end to a revolution which has recently started. These young men are known by Villanzo, the revolutionist, and he warns them to keep away from Panzuelo.

This threatening letter causes the young men no apprehension, and they set out for "the land of advenutre." On the ship they meet two American girls who live in Panzuelo. The girls are attractive, and the boys do not require an unreasonable amount of encouragement, so before the ship puts into their port, all are on quite friendly terms. With much pomp and ceremony they are received by the President, who informs them that all his power is at their service.

Vellanzo demands a large sum for the release of the captives.

Villanzo is in need of funds and he conceives the idea of kidnaping the Bruce girls and demanding a heavy ransom of their wealthy father. His plan is successful, in so far as capturing the girls is concerned. But the young Americans have to be reckoned with. They set out for Villanzo's camp. They, too, are made prisoners and sentenced to be shot at sunrise. During the night they escape from their guard-house and free the girls. When they carry the girls past the danger zone, Renolds returns to the camp, and single-handed makes Villanzo his prisoner. This latter feat brings the insurrection to an end. Renolds and Drew are handsomely rewarded by the President, and plan their early marriage to the Bruce sisters.

Edward Earle takes the leading part as Renolds. Johnnie Walker, Margaret Prussing, Jean Dumar and Julian Reed are included in the large and able cast. Several bits of good comedy and well presented melodramatic situations make this a genuinely enjoyable picture, and it is only proper to add that Director Beaumont has handled his subject skillfully. The scenes of romance and conflict with the revolutionary spies on the ship are especially appealing.

"The Price"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

GEORGE BROADHURST'S "The Price," a modern society drama, picturized in five parts is the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation's release for October 3. Helen Ware is featured in this film version of her great stage success; produced Stannard speaks of love.

some years ago. It is an elaborate production of a good play, which has many strong situations and opportunities for Miss Ware, seen as the girl who has an affair with a married man, and later as a wife who by her uncalled-for jealousy and subsequent suffering, is made to realize what an ignominious part a woman who accepts the love of another's husband, plays.

The picture has a happy ending, which in this case proves satisfactory. The misunderstanding between the man and wife, which results in unearthing the girl's past, hangs on a slight incident, which a few words could have cleared up. But it is as convincing as the majority of like situations are. Furthermore this gives Miss Ware her biggest opportunity, and her work is forcible and finished. Miss Ware plays her part with feeling and fine artistry.

The production is all that beautiful settings and able direction can make it. Many views of the Metropolitan museum of art occupy a portion of the first reel. Among these scenes are some remarkable photographs of a number of the most famous paintings in the Metropolitan collection. A noteworthy feature of the picture is that, while the girl is forced to earn her own living, she does not find it next to impossible to obtain employment, as most heroines do.

The cast includes Wilmuth Merkyl, James Cooley and Blanche Douglas, who gives a high character of support to Helen Ware. Mr. Cooley's characterization is highly commendable. Joseph A. Golden produced the offering. His portion of the work shows judgment and skill.

Briefly, the story tells of a girl, reared in luxury, who is thrown upon her own resources. She becomes the secretary of a famous artist. His wife has no time for anything but housekeeping. The charming secretary is an inspiration to him and he disregards his wife and expresses his love for the girl. Mistaken, he believes that she reciprocates his love. He dies suddenly. The girl is now married to a physician and is perfectly happy.

The artist's wife reads in her dead husband's diary notes which make it appear as though her husband had been unfaithful. Bent upon revenge she secures employment in the physician's home. She persuades the wife that the doctor is in love with another woman, which is false. The wife denounces the doctor. This gives the widow her opportunity and she shows the diary to him. The physician leaves his wife. She attempts suicide but is prevented from so doing by the maid. The physician learns the truth and he and the girl are reunited.

"The Brave Deserve the Fair"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

TOM MIX, the popular Selig star, not only takes the leading part in the story "The Brave Deserves the Fair," the two-reel Selig production to be released on October 18, but the story was also a conception of his and he is responsible for the direction of this drama. Supporting Mix in this production are Victoria Forde as Vicky Johnson, daughter of Andy Johnson, who comes West to see his home; Leo Malone as Leo Binnis, Tom Martin's friend, and Howard Farrell as Andy Johnson, Vicky's father.

Tom Martin and Leo Binnis arrive in a small mining town. Andy Johnson, his wife and daughter, Vicky, are also seeking a western home. Jim Brown, a cattleman, poisons the water holes to kill off the wild horses that are eating the range bare, and Johnson and his wife drink from the water hole and die. Vicky, upon returning from a hunt, finds her parents dead.

Tom and Leo, wandering in the hills, become lost. They are also exhausted when Tom sees Johnson's wagon in the distance. He also sees the poisonous water hole. He fills a tin cup with the water, raises it to his lips, but Vicky, who has seen Tom and realizes his danger, grabs a rifle and shoots the cup from Tom's hand just as he is about to drink.

Later Tom, Leo and Vicky arrive at the small mining town. Tom and Leo assist Vicky to engage in the restaurant business. The boys pan out a snug sum from the creek. Vicky by this time discovers that she loves both the boys, and after much thought, decides to try them out to see which one likes her best. Vicky sees a physician and tells him to explain to the boys that she has been injured in a stage coach wreck; that she was thrown out and is disfigured for life.

The doctor tells Tom and Leo the story. Both are horror stricken. Tom is sorry and starts off to see Vicky, while Leo shows that he could not love her now. Vicky from a window, sees Tom approaching, and when he walks into the room, Vicky greets him, in good health. She then tells him the method she employed to find out which of the boys loved her best. Leo, in the meantime, leaves the town to seek his fortune elsewhere, while Tom is happy planning with Vicky for their future.

"Let There Be Light"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE American Film Company have scheduled for release October 11 the two reel production "Let There Be Light," featuring Helene Rosson, Charles Newton and E. Forrest Taylor. This picture is one which not only contains a very good dramatic story but is educational and interesting.

The plot deals with the life of one Peter Stearns, an inventor, his marriage to a young western girl and his discovery of an exceedingly brilliant electrical ray. There are electrical devices of every kind used in this picture and it is really surprising the numerous ways in which electricity can be used. Helene Rosson portrays the part of June Sterling who later becomes Stearns' wife. Charles Newton is very good in the part of the bachelor inventor and E. Forrest Taylor is a typical matinee hero of motion pictures.

Peter Stearns, who devotes most of his time in his search for an electric ray which will astound the world with its brilliancy works faithfully to this end. He is a wealthy bachelor and lives in a beautiful home with all of the electric devices possible. He receives word from an old friend who is on his death-bed entrusting to Peter's care his "little girl." Peter immediately has one of the large rooms done over in childish fashion, white furniture installed, builds an enormous doll house in which he installs electric lights and buys a great amount of toys for the child and even goes so far as to hire a nurse for her. His embarrassment is keen when a young woman arrives and announces that she is June Sterling. June is very happy in Peter's home, bringing happiness and sunshine to the lonely old bachelor.

However, the town gossips get busy and go so far as to tell Peter that June is his mistress. Straightway Peter asks the girl to marry him and she consents, and although he showers his wife with attentions the inventor's life work comes first and she is thrown upon her own resources for companionship.

The inventor's wife meets the leading man.

While attending a motion picture show she falls in love with the leading man and for some time after he is her dream hero. Through her husband she later meets the motion picture actor and they spend much time together. Peter perfects his light and as he chances to flood the garden with its rays he sees June in the arms of the actor. Crushed and heart-broken he returns to his library and decides to give June her liberty that she may remarry. The girl, however, knows that she loves her husband truly, tells her suitor that she doesn't want to see him again and after that husband and wife live happily in a truer conception of the reality of their love for each other.

"A Bungalow Bungle"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER'S most popular stories, "The New Adventures of Wallingford," which are being put into pictures by the Whartons for Pathe, make excellent screen material. The first of this series to be released is entitled "A Bungalow Bungle," in two parts, in which J. Rufus "separates" a young collegian, whose inclinations are of an inventive nature, from a certain portion of his voluminous bank account.

An eminent cast has been selected to interpret Mr. Chester's interesting characters. Burr McIntosh is the genial Wallingford, whose business deals are just a trifle beyond the reach of the jury room. Max Figman plays Blackie Daw, and Lolita Robertson is a charming Violet. The name of any one of these three artists announced as the featured player in a production should make it a box office attraction.

One of the big scenes in "The Bungalow Bungle."

Together they make up a cast of unusual strength. Their co-starring represents a great outlay on the part of the producers, who have declared their intention to give the "Wallingford" series a presentation of superior quality.

In this story Wallingford and Blackie meet a charming young lady during a railroad journey. Violet knows them by reputation and asks Wallingford if he will not try to make the railroad president's son, who is also a passenger, pay for an injury done Violet's family by the railroad president. Wallingford sees his opportunity when he learns that Bennzy Falls has designed a portable bungalow.

J. Rufus declares his belief that the manufacture of portable bungalows would be a big commercial proposition. He subscribes a sum equal to that of Bennzy's and his friends. After the company is formed Wallingford, at a directors' meeting, presents his many improvements to the portable bungalow. He offers to sell these "improvements" to the company for a staggering price. The other directors refuse to buy the patents, until their first customer, a typical rube, claims that he will give a large order if they add some fancy "fixins" to the buildings.

Bennzy immediately buys the patents from Wallingford. Later a very business-like gentleman notifies the Portable Bungalow Company that he will bring suit for infringement of his patents. This is none other than Onion Jones. By the time Bennzy and his friends extricate themselves from their business tangle they have presented Wallingford with a neat sum, the factory, and all the bungalows built so far. Violet expresses her satisfaction and thanks J. Rufus and Blackie.

"The Family Cupboard"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE Owen Davis domestic drama, "The Family Cupboard," produced with success on the speaking stage, in its screen adaption should meet with the approval of photoplay patrons. With the co-operation of a good cast headed by Holbrook Blinn, Frank H. Crane, who scenariorized and directed the Wm. A. Brady production, released through the World Film Corporation, has attractively produced this generally appealing story.

The dramatic situations are presented to the best possible effect. They have not been forced beyond their natural limitations, and as a consequence they are convincing. The most serious scene, where the wife learns that her husband has been unfaithful and it is agreed that they will separate, is an example of this. The situation is well developed, but, once reached, there is no attempt upon the part of the actors or the director to enlarge upon it.

In the beginning we are shown the simple home life of Charles Nelson and his family, consisting of his wife, son Kenneth and daughter Alice. By hard work he accumulates a fortune. Immediately the wife and the two children become engrossed with the business of "society." They become so absorbed that the father is neglected. After a time his longing for companionship brings him to seek it with an actress.

Kitty and Le Roy rehearse.

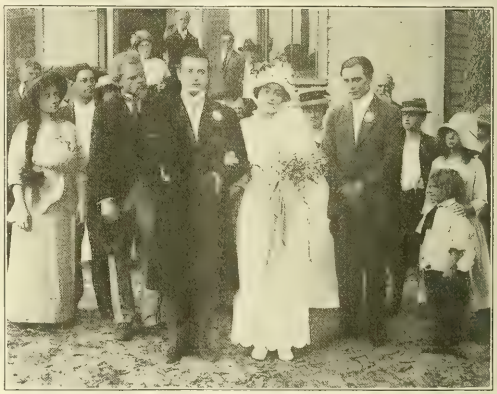
Before long he is spending all his spare time with her. The son, a rather weak character, hears this. In a quarrel with his father he speaks of it. Mrs. Nelson overhears her son's accusation and asks her husband if it is true. When he answers that it is true, she determines to leave him. The son clings to his mother. The daughter realizes that they are to blame and sympathizes with her father. So the house is equally divided.



Nelson, living with his daughter, refuses to have anything more to do with the actress. Living under another name she seeks the acquaintance of Kenneth. The boy becomes infatuated with Kitty. When he is informed that Kitty, whom he loves and wishes to marry, is not the good, innocent girl he supposed, he contemplates suicide. His mother learns this in time to prevent him from carrying out his wish. This leads to Mrs. Nelson and her husband being reconciled and the family reunited.

Holbrook Blinn gives a splendid performance as Nelson. In appearance and action he is the accepted type of American business man. Frances Nelson's characterization of Kitty Claire is a feature of this offering. Miss Nelson has a not to ograteful part but her Kitty Claire will win the admiration of all who see the picture. She and John Hines, in a well suited part, supply all th ehumor, of which there is plenty, and it is as bright as it is plentiful. The settings are artistic and the photography good.

"Nan o' the Backwoods"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

A STORY dealing with the life of a simple country girl, her big hearted and strong headed brother, a young doctor, who is in love with the girl, and a dissipated city youth who manages to win the girl's affections, is the plot of "Nan o' the Backwoods," Lubin's three reel production to be released on October 14.

Nan and Dr. Brenton are married.

Sidney Olcott directed this picture. Valentine Grant, who does excellent work as Nan Peters, a young girl of the backwoods, is supported by a strong cast which includes P. H. O'Malley, the clever young Lubin leading man, as Lige Peters, Nan's brother, Roy Sheldon as her father, Walter Chapen as Gilbert Martin, a New York idler, and James Vincent as Dr. Brenton, whose heart is in the girl's keeping but does not make known his affection to her.

Nan is a contented girl who lives in the woods with her father and young brother. In the nearby village resides one Dr. Brenton, a young man who takes more than passing interest in the girl and spends much of his spare time in helping the girl study. The girl is fond of the doctor and when they are not studying together they are out riding through the woods in his buggy.

Gilbert Martin, an idle New Yorker, with his mother and father leave the city for the south. They take up their country home and one day while out driving his car through the woods Gilbert sees Nan. He asks the girl to ride with him and she happily agrees. An automobile is a luxury and something which she has never before seen only in pictures. Dr. Brenton drives along and seeing the girl in the car tells her to get into the buggy with him and utterly ignores Martin.

The girl and Martin hold many clandestine meetings and during one of these her brother Lige comes upon them. He drags his sister from the car and tells her never to see Martin again. That night however the girl slips out of the house to meet Martin and is seen by Lige who stealthily follows her. He sees Martin kiss his sister and unjustly suspecting the girl he tells Gilbert that he must marry the girl. Gilbert leaves, promising to return the next day to marry her. The next morning Lige, while walking through the woods sees Martin leaving in his automobile. The young man takes the train and by a clever ruse Lige gets the Martin chauffeur to make a wild dash across the country and they catch up with the train.

Lige boards the train, takes the young New Yorker off from it and after a struggle he orders the chauffeur at the point of a revolver to drive to his home. Once arrived there Lige tells his father of his suspicions and regardless of the girl's denials and Dr. Brenton's protests they are married. They then go to Martin's parents and tell them of the marriage. The elder Martin forces them from the house declaring that he will have the marriage annulled.

Later Nan's husband dies from a raging fever. On his death bed he makes a confession which clears the girl's name and leaves her free to marry the doctor.

Norbert Lusk Engaged by Universal

Norbert Lusk, magazine writer and photoplaywright, formerly with Lubin and World Film, has been engaged by Universal for a long period. Mr. Lusk will contribute original stories from time to time, but his work for the present will be confined to feature adaptations, the first of which, a version of the legendary German classic, "Undine," has been completed.

Norbert Lusk.

Work of arranging for the screen a series — not serial — of twelve three - reel stories, each episode complete in itself, is now being carried on. The well-known English novelists, C. N. & A. M. Williamson, authors of "The Car of Destiny," "The Lightning Conductor" and other best sellers, are under contract to write this series, entitled "The Journal of Lord John," the release date of each installment and its appearance in The Ladies' World being simultaneous. William Garwood will be starred as Lord John and is now in Universal City engaged on the initial chapter, with prominent players in his support. In many respects the photoplays promise to be unique and the pages of "The Journal of John Lord" are said to contain not only strong stories, but character, class and charm.

Mr. Lusk's success in fitting Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby with congenial roles in "The Double Life" has encouraged Mr. Lusk to begin work on a story for them in which Miss Theby will be cast for a character entirely new to the screen.

Kathryn Osterman, who made her film debut in a World Film Corporation production several months ago, has been engaged by the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation as a permanent feature in that company's productions for the forthcoming two years, during which time Miss Osterman will appear in four different releases.

Blanche Ring in Next Morosco Release

For its next release the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces Blanche Ring, the celebrated comedienne, in "The Yankee Girl," a film adaptation of her great comedy triumph of several seasons ago. In selecting this play as the initial motion picture vehicle for the well known stage favorite, Oliver Morosco has foreseen the wonderful possibilities afforded in this subject in the way of beautiful scenic and photographic offerings, this in addition to the acknowledged adaptability to Miss Ring's particular ability.

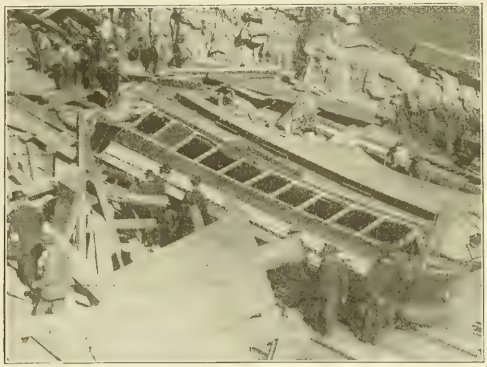
Beautiful marine scenes taken at the world famous

Blanche Ring in scene from Morosco's "The Yankee Girl."

Catalina Island, the hacienda scenes taken at the Fernandex Sanches ranch house, a landmark 150 years old half-way between Los Angeles and San Gabriel and one of the historic taverns of the Mission days, together with many other pretty scenic displays afford a most picturesque background. The story is a comedy drama of a copper feud in the tropics, of the light breezy American variety and one that will entertain young and old alike, replete with humorous situations and with a touch of dramatic romance. That it lends itself admirably to the screen will readily be appreciated by the many thousands who are familiar with it. The dramatic possibilities Oliver Morosco has developed from the Blanche Ring musical comedy hit by the simple expedient of staging it in natural scenery, opens up a new utility for the higher class musical comedies. One of the most realistic fights ever staged is presented in this film by Forrest Stanley, the leading man, and Howard Davies, who portrays the villain.

Mutual Title Changed

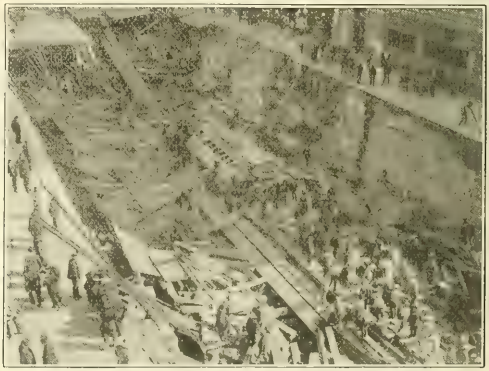
The Mutual Film Corporation's Masterpicture entitled "The House of a Thousand Scandals" must be retitled as the result of an injunction granted in the Supreme Court of New York. Justice Pendleton granted an injunction sought by the Selig Polyscope Company against the Mutual Film Corporation on this title. The Selig company's suit was based on the question of rights and priority of a somewhat similar title covering one of their recent productions. According to a statement from the office of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual, the new title for "The House of a Thousand Scandals" will be "The House of Scandals."



News of the Week as Shown in Films

Gothamites watch Boston fireboats give special display. Copyright, 1915, Hearst Selig News Pictorial.

Harry Ford discusses subway Plan with Secretary of State Daniels. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.



Subway cave-in at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-fourth St., New York. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

President Wilson returns to Princeton, N. J., to vote at primaries. Copyright, 1915, Hearst Selig News Pictorial.

Streets of Syracuse flooded as a result of washout. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Scene of recent subway cave-in, in New York City. Copyright, 1915, by the Mutual Weekly.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

Perhaps the most notable news item in film circles this week was the arrival in Los Angeles of Thomas Dixon, the noted former Baptist preacher, famous as the author of "The Clansman," the great photoplay produced under David Wark Griffith's personal direction and now showing throughout the country at advanced prices.

Mr. Dixon said to MOTOGRAPHY'S representative Wednesday that he was here for the purpose of securing a studio and producing immediately a screen version of his latest novel "The Fall of a Nation," a companion piece to "The Clansman." He expects to personally direct this picture or to direct the directors who do the directing, and plans to make it the most startlingly realistic production ever shown in films.

The noted author is authority for the statement that this new picture will in number of feet of film and cost exceed that of "The Clansman" by some forty per cent, and give employment to three times as many people. He expects to crowd this picture through within six months time.

Thomas Dixon has been a very popular man among motion picture manufacturers and producers of Los Angeles this week. He has been entertained royally by master producers, directors and others, many of whom are anxious to become associated with him in the great new production.

Local newspapers showing their thorough unfamiliarity with the cost of productions of even monster and collossal pictures, have published the startling statements that "Mr. Dixon plans to spend $750,000 in the next six months in the making of his new film and to give employment to 50,000 people." The gentleman's press agent must have been working overtime, or maybe the reverend's royalty returns have been coming in so strenuously from "The Clansman" that now that he is with us in the motion picture producing metropolis he don't care how he spends his money.

Anyhow, Mr. Dixon is creating some reputation as a capitalist, author and plunger by the announcements in the newspapers.

California exhibitors are leaning strongly to the Mutual program and every release shows a steady patronage that is most gratifying. Many of the leading exhibitors have secured splendid returns from Mutual pictures and they appreciate the system of publicity given, which aids so strongly in filling their houses.

"Flying A" features produced by the American Film Company at its beautiful Santa Barbara studios have established a demand that is far reaching. The present day exhibitors seem to appreciate quality and the Flying A releases catch on quickly. These pictures are distributed through the Mutual program.

At the Fine Arts Films, (Griffith studios) Inceville and Keystone studios, there is great activity in evidence, caused by the production of new pictures for Triangle program releases. Heads of the companies, director generals, just plain directors, fancy priced stars and even ordinary players are working overtime for results. Great pictures are promised and much enthusiasm is displayed in the feature productions.

H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of Balboa Features, who is in New York adding new achievements to Balboa productions, is expected home this week, and he is sure to come back filled with new and original ideas and a new player of note signed up for the Balboa pictures.

Weber and Fields, the famous comedy stars, are not nearly so hilarious over their advent into motion pictures as some people appear to think. The comedy favorites like the big money they earn, but the hazards and perils which they encounter every day have given them cold feet, so to speak. Being nearly killed in automobile accidents, hit over the head with heavy missles, etc., is not their happy go lucky way of acting. They now live in daily dread of what's coming next.

Eddy Foy and the Keystone management are said to be having trouble over an alleged broken contract. As the story goes the directing head of the Keystone Film Company, Mack Sennett, engaged Foy and the Little Foylets for a period of ten weeks at $2,000 per week. An additional contract was made after Foy came to California, which, it is said, entitled the Keystone Company to his services for ten weeks time for two years, the time to be when most convenient to Foy and not in conflict with his other engagements.

A few days ago Foy placed a claim in the hands of a prominent local attorney for $6,000 unpaid salary, the first contract it is alleged having been broken by the discharge of Foy after seven weeks service, and the second contract cancelled.

Hayward Mack, until recently an Edison star, is steadily advancing as a screen favorite via the Universal brand, and of late has had an opportunity of doing some unusual work in heavy roles, in the company directed by Richard Stanton. Mr. Mack's first picture at Universal City was "The $50,000 Jewel Mystery," directed by Murdock MacQuarrie, but since that time he has played in "The Pinnacle," "Inside Information," "Did It End Right?" and "Riches," all of which were directed by producer Stanton. Mrs. Mack, who in public life is Marjorie Ellison, has joined her husband in Los Angeles, and is expected will also appear in Universal films.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS

William Noble.

Oklahoma.

Warden R. W. Dick, who is regarded as a model penitentiary warden, has established an innovation in the moving picture business, and in consequence his theater will have one of the largest audiences regularly in the United States.

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago

	Bid	Asked
American Film Manufacturing Co.	86	97
Biograph Company	45	55
Colonial Motion Picture Corp.	1¼	4¼
General Film Corp., pfd.	38	42
Mutual Film Corp., pfd.	51½	55
Mutual Film Corp., com.	51	53½
North American Film Corp., pfd.	70	...
North American Film Corp., com.	65	79
New York Motion Picture Corp.	69	72½
Thanhouser Film Corp.	1½	2½*
Triangle Film Corp.	8	8⅝*
Universal Film Mfg. Co.	150	...
Vogue Films, Inc.	110	...
World Film Corp.	3⅜	3⅝*

* Par $5.00

General Film Corporation.—An action of far-reaching importance is represented by the decree of the United States District Court ordering a dissolution of the so-called "Motion Picture Trust." The defendants named in the original petition, besides the Motion Picture Patents Company, and the General Film Corporation, are: Biograph Company, Thos. A. Eidson, Inc., Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, Kalem Company, Inc., George Kleine, Lubin Manufacturing Company, Pathe Freres, Selig Polyscope Company, Vitagraph Company, Melies Manufacturing Company, Frank L. Dyer, Henry N. Marvin, J. J. Kennedy, William Pelzer, Samuel Long, J. A. Berst, Siegmund Lubin, Gaston Melies, Albert E. Smith, George K. Spoor, and W. N. Selig.

The court rules against all of the foregoing except the Melies Manufacturing Company. It is understood an appeal will be filed which will carry the case to the United States Supreme Court. The prosecution declared that in the first year of the existence of the General Film Corporation (one of the defendants) the company disbursed more than $2,000,000 from profits; paid 7% on its preferred, and 12% on its common and that at least one of its organizers netted 1600% on an investment of $10,000.

Triangle Film Corporation.—Opened up the Studebaker theater in Chicago under very happy auspices. The crowd packed the house and, according to the press notices in all of the newspapers the following day, the new idea has made its appeal in Chicago. Trading in the stock on the New York Curb continued at about the same volume as in preceding weeks.

Vogue Film, Incorporated.—110 and better has been freely bid and sales of small lots have already been reported between 120 and 130. As this company will be definitely operating on a schedule that should assure profits of approximately 100%, it is not difficult to find an explanation of why there is no stock for sale.

Mutual Film Corporation.—A steady increase in business is reported from many different centers. The common stock was in demand between 50 and 52. Seven new Mutual offices have been opened, located in: Fargo, N. D., Cairo, Ills., Wichita, Kas., Fort Smith, Ark., San Antonio, Texas, Houston, Texas, and Escanaba, Mich.

Warden Dick is now building in the penitentiary at McAlester, Okla., a moving picture theater where free moving pictures will be shown at least once a week to the 2,000 or more inmates of the Oklahoma State Penitentiary. The theater is to be modern in every respect, equipped with stage for local vaudeville stunts to be pulled by the theatrical inclined convicts. The penitentiary authorities believe that the showing of good pictures will have a tendancy of helping to benefit the prisoners. The penientiary will be completed and ready for the first show by January 18.

Plans to make Tulsa, Okla., one of the country's moving picture centers, is being considered by the Tulsa chamber of commerce. A representative of a motion picture syndicate visited the Commercial Club and stated that the dry farming grounds in Tulsa would make an ideal location for a plant and made a tentative proposition to establish a film producing plant in Tulsa. The proposition will be considered at the next meeting of the county board of commissioners.

The Oklahoma New State Fair of Muskogee, Okla., will be well advertised next week, when the picture of the society girls of Muskogee selling keys to the fair will be on exhibition at the principal theaters throughout the state. The picture was taken at the New Yale theater at Muskogee recently and the film is over 200 feet in length.

NEW YORK NOTES

Aaron Gollos, exhibitor, states rights man and regular fellow from Chicago, was a New York visitor last week. He refused to divulge the exact nature of his visit, but admitted that he came to look over some big films which might soon go the rounds of the exhibitors in Illinois and adjoining states in his name.

The Thanhouser ball of last week was a big success. The fact of its being held as far away from Broadway as New Rochelle made no difference to the many who wished to attend—and a corking good time repaid them for their journey and risk on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. L. J. Rubinstein occupied much of the limelight through his diligent efforts to make the affair enjoyable and profitable. Morris Foster and Mignon Anderson led the grand march.

George Blaisdell of the Moving Picture World and Julian Solomon of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company are newly elected members to the publicity committee of the M. P. Board of Trade.

John W. Grey, assistant to Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company and V. L. S. E., whose artistic advertising and poster work marks a new epoch in motion picture publicity, is a golf enthusiast on Saturdays and Sundays despite the tiring inconsistency of the 5:15 on which he commutes from New Rochelle to New York every day.

Rumors bearing the ear-marks of authenticity have it that Bill Barry, Nicholas Power advertising manager and popular screener, has thrown moth balls at his swimming suit and coldly deserted it. Even so and notwithstanding, it is an even break that if Indian Summer proves the least bit encouraging, Bill's mailing address will again be Brighton Beach tank.

J. Wilson of the Ohio Board of Censors was seen about Times Square recently—without a body guard. But then, Carl Pierce of Bosworth, Inc., journeyed to Los Angeles after planting "Hypocrites" in Ohio, so Mr. Wilson really had nothing to fear.

The Globe Feature Film Company, connected with the United Booking Offices, has purchased Itala's latest six-reel "Maciste" picture, and is preparing to release it within a week or two. Besides this, the Globe has a number of other excellent pictures on hand, and will soon make an announcement of great interest to exhibitors and exchange men.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

Members of our big family who attend "The Passing Show" at the Garrick theater will be glad to see our old friends the Howard Bros., who five years ago were doing small time at the Madison street picture theaters. Sammy the messenger boy makes just as big a hit at two dollars as he did at five cents.

Aaron M. Gollos returned from New York on Monday.

George L. Cox has severed his connection with the Advance Motion Picture Company.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, left Wednesday evening, September 29, for Los Angeles, California, where he expects to spend several weeks at the beautiful Selig Jungle-Zoo which was recently completed. Mr. Selig has been in Chicago for several months, but has expressed his pleasure over again having the opportunity to visit his extensive interests in the Golden State. "The film business was never more flourishing than at present," said Mr. Selig in an interview before leaving Chicago for the West. "Motion picture productions are improving and although it is more expensive now to film a meritorious play, nevertheless more people are daily attracted to the motion picture theater because of the worthiness of the average production. "We have plans about all prepared for the filming of 'The Crisis,' Churchill's wonderful story of life before and during the Civil War. We are going to introduce an all-star cast and you may say that this production will receive our very best efforts and promises to be noteworthy in every respect." Mr. Selig will be cordially welcomed when he arrives on the Pacific coast by his employes, who before Mr. Selig's departure for the East several months ago, presented him with a loving cup as a slight testimonial of their love and respect.

The Rex Theater, Sixty-eighth and Racine streets, is one of the more modern houses of Chicago, having been built some few months ago. The lighting effects are well worth mentioning. The upper wall of the theater is panelled and in the center of each panel the lights are installed in such a way that it gives the effect of the sun just coming up over the horizon. The theater is absolutely fireproof and the ventilation is perfect. Six reels of pictures, Mutual and Universal, and two acts of vaudeville, together with a three-piece orchestra constitute the bill offered by the Rex Theater. Adolph Powell is manager.

Albert Goldman, president of the Standard Motion Picture Company, advises that he has just completed a two-reel picture in Paducah, Kentucky.

Thank you, Roie C. Seery, for the splendid entertainment provided at the Studebaker theater Saturday night, when the initial showing of Triangle films was made. The show was good enough to attract our boss, Ed J. Mock, who despite a terrific cold, enjoyed himself immensely.

Speaking of shows, our hats are off to the men responsible for the Kleine-Edison feature "Vanity Fair" which had a trade showing at Orchestra Hall October 5 which was carefully engineered by Ben W. Beadell. The picture was a treat.

Arthur Bard, president Associated Film Sales Corporation, was a busy man at the Sherman House last week interviewing out-of-town exchange men anxious to tie up with his program.

The Hippodrome, Clark near Diversey, 2,600 seats, now nearing completion, will show pictures it is definitely stated. The Covent Garden Corporation is the lessee. The house will open February 1.

Morris Salkin who bought May's Admiral Theater, 49th and Indiana, has installed an eight-piece orchestra and is giving his competition a good run for its money.

The friends of anyone contemplating matrimony are referred to H. Case Hoagland the world's greatest inventor and purveyor of Hoagland's Patent Royal Japanese Perfumed Rice Torpedoes.

An enthusistic meeting of the Illinois Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association was held Friday, October 1, which over one hundred and seventy-five members attended. Action against forthcoming legislation detrimental to the industry was discussed and planned.

Moe Choinski, William N. Sweeney, Fred Hartmann and one or two others made speeches that were roundly applauded. Every one present was enlisted to secure one new member each. The work of the association is to be commended.

While talking about associations here is a letter received from Fred J. Herrington this morning:

"To the exhibitors of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky and West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and all other exhibitors that can come, you are invited to attend the convention of Ohio exhibitors at Cleveland, Ohio, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 19 and 20. While the convention is called for the Ohio exhibitors, all exhibitors are welcome and it will be the duty of the Cleveland boys to make your visit a pleasant and profitable one. As there are many things of vital importance confronting us in our business to day, we ask you to attend. Many questions that affect your profits are to be discussed. Come and give us the benefit of your ideas."

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

One of the interesting features at the Strand Theater in New York last week was the picture, "Guarding Old Glory," a patriotic American theme illustrating the efficiency of the U. S. Army service.

Harry Franklin, who has appeared on the screen in many motion pictures, has just been appointed assistant director to Edwin Carewe, whose latest picture was the Rolfe-Metro feature, "Destiny," or "The Soul of a Woman," with Emily Stevens. Mr. Franklin is already at work at the Rolfe studios assisting Mr. Carewe with his next production, "The Final Judgment," in which Ethel Barrymore will be starred.

Pedro, a timber wolf, is the first occupant of the newly built "domestic menagerie" at the Vitagraph plant. It is Mr. Sturgeon's intention to collect a fine assortment of picture animals—dogs, cats, horned toads, snakes, lizards, coyotes, etc., and keep them on hand, to be available at any time.

William S. Hart, America's premier exponent of Western character interpretation, with Clara Williams, his leading woman, and Jack Standing, the "heavy," returned to the Ince-Triangle studios this week from the Mojave desert, where they have been filming some important scenes for the current feature in which Hart is to be starred.

An unusual picture of the bleak and barren Northwest is now being produced for the American Film Co., Inc., by Director Charles Bartlett. It will be two reels and called "A Key to the Past."

President Fred J. Balshofer, of the Quality-Metro studios, in Hollywood, Cal., is away on a belated summer vacation. He is in the Sierra Madre Mountains with his guide, Pedro Leon, where he is hunting deer, mountain quail and ducks.

Pell Mitchell, who has charge of the Mutual Weekly, is receiving congratulations for his quick work in getting on the job at the Seventh avenue subway cave-in. Even before the city officials had arrived, Mr. Mitchell was present with his camera men, recording history as it was being made. The film was finished and shown in three sections at the Strand Theater the evening of the accident, less than ten hours later.

The crisis in the illness of Miss Mabel Normand, featured Keystone star, is passed and the beautiful comedienne is well on the way to recovery. Los Angeles dailies printed extras stating that Miss Normand was near death and later that she passed away. The latter report was denied immediately, however, and the following day Miss Normand was reported better and has been improving ever since.

Walter Edwin is now at work on "Canavan, the Man Who Had His Way," a film play written by himself from Rupert Hughes' story "Canavan." Arthur Hoops plays the title role opposite Miss Ruby Hoffman, while opposite Miss Della Connor, the ingenue, Billy Sherwood, the handsome Southern juvenile, from New Orleans, plays the part of the young lover.

Although a mutual admiration for each other's work on the screen has existed for a long time, Francis X. Bushman, the Quality-Metro star, and J. Warren Kerrigan, the Universal favorite, have just met for the first time. Kerrigan called at the Quality Pictures Corporation studio in Hollywood, Cal., and the two motion picture artists had a long social chat and visit.

Francis X. Bushman meets J. Warren Kerrigan.

An indication of the lengths to which the more exacting picture actors and actresses are wont to go to insure absolutely correct detail in their impersonations, may be found in the fact that Beatriz Michelena, the beautiful "California" star, has recently become a student of hypnotism. The result of her investigation is intended to assist her in one of the big scenes of "The Unwritten Law" which is now being produced at the "California" studios.

Edwin Middleton, the man who is directing "Casino Comedies," released on the regular Mutual program, is an old hand at the production of motion picture comedies. He was with the Lubin Company for years, and was more recently with the Biograph company as one of their directors.

One of the novel features of the new brick and concrete producing plant of the Keystone Film Company, now under construction under the supervision of Mack Sennett and Business Manager George Stout, will be the day and night cafe which will never close after its doors are opened. The new eating place will be up to date in every detail and the service will be equal to that of any restaurant.

Director Jack Conway, the Fine Arts Films producer, for the personal amusement of his company, recently staged a huge fiesta, which took place during the evening at Chatsworth Park, California. It is there that Mr. Conway and an exceedingly large cast are engaged in the filming of scenes to be used in the dramatic Triangle film, "The Penitentes."

Wyndham Standing, one of the famous brothers of that name, has arrived at Inceville under contract with Producer Thomas H. Ince, and is making preparations for his initial appearance before the Ince camera in a forthcoming Ince-Triangle feature.

John Emerson, who produced the Max Chappelle translation of "Old Heidleberg," at the Fine Arts Films studio, and also played the stellar role in "The Scarlet Band," has turned again to producing and is on his way to New York, where he will produce a picture play of a light comedy nature, with Douglas Fairbanks in the chief role.

Harold Lockwood, Miss May Allison and the American company directed by Thomas Ricketts is working on the San Diego Military Reservation taking scenes for the big feature written by Kenneth Clark of The Saturday Evening Post, to be called "The Buzzard's Shadow."

A new process in color photography, the discovery of William Alder, cameraman in charge of the cinematography laboratories at the Quality-Metro studios in Hollywood, has just been shown in a public exhibition for the press and public at the Majestic theater in Los Angeles.

"Heredity," by Seymour Galland, one of the manuscripts submitted in the Vitagraph Scenario Contest, is the next feature to be produced by Director William Humphrey.

Robert Harron, who created the part of younger "Stoneman" in the Griffith success, "The Birth of a Nation," has been assigned to portray the star part in a Fine Arts Films production, from a story by Eleanor Talbot Kinkead, author of the popular novels, "The Invisible Bond" and "The Courage of Blackburn Blair."

An old fashioned barn dance is being planned on completion of the immense stage at the new Vitagraph plant in East Hollywood. The affair will be strictly informal—rather an apron and overall affair—and the refreshments will include gingerbread cookies and cider.

Mr. Frank Schade, "Keystone Fritz," the jolly rotund comedian, and Miss Frida Fedderson were united in marriage on September 14th in Los Angeles. After a trip to the San Francisco exposition they returned to the pretty new bungalow which Mr. Schade recently purchased.

Jack Pickford, the well known motion picture star, will make his initial appearance as a Selig player in a two-reel Selig Special, "The Making of Crooks." He is supported by a strong and well balanced cast.

It is interesting to note, since the announcement of the release of Richard Bennett in the screen version of "Damaged Goods" through the Mutual Film Corporation on October 4th has been made, that Henry W. Pemberton, the actor who played the lead in that same play in one of the road companies last season, will appear on the Mutual program regularly in the future. He had joined the stock company of Mr. William F. Haddock at the Gaumont studio and will play leads in the Rialto Star features produced by that company for the Mutual.

Carlyle Blackwell is glad to be back at work again after his inaction. He has a wonderful part in "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" and is enthused over it. Carlyle has named his new home "Blackwell Lodge" and the latch string is out at the gate of his lovely residence.

Neva Gerber, the little "Beauty" brand actress, collapsed at the end of a recent photoplay and her mother promptly took her to Los Angeles from her work. She will take a short holiday and deserves it; she has been acting for months without scarcely a day off and like so many other willing girls overdid it. Neva is at present visiting friends in Los Angeles.

A school for the children players that appear regularly in Fine Arts Films is the latest move at the Fine Arts Films studio. A competent teacher will be in charge and school hours will be from eight to ten o'clock in the morning, and four to six o'clock in the afternoon.

William Wolbert is well on the way with his first photoplays for the Western Vitagraph, a three reeler entitled "The Wanderer," with William Duncan, Otto Lederer, Mary Ruby and Hazel Buckham in the cast. Wolbert joined the Vitagraph recently and is a well known actor-director.

Roy Clements, who has earned an enviable reputation for himself in the production of western comedy releases with the Frontier and other film companies, this week joined the Universal forces at their western studios to assume charge of the second Joker company in the production of one-reel comedies. Victor Potel, former Essanay star, will play his leading roles.

The Universal will shortly place into rehearsal, a new six-reel feature photoplay entitled, "Son of the Immortals." King Baggot will assume the leading role in the feature, while Harry Spingler is slated to depict the next role of importance in the photoplay. The direction of this important feature falls to the lot of Harry Mac Rae Webster.

Jack Murray, lieutenant of Herbert Blache, director and producer at the Popular Plays and Players-Metro studios in Fort Lee, is laid up with a severe attack of blood poisoning. Murray, in private life, is an expert roller skater, and he has been obliged to cancel his entry in a long distance event scheduled at a local rink.

Robert A. Dillon, a well known scenario writer of New York, is visiting his brother, Director Jack Dillon. He is the author of "The Man Who Couldn't Lose" and other stories.

When Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore complete their performance in "Jordan is a Hard Road," with Producer Allan Dwan, they will depart for the New York Fine Arts Films studio, where they will play the principal parts in a feature character drama laid in a New England atmosphere.

Hobart Bosworth and his company of feature players are still encamped on the edge of Bear Lake where they are producing exterior scenes in the staging of their latest five-reel feature, "The White Star."

Edgar Martin Kellar, who will be remembered for his strong work in "The Lorelei Madonna," as La Farge, the Pearler, has come from San Francisco to resume his work with Rollin Sturgeon's Feature Company.

Robert Brunton, noted throughout the country, but especially in the Middle West, as an artistic director of the first calibre, is the latest acquisition to the ranks of Producer Thomas H. Ince. He arrived this week and is now expediting his duties as chief technical director under the supervision, of course, of Ince himself. Brunton's work will be along the lines of designing sets of an elaborate and costly nature and prescribing the architecture and furnishings of settings not included in modern construction. He has given Ince sufficient reason to believe that he will prove a valuable asset to the great producer in the production of forthcoming Ince-Trangle features.

Olga Grey, who plays in the Fine Arts Films photo-adaptation of Herbert Quick's "Double Trouble," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, was recently taken ill with pneumonia. At the present writing she is gradually recovering.

Through the courtesy of Kolb & Dill, Inc., Wellington Playter, who is under contract with them for a year to play character leads, was loaned to the Quality Pictures Corporation for a period of two weeks to play the role of Jules Blondeau in the Quality-Metro production of "Pennington's Choice."

The interior of the Strand theater in New York has been changed for the winter, and presents an altogether luxurious appearance—the white hangings at the boxes have been removed and replaced with rich, red velvet ones, heavily embroidered with gold and the light striped slip covers have been removed from the red velvet orchestra chairs. The uniformed staff appear in cadet gray embroidered with gold instead of the gray and white summer uniform.

Helen Marie Osborn is Balboa's newest leading young woman. For her the Horkheimer Brothers claim the distinction of being the youngest lead before the camera and screen world today. Only recently she was three years old. At the present time, "Baby Marie," as they call her about the studio, is playing opposite Henry King.

Rupert Julian, who was this week given his own company at the Universal Pacific Coast studios, is preparing to start work on the production of two-reel story by himself, called "The White Father." No cast has thus far been assigned to him.

Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, the English comedienne, who is at present engaged in making a comedy entitled, "A Corner in Cats," at the Gaumont studios, to be released through the Mutual, has just written a book entitled, "The War Baby," which has been declared exceptionally well written, and has been accepted by Harpers. The book is a dramatic novel, telling the story of the love of a young English officer and a girl.

How is this for a combination? Cleo Madison, Tom Chatterton and Douglas Gerrard. They are playing together in a three-reeler entitled, "Live And Let Live." Tom Chatterton who came to the Universal from Inceville to play leads.

A story of Mexico, during the days when intrigue and war alarms were threatening the precipitation of the present struggle in our sitser country, is vividly told in the Vitagraph Feature production, "The Woman in the Box," now nearing completion under the direction of Harry Davenport.

Louise Glaum is acting with W. S. Hart in a feature Triangle picture. Here are two especially strong personalities playing opposite each other, both artists in their respective way. Down Inceville way, they say that Hart and Louise are going to keep audiences standing on their toe-tips.

Edward Simmons, the well known artist and interior decorator, who is in New York to execute a commisison for decorations in the home of John D. Rockefeller at Pocantico Hills, has been engaged by the Metro Pictures Corporation to design the posters to be used in the forthcoming Rolfe-Metro production, "Tables Turned," in which Emmy Wehlen is starred.

"The Devil's Admiral" by Frederick Moore, the dramatic novel, has been purchased by the Fine Arts Film Company, which will soon present it to the public in film form.

William D. Taylor has taken the principals of the "Diamond From the Sky" company to San Diego, for some aviation scnes.

So rapidly is Grace Cunard recovering from the operation which she recently underwent at Los Angeles hospital, that she has been granted permission to be removed to her home during the period of her convalescence. She will not be allowed to return to her work for another week or ten days.

Word has been received from Mr. H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of Balboa, who is in the East, that a number of important changes are pending in the film world. Rumor has it that several big combinations are forming, which will present certain of the oldest companies in new alignments. Mr. Horkheimer reports that the business outlook is improving steadily.

Henry Walthall is as well liked at the Chicago Essanay studios as he was in Los Angeles. An actor has just joined the Hollywood colony, hailing from the Essanay. He says you would scarcely know that Walthall was around, he is so quiet. He is in better health now than he has been for years and likes his work and director.

Mae Marsh, prominent in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," who recently became seriously ill with a sudden attack of pleurisy, is improving in health, according to a recent statement from the physician in attendance.

Little Mary Anderson, "Sunshine Mary," of the Western Vitagraph Company, will soon be seen in the first photoplay she acted in out West. The name of it is "Cal Marvin's Wife," and she has a delightfully sympathetic part. William Duncan took the lead opposite her.

Roy Clements, one of the latest of the arrivals at Universal City, is this week producing a one-reel comedy entitled, "By Return Mail." Victor Potel, the former Essanay comedian, is working in the feature role of this offering. "Smiling Billy" is playing in juvenile lead.

Louise Kent, who plays the role of "Nancy" in the play of the Tennessee mountains, entitled "Sunshine and Tempest," which is a three-reel Mutual Rialto Feature Release, is a very well known and clever stock actress. She has played all over the country, and is especially good in character roles.

Charles Clary, together with Orrin Johnson, Paul Gilmore and other big artists, is still at Chatsworth, Cal., where the company is making scenes for "The Penitentes," a Triangle feature.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by makes, Motography has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	10-4	The Old and the New	Biograph	1,000
D	10-4	Tides That Meet	Essanay	3,000
D	10-4	The Fashion Shop	Kleine	2,000
D	10-4	The Pretenders	Kalem	4,000
D	10-4	Think, Mothers	Lubin	1,000
D	10-4	The Sultana of the Desert	Selig	2,000
T	10-4	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 79, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-4	The Reward	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Worth of a Woman	Biograph	2,000
D	10-5	The Old Sin	Essanay	3,000
C	10-5	Whitewashing William	Kalem	1,000
C	10-5	Love and Swords	Lubin	1,000
D	10-5	The Girl and the Mail Bag	Selig	1,000
D	10-5	The Barriers of Prejudice	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

C	10-6	Black Eyes	Edison	1,000
C	10-6	The Fable of "The Statesmen Who Did Not Make Good"	Essanay	1,000
D	10-6	The Man in Irons	Kalem	2,000
D	10-6	Jim West, Gambler	Lubin	3,000
C	10-6	Fits and Chills	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-7	Her Soul Revealed	Biograph	1,000
C	10-7	Snakeville's Weak Women	Essanay	1,000
D	10-7	The Telegrapher's Peril	Lubin	2,000
C	10-7	The Honeymoon Roll	Mina	1,000
D	10-7	The Bridge of Time	Selig	3,000
T	10-7	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 80, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-8	Miss Sticky-Moufie Kiss	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-8	Billy's Stratagem	Biograph	1,000
D	10-8	An Unwilling Thief	Edison	3,000
D	10-8	Broncho Billy, Sheepman	Essanay	1,000
D	10-8	The Finger of Suspicion	Kalem	1,000
D	10-8	The Son	Lubin	1,000
C	10-8	Miss Sticky-Moufie Kiss	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	Bob's Love Affairs	Biograph	1,000
E	10-9	The Manufacture of Coin	Edison	1,000
D	10-9	Suppressed Evidence	Essanay	2,000
D	10-9	The Water Tank Plot	Kalem	1,000
C	10-9	Think of the Money	Lubin	1,000
D	10-9	The Tiger Slayer	Selig	1,000
D	10-9	Youth	Vitagraph	3,000

Monday.

D	10-11	Jealousy's Fools	Biograph	1,000
D	10-11	The Village Homestead	Essanay	3,000
D	10-11	Wilful Peggy	Kleine	2,000
D	10-11	The Dancing Doll	Kalem	3,000
D	10-11	The Emerald God	Lubin	1,000
D	10-11	The Sculptor's Model	Selig	2,000
T	10-11	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 81, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-11	The Lure of a Widow	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	Blow for Blow	Biograph	2,000
D	10-12	The Great Defeat	Essanay	2,000
C	10-12	Queering Cupid	Kalem	1,000
C	10-12	Romance of a Beanery	Lubin	1,000
D	10-12	The Foreman's Choice	Selig	1,000
C	10-12	Lillian's Husbands	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	10-13	Serge Panine	Biograph	3,000
C	10-13	The Widow's Breezy Suit	Edison	1,000
C	10-13	The Canimated Nooz Pictorial	Essanay	500
S	10-13	Canadian Rockies	Essanay	500
D	10-13	Voices in the Dark	Kalem	2,000
D	10-13	The Dragon's Claw	Knickerbocker	3,000
D	10-13	The Steadfast	Lubin	2,000
C	10-13	On with the Dance	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	The Dawn of Courage	Biograph	1,000
C	10-14	All Stuck Up	Essanay	1,000
D	10-14	Nan o' the Backwoods	Lubin	3,000
D	10-14	Title not reported	Mina
C	10-14	Landing the Hose Reel (Series No. 1 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	3,000
T	10-14	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 82, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-14	The Third Party	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-15	Pippa Passes	Biograph	1,000
D	10-15	Gladiola	Edison	4,000
D	10-15	Broncho Billy's Parents	Essanay	1,000
D	10-15	The Law at Silver Camp	Kalem	2,000
D	10-15	Belle of Barnegat	Lubin	1,000
C	10-15	How John Came Home	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Inevitable	Biograph	1,000
D	10-16	The Little Saleslady	Edison	1,000
D	10-16	The Reaping	Essanay	3,000
D	10-16	A Test of Courage	Kalem	1,000
C	10-16	The Price of Pies	Lubin	1,000
D	10-16	In the Midst of African Wilds	Selig	1,000
D	10-16	The Ruling Power	Vitagraph	2,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Aug.	23	Wheels of Justice	Vitagraph	4,000
Aug.	23	House of Thousand Candles	Selig	5,000
Aug.	30	The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros	Lubin	4,000
Sept.	6	Mortmain	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept.	13	The Man Trail	Essanay	6,000
Sept.	20	Playing Dead	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	10-4	Damaged Goods	American	7,000
D	10-4	Just As It Happened	American	2,000
C	10-4	Cousin Clara's Cook Book	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-4	The Corsican Brothers Up to Date	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Light on the Reef	Thanhouser	3,000
S	10-5	See America First	Gaumont	500
C	10-5	Keeping Up With the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	10-5	Mother's Busy Week	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-6	Sunshine and Tempest	Rialto	3,000
C	10-6	Just Like His Wife	Mutual	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-7	Rhoda's Burglar	Centaur	2,000
C	10-7	Dicky's Demon Dachshund	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-7	Mutual Weekly, No. 40	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-8	Breezy Bill, Outcast	Mustang	2,000
D	10-8	The Sting of It	American	1,000
C	10-8	A Change of Luck	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	Pardoned	Clipper	3,000
C	10-9	Curing Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-10	The Queen of the Band	Reliance	2,000
C	10-10	A Corner in Cats	Casino	1,000
D	10-10	The Has-Been	Thanhouser	1,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.
THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.
SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Monday.

D	10-11	Let There Be Light	American	2,000
C	10-11	Capers of College Chaps	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-11	Miss Trillies Big Feet	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	The Scoop at Belville	Thanhouser	1,000
C	10-12	Down on the Phony Farm	Thanhouser	1,000
S	10-12	See America First, No. 5	Gaumont	500
C	10-12	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	10-12	Billie, the Hill Billy	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-13	The Bread Line	Reliance	3,000
C	10-13	Gold Bricking Cupid	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	Stanley's Close Call	Centaur	2,000
C	10-14	Bing Bang Brothers	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-14	Mutual Weekly, No. 41	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-15	Two Spot Joe	Mustang	2,000
D	10-15	Profit from Loss	American	1,000
C	10-15	Taking a Chance	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Long Arm of the Secret Service	Than-o-Play	3,000
C	10-16	Aided by the Movies	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-17	The Ever-Living Isle	Reliance	2,000
C	10-17	Cissy's Romeos	Casino	1,000
D	10-17	John T. Rocks and the Flivver	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	10-4	Fatherhood	Broadway	4,000
C	10-4	When a Man's Fickle	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-5	The Silent Battle	Gold Seal	3,000
	10-5	No release this week	Rex
C	10-5	The Unnecessary Sex	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-6	The Woman Who Lied	Victor	3,000
	10-6	No release this week	L-Ko
T	10-6	Animated Weekly, No. 187	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	10-7	No release this week	Imp
D	10-7	The $50,000 Jewel Theft	Big U	2,000
C	10-7	The Acrobat's Dream	Powers	500
C	10-7	The Hero of the Gridiron	Powers	500

Friday.

D	10-8	The House With the Drawn Shades	Rex	2,000
	10-8	No release this week	Victor
C	10-8	Eddie's Little Love Affair	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-9	The Queen of Jungle Land	Bison	3,000
D	10-9	The Third Partner	Powers	1,000
C	10-9	Fifty Dollars for a Kiss	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-10	Alas and Alack	Rex	1,000
D	10-10	Marianna	Laemmle	1,000
C	10-10	A Bath House Tragedy	L-Ko	2,000
D	10-10	The Broken Coin, No. 16	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	10-11	The Man of Shame	Broadway	5,000
C	10-11	Some Fixer	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	The Kiss of Dishonor	Gold Seal	2,000
C	10-12	The Healing of Mary Brown	Rex	1,000
C	10-12	Bashful Glen	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

	10-13	No release this week	Victor
C	10-13	Under New Management	L-Ko	2,000
T	10-13	Animated Weekly, No. 188	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	The Girl of the Dance Hall	Laemmle	3,000
	10-14	No release this week	Big U
C	10-14	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "When the Wets Went Dry"	Powers	1,000

Friday.

	10-15	No release this week	Imp
D	10-15	A Kentucky Idyll	Victor	1,000
C	10-15	And the Best Man Won	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Yellow Star	Bison	3,000
D	10-16	The Vengeance of Guido	Powers	1,000
C	10-16	No Babies Allowed	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-17	A Mother's Atonement	Rex	3,000
	10-17	No release this week	Laemmle
C	10-17	Does Flirting Pay?	L-Ko	1,000
D	10-17	The Broken Coin, No. 17	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000

Associated Service.

Oct.	11	The Highest Bidder	Empire	2,000
Oct.	11	Joe's Devotion	Navajo	1,000
Oct.	11	Too Much Elixir of Life	Alhambra	1,000
Oct.	11	A Movie Nut	Banner	2,000
Oct.	11	The Blind Music Master	Santa Barbara	2,000
Oct.	11	Rhoda's Burglar	Centaur	2,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Sept.	8	Money Master	Kleine	5,000
Sept.	15	The Fixer	Kleine-Edison	1,000
Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	13	The Silent Voice	Metro	6,000
Sept.	20	The Bigger Man	Metro	5,000
Sept.	27	An Enemy to Society	Metro	5,000
Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept.	2	Infatuation	American	4,000
Sept.	9	The Wolf-Man	Reliance	4,000
Sept.	16	The Man From Oregon	N. Y. M. P.	5,000
Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	15	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	6	The Foundling	Famous Players	5,000
Sept.	6	Esmeralda	Famous Players	4,000
Sept.	9	Out of Darkness	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	13	Peer Gynt	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Sept.	13	The Case of Becky	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	20	The Explorer	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	23	'Twas Ever Thus	Bosworth	5,000
Sept.	27	The Voice in the Fog	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Sept.	30	The Fatal Card	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	7	A Girl of Yesterday	Famous Players	4,000
Oct.	11	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	14	Blackbirds	Lasky	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Sept.	27	The Lost Secret	Balboa	2,000
Sept.	27	Exploring Ephraim's Exploit	Pathe	500
Sept.	27	An Intimate Study of Birds No. 8	Pathe	500
Sept.	27	Pathe News No. 78	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	27	Pathe News No. 79	Pathe	1,000
Sept.	27	Neal of the Navy No. 5	Panama	2,000
Sept.	27	The Spender	Gold Rooster	5,000
Sept.	27	Considerable Milk	Starlight	1,000
Oct	4	New Adventures of Wallingford	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	4	Fresh From the Farm	Phunphilms	1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 80	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 81	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	4	Picturesque Zeeland (Holland)	Photocolor	500
Oct.	4	Altar of Heaven (Pekin, China)	Globe	500
Oct.	4	Neal of the Navy, No. 6	Panama	2,000
Oct.	4	The Closing Net	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	4	Pretty Rough on Aunty	Starlight	1,000
Oct.	11	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 2	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	11	When Mice Make Merry	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	An Intimate Study of Birds	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 82	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 83	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	Neal of the Navy, No. 7	Panama	2,000
Oct.	11	John Glayde's Honor	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	11	Wilful Wallops for Wealth	Starlight	1,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Sept.	27	Salvation Nell	California
Sept.	27	Letters from Bugs to Gus, No. 12	World Comedy
Sept.	27	Little Mademoiselle	Shubert
Sept.	27	The Lure of a Woman	Armstrong
Sept.	27	The Master of the House	Triumph	5,000
Oct.	3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert
Oct.	3	The Price	Triumph
Oct.	10	The Family Cupboard	Brady
Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable
Oct.	17	The Code of the Mountains	Shubert

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

The Pretenders—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—OCTOBER 4.—Crawford Kent and Marguerite Courtot featured. Dick, who thinks Elsie is a farmer's daughter, and Elsie, who thinks Dick is a hired man, fall in love with each other. Shortly afterward Dick accidentally exchanges traveling bags with Spike, a burglar. Later that night he sees Elsie apparently breaking into a cottage, and believing her a thief, follows her into the house, where Spike, the burglar, also is, and the three are bagged by a detective and are locked up in the village jail. Dick eventually clears himself after Elsie's identity has been established by her father and the girl taken home. Some time later Dick accompanies a friend to a dinner at the Dunbar's home and he finds himself confronting Elsie, who, believing him a thief, shouts for help. However, the snarl is untangled and their love resumes its course.

Whitewashing William—KALEM—OCTOBER 5.—William Cruller loves Arabella, but his rival, Archimedes Asphalt, has won the girl's affections. a battle takes place between the two, in which the weapons are whitewash buckets and brushes. The following day Arabella is compelled to go canoeing with William and when the canoe is upset Archie rescues Arabella and elopes with her. William, thinking she has drowned, dives in vain for her, and after returning to the bank of the stream he discovers that Archie and his sweetheart are married.

The Man in Irons—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—OCTOBER 6.—The appearance of counterfeit $10 bills at the Grand Hotel fills the management with consternation. Vallie Martin registers at the hotel and gets in touch with a Dr. Perrin. Jack Arling, who loves the doctor's daughter, finds himself regarding Vallie with suspicion. Arling later traces a bill back to Perrin and he makes an attempt to arrest the doctor. Later the doctor is mortally wounded and confesses to be the head of the counterfeiters. Vallie as captured and through information supplied by her leads to the roundup of King and the entire band.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—No. 80—PATHE—OCTOBER 7.—Victims of F-4 are borne to Arlington National Cemetery, Washington; ostriches hitched to light runabouts and put on race course, Los Angeles, Calif.; state dedicates twenty-mile highway cut out of solid rock by convict labor, Canyon City, Colo.; tank car explodes and tears down buildings at Ardmore, Okla.; latest fashions designed by Lucile, Lady Duff Gordon; baseball stars in two leagues start for world's championship flag; imported mules condemned because of bad tempers are broken on farm, near London; convalescent soldiers of British army are entertained by expert swimmers and divers on the Thames river, Moseley, England; Harry K. Thaw and his mother and her niece pose in front of building at Panama-Pacific grounds, San Francisco, Calif.

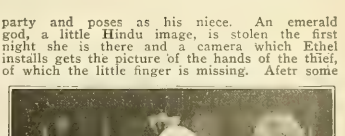
Broncho Billy, Sheepman—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 8.—Feautring G. M. Anderson as Broncho Billy, who goes to the village store and purchases an engagement ring for his sweetheart, the school teacher. On his way home he is fired upon and wounded. He goes to the school house, where he is protected by his sweetheart. In the meantime the cattle king has also been wounded by a shot, and is picked up and cared for by Broncho Billy's parents. When he discovers who has saved him he goes to the school house, where he begs Broncho's forgiveness.

The Finger of Suspicion—KALEM—OCTOBER 8.—Robert Wallace gets a position in the west and urges his sweetheart, Kathleen, to marry him, but she, on account of her invalid sister, refuses to go. Robert steps into the invalid sister's room to say goodby and shortly after his departure she is found dead. Robert is placed under arrest on a murder charge, but the evidence is not strong enough to convict him and he is freed. Later Kathleen finds a note from Adele telling her that she is going to set her free and commit suicide. Kathleen hastens to the station, overtakes Robert and shows him the note which clears his name forever.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 79—HEARST-SELIG—OCTOBER 9.—Supply ship arrives from Honolulu bearing bodies of members of crew of undersea craft F-4 that sunk during maneuvers; Boston fire department demonstrates new automobile engines and ladder trucks; six "queens" from Butte county distribute thousands of pennies to lads at Panama-Pacific Exposition; Princess Alexander of Teck inspects Canadian troops at Shorncliffe Camp, England; Belgian recruits given instructions in horsemanship; Belgian base near Havre, France; M. Gilbert, famous French airman who was made prisoner, returns to Paris; moving day at Central Park Zoo, New York; President Wilson arrives at Princeton, N. J., to take part in election for state and county offices; National Guards mobilize in New York for mimic war and are reviewed by Governor Whitman.

The Water Tank Plot—KALEM—OCTOBER 9.—Featuring Helen Holmes. Learning that Cameron's horse is being shipped to the track on the special, Dorgan, who wants to drug the animal, discovers that the train will stop at Lone Point and decides to drug the water in the tank. Helen, fishing from the trestle, sees the men approaching and learns of their plot. She follows Tony to the partly filled tank and finds herself staring into the muzzle of his pistol. The special stops and takes water. Helen knocks her captor from the ladder and the train is just pulling out when she jumps to the edge of the tank and lands aboard the last car. The crooks are later all killed in a smashup.

Jealousy's Tools—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 11.—Featuring Charles Perley, Robert Nolan and Augusta Anderson. The partners answer an advertisement of a girl, "object, matrimony." In a few days they receive a photograph and a note asking for $100 for clothes and traveling expenses. They both send $50 and decide that she is to choose between them. On the day when she is expected to arrive they decide to settle it with cards, and the result is that the loser starts up, there is a struggle, a gun speaks, and the partnership is severed. Just as he is leaving he meets the mail carrier, who gives him a letter from Marie in which he reads in her mocking handwriting: "Received from a fool there was, $100 for one picture."



In the Palace of the King—(SIX REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 11.—Featuring E. J. Ratcliffe, Richard Travers, Arleen Hackett and Lewis Eggbard. A romantic costume drama that was reviewed at length on page 743 of the issue of October 9.

The Village Homestead—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 11.—Featuring Darwin Karr and Betty Brown. Jim Canby is sent to investigate certain moonshiners in a certain district and poses as an unsophisticated city youth. He buys a homestead where he suspects the moonshiners are at work, and here he falls in love with Sallie Samson, who is also loved by one of the daring band of moonshiners. The moonshiners finally plot to kill Canby and Sallie, overhearing it, hurries to warn Canby of his danger. He and his assistant are attacked by the moonshiners, but later they capture them and Canby also learns that he has captured the girl's heart.

The Dancing Doll—(THREE REELS)—KALEM.—Featuring Vivian Wessell. Felix supports himself by selling wooden dolls. Grown to manhood, the boy becomes engaged to Hilda, who is fond of dancing, and meeting Hart, a professional dancer, she elopes with him. His sweetheart's flight drives Felix mad. He fashions a life-sized figure in Hilda's likeness and dresses it in her clothes. Mechanism enables the doll to walk and dance. Hilda finds her married life unhappy and returns to the mountains. Among his father's books Felix finds a note which states that a spark of life can be implanted into a lifeless form by lightning. A violent storm comes up as Hilda approaches the house. A flash of lightning stuns Felix and Hilda, entering, removes the dry clothes from the doll and dons them. When Felix recovers consciousness he sees Hilda and believes the doll has come to life. Later Felix's sanity returns and he and Hilda gaze at each other in perfect trust and understanding.

The Sculptor's Model—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—OCTOBER 11.—Richard Haynes, a millionaire sculptor, is seeking a model for his figure of "Dawn." By chance he stops at the Gray farm in the country where lives Farmer Gray, his wife, their son and their adopted daughter, Una. Tom Gray, the son, and Una are in love, but as the girl appeals to the sculptor as being the ideal type for his model, she returns to the city with him. Gray follows Haynes and accuses him of having lured the girl from home, but Haynes convinces him that he merely is the girl's employer, but that he also has a deep loves for her. They agree to let the girl choose between them, and when the three are brought face to face Una decides Tom is the one she loves and goes to his arms.

The Emerald God—LUBIN—OCTOBER 11.—Featuring Jessalyn Van Trump, L. C. Shumway, and a strong cast. Ethel Holt, a girl detective, attends James Elston's house party and poses as his niece. An emerald god, a little Hindu image, is stolen the first night she is there and a camera which Ethel installs gets the picture of the hands of the thief, of which the little finger is missing. Afetr some time it is discovered that Rollin Ryse, a reckless spendthrift is the thief and Ethel, ashamed of her unjust suspicions of Oliver Weber, a society Raffles, turns to him and the man finds in the love of the good woman an incentive to lead a nobler life in the future.

The Lure of a Widow—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 11.—Featuring Nitra Frazier, Wally Van and Charles Eldridge. Lucy, believing that widows are the only ones able to secure husbands, becomingly dressed in black and with a big doll smothered in wrappings to resemble a baby, descends upon the seaside hotel. She falls in love with Tom, whose uncle detests widows. At times she handles the doll very carelessly, and the crowd is horrified to see her one day suddenly heavy the "baby" out into the water and fling her arms about Tom. A dozen heroes are on their way to the rescue and bring the doll to shore. When Lucy explains to them, all have a good laugh and Lucy wins a husband.

The Great Deceit—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 12.—An all star cast featured. Jack Allen's wife is informed by her physician that it will be impossible for her to bear children. She does not tell her husband of this, and shortly after he is called to South America. After a long period Grace's sister, Louise, receives a letter from her supposed husband telling her of their illegal marriage and Louise goes to stay with her sister. Shortly after a baby is born, and to save her sister's honor and her own happiness Grace leads her husband to believe that the child is theirs. Later Grace dies and Louise becomes the wife of John Allen. The secret is held until the boy proves a great disappointment and then the truth becomes known.

Queering Cupid—KALEM—OCTOBER 12.—Almond and his rival are about to slay each other for Bertha's sake when Bertha smiles upon Ferdinand Fizzle. Ferdinand makes love to Bertha and gives her a quantity of jewelry. Ferdinand returns home and his irate wife asks him where the jewelry is he had taken to the jeweler. The flirt hastens to Bertha's home and tries to remove the gifts by force. Al hires a couple of gangsters to kidnap Bertha and takes her to a minister's, and Al is compelling the minister to perform the marriage ceremony when the police, attracted by the row, arrive. The officer in charge is a good-looking chap and when Al drops his gun Bertha picks up the pistol, holds up the dominie and the policeman, and compels the latter to make her his.

Romance of a Beanery—LUBIN—OCTOBER 12.—Featuring Dorothy Roth, David L. Lon and Jack Delson. Heinie Schmalzer, owner of a restaurant in a western town, is much enamoured with his cashier, Lizzie Banks. He invites her to the waiters' union picnic, and there Jack Darrow, a young millionaire, flirts with the girl, who manages to steal away from Heinie, who makes a deal with an Italian for a knife, gun and bomb, and when he gets them in his hands refuses to pay the Italian. Heinie discovers Jack and Lizzie, and throws the bomb at their feet. Jack picks it up, lights his cigar with it and throws it back. Later Heinie meets Lizzie, who is returning, after having quarreled with Jack. He picks her up in his arms and runs, and we last see them walking down the railroad track.

The Foreman's Choice SELIG—OCTOBER 12.—Tom Hickson leaves for the Diamond S ranch to become foreman. Vicky, stepdaughter of Bull Dexter, tears up a notice offering a reward for Dexter's arrest just as Tom rides up, and Tom unsuspectingly meets Bud and trades horses with him, and later saves Vicky's life. When Tom returns to the ranch on Dexter's horse the sheriff and the ranch owner are suspicious of him, but he induces them to let him hunt down Bull Dexter. He shoots Dexter's horse from under him and makes him a prisoner, but Vicky rides up and pleads with Tom to let Dexter go. He does and takes the girl in his arms.

Lillian's Husbands—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 12.—Featuring Lillian Walker and a comedy cast. Lillian receives a letter from her guardian saying he would be pleased to hear that she was happily married. Her girl friends advise her to write him that she is married and she does this. When he comes in person to congratulate her, she shows him a picture of her friend Mollie's fiance, and an exasperating but ludicrous mixup follows. Later Turner, her guardian, takes the fellow's place who was hired to marry her and in a disguise he marries the girl himself. When he reveals his identity Lillian nestles in his arms.

Serge Panine—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 13.—Featuring a strong cast. Madame Desvaenes' daughter, Micheline, and her foster-daughter, Jeanne, have prospects of happy marriages. Pierre, Micheline's sweetheart, goes on a trip to France and during his absence Serge Panine, a penniless nobleman, is introduced into the household. He falls in love with Jeanne, who returns his passion, but he marries Micheline because he thinks she is the better match; and Jeanne, through pique, marries Cayrol, a banker, who loves her. One day Cayrol plans to leave home, but Madame Desvaenes urges him not to go. Serge leaves his wife and in the dead of night goes into Cayrol's home, where Jeanne receives him in rapture. Cayrol, returning, discovers them together in his wife's boudoir and the excitement kills him. Serge hastens home and tells Micheline that he may be held responsible for Cayrol's death, and the girl breaks the news to her mother, who tells Serge to kill himself. He refuses and she makes up her mind, a shot is heard, Serge Panine is dead with a pistol by his side, and Madame Desvarennes is standing ominously by.

Blow for Blow—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 13.—Featuring a strong cast. Alice and Mildred are twin sisters. Alice elopes with one Arthur Petherick and her father sends her from the house. Mildred is bothered with attentions from Drummond, her father's former clerk, but later she marries William Linden. Some time after his marriage Linden goes abroad and Drummond comes upon Mildred alone in the garden. He pursues her to the edge of a cliff, where, rather than fall into his hands, she commits suicide by jumping. The butler witnesses the death, but keeps silence. Dr. Grace, a friend of Linden's, while visiting in the slums, meets Alice Peteherink and Drummond meets her husband, and, learning where she is, plans to deal Linden another blow. He tells Alice that Mildred was poisoned by Linden, and desiring vengeance for her sister, the girl whom Linden had never seen, the girl falls in with his plan, which is to pretend that she is Mildred; but the old butler comes forward with his story and Drummond is arrested.

The Widow's Breezy Bathing Suit—EDISON—OCTOBER 13.—Featuring Sally Crute. The widow arrives at the seaside resort and as one man the men, who are enslaved by her beauty, vow to win her. They start out gay "doings" and some time later they discover that the veiled lady whom they treat to refreshments while she is occupying the widow's wheel chair is none other than the widow's colored maid. The widow's last day at the beach she goes bathing and while in deep water was taken with a cramp. Albertus Simpleton jumps into the water and goes to her assistance. When she is leaving they all come to say goodby and the widow tells Albertus that she is father's widow, she having married his father while Albertus was touring in Italy and she is quite contented to remain a widow.

The Canimated Nooz Pictorial—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 13.—Cartoon dealing with the topics of the day from a humorous standpoint. Also five hundred feet of scenes taken in the gorgeous Canadian Rockies.

Voices in the Dark—(TWO REELS)—KALEM.—OCTOBER 13.—Ethel refuses to become Harvey's wife. Later her father suffers a financial loss and obtains a loan from McCall, who poses as a mine owner. When Granger cannot meet the note, McCall consents to cancel it upon condition that her father consent to Ethel and his marriage. Ethel then learns that she is not Granger's daughter, but had been left on the doorstep when an infant and that the widower had adopted her. Rawlins, the housekeeper, also overhears the foregoing and the woman recognizes McCall. She then declares that McCall is her husband and Ethel is their daughter, and tells how, after McCall had been arrested, she had placed her upon Granger's doorstep. Harvey learns of Ethel's parentage, but his love is so great that he repeats his determination to make her his wife.

The Steadfast—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—OCTOBER 13.—Henry Wygand receives a contract for the construction of a railroad bridge and awards the sub-contract to supply cement to his wife's father, William Floyd, who is persuaded to substitute an inferior cement for the bridge. Several months after its completion the bridge gives way and there is a terrible wreck. The shock proves too much for Floyd and he dies, leaving Burke, his chief clerk, in control of the business, who begins to press his attentions upon Mrs. Wygand. Wygand, who has been imprisoned, is later freed when Burke's servant tells him of the papers telling of Burke's guilt. Later the papers proving Burke's guilt are found and Wygand returns to happiness with his little family.

On With the Dance—(VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 13.—Featuring John T. Kelly and Mary Maurice in a story of a grandmother and grandfather who pay a surprise to their married daughter, but find they have gone out to a tango tea. When the young people return we see entrancing visions of the terpsichorean art as it was in days past and also the latest Maxixe steps. Both sides are unconvinced and finally the Maxixe gets into the old folks' blood, and we next see them dancing among the young people at one of those scorned tango teas.

The Dawn of Courage—BIOGRAPH.—Featuring Curtis Cooksey, Isabel Rea and Hector V. Sarno. Sands, assistant to the village assayer, is driven from his sweetheart's side by the town bully, and the girl, regretting his overdrive, releases him from their engagement. Some time later a mysterious spot develops on his arm and the village doctor pronounces it leprosy. The doctor goes insane from overwork and starts to shoot up the town. Sands sees the danger, attacks the madman and overpowers him. Another doctor from another town hearing Sands declare that his bravery was inspired by the knowledge of his own doom, investigates the reason and discovers that the spot on his arm was caused by a chemical which he has spilled, and then Sands feels Ruth's hand steal into his.

All Stuck Up—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 14.—Featuring a strong cast. The salesman lands a big order for sticky fly paper in the town of Podunk and the storekeeper places the paper in every conceivable place. Before long his customers find themselves covered from head to foot with his sticky paper and every housewife is also well supplied, and many side-splitting scenes take place as a result. Finally the salesman is kicked out of town, after being plastered up with his marvelous fly paper.

Nan of the Back Woods—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—OCTOBER 14.—Featuring Valentine Grant and a strong cast. A dramatic story of "Nan of the Back Woods" and how, after some time, she marries the man of her choice. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Landing the Hose Reel—(FIRST CHRONICLE OF BLOOM CENTER)—(THREE REELS)—SELIG—OCTOBER 14.—The inauguration of an entirely new style of screen comedy and one which bids fair to spread like wildfire. The rural characters are skillfully drawn and wonderfully amusing, each being interpreted by a real artist. The first chronicle concerns the donation of a hose reel to Bloom Center by Millionaire Warren of New York, and the trial runs of the rural department on the day of the presentation. After two false alarms, the fire laddies refuse to respond when the chief's house really goes up in smoke. A more complete review of the picture appeared in the last issue of MOTOGRAPHY. N. G. C.

The Third Party—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 14.—Featuring a strong cast. Dr. Williams unconsciously neglects his young wife, and Newell Russell, a young society idler, becomes acquainted with them, and Bobby, the doctor's son, takes a great fancy to him. A former suitor of the doctor's wife writes a letter to him telling him he had better watch his wife. The doctor demands an explanation from Newell at the point of an automatic and forces the young man to come back into the house. Mrs. Williams saves the situation and the doctor is satisfied and apologizes, but Newell puts the gun and forces the wife's former suitor to come to the house and make a confession before them all.

Pippa Passes — BIOGRAPH—(REISSUE)—OCTOBER 15.—Featuring an all star cast. Pippa, the silk winder, goes forth with a song on her lips. A workman drinking away his wages hears the song and returns to his wife. A student, discovering the character of the woman he has married, is on the point of striking her when Pippa's song changes his heart. In another place a wife is persuading her lover to kill her spouse when Pippa passes, and the murderer's hand is palsied and the recreant wife chastened. And so it is wherever Pippa passes until she returns to her little room and sleeps, unconscious of it all.

Gladiola—(FOUR REELS)—EDISON—OCTOBER 15.—Viola Dana featured. Gladiola Bain, a pretty and unsophisticated country girl, leaves her home and marries a wealthy man from the city. A few months after her marriage she learns that Warren has lied to her, as he has another wife. She returns to her father. At her old home her baby is born. Later Warren's wife dies. He returns to the farm and pleads with Gladiola to forget the past, but she refuses. In the end she turns to her loyal friend Abner, a country boy. See a longer review on page 53 of last issue.

The Law of Silver Camp—KALEM—OCTOBER 15.—A deadly feud between Walstead and Kerns leads to the gambler's death at the stagecoach driver's hands. Rose, the slain man's daughter, vows to avenge his murder, and Long, a young surveyor, saves Kerns' life and hears Rose's story. Kerns makes Paul the target for a volley of abuse while he is in the little frontier saloon, and Paul knocks the town bulley down, and Kerns being taunted by his gang for having been bested by Paul, starts a free-for-all fight in the course of which he breaks the mirror behind the bar and the saloonkeeper offers $100 for his arrest. Kerns is descending the face of a cliff and falls to his death and Paul and Rose discover the body. The marshall and his posse place them under arrest, but their innocence is established when it proves that Kerns died as a result of the fall.

Belle of Barnegat—LUBIN—OCTOBER 15.—A strong cast featured. A passenger steamer catches fire and among the passengers is a young mother who is unable to leave the boat before the sinking of the vessel, and with her little one takes to the water on a piece of wreckage. The mother dies and the little one is adopted by the brave hearts comprising the crew at the station. After a lapse of years Belle of Barnegat is loved by Tom Dawes. However, she becomes interested in Harry Fonda, a new acquaintance. Later Tom goes out in his boat, which capsizes, and the ropes and sheets of the rigging become so wrapped about him that it is impossible for him to extricate himself. Belle rows out into the storm, rescues Tom and in each other's arms vows are made which are never to be broken.

How John Came Home—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 15.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. John disappears, leaving the impression he has drowned. After his money is all gone, he accepts a job as a hackdriver. Mary, his widow, is left a fortune by her rich uncle and in coming out of the lawyer's office she gets into John's hack. When he hears that his wife is wealthy, he employs the "lost memory" trick and gets away with it beautifully, being received with open arms by his wife.

The Inevitable—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 16.—Featuring Claire McDowell, Alan Hale and Vola Smith. The frivolous wife meets the artist and the affair progresses until she faces the alternative of guarding her husband's honor or going with the other man. The husband's cousin, a young girl, pleads vainly with the wife to think of her husband and child. Time passes and the artist begins to tire of her. The thought of her child saves her from committing suicide and at length she goes to the home of her husband's cousin, where the child is. Stress of emotion causes the mother to faint and she is borne into the house by her husband and where, in the midst of memories long lost, she is reconciled to her loved ones before dying.

The Little Saleslady—EDISON—OCTOBER 16.—Leoni Flugrath as the little girl behind the counter, who, in her effort to earn her own living, is beset by temptation. Virtue is rewarded and the girl is led to the altar by the owner of the department store. Robert Walker plays the part of the employer.

The Reaping—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 16.—Featuring Lillian Drew and Richard

Travers. Dennis becomes engaged to Diana. One evening he betrays her and later he dies. Diana goes to the country home of her aunt and shortly after a boy is born. When she returns to the city the boys poses as her aunt's adopted son. Later Diana marries and a little girl is born to her, and as the years go by the children fall in love with each other. The boy asks Diana to marry her daughter and she confesses the truth to her husband, and she is about to tell the children when her aunt tells her that Diana's real son is dead and that she had substituted an adopted child for her niece's son years before.

A Test of Courage—Kalem—October 16.—Helen is imprisoned in a clothes closet by Denning and is able to escape by picking the lock with a hairpin. The two desperadoes board a freight and escape. Helen emerges just as the local passes and swings aboard the last car. She induces the engineer to overhaul the freight. Realizing their danger, the crooks hold up the freight engineer, compel him to cut the engine loose and speed away. They then desert the engine and flee. They circle back and climb aboard the freight engine and open the throttle. Helen runs after the locomotive and just succeeds in swinging aboard it, and meeting the crooks she holds them at bay with a pistol. Later they are captured by the railroad men.

The Price of Pies—Lubin—October 16.—Billie Reeves featured as a bill poster and later as a sandwich man. He lays the boards aside and takes a nap in a freight car, and later he is found by the brakeman. He has been advertising a convict picture and is in a prison suit to help along the effect, and as there is a reward out for a man who has escaped, Bill thinks they want him for stealing pies. He starts to run, but after eating four pies a stomach ache comes on and he is compelled to saw wood to pay for the pies.

In the Midst of the Wilds—Selig—October 16.—Jan Kraga and his daughter, Meta, receive a call from Kraga's friend, John Morgan, who falls in love with Meta. Hans Vedder, a neighboring farmer, goes to Kraga and demands that Meta name a wedding day. When Meta refuses to do this her father orders her from the house. Armed with a small knife, the girl enters into the jungle and after a fight with a ferocious leopard she escapes death by a miracle. Later she is found with a huge elephant, which is conducting her from the jungle wilds, and after being taken home by her father, who is remorseful, she agrees to marry Sir John.

The Woman in the Box—(Two Reels)—Vitagraph—October 16.—Featuring Harry Morey, Peggy Blake, L. Rogers Lytton and George Cooper. Milton Asheton of the United States secret service, while in Mexico, attends the opera and becomes attracted to a beautiful woman sitting in a box opposite. The following evening he attends a ball at the Mexican secretary of war's house and the hostess proves to be the lady whom he met at the opera. She is an American-born woman and, finding papers which prove her husband a traitor, she shows Milton a copy. Her husband and Milton later arrange for a duel, but the husband is assassinated and after seccring the documents and delivering them to Washington, Milton returns to Mexico City and woos and wins the "Lady in the Box."

The Land of Adventure—(Three Reels)—Edison—October 22.—The cast includes Edward Earle, Johnnie Walker, Margaret Prussing and Jean Dumar. Two young Americans visit a Central American republic at the solicitation of the president, who asks them to aid in bringing the revolution to an end. They rescue two American girls from the revolutionist leader. Renolds captures the leader and turns him over to the president. The Americans are handsomely rewarded by the president. They also win the love of the girls they rescued. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Program

Bizzy Izzy—(Two Reels)—Gaumont—September 24.—Bizzy Izzy is in the cloak trade. Although Muggs, his cloak model, is not unattractive to him, she being homely, is the cause of his losing much business. At last Izzy's office manager persuades him to advertise for a beautiful model, and Maisy, fair of form and face, answers. She has been having trouble with her husband, who has refused to purchase her a new hat. After Maisy's rescue from an embarrassing position in a restaurant, a boxing match, and Izzy's arrest, Maisy accompanies her spouse home and Muggs gets her old job back.

His Lordship's Dilemma—Casino—October 3.—Featuring W. C. Fields. Fields, a remittance man, informs Bud, his valet, that he is broke and that they must both look for jobs. Unknown to each other, they obtain work carrying advertising signs. The two meet and cleverly manage to obtain lunch without paying. In the park Fields and Bud read that Lord Swan has won a Fifth avenue heiress by his wonderful golf playing. In his dream, Fields does not win his heiress by golf playing exactly, but by his skill and bravery in using one of the clubs to whack a bomb planted by two Blackhanders on the steps of Mr. Moneybags' home. Waking, Fields, in disappointed rage, pushes his ex-valet into the lake and as he fails to rise Fields saddles away, realizing that his future battles must be fought single-handed.

Cousin Clara's Cook Book—Falstaff—October 4.—Bings, a book agent, has a tough time in selling copies of "Cousin Clara's Cook Book." Returning to the office disheartened, he meets the author of the compilation, who is a dainty little girl with dreamy eyes. This girl inspires him to adopt a new modus operandi, and in desperation he conceives the following plan: He calls up the local newspaper, introducing himself as the proprietor of a sanitarium and tells the editor that one of his patients has escaped; that he had been a book agent, and should he return to his old occupation, to warn the people to buy at once or he cannot answer for the consequences. It makes a good story; the plan works well, and Bings returns with a wad of good money. But the girl, instead of gratefully falling into his arms, produces a hulking youth to whom she is to be married on the strength of the book's sales. Soon the detonation of the book striking the head of the youth is heard for a considerable distance, and Bings wanders out into the cold world.

The Light on the Reef—(Two Reels)—Thanhouser—October 5.—The little favorite of the dance hall has grown tired of the empty pleasures of her life and unconsciously seeks after an ideal sweetheart. The latter is not long in appearing, for after the accident a stalwart young man picks her up and takes her to the hospital. The man, a lighthouse keeper, marries the girl, and all is happiness until one of the girl's former admirers tells the husband of her past life. He is furious and orders her away without listening to her entreaties. The husband is grieved over the breaking up of his home and going on shore, takes to drink. He sleeps way past the time when the beacon should be lighted, and when he is awakened realizes how he is disgraced. He rushes madly down to the beach. Arriving there, a remarkable thing occurs. The great light, at first dark, is illuminated. Later he learns that his cast-off wife had swum out and taken his place. He forgives the girl and they embrace.

Rhoda's Burglar—(Two Reels)—Centaur—October 7.—Welden Shaw and his wife have one daughter, Rhoda. Their domestic affairs grow from bad to worse until the wife leaves her husband, taking her daughter with her, and marries a suave old roue. Her first husband, broken in spirit, becomes a burglar. The stepfather plans to carry off Rhoda to a libertine friend of his and the husband, hearing of the wedding, decides to rob the house of the wedding presents. He goes to the house, and the daughter, hearing a noise, goes downstairs and confronts him. She recognizes the burglar as her father and explains to him of her forced marriage and tells him she wants her father to aid her to wed a sweetheart of her own. Later Shaw and his wife are again happily reunited and the little girl at his feet listening to stories of wild animals.

The Has-Been — Thanhouser — October 10.—The sheriff's son returns from college and opens up a law office. Suddenly a string of crimes take place; banks are robbed, stages and mail trains held up, etc., all of which robberies have been committed by a single desperado. The sheriff does not get his man and, disheartened over his failure, he resigns. Whisky starts him on the downward trail and as the years pass he becomes a "has-been." For a long time after the resignation of the sheriff nothing more is heard of the bandit until one night the bank gives up its tribute. The posse and the new sheriff, on approaching their quarry, find that the former sheriff is ahead of them. The bandit is caught

Picture Playhouse
Pictures with a Punch

THE PEARL OF THE ANTILLES
(5 Parts)

THE FLAME OF PASSION
(5 Parts)

TOM TERRISS
Starring in Each

Here are two big photoplays, each of which combines all the points of excellence required by the discriminating exhibitor. The stories are adapted from legitimate stage successes which Mr. Terriss and his father before him have used throughout the world. Made in Jamaica, West Indies, the pictures run riot with scenery which is superb.

READY NOW!
Write or Wire for Early Bookings

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO., Inc.
71 W. 23rd St., New York City, N. Y.
Branches Everywhere

Book Our New
5 REEL FEATURE
"The Exposition's First Romance"
Peerless Film Exchange
CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

FOR SALE
AMBITION—4 Reel—New Copy
Featuring CHAS. CHAPLIN
THE PROPERTY MAN—2 Reel Chaplin
ADVENTURE OF MISS TOMBOY—3 Reel Vitagraph Comedy and Many Other Features Wire or Write Your Wants.
H. L. WALLICK, 608 Schiller Building, CHICAGO

Selling Tickets by Electricity
The system used by the most successful theatres (including the Strand, N. Y., etc.,) throughout the country.
Write for booklet, Dept. M.
Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
Longacre Building, Times Square, New York

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

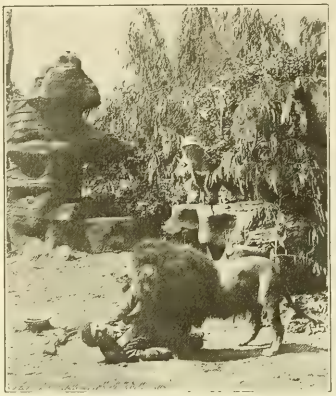
would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address



Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

on the other side of the border and turns out to be the lawyer son of the old man. His father protects him from the posse, saying that he is his prisoner and will hold him until the party comes back with the loot. Then father and son start away to begin a new life.

Let There Be Light—(Two Reels)—American—October 11.—Featuring Helene Rosson and Charles Newton. A drama in which the latest electrical devices are shown, and one in particular is the means of reuniting a husband and wife. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Stanley's Close Call—(Two Reels)—Centaur—October 11.—Ada Payne, a wealthy orphan, starts for Africa to join her lover, Jack Wilson, who, with his chum, Dick Dickerson, at this time are returning to America with Nina Mannering, the girl they have rescued from the Hidden City. When this party arrives in New York and find Ada gone, Tom marries Nina and then the party start back to rescue Ada. Ada reaches the Hidden

City and, finding Stanley's party gone, resolves to push forward and join it. Stanley, seized with fever, is delayed in an interior town and Ada falls in with an eccentric old man with an elephant known as the Jungle Rat, and he becomes the companion of her wanderings. Later Jack arrives and is also siezed with a fever, and Ada is captured by natives while in the jungle. The Rat is left for dead. Stanley is also attacked, but fires the natives' town and escapes in the confusion.

Dicky's Demon Dachshund—Falstaff—October 7.—Dicky is the lion of a summer resort. As he keeps the girls to himself, he incurs the enmity of three young men, who resolve to be avenged.

The conspirators send a dachshund to the boarding house where Dicky is staying, knowing that the landlady hates dogs and will not allow them around the premises. But the landlady is also under the spell of Dicky and allows him to keep the dog in his room. The conspirators then lure a bloodhound to make a phonograph record of sleep-disturbing howls. By means of this and other sundry brilliant schemes, Dicky is finally deposed and he leaves in ignomy. Then the girls return to their original admirers.

Taking a Chance—Cub—October 15.—George Ovey featured. Jerry and Hank arrive at the town depot just as a troupe of Uncle Tom's Cabin players step from the train. They go to the hotel, proclaim themselves as members of the troupe to the proprietor and get a meal. Just about this time little Eva and the Angel of Death quit the company and leave, and Jerry and Hank are hired to play the parts. At the night's performance they break up the show and in their queer garb they seek shelter in a house where a spiritual seance is at its height. The spiritualists assume that Jerry and Hank are real spirits, but just at this time thee Uncle Tom actors arrive and a merry time follows.

Billie, the Hill Billy—Beauty—October 12.—Featuring Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell. Robert Bennett goes into the Ozark mountains and comes upon a mountaineer's cabin, and is set upon by an old man who believes him to be his long-lost son. Bennett finds it easier to humor the old man's fancy than to turn away from him and he becomes interested in the daughter, who cherishes a talent for drawing. "Pap" threatens to punish the girl by putting her to work in the tobacco fields, and Bennett, who has learned to love her, saves her by marrying her and taking her to his mother.

Profit from Loss—American—October 15.—Featuring Vivian Rich, Walter Spencer and Jack Richardson. Carter, on his way home from work, yields to temptation and loses all his pay to Harmon, a professional gambler. Carter's wife goes into a cafe to sell some flowers, and Harmon, who is in the place drinking, gives Mrs. Carter the money he has won. Carter goes home to face his wife and learns that it is to her that Harmon has given the money he lost. He profits by his loss, for he writes a letter to his employer directing him to pay his wages in future to his wife.

"Two-Spot" Joe—(Two Reels)—Mustang—October 15.—Featuring E. Forrest Taylor, Jack Richardson and Anna Little in a strong tale of the hills, in which a man leaves his wife to seek his fortune and falls in with a woman of the dance hall. Later his wife comes to the town and is taken care of by the gambler of the western town. When her husband dies she marries the gambler. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Aided by the Movies—Beauty—October 16.—Featuring Carol Halloway. John and Carol are in love, but her father favors Dick. Carol's father flirts with the leading lady of a motion picture company and the next day the leading lady doesn't appear at the stcdio and the company is compelled to take a day off. John secures a parson and a marriage license, and his friend, director of the company, enters into a scheme to effect the marriage of John and Carol. Through a ruse, the plan is carried out, and Carol's father and Dick act as witnesses. When her father discovers that the marriage is real he is furious and is about to renounce them, when the leading lady turns up and persuades him to accept the situation, which he finally does.

The Ever-Living Isles—(Two Reels)—Reliance—October 17.—In the reign of James the Second, Carlos, a rover of the Spanish main, on a visit to Provincetown in the New World, meets Prudence, daughter of Captain Josiah and Temperance Hafley. He falls in love with the maiden, who is suffering from a strange malady, which Carlos cures with precious herbs from his own realm, the Ever-Living Isles. The Puritan selectmen, believing the Spanish tradesman to be a sorcerer, banish him on threat of hanging if he ventures to return. Prudence runs to the shore as her lover's galleon sets sail and flings herself into the sea. Carlos turns back the ship, rescues Prudence, and tries to persuade her to go with him across the deep. But she wins him over, and together they go back to Provincetown. Carlos is captured, sentenced, and is about to be hanged when a messenger from King James brings a proclamation stating that no magician or sorcerer may remain within the colony. The Spaniard seizes his opportunity to escape, claiming Prudence as his bride.

Universal Program

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 187—Universal—October 4.—G. A. R. veterans at annual reunion at Washington, D. C.; four hundred thousand dollar playground opened in Brooklyn, N. Y.; submarine victims who died under sea at Honolulu brought to San Francisco; contest winner and consort entering exposition ground at San Diego, Calif.; newly enlisted soldiers don uniforms at London, England; the kaiser's heir sees his old regiment; ex-President Taft visits Universal City; citizen rookies at their camp at Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Independence, pride of navy of 1812, destroyed at San Francisco, Calif.; President Wilson travels to Princeton, N. J., to vote at primaries; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

Some Fixer—Nestor—October 11.—Father does not wish his daughter, Corrine, to marry and leave him in the lurch, therefore he takes drastic measures to keep her apart from Eddie. Lee and father have always been good friends, and father, thinking Lee will never be capable of loving the girl, throws her with Lee on every occasion. Lee falls for the girl and plans the downfall of his opponent. In order to mislead the old man, Eddie devotes himself to Jane whenever this can be appreciated by father. Eddie is never allowed to see his sweetheart and Corinne becomes indignant at his behavior. Before the picture comes to a close we see Lee being married to Corinne and Eddie to Jane. But no one seems to be disappointed, unless, perchance, it be father.

The Kiss of Dishonor—(Two Reels)—Gold Seal—October 12.—Bonny, left alone in the world by her mother's death, becomes one of the minister's household. She grows up in the companionship of a little hunchback violin player, Rigo, whose only desire in life is to please Bonny. In later years Bonny becomes infatuated with a city chap, Ray Harding, and marries him. One night Bonny beholds her husband kissing another woman and, upon asking an explanation, he flies into a fierce rage. She returns to the minister's home. As Ray really loves her, he is tempted to follow, but pride holds him back. Meanwhile, Rigo has come to the city, but searched for Bonny in vain. Dore, an artist, comes to the the village. The sight of Bonny and her baby appeals to him and he paints a picture of them. Later this picture is the means of saving Ray from the wrath of Rigo. The latter is the means of uniting husband and wife once more.

Under New Management—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—October 13.—The stenographer is entirely too pretty for the equilibrium of the office force, and both the clerks and the boss find themselves off balance. The boss has authority in the office, but unluckily does not have the same at home, and when his spouse interrupts a little conversation he is having with the stenographer, the last mentioned leaves on express orders of the wife. Gertie returns, however, in boy's clothes, gets the old job back and also gets wifey stuck on her. Ensuing trouble takes shape in a secret meeting at a cafe, an intercepted note, and an important disclosure just at the wrong time. Wifey's attempt to take the office under her management and Gertie's inhabitation of men's clothes make for the worse.

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glasstransparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Let Us Send You Our New Proposition on the

Bartola Orchestra

Add Dignity to Your Theatre
Improve Your Music. Write to

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
Bartola Musical Instrument Co.
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

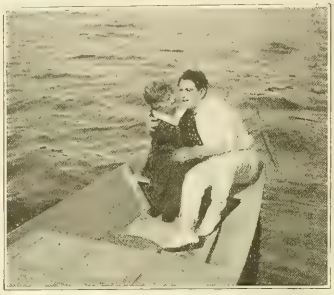
$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.



To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement

in

Motography

Bashful Glen—IMP—OCTOBER 12.—Glen Martin is very much sought after by members of the opposite sex, but these attentions annoy him intensely. At a summer hotel he determines to check the flow of curiosity and puts up the picture of another man's wife and children in his room. A famous actress and her husband come to the hotel. Unfortunately, Glen's photograph is of this actress. The latter's husband mistakes Glen's door for his own and thereby finds the photo of his wife on the dresser. Thinking she has given it to Glen, he rushes to his own room and accuses her. She pleads "not guilty." They find Glen in the hotel office and, after explanations, both men give the summer girls the laugh. Glen is finally accepted by the chambermaid, whom he has managed to woo during the intervals of her occupation.

The Girl of the Dance Hall—(THREE REELS)—LAEMMLE—OCTOBER 14.—Featuring Agnes Vernon. When Dora Matthews, an orphan, loses her position at the lunch counter, Faro Revere, a vicious character, gets her to obtain work in a dance hall and gambling house, as she has no means of livelihood. She accepts Revere's advances, believing he is in good faith. Ralph Allen's sympathy for Dora is aroused, as he feels she is living this life from necessity and not from choice. One night, when passing their cabin, Ralph protects Dora from Revere, and learns that they are not married. At this moment the sheriff comes on and arrests Revere for a crime in another county. Ralph gives Dora money with which to leave town. Revere escapes from jail and makes his way to the city. Later Ralph's friend, Oliver, introduces him to his wife, who turns out to be none other than Dora. Revere blackmails Dora, and in a fight between Ralph and Revere the latter is killed. Oliver becomes jealous of his wife's relations with Ralph, but finally all is explained and reconciliation follows.

When the Wets Went Dry—(LADY BAFFLES AND DETECTIVE DUCK SERIES, NO. 9)—POWERS—OCTOBER 14.—On the refusal of the governor to sign a bill in favor of the liquor interest, the political boss tries to force the executive to his will. The governor, after a series of thrilling experiences, thwarts the efforts of the politicians. The latter call on Lady Baffles, who impersonates the governor's wife and secures the executive's signature to the bill. Detective Duck, however, captures the politicians in a clever manner and beats Lady Baffles at her own game.

A Kentucky Idyl—(TWO REELS)—VICTOR—OCTOBER 15.—Lees Point, a small town in the Kentucky mountains, is owned by Bill Cameron. Madge Lee is Cameron's woman and assists him in all his deviltries. Rev. Plante and his daughter, Cynthia, arrive to take charge of the parish, and on asking Cameron for the keys to the church is refused until he introduces Cameron to Cynthia. Attracted by the latter, Cameron lets the missionary stay at Lees Point. Bill decides he is in love with Cynthia and calls on her. The father refuses to even let him see his daughter, on the grounds that he is not a Christian. After Bill closes the saloon and makes the inhabitants go to church, he is allowed to visit the girl. When Cynthia rejects him he reopens the saloon and things are as bad as at first. At last Cameron realizes that there was something in the church besides the girl, decides that he really loves Madge, "does the right thing" by Madge and Lees Point "gets religion for keeps."

And the Best Man Won—NESTOR—OCTOBER 15.—The boy, after a long time, gets the girl to consent to an engagement with him. They go to tell papa the news and learn that he has just engaged an artist to paint the girl's picture. The artist turns out to be handsome, and the boy does not relish having his sweetheart's picture painted by him, but she laughingly reassures him. The artist falls in love with the girl, and for a lark she encourages him, which lark ends in their trying to get married. However, the boy's chum puts one over on the artist; the latter is arrested for speeding and, the minister being handy, the boy and girl tell him to "go to it."

The Yellow Star—(THREE REELS)—BISON—OCTOBER 16.—Marie Walcamp as Claire Walton. The secret service is baffled by a band that is smuggling in Chinese. The chief of the department assigns Robert Wharton to take charge of the case, but in spite of his utmost efforts the smugglers are still at large. William Harwood is the chief clerk to the chief of the service, and on the side is connected with the smugglers. Claire Morton, one of the stenographers in the office, and Robert are sweethearts. Through the help of Claire the smugglers are finally brought to justice and Robert is saved from being forced to turn in his resignation.

No Babies Allowed—JOKER—OCTOBER 16.—As Freddy and his wife cannot secure lodgings because of their baby, Freddy leaves the child at his uncle's house. They then have no further trouble in getting settled. Getting lonely, the couple manage to smuggle the baby into their rooms, but when the landlady hears it cry all is off. The baby is then taken to a foundling home, where it is left after much kissing. Meanwhile, the bachelor uncle, Schultz, has found his home dreary without a child and decides to adopt one. Freddy's child is "it." In signing the ledger for the child the assistant carelessly spills ink over the page, obliterating the name. Freddy and his wife can stand the absence of the child no longer and go to visit him. Their agony is at last abated, however, when the baby is found at uncle's house, and they decide to move to the last mentioned domicile.

The Vengeance of Guido—POWERS—OCTOBER 16.—Guido Morea and his little sister, Nydia, forced to leave Italy, come to live in California. Nydia is hit by the auto of Willie Bail, a "speed maniac," and dies from the injuries. Vail is left off because of his wealthy connections and Guido swears revenge. Guido obtains work in the vineyards and in his spare time perfects an invention which he has been working on. His employer's daughter, Mary, has Willie Vail, the reckless driver, for a suitor. Guido, enraged at seeing Vail imperil the lives of so many children in the streets, resolves to teach him a terrible lesson. Mary averts this, however, and on hearing the tale of Nydia's death, her love for Guido finds expression, and as the two clasp Vail is seen in the distance, driving carefully, as his lesson has been learned.

Does Flirting Pay?—L-KO—OCTOBER 17.—In which the chronic flirt decides that it absolutely does not. In a cafe he makes eyes at a lady who had previously smitten him. Her escort leaves (through cowardice, Mr. Rawsberry thinks), and Rawsberry, going over to her table, gets there just in time to get the other man's check for the dinner. As the proprietor is an old enemy, Rawsberry does not succeed in redressing his wrongs, but considerably multiplies them. In the ensuing excitement many edibles and soups are liberally brought into play.

Feature Programs

Fox

A Wonderful Adventure—(FIVE REELS)—FOX.—William Farnum featured. The picture concerns two men alike in appearance, but different in character. Martin Stanley, a young westerner, comes east with a letter of introduction to his double, Wilton Demarest, the president of a large construction company. While waiting for Demarest, Stanley meets Mazora, a beautiful young mystic. On Demarest's return he meets the girl, who gets him in her power by teaching him the use of drugs, and before long he is a nervous wreck, and, encountering Stanley, he asks him to take his place until he can get on his feet again. Demarest's wife, without guessing the deception, finds herself falling in love with Stanley and he in turn

These 6 Spoons

and A SUGAR SHELL

sent prepaid for

$1.00

All Spoons Standard Size

¶ Hundreds of exhibitors have found a way to use these beautiful spoons with profit to themselves.

¶ Through these exhibitors tens of thousands of the spoons have found places in the homes of motion picture theatre goers.

¶ Exhibitors who are using Motography's Souvenir Spoons as business-getters claim no superior knowledge of showmanship—they simply are getting away with our attractive proposition. You can do the same.

¶ If you own a motion picture theatre you can increase your daily and weekly revenue by asking for plans. The following telegram shows how one exhibitor works:

CLASS OF SERVICE	SYMBOL
Day Message
Day Letter	Blue
Night Message	Nite
Night Letter	N L

If none of these three symbols appears after the check (number of words) this is a day message. Otherwise its character is indicated by the symbol appearing after the check.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT
GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT ... VICE-PRESIDENT

CLASS OF SERVICE	SYMBOL
Day Message
Day Letter	Blue
Night Message	Nite
Night Letter	N L

If none of these three symbols appears after the check (number of words) this is a day message. Otherwise its character is indicated by the symbol appearing after the check.

RECEIVED AT JACKSON BOULEVARD AND LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

SEP 28 8-22 AM 1915

A968A 45 NL 1EXA P DALLAS TEX 27 MOCK. PRESIDENT
MOTOGRAPHY MONADNOCK BLDG CHICAGO ILL
SHIP SEVEN HUNDRED CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG SPOONS AT ONCE MADE A BIG CLEAN UP TODAY WILL SEND YOU COPY OF MY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT WOULD LIKE TO HAVE YOU MAKE SPOON OF PETROVA BIGGEST DRAWING CARD I EVER HAD
T P FINNEGAN HIPPODROME

¶ You should have a set of the spoons before you pass judgment. They represent artistic and enduring quality and when properly used get you the money. Address.

Monadnock Bldg. MOTOGRAPHY CHICAGO

falls in love with her. Demarest dies of the effects of the drug, and Stanley and Eleanor Demarest are married.

Metro

Emmy of Stork's Nest—(Five Reels)—Metro —October 11.—Mary Miles Minter featured. Benton Cabot decides to make a living working the farm his father left him. At Stork's Nest he meets Emmy Garret, a beautiful little country girl. Bije Stork, a bully, is jealous of Cabot. He is determined to marry Emmy and persuades her that the city chap is not in love with her. Bije is sought by the sheriff for counterfeiting. He flees, taking Emmy, who has agreed to marry him, but Cabot overtakes the counterfeiter. When matters are explained to Emmy she gives her promise to become Benton's wife. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Kliene-Edison

Vanity Fair—Kleine-Edison.—With Mrs. Fiske in the role of Becky Sharpe, Thackeray's triumphant adventuress. As a child Becky is orphaned by the death of her father. Later she is taken into the home of Amelia Sedley, and Becky the child becomes Becky the adventuress, calculating and selfish. Sedley loses his money through bad investments, and old man Osborne breaks the engagement between Amelia and his son, George. Becky lays her traps for Joseph Sedley, Amelia's brother, and nearly succeeds in her designs on him. Through the help of Captain Dobbin, George marries Amelia, and Becky goes to Queen's Crawley. Her adventures with old Pit Crawley, her marriage to Rawdon Crawley, their poverty, Becky's flirtation with Lord Steyne and her subsequent separation from her husband, the Battle of Waterloo and the death of George Osborne are the incidents which follow. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Masterpictures

Bred in the Bone—(Four Reels)—Reliance.—A splendid production, featuring Dorothy Gish and William Hinckley. An actress deserts her baby on the doorstep of a Quaker couple and years later the girl, in spite of her religious surroundings, is led to seek fame and fortune on the stage, since the love of the bright lights has been bred in her bones. At a time when she is attacked by her manager, who has resolved to win her for his own, the Quaker lad arrives in the city and effects her rescue. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

North American

A House of Cards—(Chapter Twenty-Five of "The Diamond From the Sky")—(Two Reels) —American.—Esther and Marmaduke Smythe leave for Richmond and here Esther takes up her residence at Stanley Hall with Hagar. Durand manages to steal the Stanley heirloom, but in his attempt to get away is pushed through an open window by Blair Stanley, and DeVaux steals the gem from the dead man's hand and disappears. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Paramount

The Voice in the Fog—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Featuring Donald Brian. The story tells of a young man in London, Thomas Webb, nephew of Lord Moncton. He falls heir to the Moncton pendant. Mason, who boards in the next room to Webb, happens to be a first-class jewelry crook and he, with his assistant, have planned to rob Kitty Killigrew, an American heiress. The assistant lures Kitty into a taxi, brings her up just as Webb and Mason part in the fog, and she hears Webb's voice, but Mason's hand snatches the pendant from her throat. Kitty Killigrew and her mother and father sail for America, and so does Mason and also Webb, who goes as a steward. Some time later, after much confusion, Mason is found out to be the thief of the jewel. He is thrashed by Webb, who comes into his title, wins the girl he is in love with, and then the villain is jailed.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Pathe

Pathe News, No. 78—Pathe—September 28.—When a second serious subsidence occurs in the New York subway construction the officials are whitewashed and the blame is laid to "shifting soil"; "moving day" at Central Park Zoo, New York; scenes from Mexican war front; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., visits Trinidad, Colo.; Pathe winter hat fashions; citizens' military camp at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Pathe News, No. 79—Pathe—October 2.—President Wilson visits Princeton, N. J., to cast his vote at the primary elections; bodies of the victims of the submarine F-4 destroyer carried to their last resting place; scenes of the Mexican anarchy; annual reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic at Washington, D. C.; wireless tower at Summerville, Mass., blown down in a fierce gale; 4,500 pounds of dynamite used in a blast which blows out side of mountain at Winchester, Mass.; fair held at Mabton, Wash.; beauties of Chicago, Ill., parade in costumes at South Shore County Fair; ex-President Taft visits Portland, Ore., and is shown the $2,000,000 Columbia highway.

The Closing Net—(Five Reels)—Pathe.—Produced by Edward Jose. This Gold Rooster Play features Howard Estabrook and an all star supporting cast. Clamart, a famous crook, joins Leontine, the girl accomplice of Chu Chu, a "society" criminal, in a proposed robbery. Clamart is surprised and shot. The man who shoots him discovers that Clamart is his half brother and gives him a home. Chu Chu, jealous of Clamart, makes many attempts to kill him. After a series of dramatic adventures, Clamart meets Rosalie, the girl with whom he falls in love. To save her lover, Rosalie kills Chu Chu. In the end Clamart, who has proven that he is capable of living a worthy life, and Rosalie marry. For a longer review see another page this issue.

A Bungalow Bungle—(Two Reels)—Pathe.—The first release in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series by George Randolph Chester. Featuring Burr McIntosh, Max Figman and Lolita Robertson. Their new acquaintance asks Wallingford and Vickie to "trim" Bennzy Falls, a wealthy chap whom Violet dislikes. Bennzy has invented a portable bungalow. Wallingford forms a company to manufacture bungalows. Before long Bennzy finds that Wallingford has the factory, a number of bungalows, a good share of his bank account, and Bennzy has the experience. Violet is highly pleased, for Bennzy's father had ruined her father financially. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Universal Special

The Broken Coin—(Seventeenth Episode)—October 11.—Count Frederick boards the ocean liner and after a protracted search Kitty and Roleaux are unearthed in the hold, but as escape is about to be made a boiler explodes and the ship starts to sink. Kitty, Count Frederick and Roleaux succeed in grasping hold of a piece of wreckage, but some drowning passengers succeed in loosening Kitty's hold and as the two men become unconscious they see Kitty disappear from view. Back in Grahoffen, Count Sachio and his king plan to get the other part of the charred paper which Sachio has found in the palace during the revolution. Seeking to gain entrance to the palace of Gretzhoffen, Sachio sends King Michael a letter asking if they cannot again be friends. Feeling sure the puppet will say yes, Sachio makes his plans to go thither. Frederick and Roleaux are picked up by a band of natives and taken to the land. Later we see Kitty lying on the beach of a strange island and some of the wild-looking natives crawl toward her as the episode closes.

The Man of Shame—(Two Reels)—Broadway Universal.—October 11.—Wilton Lackaye, the Broadway star, has a dual role, that of himself and his own enemy, in this costume production with its scenes laid in France. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

World

The Price—(Five Reels)—World—October 3. —Produced by Equitable Pictures Corporation. The story is based on the stage success by George Broadhurst and features Helen Ware, who created the role in the stage production. The story is of a girl who has a harmless love affair with a married man. After his death his wife learns of this. Bent on revenge, she obtains employment in the home of the girl, who is now happy with her husband, a physician. The widow finally succeeds in estranging the doctor and the girl. This she does by enlarging upon the facts in her possession. Later the girl and her husband are reconciled. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Master of the House—(Five Reels)—World Film—September 27.—Equitable Pictures Corporation's production of Julius Steger's stage success, featuring Mr. Steger as Frederick Hoffman. He becomes fascinated with a young girl whom his wife has employed as secretary. Hoffman leaves his wife and two children and marries Bettina. He lives with her for a number of years. She cares nothing for Hoffman and continues to shower unsincere attention upon him because he has wealth. He learns that she is having an affair with another man and leaves her. Broken in spirit and health, he returns repentant to his "old-fashioned" wife, who forgives him. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Flash of an Emerald—(Five Reels)—World.—Robert Warwick featured. The prologue of the picture shows a crook and his mistress operating at a race track, where they steal the silver cup from a safe. The actual story takes Lucius Waldeck and his confederate in pursuit of Mrs. Weston and her sick grandchild. He manages to enter the old lady's apartments, chloroforms her and takes with him an emerald which is very valuable. Later, when he makes love to Phillipa Ford, she warns him. In the end Mrs. Weston and Victoria Allison furnish the police with evidence which results in the arrest of Marie, and Waldeck, realizing he is in the toils of the law, commits suicide.

The Family Cupboard—(Five Reels)—World Film.—Featuring Holbrook Blinn in an adaptation of the successful play of the same name. Charles Nelson, a self-made man who has amassed a fortune, is neglected by his family, consisting of his wife, a daughter and a son. For society he turns to Kitty Claire, a chorus girl. This becomes known to his wife. They agree to separate. The son clings to his mother. Alice, the daughter sympathizes with her father, realizing that the family is to blame. Later the son becomes infatuated with Kitty. He proposes marriage, but she refuses. Heart-broken, he contemplates suicide. This leads to the reconciliation of his mother and father. In the end the family are reunited. For longer review see another page of this issue.

Associated Service

Released Week of October 11.

The Highest Bidder—(Two Reels)—Empire.—A widowed wealthy lumber dealer dies and leaves his possessions to his only daughter. The superintendent schemes to deprive the girl of her fortune and when Jim, the sweetheart of the girl, sees the superintendent and the money lender together he gets suspicious. He overhears their plan and he goes to his friends, and through their contributions he is able to outbid the schemers, thereby saving his sweetheart's fortune.

Joe's Devotion—Navajo.—When Nell marries Tom, Joe is heartbroken, but when little Dot comes to earth he lavishes his affections on the child, who calls him Uncle Joe. Tom is killed and begs Joe to look after Nell and Baby Dot. Joe knows she will not accept charity and puts a bill under the door, and Nell accepts it as a godsend. A Mexican steals little Dot from the cabin, but Joe captures and overpowers him, and brings the child back, and the mother's gratitude brings her to a realization of Joe's worth.

Too Much Elixir of Life—Alhambra.—Professor Muggles tells Billy, when he asks for the hand of his daughter, that he has never done anything for science and he had better keep away. Billy later wraps Fritz, an apartment house janitor, in a sheet and buries him by the seashore, and has the professor and his daughter come to the place. The professor is delighted in the discovery of the mummy and, taking it to his laboratory, he decides to try the effect of the elixir of life he has mixed. The mummy comes to life all right and the professor starts to give chase. He loses him, but thanks Billy and gives him Rena's hand.

A Movie Nut—(Two Reels)—Banner.—Ignatz, a movie nut, finally lands a job and is cast as the star. He loses the job, and, getting tired, he falls asleep and dreams that he is the only rival to Charlie Chaplin. The funny things Ignatz dreams and does is a cure for the worst kind of blues. Suddenly he is rudely awakened by his landlady, who demands room rent or the room, and he is driven back to his position of chief cook and bottle washer at a delicatessen foundry.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
OCT 25 1915

MARTHA HEDMAN
WITH
METRO

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 23, 1915 No. 17

LUBIN

MONDAY
OCTOBER 25

ONE ACT DRAMA
"THE INEVITABLE PENALTY"
WITH
OCTAVIA HANDWORTH

TUESDAY
OCTOBER 26

D. L. DON
IN "PLAYING IN TOUGH LUCK"
ONE ACT LAUGH

WEDNESDAY
OCTOBER 27

"THE MAN OF GOD"
TWO ACT DRAMA
WITH
ORMI HAWLEY
AND EARL METCALFE

THURSDAY
OCTOBER 28

THREE ACT DRAMA
"THE STRANGE UNKNOWN"
WITH
L. C. SHUMWAY
AND HELEN EDDY

FRIDAY
OCTOBER 29

ONE ACT DRAMA
"THE WONDER CLOTH"
WITH
L. C. SHUMWAY

SATURDAY
OCTOBER 30

BILLIE REEVES
IN
"HIS BODY GUARD"
ONE ACT COMEDY

GENERAL FILM
LUBIN
RELEASES

Brooklyn Pays $750,000 for Triangle Plays

Kemble of Brooklyn is a big man who knows big ideas when he sees them—which is the reason the Crescent Theater is due to make money in a big way.

But—

You can't tie a Kemble with big ideas down to little ideas; they don't fit together; so when Kemble looked around for the biggest film idea to make more money, he saw that Triangle blocked everything else out of sight.

Therefore—

Kemble connected with the TRIANGLE in the biggest way he could—in a bigger way than any exhibitor ever tried before. On October 8th, he crossed the Brooklyn Bridge to New York and signed for the exclusive rights to Brooklyn for two years, binding himself to pay in that time nearly Three Quarters of a Million Dollars for the privilege.

$750,000.

Kemble of Brooklyn will go on making big money, but his profits will be greater than ever. He will have the goods that produce the profits.

No doubt there are other Kembles in other cities; men too big for the little ideas. Perhaps YOU are one of them.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

Blanche Ring in a scene from Oliver-Morosco's "The Yankee Girl."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 23, 1915 No. 17

Motion Pictures to Dominate Drama

THANHOUSER PREDICTS BIG CHANGE

MOTION picture domination of the drama was forecast by Edwin Thanhouser in a recent chatty discussion of his part in the making of films for the new $8,000,000 Mutual program and the progress of the industry in general. "The time is near at hand," declared Mr. Thanhouser, "when the speaking stage will be looking to the motion picture plays for material, absolutely reversing the condition which has prevailed.

"I am finding it most desirable and necessary to amplify our field of operations to keep pace with the destiny of the film drama.

"The development of the film drama in this line of destiny is the most important thing before the makers and exhibitors of film today. The new Mutual program is an expression of that development. It is a big forward step in raising standards of the motion picture and in bettering the quality of entertainment that goes out to the people. It is one of the great powers of the motion picture. It is one of our many vast advantages over the speaking stage. It is impossible for a high art production, a powerful drama of the speaking stage to reach all the people—to be as available to the people of Amarillo, Tex., as on Broadway, New York.

"But it is possible to give the people of Amarillo just as perfect and fine a motion picture presentation of drama as is given in the biggest house on Broadway. In other words we are taking this wonderful new art to the people and we can do it as nobody else in the world can do it.

"There are a few developments in the motion picture to come before we can say that it is a perfect thing. We can, however, expect nothing that is more perfect than nature itself and the realism of the motion picture as it stands today is beyond betterment, except in minor details. We may see improvements which will result in perfect color rendition, we perhaps shall get better modelling of images through stereoscopic effect and we may attain certain other refinements of the picture mechanically.

"And I insist that the motion picture is coming to be the dominating form of dramatic expression. We are right up on the time when the speaking stage will come to the motion picture for material, just reversing the process of the time, now passing, when the motion picture borrows material from the stage and from the novel and short story.

"We are bound to see the time soon when the stage will be presenting its own version of the productions which have proven great screen successes.

"I recognize the fact that this is a daring statement, but to any one who will give serious consideration to the overwhelming growth of the picture and who recognizes the part that the picture today plays in human life the truth of my assertion is inevitable.

"It is with a full recognition of this vast importance of the motion picture and its artistic as well as its commercial future that the operations of the Thanhouser studios in making releases for the Mutual Film Corporation are directed.

"I feel highly responsible to the millions of persons who daily see our releases on the Mutual program. We owe them the best that is in the power of the industry to produce and we are always faithfully at work with that end in view. That is why we are going to the very heavy expense of money and effort to invade the tropics and the Canadian wilds—simply to make better, more worthy pictures.

"Our responsibility is as great, both to the public and to our own future, as though the printing press had just been invented and we were given control of so large a portion of the output of published matter for the information and entertainment of the millions.

"This means that we must pay heed to every factor that goes into the making of pictures. It explains why we have enlarged and improved our New Rochelle plant, putting in costly developing, printing and perforating machinery, a better ventilating system, additional factory space, better studio arrangements, and the like. It is the reason behind the big investment at Jacksonville, down in Florida where the Thanhouser corporation has acquired the big site where the new studio is now being rushed to completion. It explains why we are holding and continually building up one of the world's most remarkable organizations of actors and directors.

"Do you know it is a fact that Miss LaBadie's mail is often as big as the Thanhouser Corporation's mail? Why only the other day she received 1,300,000 votes in a newspaper film star popularity contest in which she was voluntarily entered and in which she did not make the slightest effort to get a single vote. That just goes to show how close the motion picture is to the people and how responsive and responsible we must be to them.

"All this big investment of genius and money is but a means toward the end of better pictures, pictures that shall keep in the van of the upward movement of the motion picture art.

"Which brings me to another point. I feel that the development of the future of the motion picture calls for purely original matter, strong scenarios written for the motion picture and with only the motion picture presentation in view.

"The future means the development of a new field of writers for the making of feature films. This will force in turn, just what I mentioned before, the bringing of the stage to the motion picture for material. As a case in point I may remark that I have been approached and negotiations have been begun for presentation on the speaking stage of 'The Price of Her Silence,' a five-reel Thanhouser Master-Picture. This one fact points the way on which we are progressing to the period when the motion picture play will be the admitted and recognized fountain head of dramatic art."

TO BREAK GROUND THIS WEEK

Twelve Acre Tract at Culver City, California, Recently Acquired by Thomas Ince to Be Formally Dedicated Soon

The official ground-breaking ceremonies on the 12-acre tract in Culver City, which Thomas H. Ince has invaded for the purpose of building a new $50,000 Ince-Triangle studio thereon, will be held next week, under conditions unprecedented in the history of American amusement circles. The unique feature of the event will be that it will be attended by the greatest, in number, and, perhaps, most expensive galaxy of stage stars that has ever assembled together at one function, with the exception of a Lambs' Gambol or other similar events.

At present there are exactly twelve eminent figures of the footlight realms at Inceville, and each will be present at the ground-breaking. They are Billie Burke, Bessie Barriscale, Mary Boland, Truly Shattuck, William S. Hart, Frank Keenan, Bruce McRae, Frank Mills, Willard Mack, William H. Thompson, William Desmond and H. B. Warner.

Producer Ince has not as yet decided whether or not to make the event one of public interest, but it is likely that he will. This will mean that not only the city of Los Angeles, together with that of Culver City, will be officially represented, but that the public at large will be invited to attend and join in the celebration.

Harry H. Culver, the well-known southern California real estate magnate and founder of Culver City, who negotiated the deal whereby Ince purchased the 12-acre tract, has signified his intention of donating Ince a silver spade with which to turn the first earth. A jar will then be filled with some of the earth and retained in the new plant as a souvenir of the occasion.

Evidence that the stars who will congregate at the ground-breaking will constitute a record-shatttering assemblage, from a standpoint of salaries earned, is furnished by the fact that their aggregate pay envelopes amount to nearly three-quarters of a million dollars a year.

Board of Trade Directors Meet

The first regular meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade was held on Thursday, October 7, at the executive offices, 18 East Forty-first street, New York City.

Owing to the illness of J. Stuart Blackton, the president, John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, presided. The executive secretary reported that thirty-eight new names of individuals and corporations had been received as applicants for membership since the last meeting.

A resolution was passed pledging the directors and individual members of the Board of Trade not to contribute any money or other assistance for any purpose connected directly or indirectly to any person whatsoever without the approval of the board of directors of the Board of Trade.

The board also condemned by resolution the action of the Ohio Board of Censors in prohibting the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in that state.

Walter W. Irwin, S. L. Rothapfel, J. W. Binder, William M. Seabury and E. A. MacManus were appointed a committee to draft a resolution stating the position of the Board of Trade as regards the proposed new constitution in the state of New York.

Cameramen from the several motion picture weeklies were on hand to film the directors as they arrived in their cars before the office building in which the board's offices are located.

Bostwick Resigns as General Manager

A matter of interest to the trade this week was the resignation of Elwood F. Bostwick as general manager of the Eastern Film Corporation of Providence, Rhode Island. Frederick S. Peck, president of the company, desires to announce that W. P. Barrett has been appointed business manager and George Lessey, chief of productions for the Eastern Film Corporation. Both of the above mentioned gentlemen have seen long service in the business and have worked under the banner of the Edison company for several years.

Mr. Barrett will have complete charge of the business departments of the Rhode Island organization and it is thought that his keen sense of values and thorough knowledge of film finance will result in a saving of money and give to the company an efficient working organization. Mr. Lessey will be remembered as one of the directors of the Edison studios for several years and recently terminated a contract with the Universal as director for the famous King Baggot. Lessey has the power, virility and imagination of a master producer and with the facilities and stories now at his command, it is expected he will excel his previous high-class productions, among which have been "The Suburban," a Universal feature, all of King Baggot's multiple reel pictures and many famous Edison successes.

Mr. Lessey has just completed the production of "Cap'n Eri," a sea story by Joseph C. Lincoln, the famous author, which features George Bunny, a brother of the immortal screen comedian. The new chief producer of the Eastern Film Corporation has many plans and innovations for the success of the company and is rapidly putting them into effect with the assistance of a capable staff of directors. Bert Ennis will have complete charge of the publicity and sales for the Eastern Film Corporation and between these three men it is expected that the efforts of the Providence producing organization will soon be felt in the film trade.

Pretty Mabel Van Buren, known to thousands of film fans—and fannettes—through her many appearances as the lead in Lasky productions is the latest of the stars to join the David Horsley forces at the Los Angeles studios.

EQUITABLE FORCES ACTIVE

Many Big Productions Under Way, and More Being Planned—All Directors Are Unusually Busy with Forthcoming Features

The activities of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation are now producing wide spread and far reaching results. Five directors are busily engaged upon productions, with several other important functionaries assembling casts or revising stories preparatory to beginning work.

Marshall Farnum, responsible for "Wormwood," and other big, sensational productions, is directing the destinies of Alexandra Carlisle and her supporting cast in "Creeping Tides." This company hied itself away a short time ago to the mountains surrounding Gilboa, N. Y., in the very heart of the Catskills, where the preliminary stages for productional work had been done by the Equitable's traveling crew, which later journeyed to Block Island, R. I., where Thomas Seay and a company, working with Muriel Ostriche at the head, are engaged in the first scenes of "The Fisher Girl." William Sheer, whose work in "The Regeneration" called forth exceptional praise, is playing opposite Miss Carlisle in Kate Jordan's vivid tale, "Creeping Tides."

Florence Reed in a scene from "The Coward's Way."

Webster Cullison, who recently completed a highly sensational version of Paul Armstrong's play, "The Bludgeon," returned to New York last Saturday, accompanied by Katharine Kaelred and her supporting cast, from a ten-days' stay at Hudson, N. Y., where many of the scenes to be shown in "Idols" were staged. Mr. Cullison and his cast of principals sailed on Wednesday for Bermuda, where a great many sets will be made, with the British Naval Station as a background. Permission for the co-operation of the British naval officials at the station has been granted. The "Idols" company will remain at Bermuda three weeks.

At the Triumph headquarters Director Joseph Golden is working on the last few scenes of that concern's production of Edgar James' absorbing story "Justice," in which the noted dramatic player Cyril Scott will handle the principal role. Henry Kolker, in "The Warning," a semi-allegorical fictional document, is in the preliminary stages under Director Golden. This feature will characterize the Triumph's units on the Equitable program the latter part of January.

Harry Pollard, formerly with Mutual, now a permanent adjunct of Equitable, is busily engaged at the Fifty-second street studio, assembling his cast to support Marguerite Fischer in her first Equitable production, "The Dragon."

Director John Ince, who completed "The Cowardly Way," with Florence Reed, last week, is working on his next production, which, by the way, has not been named as yet, but which, from all indications, will be Richard Le Gallienne's "The Chain Invisible," with Robert Edeson as the star. The plan of allowing directors to select their own stories and players, as put in vogue by the Equitable, is working out so admirably that at times a great economical gain results from a director knowing well ahead his forthcoming plays.

E. Mason Hopper, whose recent work with Thomas Wise in "A Ready Made Family," established him as an important screen figure, will start work at the Fifty-second street studio during the next week, gathering players to support Gail Kane in her first Equitable picture, "The Labyrinth."

"Damaged Goods" Shown Chicago

On Friday morning, October 8, a private showing of "Damaged Goods" was staged at the Ziegfeld theater in Chicago, the invitations for the showing being issued by the Mutual Film Corporation.

Persons prominent in all walks of life packed the theater to its full seating capacity, and following the showing of this remarkable subject, endorsed it in the heartiest fashion. Many were loud in their praise of the vivid lesson driven home by the picture, and expressed the wish that every young man and woman in the country might be able to see it.

Ere the picture itself was screened, Richard Bennett, the star in the spoken production, and also the lead in the film version, appeared on the stage to describe the difficulties which he had to overcome before "Damaged Goods" was finally presented to the public.

Mr. Bennett was introduced by Jay Cairns, and spoke in part as follows:

"The work of Brieux was first suggested to me by Senator Flynn of Pennsylvania, who, at that time was trying to put a bill through the state legislature prohibiting the marriage of persons without a doctor's certificate, for the protection of the future of the race. Senator Flynn said the production of Brieux's play would mean the passage of the bill.

"I obtained the book; read it, and undertook to form a company. I could not get an actor to listen after I told them that dread syphilis was the subject of the play. They ran from me as though I were possessed of the devil. I carried the play around under my arm for a year. Managers laughed at me; they seemed to think I had gone daft to try and present such a thing before the public.

"Eventually, the play was produced. The New York papers, some of them, very kindly granted that there was a great play there, but not a play that the public should see. Others demanded that the play should be put on the public stage because it was a play that everyone should see. Mr. Brieux came to America and I showed him a special run of the picture.

"'If I had dared to put into the play what you have put into the pictures, they would have dropped me into the ocean,' he said. Words pass, but the picture is indelibly imprinted in the mind.

"To my mind, the picture of 'Damaged Goods' is worth more to the film world and to the civilized world than all of the big, spectacular pictures that were ever screened."

Not a single person left the theater during the showing of the unusual subject, and it was noted that a large percentage of those present were women, accompanied by their daughters, and one portion of the house was set aside for a class of twenty-five students of the Hahnemann Medical College, who attended in a group, and a number of the city's leading physicians and public characters were noted in the audience.

Many of those present offered voluntary tribute to the picture. Hon. Edmund M. Allen, former warden of Joliet penitentiary and recognized as one of the great criminologists of the country, said: "To see this picture is to learn in one hour what writers and lecturers have failed to do in centuries. It is a visualization burned into one's mind deeper than pen, or brush, or word, could describe. An educational intimacy with something we hate to believe."

Alderman Robert M. Buck, city council of Chicago: "The living race can build its greatest monument by protecting its posterity. It is such plays as 'Damaged Goods' that recall to us our responsibility."

Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago: "A play that must work for a deal of good."

Frank Comerford, lawer, writer and sociologist: "A remarkable play—one which every girl and boy of discretionary age should see; a bulwark for the protection of the future race."

Edward Maher, president Lawyers' Association of Chicago: "It is the things in life we are most afraid of that startle us when presented in all their undeniable truth. In our conservative age, it requires something unusually powerful to awaken us from conventional lethargy: 'Damaged Goods' does it."

James Warren Currie, writer and critic: "It is an opportunity given to understand with the eye what might not be comprehended by the ear; the realism of actual life."

Hon. Charles H. Mitchell, attorney to the county judge of Cook County: "The public wards of Cook County each constitute an argument for the widest possible showing of such pictures as 'Damaged Goods.' Doll houses could shelter our derelicts today had this play been presented a century ago."

John Mack Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturing Association: "Most marvelous picture I have ever seen. I owe a lot to Dr. Evans, who invited me to attend with him. Everyone should see it."

These comments represent the general consensus of opinion of those who viewed the picture, giving it their unqualified endorsement and enthusiastic approval.

Poe's Home Duplicated

For filming scenes in Essanay's six-act feature, "The Raven," adapted from George C. Hazleton's romance of Edgar Allan Poe, an exact reproduction of Poe's home, built shortly after the revolutionary period in Fordham, near New York, was erected in the Essanay studio yard. A noted architect was sent to Fordham for the sole purpose of drawing a set of plans from the famous poet's home, which still stands.

M. A. Neff Dead

On Saturday, October 9, M. A. Neff, founder of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, who passed away in New York City on Wednesday morning, October 6, was laid to rest in a cemetery in Columbus, Ohio, his home. The funeral services were in charge of the heads of the Ohio State Branch, No. 1, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and a large delegation from that organization accompanied the body to the grave. Mr. Neff's illness and death came as a surprise to all except his most intimate friends, for, though he had been ill for some time, it was not believed his illness was a serious one. Some weeks ago he went to New York on business connected with the "Battle of the Ballots," a motion picture dealing with the contest now being waged throughout the United States by the anti-saloon element, which he was making, and it was while there that he become so sick that he was removed to a private sanitarium, where he died after an operation for an affection of the kidneys. Mr. Neff was known to exhibitors the country over, since it was he who conceived and founded the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, of which he became national president, and later succeeded himself.

M. A. Neff.

Mr. Neff was fifty-six years of age at the time of his death, and is survived by a widow and a son, whose home is in Cincinnati, and his sister, Mrs. A. B. Collby of West Virginia.

Max Stearn, president of the Ohio State Branch of the League, and W. R. Wilson, who was named as executor of Mr. Neff's affairs in his will, went from Columbus, Ohio, to New York to bring the body back for burial.

Out of deference to Mr. Neff's New York friends, a brief service was held over the remains at three o'clock Friday afternoon, October 8, in that city and the body was then taken back to Columbus for burial. MOTOGRAPHY joins with many others in extending its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Kleine Signs Maude Fealy

Another company has been added to the present working forces of the Kleine organization with the engagement of Maude Fealy who will be seen in a series of big features during the present season. As in the case of Miss Irene Fenwick, Miss Fealy's film work is not to interfere with her stage career. An evidence of this is the fact that she last week acquired dramatic rights to the new play "A Lady in Love," by Harriet Ford and Caroline Duer, in which she will be starred by John Cort after the holidays.

Miss Fealy's first picture under the Kleine management will be "Bondwomen," work on which is already under way. She will be supported by Iva Shepard, Mildred Gregory, John Sainpolis, David Landou, Harmon McGregor, Harry Knowles, Maurice Stewart, Jr., Shirley De Me and Frederic Sumner.

The Pilot Aboard "The Big Four"

BY CHARLES R. CONDON

TO read the announcement on the front page of the first issue of The Big Four Family, the V. L. S. E. inter-office medium, dated June 5, review the activities of this concern up to September 25, and then read the announcement on the front page of the Big Four Family issue of that date is like watching a theory in an intricate mathematical problem work out to a sound and satisfactory conclusion. The problem in this case was the successful launching and development of the feature concern of Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc.; the theory, "co-operation between all and everyone and everything upon their own merits;" and the result, a wonderfully successful, flourishing organization, built upon efficiency and a square deal. Walter W. Irwin was the mathematician in this case, and the sound judgment and fairness which he applied to V. L. S. E.'s problems and the consummate skill with which he worked them out marks him as fully worthy the great confidence placed in him by the directors of V. L. S. E. in appointing him general manager of the concern upon its formation.

General Manager Walter W. Irwin.

General Manager Walter W. Irwin in the June 5 issue of The Big Four Family outlined the company's policy as being founded upon the two principles of integrity and merit, which in their application meant: To get the utmost results for each manufacturer, without fear or favor, consistent with fairness to the exhibitor; and, a square deal to each representative. Mr. Irwin further stated that the entire organization would be absolutely free from politics in any way, shape, or form, and that a representative's salary compensation would be limited only by his individual ability and the value of his co-operation.

The above is the cause. Here is the effect.

In the September 25 issue of The Big Four Family an article signed by Walter W. Irwin, general manager, announces that 20 per cent of the net weekly profits of V. L. S. E. for the thirteen consecutive weeks prior to October 9, 1915, will, within ten days after that date, be distributed among the employes who have been in the company's service during the period from July 12 to October 9.

This was the decision of the board of directors, voted at the meeting held Tuesday, September 14, and it benefits each and every employe, without exception, whose period of service bridges these two dates. Furthermore, the board voted to make this a permanent thing, virtually taking the entire sales force in as one gigantic partner. Hereafter 20 per cent of the net profits each week will be paid into an established fund to be distributed at the end of each thirteen-week period among those who have been in the employ of the company during the entire period in which the fund was gathered.

There are a number of reasons for this movement, as it might be called, several of which are dependent upon others. The first reason, of course, is the almost phenomenal success and healthy development of V. L. S. E., Inc. The concern began operations in April, totally new, with hard competition to buck up against, and its line of aggressive defenses or exchanges to establish.

Its only assets were the reputation and quality of its manufacturers' product and the determination of its forces—little enough with which to break into an already overcrowded field and fight itself into a place at the top. And all of this was accomplished within five months, and those, the hot summer months, during which the seasoned distributors have heretofore retrenched in expenses and waited for the 25 per cent business depression, a chronic condition, to pass over.

The two pillars upon which this phenomenal success rests are organization and meritorious product. The latter is a most important factor; still, without proper distribution and presentation, it would be helpless. A complete organization working in perfect unison, with harmonious intercourse and mutual confidence and respect existing between each branch of the concern and the home office furnishes the keynote to V. L. S. E. success.

All of the foregoing points to one person; is really the story of his connection and activities in V. L. S. E. told by a series of illustrations. And that man is Walter W. Irwin, general manager, first by appointment and now by accomplishment, of the concern. Previous to being made pilot of the big film company, Mr. Irwin's knowledge of the motion picture industry was limited to what he had absorbed as legal counsel for the Vitagraph Company of America, but he had an unlimited store of good, sound judgment, believed that certain merchandising principles could be applied successfully to the film business, and understood human nature.

This latter is more important than it appears at first glance. With a clean-cut, fair policy and direct methods, Mr. Irwin won the implicit confidence, respect and good will of his sales force from the start. The result was that he found his people to be hard workers, efficient, and loyal, and exhibitors found them courteous, firm and persistent in their arguments, and reliable in their statements. Mr. Irwin's merchandising theories are reflected in the increased business of the firm and the prolonged and repeated runs of V. L. S. E. pictures in theaters, and in the conversion of numberless exhibitors to consistent newspaper advertisers. Another and most commendable idea of Mr. Irwin's is the "open market" for pictures. An exhibitor can book any V. L. S. E. feature without contracting for the entire program or pledging himself for additional subjects.

Hope for Scenario Writers

"To say that the day of the unthinking amateur scenario writer is past is merely to repeat an axiom which has been recognized for years by the knowing ones of the film trade, but, what with the passion for popular adaptations, it is only quite recently that directors and heads of producing companies have come to a realization of the fact that the scenario must keep pace with the unbroken advance in other branches of the industry, and that to do so, men of the better educated classes, who have made an especial study of the film problem, must be called upon to furnish the scripts of today and tomorrow." This is the gist of a recent statement made by Bert L. Kuhn, a free-lance script writer who has achieved no little distinction in scenario work within the past few years. Mr. Kuhn, who has a record of several years of successful newspaper work with some of the largest newspapers in the country, deserted that line sometime ago in order to devote his entire attention to scenario writing for a few of the large producers. "It is my belief," said Mr. Kuhn, "that the scenario writers of the future will be recruited not from the ranks of the masses, but from the men, who in addition to an experience and knowledge of dramatic technique, which fits them particularly for this work, are possessed of that broad outlook upon the world and its activities, which only the higher education can give." Mr. Kuhn is at present preparing a number of special scripts at Madison, Wis.

Bert L. Kuhn.

Essanay Using Southern Beauties

Seven Birmingham, Ala., girls, who won the largest number of votes in the Essanay scenario and prize beauty contest, conducted recently in conjunction with the Birmingham Age-Herald have arrived in Chicago and begun work on "The River of Romance," the prize scenario, written by Morgan D. Jones of Dadeville, Ala.

The girls are quartered at one of Chicago's leading family hotels as the guests of the Age-Herald, and as the Essanany studios are far from the hostelry, they are being transported to and from it and the studios in limousines furnished by Essanay.

Elizabeth Tinder, who won first prize in the contest and consequently was cast for the lead in the photoplay, has gone to Starved Rock, Ill., where some of the scenes are being taken. Alma Wood Perkins, second prize winner, accompanied her and will appear in the second most important part.

The other girls—Ruth Tinder, Mary Allison, Jean Lambert, Johanna Bodeker and Nona Allyn—will have minor parts in the cast. They were accompanied from Birmingham by R. U. Carter, representative of the Age-Herald, who is looking after their comfort and expenses in Chicago. Essanay furnishes complete wardrobes for all the girls, and several entire outfits—from hats to shoes—were purchased especially for Elizabeth Tinder, the star.

John Lorenz, Essanay leading man, will appear with Miss Tinder in the lead. "The River of Romance," directed by Charles E. Ashley, will be realesed November 20 on the General program.

Equitable Gets Lillian Lorraine Film

Lillian Lorraine, whose wonderful work as star in the numerous Ziegfeld Follies, Shubert's Winter Garden, and later as supreme star of the bigger Keith vaudeville houses, and who is now at Los Angeles devoting her time solely to motion picture work, is to be a feature on the Equitable program early in the forthcoming schedule, at a date in December to be definitely set and announced shortly.

Miss Lorraine, who established herself as a satisfactory screen possibility in the big serial "Neal of the Navy," and who proved by her work in that enterprise that she was ably fitted for big, emotional roles requiring more than mere beauty, makes her screen debut on the Equitable program in a specially elaborate production of an original work entitled "The Lady of Perfume," which was produced by Messrs. Horkheimer at their Long Beach, Cal., studios, especially for Equitable.

Hobart's Theater Remodeled

H. F. Coons, of Hobart, Ind., is completely remodeling and redecorating the Gem theater, which he owns and operates in that city, making it one of the most modern and up-to-date picture theaters in Indiana. A new and modern theater front is being built on the house, with an open lobby, and a stage sufficiently large to accommodate the average vaudeville act, is also being placed in position. Two new Simplex motor-driven projectors are also being installed in the reconstructed booth, 8x12 feet in size. For the comfort and health of the patrons, eight 16-inch fans and a 30-inch exhaust fan are being installed, thus giving perfect ventilation. A new orchestrian piano with pipe organ effect, trap drums, triangle, bells, tambourine and like equipment has been purchased, and will be installed.

The house when it reopens will use a straight Mutual program, using the Master-Pictures on Friday nights. On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, a four-reel program is given, and on Saturday and Sunday, a five-reel program.

Vanosope Company Bankrupt

On Friday of last week the Vanoscope Company, of 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The petition gave $1,004,744 as the liabilities of the concern, and assets of unknown value, consisting for the greater part of patents on motion picture projectors. The principal creditor is E. Morhardt of Chicago, who is said to have a claim of $1,000,000 due to a suit for damages for breach of contract. The other debts cover rent, stationery, telephones and attorney's fees.

Farnum "putting" his touch down in "The Gentleman from Indiana."

Dustin Farnum and Frank Lloyd, Chief Director of "The Gentleman from Indiana."

Part of the town built for "The Gentleman from Indiana.

Pallas Pictures Pretentious Debut

"THE GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA"

THE subject with which the newly organized Pallas Pictures will make its debut to the patrons of Paramount theaters through the country will be Booth Tarkington's well-known drama, "The Gentleman From Indiana," starring Dustin Farnum, was produced under the direction of Frank Lloyd, the young expert who in this elaborate offering proves himself to be one of the most able directors in this country today. With the assistance of technical Director Earl Sibley, at the head of a small army comprising the technical force, and Dal Clawson, in charge of the cameramen, Chief Director Lloyd is staging a subject that will create more than ordinary interest.

Part of the large premises of the Pallas Pictures plant has been turned into a small town of true Hoosier type. This in itself was a big undertaking.

Cynthy (Helen Eddy) supporting Dustin Farnum in "The Gentleman from Indiana."

Countless wagon loads of dirt had to be hauled to present typical rural streets, and buildings of every description had to be erected, including a courthouse, church, post office, printing establishment, town hall and numerous other village structures. To secure a rainstorm effect at night—in rainless California—Chief Director Lloyd had to use over 14,000 gallons of water, every gallon of which had to be hauled by auto trucks from a well three miles away. An entire circus had to be transferred to the Pallas Pictures property, where elephants, lady bareback riders, clowns and all the essentials that go to make up a popular organization of this kind were included in a monster parade, followed by a show. A whirlwind political campaign with stump speeches, together with amazing torchlight processions as in the days of old in the Middle West; a thrilling storm at night with buildings rocking in the wind and sheets of water washing down the window panes of the Main street stores; the same rainstorm in a grove of cedars where was enacted the famous Booth Tarkington lightning flash when Harkless was captured by the Whitecaps; and many other big scenes, ending finally with a terrific mob battle and the destruction of the entire town, go to make up a series of events that will make this production one of importance in the film industry.

Another feature of the photoplay will be the staging of an actual game of football in the historic athletic stadium of the University of Southern California. The powerful eleven of the Los Angeles Athletic Club supported by their hardly less stalwart "scrubs" furnish the background for Dustin Farnum's spectacular reproduction of a 105-yard run through a broken field for a touchdown.

Director Lloyd has spent considerable time in securing the desired types of the story with remarkable result. Despite the fact that many scenes included over five hundred people his painstaking care in selecting the cast will readily receive its reward when the general effect is seen on the screen. The staging of this immense production has caused considerable interest in Los Angeles and daily sightseeing trips are made by large crowds to the studio grounds. In one night scene Director Lloyd allowed the entire crowd of onlookers to come into the picture, thereby gaining a mob scene of most unusual strength.

Many unusual effects in day and night photography are being worked out with success by Dal Clawson and his staff of photographers which will add beauty to the film. Mr. Clawson is known as the "prize cameraman" of the west coast, and his work in such productions as "Hypocrites," "Captain Courtesy," and other subjects of equal photographic beauty will readily bear out the right to his title. About Dustin Farnum little need be said. His popularity extends from shore to shore and a more favorite screen idol would be difficult to select. Opposite him appears his well known leading lady, Winifred Kingston, the balance of the cast including such artists as Herbert Standing, Joe Ray, C. Norman Hammond, Signor de la Cruz, Howard Davies, Page Peters and Elsie Cort.

Celia Santon New Horsley Star

Celia Santon has recently been engaged by David Horsley to support Crane Wilbur in the three and five-reel features now being produced at the Horsley Studios. Miss Santon is distinct ingenue type, small, dainty and possessing charming screen personality. She played opposite Mr. Wilbur with the Pathe Company and has been featured by the Universal Company in a number of pictures. Mr. Wilbur is writing all of the pictures in which he appears and in each new story he creates a role especially fitted to the talents of Miss Santon. Her first appearance with Mr. Wilbur was in the feature soon to be released on the Mutual Program, "The Blood of Our Brothers." In this picture, a sort of modern-allegorical play, she appears in the part of "Devotion," a shepherdess. In the story now being produced and entitled, "Could a Man Do More?" Miss Santon appears as "Faith Richardson," a girl of the old South. Mr. Wilbur is at present writing a decidedly novel picture-play to be called "The Thinker." In this Miss Santon will create the role of "The Butterfly," a society debutante in search of a real man.

Celia Santon.

NOVEL ADVERTISING IDEAS

Exhibitors Show Real Ingenuity in Preparing Advertising of the Unusual Kind—Clever Stunts Put Over with Several V. L. S. E. Features

No advertising plan or unique publicity idea that will contribute to the promotion of better business seemingly is being missed these days by progressive exhibitors who have tasted of the fruits of such exploitation. These "stunts" for the most part, of course, have their inspiration in the title of the feature shown, or the theme of the play.

For instance, when the feature, "The House of a Thousand Candles" was shown at the Orpheum theater, Franklin, Pa., the exhibitor engaged a show window, which he filled completely with candles of all sizes—some in candlesticks, some unsupported and others carelessly thrown around. At night those in the holders were lighted and made an unusual contrast to the other electrically lighted windows in the vicinity. A small card bearing the name of the theater where the feature was engaged, satisfied the curiosity of the large number of people attracted by the display. This same exhibitor used hundreds of candles to illuminate his lobby and his box office each night while showing this feature. The effect of the soft, mellow light was quite unusual, and attracted capacity business. Passersby thought that maybe the city light plant had broken down, until after closer investigation, the real reason for this odd illumination was apparent to them.

Three weeks before the exhibition date of "Mortmain" the Grand Opera House in Titusville, Pa., sent out an imprint of the human hand on a plain sheet of paper to each of the "leading lights" of the town. The imprint was made with carbon dust—giving it a very ghastly appearance. One week later, a second notice was sent to the same people. The third week, one day before the exhibition, the same imprint was sent again, but the sheet carried full information as to what it all meant. The two first notices created a vast amount of comment, and received a large amount of newspaper publicity.

The Lubin theater of Cincinnati, when showing "The District Attorney," got up an especially attractive mailing piece in the form of a legal size envelope on which was printed in red type, "A Warning from the District Attorney." The enclosure consisted of a herald and a red circular bearing a short synopsis of the story and the day of showing at the theater. This proved a very profitable advertising stunt.

A Portland exhibitor ran a big three-quarter page ad. in the Portland papers announcing the capture of "Crooky." This followed an advertisement of the preceding days, offering a $2,000 reward for Crooky's capture.

Star Writes Centaur Feature

Not content with the laurels that come to him as one of the most popular players in motion pictures, Crane Wilbur has branched out into a scenario writer, in which endeavor he bids fair to gain wide recognition, if his first effort may be taken as a criterion.

Mr. Wilbur has written a drama espousing the curse of war, called "The Blood of Our Brothers," which David Horsley, under whose direction the star is appearing, pronounced the strongest argument against war ever advanced. Immediate arrangements were made for the production of the play, and it is now being picturized at Mr. Horsley's studio in Los Angeles, with Mr. Wilbur in the principal role.

"The Blood of Our Brothers" is to be in three reels and will be released Wednesday, October 27, in the regular service of the Mutual program. Arthur Maude is directing.

The Associated Film Sales Corporation has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Monroe Isen as branch manager of their New York exchange. His new offices are at 110 West Fortieth street, where he is welcoming his many friends among the exhibitors.

Mirror Buys Studio

The Mirror Films, Incorporated, the new $2,500,000 factor in the film world, of which Clifford B. Harmon is president and Captain Harry Lambart director-general, has been working hard under cover for the past few months, it now appears, although the announcement of the official organization of the corporation was made but two weeks ago.

Mirror Studio at Glendale, Long Island.

The company sent out an announcement this week to the effect that a studio property had been purchased and would be ready for operation as a studio in a few weeks. This brings the company nearer to a consummation of its plans than was supposed at first.

The property which was bought by the company was originally a dance hall and casino situated at Glendale, Long Island, within the corporate limits of New York City and within easy distance of the theatrical and motion picture center of New York by auto, trolley or train. The Glendale station of the Long Island railroad is only a short walk from the studio and cars from Brooklyn bridge pass by the door.

Interior of studio building, now being remodeled.

When Captain Lambart and Mr. Harmon first looked over the building, they saw at once that it could be turned into a picture studio in a very short time and at a comparatively small expense. They recommended it to the men associated with them in the formation of the company and it was acquired.

The main structure is of steel and concrete and contains two floors and a basement. The upper floor, topped by a high roof, needed only the replacing of tiling with glass and the installation of picture paraphernalia to make it a studio 147x90 feet, in which at least ten directors can work with comfort. From this studio the way leads to a large porch, which is to be enclosed in glass, and down from that is the lot, on which big scenes can be staged.

The second floor of the building lends ample room for ten large dressing rooms and wardrobes for the extra people, scene docks with north light and space for drying drums. On the same floor is a great kitchen which is being turned into a restaurant.

In the basement the room is big enough for a great laboratory, projection room and film vaults. One example of the ease with which the building is being made into a studio is the fact that a shooting gallery needed only a sheet at one end and a projection machine at the other to make it a projection room.

In a frame hotel which is attached to the main building, there is room for executive offices, scenario department and dressing rooms for the principals.

The head offices of the company have been opened on the seventh floor of 16 East Forty-second street, where the rooms for the business executives have been fitted up modestly but tastefully.

SHERMAN BUYS GRIFFITH FILM

Minneapolis Magnate Purchases Right to Show "Birth of a Nation" in Sixteen States West of Mississippi River for Huge Sum

H. A. Sherman, general manager of the Elliott-Sherman Film Company of Minneapolis, Minn., closed a deal this week for the rights to D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," in sixteen states west of the Mississippi river. The price paid for these rights was $250,000 cash, making the largest transaction ever conducted for the rights to a traveling attraction in the history of the American theater. The deal was closed by President H. E. Aitken for the Epoch Producing Corporation, the New York company that controls all rights to the Griffith production. Owing to the tremendous work of handling the tours of ten companies that are under the direction of J. J. McCarthy, general manager for the Epoch company, it was decided to release this large territory to one concern. Mr. Sherman will make his headquarters in Minneapolis but will book his tours through the Klaw & Erlanger offices in New York City.

First Quirk Comedy

Billy Quirk, the famous screen comic, started work on his first Harvard comedy this week, entitled, "In the Salesman's Grip," from the story by Billy F. Kuhn. This comedy promises to be one of the funniest of the year, as Billy is working harder than he has ever worked in his life, for he wants to make the Harvard comedies the best on the market.

Tammany Young, creator of "Bill," in "Bill the Office Boy" series, recently made by Reliance in twenty reels, will play opposite Billy Quirk in this comedy. Others as well known will also be in the cast.

Marie Empress, Rolfe-Metro Star

Marie Empress, who comes from a long line of theatrical folks and is known on both sides of the Atlantic for her extraordinary versatility, will have a prominent role in the coming Rolfe-Metro feature motion picture, "The Woman Pays," in which Valli Valli will be featured. Her father was one time lord mayor of London, was a famous Drury Lane actor, a freeman of the City of London and prominent in Masonic circles. Her uncle was Edmund Kean, one of the greatest tragedians of all time.

Marie Empress.

Miss Empress is considered one of the leading male impersonators of the English speaking stage, whether in evening clothes or dressed as a ragged urchin. She is a well known comedienne in London and Paris and is also a dramatic actress of unusual force and power. In addition to this she plays ingenue roles with girlish vivacity, to which is added the attractiveness of her slender and graceful figure.

Mme. Belchere, the mother of Miss Empress, was a famous French actress. Her grandfather was Dr. Belchere, physician to the Rothschilds. In addition to her French and English parentage Miss Empress has some Spanish blood, and her Latin ancestry is very plainly shown, for her beauty is of the striking, dark type. Miss Empress entered her motion picture career with Lew Fields in "Old Dutch." She appeared as the "firely" with William Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-one," and afterwards had a leading part in "The Stubbornness of Geraldine." She has been very successful in motion pictures. Her striking beauty screens splendidly and her histrionic ability and marvelous versatility fit her to interpret almost any part, male or female.

"Who Is Guilty?" Series Next

Balboa is about ready to produce its new series of continued stories, which will be known under the title of "Who Is Guilty?" Pathe Freres will probably be the releasing agency. As the finishing touches are now being put on the "Neal of the Navy" serial at the Long Beach studio, the decks will soon be cleared for taking up the work which was planned some time ago, by the Horkheimer brothers.

"Who Is Guilty?" will consist of twelve individual stories from the pen of Will M. Ritchey, Balboa's chief scenario editor. He wrote all but one of the stories which made up the "Who Pays?" series, recently produced by Balboa and exhibited the world over with such success. Because of the many requests received for additional stories of this type, Balboa has decided to make the new series, which will virtually be a continuation of "Who Pays?"

Mr. Ritchey has already completed half of the "Who Is Guilty?" stories. The remainder are well in hand. A typically strong Balboa cast will interpret them and the productions will be all of the high order for which the Horkheimer brothers have achieved a reputation in the motion picture world. Definite announcement as to the cast and director will be made very soon.

Builds Private Studio

The first movie studio built entirely for personal use ever erected in the Middle West or in the United States for that matter is now being constructed on the roof of the Gilmore apartments in Milwaukee.

These apartments which are just being completed were built and are owned by Paul Gilmore, the well known photoplay star, who plays the role of "The Commandant" in the new Griffith production "The Penitentes" which will be released shortly.

The studio was constructed for Mr. Gilmore's own use and when completed will be one of the best equipped in the country. It is not large as studios go, but no expense has been spared to make it modern throughout, in fact it has been Mr. Gilmore's idea to make it a "vest pocket edition of the Griffith studio at Los Angeles," as he puts it.

It was with the idea of carrying out certain ideas and experiments that he has long had in mind that Mr. Gilmore had this studio built. It is located near the shores of Lake Michigan and developing, printing and drying rooms will also be located in the building. The apartment, which when completed will be known as "The Gilmore," is costing well over $100,000 and is the second to be erected in Milwaukee by Mr. Gilmore.

Portland Shows "Carmen"

E. L. Crawford opened the Casco theater, Portland, Maine, on Monday evening with the "Carmen" picture before a large and select audience. The theater has been fitted with a very elaborate stage setting for this production, which greatly enhances the picture. Suitable music was rendered by a select orchestra, and the production was staged by S. L. Rothapfel of New York.

Mr. Crawford has installed for this production two of the latest model motion picture projection machines, Power's Cameragraph No. 6B. A special representative of the Nicholas Power Company came to Portland from New York to install the machines and the projection of the "Carmen" picture was conceded to be the best ever seen in Portland.

Kleine Opens New Office

A new Kleine office, to handle the features of the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, has been opened in Cincinnati to care for the ever-increasing volume of business from that territory. The office will be in charge of H. A. Bugie, promoted out of the New York office, and will be located at 138-140 West Seventh street.

Pathe will release the week of November 3 "The Adventures of a Madcap," a four-reel drama by Balboa, and featuring Jackie Saunders. This picture has been colored by the Pathe process, since it was particularly adapted to this treatment, showing, as it does, out-of-door backgrounds of peculiar beauty.

America Is Picture Land

BY MAURICE TOURNEUR*

MOTOGRAPHY has asked me to write something about an interesting side of motion pictures. To my mind, the most interesting thing I can think of about them is my most recent discovery, that America is the ideal place to make them. Yours is a wonderful country, wonderful in a thousand ways. Everything is so big, so free, so healthy. Therefore let me give it big praise, big admiration, big thanks for your big, generous welcome to me. This is not the enthusiasm of an effervescent boy. I am no fledgling; I am a man of experience. I know France, England, Germany, Italy, Spain, Holland; I know the skin tents of the African nomad, the ranches of the Argentina, the scenic wonders of Brazil, but America is the place, and as long as she will extend her hospitality, I will remain the happy guest.

Maurice Tourneur.

I can find only pity for the benighted foreign writers who come here, spend six weeks in the hotels of the principal cities and then go home and write ironical and ludicrously inaccurate books on America. The subject is too big for them. They have no time to feel the deep, free, life-giving air you breathe, that untainted air, which before reaching your lungs has been purified and revivified by passing over countless verdant valleys and snow-capped mountains, past refreshing lakes and rivers, through the myriad trees of your glorious forests, the pungent depths of wildwoods. And when you breathe it, you are stronger and nobler than you were before. Mother Nature is behind you all the time.

And the conditions of American life are so different, so much better, in ensemble and in detail than the sordid, red-tape-bound life of other countries that here, too, the ambitious maker of moving pictures finds every assistance at his hand. Instead of making it hard to accomplish the best results, you make it easy; instead of pushing down the man who has intelligence enough to wish to rise to the top, you pull him up; you oil the wheels of progress.

For instance, in the matter of money, without which nothing big, nothing right, can be accomplished in the production of good photoplays, the American manufacturers' hands are always open. They are not penurious. If a director wishes to wreck a train, he gets the tracks, the locomotive, the cars, everything he requires, without a murmur. If he wants thousands of soldiers fighting, real soldiers, who will not appear ridiculous, he gets them and they are properly paid. That may seem an absurd thing to mention to my fellow directors, who have not worked in other countries, but if they had to work on the other side, they would not think so; indeed, no!

In Europe, you go to the head of your firm and say: "I have a new idea, which will make a wonderful effect. It will cost us about $400." His answer will be prompt and to the point. He will say, nearly bursting with rage, "Don't do it under any condition! The d——d thing is too expensive." And as you retire, crestfallen, with another happy thought gone to waste, he will sagely tap his head as he looks compassionately after you, as though to say: "Ah! Poor fellow! He has gone clean daft. I fear he is rapidly becoming a dangerous lunatic." In this country if you have any reputation at all for common sense, you have virtually carte blanche on the expenditures, and if you do not do your best work, you have only yourself to blame.

Then there is the contrast in the attitude of American officials and foreign officials. Here, the motion picture is regarded as a beneficial institution, an important factor in the education and entertainment of the people. There, it is regarded as a tolerated —and not too much tolerated, at that—evil, a thing to be discouraged and balked at every turn. There for train wrecks, soldiers, etc., the director has to see numerous officious public servants, who act more like private masters; he must spend long hours waiting on a bench in a dark hallway; harrassed by the remote but nevertheless persistent feeling that he is guilty of some overt act; he will be met with impertinent questions and sarcastic answers; he will be sent like an office boy from one ignorant fellow to another and then back again, just to make him realize that he is a worm and that they are demi-gods. Finally, and sometimes it is after months, he will be told that the request is absolutely impossible and that he is a disgrace and a nuisance to the community.

In striking contrast to this sort of treatment is that which was accorded to me in the New York city hall while I was engaged in the filmatization of "The Man of the Hour." In my desire to give to my picture the proper local color, I wished to go through the municipal building and the mayor's office. All I had to do was to open the doors, put my head in, smile and say: "Hello!" I invaded the sanctums of a lot of really important people, interrupted their business, asked them silly questions, threw open their windows on a bitter cold winter day to take exteriors, sat down in the very chair of the president of the board of aldermen in order that I might see things as he saw them, filled my lungs with aldermanic air, my eyes with the sights familiar to the mayor of the great city, and what was the result? A picture in which the audience was kind enough to detect a wonderful atmosphere and a comprehension of American life which they called surprising in a foreigner. It was not surprising. I had every facility for it. On the other side, I could never have penetrated farther than the ante-rooms. And if you have to work in the streets of Paris, it is simply a question as to how many feet of film you can get before you are arrested, even though you make not the slightest disturbance.

*Director of the World Film Corporation.

It would be ungrateful, indeed, in me to close this paean of praise to America without a word of laudation for the American actor. He is far superior to the French actor. He is more earnest and thinks only of his work. The French actor is frivolous and thinks of his audience or the camera all the time and, worst of all, persists in looking at them, a fatal thing for convincing effects. It is a pity that an actor who is only five minutes on the stage cannot give his undivided attention to the work he is paid to do.

Director Tourneur discussing a scene with Clara Kimball Young.

On the screen the American actor is particularly easy to manage because he can be held; it is impossible to hold the Frenchman; his mind is wandering all the time; he is thinking of the pleasures and pastimes that are to come and is just "sticking it out" till his work is over, for all the world like a school boy in the springtime.

One of your wittiest men has said: "Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris." May I be permitted to paraphrase him thus: "Good Parisians, when they would live, come to America," for truly has that other honored poet written:

"America! Half-brother of the world!
With something good of every land."

Kann Leaves for the Coast

George E. Kann, the young man who worked his way up from private secretary to President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, to secretary and assistant treasurer of the Universal Company, left recently for the coast to assume duties there in the chair of one of the most responsible positions this company has to offer. Those friends of Kann's who have watched his rapid rise are convinced that he will make good in this new position and although they all disliked to to have him leave they knew it was one of the big moments in his career.

The Universalites had a "Kann" night on October 2. They first went to the Garrick theater and from there to Bustanoby's eating place where a big room had been set aside for them and a magnificent banquet prepared. The honored guest heard himself praised by all present and gifts were showered upon him and toasts galore drunk to him. One of the beautiful presents that Mr. Kann received was a solid silver cigarette case with his monogram engraved on the outside and inside were the words: "Yours for Universal Prosperity, October Second, Nineteen Hundred Fifteen." When the banquet broke up, in the early morning hours, everyone present declared it to be one of the most successful Universal hits of the year. The accompanying photograph shows the Universalites enjoying themselves at the banquet at Beistanoby's on "Kann" night.

Farewell dinner tendered to Mr. George Kann by the "Big U" boys of the Universal Film Mfg. Co.

Plays That Elevate Rather Than Degrade

INCE DISCUSSES MORALS

THAT the motion picture producer of today is doing his utmost to safeguard the morals of American youth—in his productivity—is the opinion voiced by Thomas H. Ince, one of the big world-famous triumvirate now making photographic spectacles for the Triangle. Never in the long and eventful history of the industry, according to the noted director-general, have such pains been taken to build picture plays that will elevate instead of degrade the moral standard of boys and girls, as those which are evident in present-day manufacture.

For some time past, a certain class of agitators has been striving desperately, Mr. Ince declares, to check the tremendous strides with which the motion picture art is advancing, by addressing scathing speeches against its moral tone. And it was in refutation of the insinuations uttered by these yowling fanatics that the great producer, in a recent interview, flung a denial in defense of the profession he so illustriously represents.

"I am prone to admit," says Mr. Ince, "that the time was when all too many of the American film manufacturing concerns were totally lacking in their sense of moral duty to the public. The fault lay in the fact that sensationalism was their goal—sensationalism that created a market for their pictures, for the public then was not fully educated to the fact that the good film drama can be made a medium of enlightenment on subjects that are vital to the interests of the human race.

"As time progressed, however, and heads of families joined their sons and daughters in frequenting picture playhouses, a new era was ushered in for the production of photo dramas. The demand changed from one for salacious stories without a moral to one for clean dramas with a heart interest or the powerful solution of a problem. Then it was that the producer awakened to the realization that if his industry expected to survive, he must needs eliminate the lewd and obscene from his films. By the eventful elimination of lewdness and obscenity, the motion picture production took a seven-league step toward the universal popularity it now enjoys."

To the question: "How is the producer safeguarding the morals of our youth?". Mr. Ince replied:

"By being careful and by simply allowing to remain in the film only that degree of suggestiveness which is totally essential to the dramatic value of the picture, as a story, or to the expression of a message, as a preachment. It will have to be admitted by the unprejudiced that certain types of photoplays demand, at times, the incorporation of a highly sensual scene to serve its purpose. Such a scene, I believe, cannot do harm—except to the moral pervert whose god is iniquity. The Knights of the Garter were delightfully broad-minded in their attitude. Their motto, if I remember correctly, was: 'Evil be to him who evil thinks.'

"Let me cite an example. A few months ago I produced a picture entitled, 'The Toast of Death.' It told the story of the tragic end of a man who was too weak to overwhelm the temptation of a woman. Had I designed the woman to be a plainly-dressed, awkward, slovenly person, the purpose of my story would have been entirely lost. She had to be one of the bewitching kind; the so-called 'vampire' type of beauty which, time and events have taught us, have most frequently proven the undoing of the spineless man. She didn't wear too many articles of clothing—I mean the actress in the interpretation of her role—and the production was the more artistic because of that fact. I was not a bit surprised when the National Board of Censors did not condemn the picture, for by their mark of approval they bore out my belief in them that they are highly appreciative of artistic values on the screen.

"In my production of 'An Alien,' adapted from 'The Sign of the Rose,' in which Mr. George Beban starred, there was another suggestive scene, which hypocritical 'reformers' would have loved to construe as lascivious. It suggested the gayety in which the scapegrace son of a millionaire reveled and which resulted in the heartrending loss of an innocent Italian's baby.

"It was a scene depicting a Bohemian wine party in a private dining room of one of New York's fashionable cafes. Some undoubtedly have said: 'Oh, that is demoralizing,' but they do not realize that without it the moral of the story—for it had a big moral—would have been lost to their sons.

"The subject of morality in motion pictures is a big one. It is an issue that most assuredly needs the sincere attention of America's producers. But it also is an issue that is in no danger of impeding the progress of the photoplay. The producer of today, as I have said, is cognizant of the very palpable fact that the undeveloped mind of our youth is susceptible to erroneous impressions, which can be created—and I cannot make this too emphatic—only by showing him on the screen that which is irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial."

Real Governor a Lubin Star

Governor Hunt of Arizona, the man with a heart which is so much more human than which it was ever supposed a politician's might ever be, has become a motion picture devotee, and starts right off on his career before the camera with a bang, good, big and generous.

Recently the powers that be of the western branch of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, had under consideration the production of a three-reel feature, which called for an impersonation of Governor Hunt. The entire stock company had a whack at making up but the problem was still there. In last resort, the governor himself was approached. It was thoroughly explained to him that "his presence" was urgently needed and he acquiesced. The result is the debut of a new motion picture player, no less than the governor himself, and in the Lubin release of November 3, "A Western Governor's Humanity," the governor of Arizona is portrayed by Governor Hunt of Arizona, and the director sits back and wonders if the harsh critic will tell him the picture is miscast. His wager is ready.

CARL LAEMMLE
UNIVERSAL
VICE PRESIDENT
W. STEPHEN BUSH
MOV. PICT. WORLD
VICE PRESIDENT
W. R. ROTHACKER
INDUSTRIAL FILM
VICE PRESIDENT
S. R. ROTHAPFEL
DIRECTOR
JOHN R. FREULER
MUTUAL
VICE PRESIDENT
FRANK J. REMBUSCH
VICE PRESIDENT
NICHOLAS POWER
VICE PRESIDENT
W. A. JOHNSTON
MOT. PICT. NEWS
DIRECTOR
J. W. BINDER
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY
E. A. MacMANUS
INT. FILM
SECRETARY
J. STUART BLACKTON
VITAGRAPH
PRESIDENT
JOSEPH W. ENGEL
METRO
TREASURER
J. E. BROULATOUR
EASTMAN
DIRECTOR
W. W. IRWIN - V. L. S. E.
CHAIRMAN OF
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
WILLIAM M. SEABURY
GENERAL COUNSEL
P. T. POWERS
UNIVERSAL
DIRECTOR
MAX STEARN
DIRECTOR
OFFICERS and DIRECTORS of The MOTION PICTURE BOARD OF TRADE of AMERICA, Inc.
KNICKERBOCKER ENG. CO. N.Y.

These are the men who organized the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America. The officers on the opposite page will serve until the first annual meeting in January. Since these officers were elected, many other concerns and individuals of equal prominence in the industry have become members.

Quality Company to Produce in East

"California is just as good as it ever was for motion picture making, and I like it immensely, but New York offers facilities for producing elaborate features which outweigh all the considerations of climate and consistent atmospherical conditions which are the Golden Gate State's biggest assets."

This declaration was made by Francis X. Bushman at the Metro offices in the Heidelberg building early this week, in announcing the fact that he intended making his permanent headquarters in the East. Mr. Bushman arrived in New York from the Quality-Metro studios in Hollywood, Cal., last Saturday, bringing with him the first print to reach this city of "Pennington's Choice," the latest production of the Quality Pictures Corporation for the Metro program and the first Metro release starring the beautiful Beverly Bayne with Mr. Bushman.

Mr. Bushman was accompanied by Miss Bayne, Lester Cuneo and Helen Dunbar. Other members of the Quality-Metro company in which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne are the stellar attractions, reached New York early this week and will at once begin work on two important screen productions for Metro.

The first of these will be a picturization of "The Yellow Dove," a stirring romance of the international secret service by George Gibbs, which was accepted in manuscript form for screen production before its publication by D. Appleton & Company. The other production in which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will be featured is "Richard Carvel," the great Winston Churchill historical romance.

Both these productions are planned on a scale somewhat more elaborate than the average high-class feature, and in both Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will divide stellar honors. The interiors for both pictures will be taken in New York, while for the exteriors of "Richard Carvel," Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will go with their company to Maryland and Virginia to obtain the requisite historical settings demanded by the Winston Churchill novel.

Mr. Bushman's latest picture, which will be released on November 8, is "Pennington's Choice." This is a drama of physical prowess and is a distinct contrast to Mr. Bushman's last picture, "The Silent Voice," in which he starred with Marguerite Snow. In "Pennington's Choice" Mr. Bushman battles with J. J. Jeffries and performs many feats of manly endeavor.

Marguerite Snow, the other member of the triumvirate of stellar talent under contract with the Quality Pictures Corporation, will remain at the Hollywood studio until her newest picture, "Rosemary—That's for Remembrance," is completed. Then she, too, will come East.

Until arrangements for a studio in New York for the Quality-Metro companies are completed, Mr. Bushman will use the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., quarters at No. 3 West Sixty-first street. With Miss Bayne he will probably begin work there early in the coming week. Negotiations are already under way for a big Manhattan studio and will probably be concluded in the course of the next fortnight.

After Marguerite Snow's departure for the East, the Hollywood plant will be maintained by the Quality Pictures Corporation for such pictures as the Metro may deem it expedient to have produced there. Bushman, Bayne and Snow will be located in the East.

Mimi Yvonne Joins Lubin

Dainty, talented, lovable and beautiful little Mimi Yvonne, the seven and one-half year old little leading lady, has been added to the Lubin stock company. For the past six years little Mimi has been endearing herself in the hearts of audiences of Europe and America with her appearances on the speaking stage and in motion pictures, for her first appearance behind the footlights was made on October 21, 1909, with the celebrated English actor Martin Harvey.

Mimi Yvonne.

Little Miss Yvonne made her first pronounced "hit" in motion pictures in the titular role of "The Littlest Rebel" for which performance the press of the country were unanimous in their proclamation of the youthful actress, for such she is; not merely a portrayer of the stage child, but a finished little actress be it comedy role or the more serious.

Since her debut in motion pictures, she has earned the endorsement of such producers as Herbert Brenon, King Baggot, Daniel Frohman, William Fox and others.

Her first appearance with the Lubin Company will be in the coming production of a strong dramatic story by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, which is now being produced by Director Joseph Kaufman with Vinnie Burns in the leading role.

Lubin Company to Block Island

Jack Pratt, Lubin feature director, with Richard Buhler, leading man, Rosetta Brice, leading lady, and a company of twelve have left Philadelphia for Block Island to begin work on the production of "A Man's Making," to be released through the V. L. S. E. offices.

From Philadelphia the company proceeded by train to New York where it boarded Mr. Buhler's racing schooner, "Ben Hur." The outside (ocean) course will be taken to Block Island that many of the ship's deck scenes of the production may be taken en route.

"A Man's Making" is a powerful drama of the rivalry of father and son, a story of the sea and sea life, in which Mr. Buhler will be given excellent opportunity to display his versatility in the role of the son, the sturdy young American. It is from the pen of Director Pratt himself, who, collaborating with Anthony P. Kelly of the Lubin scenario staff, has also prepared the script for a stage presentation after the film version is made.

Mr. Pratt and his company will be at Block Island for about four weeks and then will return to the Philadelphia studios to complete the picture.

Metro Pictures to Have Season Run

UNIQUE POLICY OUTLINED

FOLLOWING the tried and successful example of the spoken drama in routing plays for a fixed and established season, the Metro Pictures Corporation will inaugurate a new motion picture policy by setting six months as the season for its feature productions.

The season of the dramatic stage begins in September and ends in June. The Metro season will begin separately for each picture and after a run of six consecutive months a new season, with new prints, new paper and new campaigns in behalf of the successful feature offering.

President Richard A. Rowland in announcing the new policy said yesterday:

"Many superb pictures are released and go on exhibition in the theaters and after a successful run are lost sight of because the columns of the trade press are constantly filled with reports and accounts of the newer productions.

"It is a mistake to judge a picture as good merely because it is new or to disregard the profit making qualities of a big picture that he has been running successfully for six months.

"We have settled on a six months period as the proper season for a motion picture feature because experience has demonstrated that after six months of continuous booking a feature requires fresh prints and fresh handling from an advertising point of view.

"Just as when a play of the spoken drama proves unusually successful and is continued for the second, third and sometimes the fourth and fifth seasons, so Metro pictures will be given new seasons at appropriate intervals and the public will at all times have clear strong prints of its favorite plays.

"When many thousands of dollars are carefully and judiciously expended in the making of a feature picture and a real success is turned out, it acts as its own best advertising medium and creates its own demands with the public.

"It is because our Metro pictures are of this kind that our exchanges are met with requests for return dates. Only last week in Syracuse, 'The Soul of a Woman' played for seven successive nights in one theater and already a return engagement of three days next week has been asked for and arranged.

"It is our ambition that every picture goer shall see every Metro success and accordingly we shall take each Metro picture in turn and at the end of the first six months after its release, we will give it new prints and new handling.

"This new season arrangement is only possible with feature pictures of extraordinary drawing power in the theater and none save the really great pictures, the pictures that appeal equally to the human heart and mind, will flourish under the arrangement."

This new Metro policy will be inaugurated by the opening of a second season for "The Heart of Maryland," the great David Belasco play, in which Mrs. Leslie Carter is the star. This picture was produced by Herbert Brenon, who made "Neptune's Daughter" and other celebrated screen successes, and was first released six months ago by the Tiffany Films Corporation through the Metro exchanges. It was tremendously successful at the Hippodrome, where it played to 139,000 persons in eight days, and at other large theaters, and it has been playing continuously since the time of its first showing. Because it has been unusually successful on its second and third showing at the theaters, it has been decided to formally inaugurate its second releasing season with a campaign throughout the country, calling attention of the exhibitors to the great size and power of the production.

NEW THANHOUSER STUDIOS

Arrangements Made to Open Studios and Establish Companies at Jacksonville, Florida, and in Labrador.—New Rochelle Continues

One of the most novel plans of production ever conceived even in the swift and novel history of motion pictures, is presented in the plans of Edwin Thanhouser, the head of the great New Rochelle organization which bears his name. He has just returned from a series of trips and the first day of December will witness the beginning of the new movement. In brief it is this:

Several companies will be shipped to Jacksonville, Florida, where Mr. Thanhouser has arranged for a great studio building. From there these companies will work in Cuba, the Bahamas and Bermuda. Up in Labrador two more companies will be planted and they will work with snow and ice around them. In New Rochelle the main studio will be kept as busy as ever and a combination of the three will, it is claimed, produce the most unusual output ever seen. It will be an ordinary matter under this arrangement, for one week's releases to have represented in them the climate, foliage and general atmosphere of a wonderful variety—from the Arctic to the Equator. If variety is the spice of life as well as of the motion picture industry, the variety thus presented by Mr. Thanhouser should suit the most extravagant taste. Six companies are now preparing to depart and take up their quarters for the winter; and special scenario arrangements have been made and the rights to several plays and books have been purchased so that the best equipment possible will be assured these companies. Mr. Thanhouser has long had in mind a number of productions which can be made only under a permanent studio system and in establishing these studies at so widely divergent points, he secures facilities of inestimable value.

The Falstaff Comedies, as well as the Thanhouser films, Than-o-plays (three-act features) and Thanhouser Mutual Master-Pictures, will reflect in their release the advantages of these innovations.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has decided to call its next big serial, which will follow "The Broken Coin," and be written by several famous authors, "Graft." Universal has selected Hobart Henley and Helen Holmes to appear in the leading roles of this serial.

Arrow to Release Through Pathe

A contract has been entered into between Pathe and the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, whereby the Arrow organization is to produce pictures for release by Pathe. These pictures will include productions of one, two, three, four and five-reel lengths; the latter to be released on the Gold Rooster program. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow company, has enlisted the services exclusively for the Arrow of Howell Hansel as director-in-chief of all Arrow productions, Mr. Hansel, who directed "The Million Dollar Mystery," will devote his immediate attention to the casting and staging of the first Arrow pictures for Pathe release. He has engaged as his assistant A. F. Mayo, who has been successfully identified with the many big productions of his famous chief. The Standard studio at Yonkers, N. Y., has been leased by Mr. Shallenberger for Arrow producing purposes. Upon the inauguration of picture-taking, which will be in about a fortnight, Mr. Hansel will make his headquarters almost entirely in the Arrow studios. The executive offices of the Arrow Film Corporation will remain, for a while, at 71 West Twenty-third street, but later on they will be moved uptown.

Howell Hansel.

Internationally famous stars of the stage and of the screen will be seen in forthcoming Arrow releases. The stories will be written especially for Arrow pictures by the most capable authors. These stories will be put in scenario form under a plan devised by Mr. Shallenberger for the perfect co-ordination of all units of production, collaboration by story-author, scenario writer and director.

The scenario, advertising, and publicity departments will be in charge of Albert S. LeVino, secretary and treasurer of the Arrow company.

MinA's New Players

During the past few weeks, MinA Comedies have been unusually active and several stars have been added to its coterie of leads. To secure comedies out of the ordinary run has been the aim and the company has been receiving much complimentary criticism on its recent efforts.

Several of the subjects, such as "Alone in the City of Sighs and Tears," tend to burlesque and poke fun at more serious pictures and, in doing this, present something novel in filmdom.

A glance over the personnel of those who have joined the MinA forces bespeaks the quality of these comedies.

Constance Talmadge, who makes her first MinA appearance in "Beached and Bleached" is well known to film fans. While with the Vitagraph players Miss Talmadge established a screen reputation for herself, specializing in comedy roles.

"Smiling" Bill Persons, who needs no introduction, has also been recently added to the MinA forces.

Rena Rogers, a former Universal favorite, played the lead in the MinA release "The Honeymoon Roll" and, because of her big success in that subject, has been retained for future releases, making her next MinA appearance in "Alone in the City of Sighs and Tears."

Pierce Returning East

Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, passed through Chicago last week on his way east from the studio to attend a meeting of the Paramount manufacturers with the head officials of the Paramount organization to be held on the fifteenth of October, in New York.

"I am returning to New York after a trip to the Coast which included the Panama Fair, more enthused than ever at the prospect of our coming releases," said Mr. Pierce, in a personal talk with the executives of MOTOGRAPHY. "Were the reader to have visited the studios of the Paramount manufacturers, as I have just done, and were he to have seen the extreme care and attention that is being paid to all branches of the work, there would be no doubt left in his mind that Paramount pictures are designed and destined to be all that the name implies.

"Take our own studio, as an illustration. Covering the best part of two city blocks right in the heart of Los Angeles, you find a studio so scientifically arranged and conducted on such business principles as to challenge favorable comparison with any well ordered business undertaking that one may call to mind. Criticisms of our industry have been made—in time past—stating that it is loose-jointed; that it is thrown together; that there is more waste in the conduct of the motion picture business than in any other line of human endeavor.

"In the Morosco studio you will not find this to be the case—and I simply speak of this particular plant as a type. Here, for example, you will find the director of art analyzing the carefully prepared scenarios; selecting sets and scenes that are true to type of the period in which the play is written; these sets are then drawn to scale with all of the art-period furniture and decorations; and these hand colored drawings are then given to the carpenters, artists, decorators, etc., as a model. And they must be exactly as per schedule.

"One morning when I was at the studio the director, Mr. Lloyd, appeared at the office with two different kinds of linoleum in his hand. He wished a certain kind for a church scene in "The Call of the Cumberlands" which is soon to appear on the Paramount program with Dustin Farnum as the star.

"'One of these,' he said, 'is less expensive than the other, but it will not have the same churchy effect.' . .

"'By all means get the best,' was the answer of Charles Eyton, Morosco's general manager. And so it was ordered.

"The same condition prevailed in the set itself. The effect might have been produced, in a way, by having the walls of the little church made of canvas —something that has been extensively used and is inexpensive to prepare. Not so with this setting. Orders were issued to have the interior of the scene made of the best quartered oak; varnished with the highest grade of varnish—the result being that that particular end of the studio resembled nothing so much as the inside of a cozy country church, with Herbert Standing, in broadcloth, ready to perform a perfectly good marriage ceremony.

"Such fidelity to detail; such unsparing methods to produce the very best photoplays, irrespective of expense, are some of the things that are not only raising the photoplay to higher standards but are constantly drawing more and more of the best class of people to our play houses to witness the silent drama —the application of right business methods, meanwhile, constantly conserving the losses and leaks that have formerly been the bete noir of the business—this saving being spent in the production of constantly improving achievement."

Mr. Pierce expects to remain in New York only a few days, thence to return to Columbus to continue his efforts to have "Hypocrites" passed in Ohio.

Balboa Star's Rapid Rise

At the suggestion of three of America's foremost artists, Jackie Saunders—the Balboa girl—became a motion picture player. While doing ingenue parts in a Philadelphia stock company, Harrison Fisher saw Miss Saunders and invited her to New York to pose for him. Because of her girlish beauty, she was much in demand in the studios of the metropolis. Howard Chandler Christy used her in some of his best known pictures of three or four years ago. Then she became a model for Clarence Underwood. He it was who first sensed Miss Saunders' photographic possibilities, at the time that cinema productions began to become popular. But as the silent drama did not stand very well, Miss Saunders was a bit uncertain about appearing before the camera. She discussed the matter with all three of her artist friends and on their united advice, decided to give it a trial, with the result that she has been a film actress ever since. She broke in as a leading woman with the Reliance Company, in New York, by saying she had already had studio experience when she applied for an engagement.

Jackie Saunders.

When the star of the motion picture empire began to move westward to the Pacific coast, Miss Saunders followed it to Southern California. There, she appeared successively in Biograph, Kinemacolor and Universal productions. Subsequently, she joined the Balboa forces at Long Beach when the Horkheimer brothers began their activities. Now, she has a contract which runs three years longer and the photoplays in which she appears find a ready market.

Jacquelin is the first name given to Miss Saunders at birth, but it was soon shortened to "Jackie" and she likes that sobriquet best. It expresses her nature, for she is a bizarre, out-of-doors girl. Her preference is for ragety-taggety parts, in which she can rare and tear with her luxuriant hair flying in the winds. Of late she has done several mountain pictures, going bare-footed over the rocky trails.

Yet it is not difficult for this screen favorite to put on ballroom gowns and become Jacquelin in a nonce. She wears her clothes as gracefully as she is natural in tomboy regalia.

During the past year Miss Saunders has appeared in a dozen of Balboa's biggest productions. The list includes "Will O' the Wisp," "Rose of the Alley," "Little Sunbeam," "Reaping the Whirlwind," and "A Bolt from the Sky." Her interpretation of "Ill Starred Babbie," the story of the Pennsylvania coal fields by the Rev. Will W. Whalen, pleased the author so thoroughly that he pronounced the characterization perfect. Miss Saunders' last feature is called "The Shrine of Happiness." This turned out so satisfactorily that Pathe Freres sent it abroad to be hand-colored. The fact that it is the first five-reel photoplay ever treated to such costly consideration gives an indication of the fine quality of Jackie Saunders' cinematographic work.

Gaumont Company to Florida

The Gaumont Motion Picture Company of Flushing, N. Y., will send a company of film stars to Jacksonville, Florida, this winter, according to an announcement made lest week by S. J. Vaugh, with offices in the Heard building, who is representing the company in making arrangements for the arrival of the players.

Mr. Vaugh states that he has negotiated a lease on the Dixieland theater in South Jacksonville, from the South Jacksonville Ferry and Land Company, where the players will have their headquarters.

There will be between twenty-five and thirty people in the company, and it is stated that the majority of them are stars. In other words, the Geaumont people intend to make only feature and comedy films during their stay here. They will work in and around Jacksonville, and will arrive by steamer about November 1.

"Right Off the Bat," the five-reel comedy drama which introduces world-famous Mike Donlin as a screen star, has been bought outright from the Arrow Film Corporation by the All Feature Booking Agency of 71 West Twenty-third street.

Stars Aid Fashion Show

At the personal request of Daniel Frohman, managing director of the Famous Players Film Company, four of the feature producers' big stars, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn and Pauline Frederick, consented to sell programs and souvenirs at the Fashion Extravaganza, "Yesterday or Tomorrow," which was staged at Carnegie Hall, New York, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. A large portion of the proceeds of the performance were contributed to the Actors' Fund, of which Mr. Frohman is chairman.

Attired in the very latest gowns designed in accord with fashion's most recently issued dictates, these four beautiful screen favorites were the reigning sensation of the show and broke all known records for the sale of programs and of the beautifully dressed "puppets of fashion," the French dolls which they were disposing of as souvenirs.

The same gowns will later be seen in Famous Players productions so that the motion picture fans all over the country will have an opportunity of seeing the very newest thing in feminine apparel.

Metro's Canadian Publicity Man

Edwin Bower Hesser, one of the youngest and most capable publicity experts in the amusement world, has accepted a position as director of publicity for the Metro Pictures Ltd., the new Canadian branch of the Metro Pictures Corporation, at Montreal. In recording the achievements of this brilliant young man it is difficult to believe that he but recently reached his majority. When he was seventeen years old he arranged, managed and directed the tour of several noted lecturers which carried them from coast to coast. The following year he was at once manager and advance agent for an operatic company, in a tour of the South and far West. Afterward he directed concert companies that appeared in lyceum programs in every state of the Union Two years ago Mr. Hesser brought the famous Welsh Glee Singers to this country and conducted them on a successful tour in vaudeville and the lyceum and chautauqua circuits. Several members of this organization were drowned when the Lusitania was sunk. For more than a year Mr. Hesser was the special press representative of the old Kinemacolor company in New York.

Edwin B. Hesser.

He is thoroughly conversant with amusement enterprises and conditions in this country and in Canada. He not only conducts vaudeville and concert tours through Canada, but for a year he had a string of motion picture theaters extending from coast to coast, which he supplied with a special program of films.

Mutual After Canadian Business

The Mutual Film Corporation is going after the Canadian business with renewed vigor. A report which gained some circulation to the effect that the distribution of films on the Mutual program was to be left to the individual manufacturers in Canada has been officially denied from the offices of the Mutual in New York.

Elaborate plans for the distribution of the pictures on the new $8,000,000 program have been made in a series of conferences held at the home office with J. B. Price of the Toronto Mutual Office and J. M. Cummings, special representative in Canada.

"The conditions in the Canadian motion picture field give us a particularly good opportunity with the new all-star, all-feature program," observed Mr. Price on the occasion of his call at the home office this week. "The Canadian censorship is still a problem and a serious one to every concern releasing pictures in the Dominion, but there is hope for the ultimate education of the public demand to the point where a more reasonable censorship attitude will be forced by the pressure of public opinion. The motion picture business and the ammunition business are about the only two lines of activity on which the war has not exerted a damaging influence."

That the efforts of the Canadian offices of the Mutual are bearing fruit is giving evidence in the increasing number of inquiries received by the New York office from Canadian exhibitors and from the Canadian newspapers interested in the news of the motion picture industry.

Hard Task to Find Raven

After weeks of incessant search, Essanay at last found one of the extremely few ravens in captivity in the United States for use in its six-act feature photoplay, "The Raven," from George C. Hazelton's romance and novel of Edgar Allan Poe. The bird—a splendid specimen—was obtained from the Milwaukee, Wis., zoo, which possesses one of the best collections of animals to be found in this country.

It is said not more than half a dozen ravens are in captivity in the United States, and three of these are the property of the Milwaukee zoo. They are kept in a huge cage, in which also are numerous eagles, and it proved a task of several days to corner one of the ravens.

For several days after it was brought to Essanay's Chicago studio the raven refused to eat and constantly pecked at anyone who came near it and at the chain fastened to one of its legs. As it grew accustomed to its new surroundings, however, it quickly made friends and now eats out of the hands of studio attendants.

The raven plays one of the most important parts in the Essanay production, which features Henry B. Walthall, Essanay's leading man, as Poe, and Warda Howard as Virginia Clemm, Poe's sweetheart and wife.

Hilda Spong in a scene from Equitable's "Divorced Triumph."

Pictures Accompaniment Popular

That the public will soon be whistling at least one of the catchy airs from the music composed for "The Golden Claw," the five-part Ince-Triangle feature, in which Bessie Barriscale is starred, is the prediction of Wedgwood Nowell, musical director forThomas H. Ince. The particular selection on which Nowell bases his prophecy is a gavotte written especially for the production, by Victor Schertzinger, a rising young composer of modern music. It forms the motive in this tense drama of life.

The idea of composing music for each picture is original with Director-General Ince. During many visits to theaters he was impressed by the poor quality of music offered. He noted that many times it was not in keeping with the scene and materially detracted from the dramatic effect. He resolved to give the public better music, just as he had given it better pictures. Among the actors of his own company, he found Nowell, who had joined the Inceville forces for the summer months. He induced Nowell to cancel his plans to return to the direction of light operas and muscial comedies in the winter and offered him the position as director of music at the studio. Nowell accepted. After an exhaustive search, Nowell selected Schertzinger and Prof. J. E. Nurnberger to assist him, the former to write music for the picturesque and lighter portions of the drama and the latter to draw on his long experience with the German masters for the heavy dramatic compositions. Nowell, Schertzinger and Nurnberger give their time exclusively to composing the music, while five copyists arrange it for a forty-part orchestra.

INCE HEAVILY INSURED

Famous Producer Has Life Insured for $250,000 to Guard Film Organization Against Loss Should He Die

Thomas H. Ince has just been insured for $250,000. Such is the startling announcement made this week from the Inceville studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The beneficiary named in the policy is the New York Motion Picture Corporation, and the step has been taken, it is learned, to guard that concern's interest in the Triangle Film Corporation, for which Ince is now making his multiple-reel photodramas.

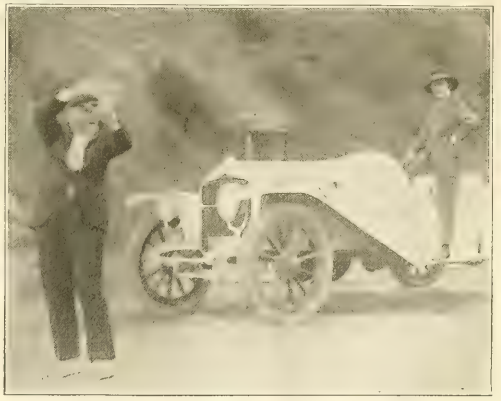
Six big American companies, representing combined assets aggregating $1,934,911,165, share the responsibility of compensating the Kessel and Baumann organization in the event of loss by it, by death, of the great producer. They are: Mutual Benefit, of Newark, N. J.; Pennsylvania Mutual, of Philadelphia; Mutual Life of New York; Travelers', of Hartford, Conn.; Prudential, of Newark, N. J., and Equitable, of New York.

Pathe's Unique War Films

Some of the most realistic war pictures that have ever been taken were released on Saturday, October 9, in the Pathe News. As a matter of fact those who have already viewed them say they leave behind all previous war pictures.

The first installment shows actual scenes in the trenches during an assault by French grenadiers. General Joffre's forces are seen throwing hand grenades into German trenches, and the resulting explosions with terrific loss of life and property are clearly shown. Following one of the explosions a horse is seen blown into the air and landing in the topmost branches of a neighboring tree. The pictures show more clearly than anything else could do the horrors of war.

Other pictures of a like nature will follow in the issues of the Pathe News of the near future, some showing the explosions of all kinds of shells, towns in flames under bombardment, and the most startling effects of shell work. All of them are issued with the absolute guarantee of their authenticity by the French government, but the best proof of their genuineness is found in the pictures themselves.



Great Thanhouser Publicity

The Thanhouser two-reel release for Tuesday, October 19, is entitled "The Spirit of Audubon." This picture was made in conjunction with Herbert K. Job, who is the expert on applied ornithology for the National Association of Audubon Societies. This association is devoted to the preservation and protection of birds. Two million adults throughout the country comprise its membership, and in 6,000 towns there are one-half million active junior members. They will all be notified by letter and through the society's periodical, Bird Lore, of the release of the picture and will be urged to utilize its exhibition at theaters for spreading bird knowledge. Schools and clubs will arrange for attendance in great bodies.

"The Spirit of Audubon" is a Thanhouser release which is designed to boost business everywhere. Little Helen Badgley (the Thanhouser kidlet), and Leland Benham, add a touch of human interest to the beautiful scenes of wonderful birds in astounding numbers and startling views.

Mr. Job was accompanied on this trip by Theodore Roosevelt, who is shown in the film, an who made the great Florida bird colonies possible by the reservation acts which he forced during his administration.

W. C. Harwood of the Vermont theater, Toronto, Canada, is generous in his praise for the Knickerbocker star feature, "Hamlet." He writes: "The feature was very beautiful, splendidly produced and a great success at our theater."

Thomas Ince Rehearsing Billie Burke in coming Triangle feature.

Boone Joins Authors' Agency

Scarcely a month old, the Authors' Associated Agency, with Jacob Wilk as its guiding spirit, has made itself a power in the illimitable field of the motion picture. If a producing director today wants a good story for converting into a picture he goes to Mr. Wilk in the Longacre building. But more than that: if he is making a big picture and wants a big star, one of the $2,000 a week kind, he goes to Mr. Wilk. Or maybe the big star wants to be in a big feature. He also goes to Mr. Wilk.

The organization is visibly growing. It has attracted the services of J. Allen Boone, a brilliant young writer, who will be a busy member of the A. A. A.'s literary staff. Mr. Boone is a young literary man of social standing who has worked on the best newspapers and magazines in the United States and has traveled extensively in Europe and Africa. Quite recently he held the post of publicity manager for the Lubin Company. He has written photoplays and dramatic sketches; and is a member of many literary and social clubs in Philadelphia, New York and Newport.

Premo Features Has New Plan

That the selection of great plays with great players does not always work satisfactorily is the contention on which the Premo Film Corporation evolved its unique production plans. To meet an eminent actress of tragedienne fame in the part of a screen miss of sixteen is unfair to the actress, the play, the company, the exhibitor, and mainly the public, who have come to know her for what she has done before. The Premo Features Film Corporation has a different idea. It is along this sort of policy that Premo features are being built: Eminent stage stars are to be presented on the screen in plays built for them by leading dramatic and motion picture writers.

It is the Premo corporation which is now completing a drama selected from 497 scripts submitted as a proper motion picture vehicle to star Cyril Maude, the eminent English character actor, whose "Grumpy" is the outstanding memory of three New York theatrical seasons. Maude, in "The Antique Dealer," meets the motion picture audiences in the kind of part that is expected of him, that he best loves to play, that he best can play. While "Grumpy" later makes its first tour of the country, exhibitors will have an opportunity to star Cyril Maude in a part which is said to out-Grumpy "Grumpy."

Salary Is Seven Bones a Week

A new actor has been added to the Gaumont stock companies at Flushing, N. Y. He has appeared in "A Corner in Cats" with Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, and he is now working with Miss Grace Valentine in "The New Adam and Eve." He will be seen frequently in future Gaumont releases. Although regularly employed his salary is only seven bones a week. His name is Bruno, and he is the handsomest Newfoundland dog on Long Island.

"The Battle Cry of Peace," the nine-reel Vitagraph production, which had a very successful run in New York, comes to the Olympic theater of Chicago on October 18. The engagement at the Olympic theater will be for ten weeks and during this time it will be managed by Wallace Monroe.

HAZEL DAWN IS NEXT VEHICLE

Famous Players Feature Her in Adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones' Famous Play, "The Masqueraders," and She Scores a Triumph

Henry Arthur Jones' internationally celebrated drama, "The Masqueraders," which has just been converted into a photoplay feature by the Famous Players Film Company with Hazel Dawn in the stellar role, will be released on the Paramount Program October 28.

It is the story of a high spirited, beautiful girl who finds herself compelled to become a bar-maid at the local inn when the wolf of poverty hovers near the family doorstep.

Picturesquely set in the atmosphere of Merrie England, "The Masqueraders" gives Hazel Dawn the best opportunity she has had since becoming a screen star for displaying her histrionic talent. As a light-hearted, carefree girl, she suddenly faces the serious problem of self-support. She is the life of the inn while she remains there, her charming vivacity winning her innumerable friends. Then comes the terrible revelation of her husband's real character and the suffering that follows, which reaches its final culmination in the gripping scenes of the game of chance in which she is the stake. Only a most accomplished actress could interpret the vastly differentiated emotions to which Dulcie is subjected. That Miss Dawn more than fulfills the requirements of the role will be the verdict of those who witness her talented performance as Dulcie.

Hazel Dawn in "The Masqueraders," Famous Players.

In support of the star there appear such well known stage and screen favorites as Elliott Dexter, Frank Losee, Ida Darling, and Russell Bassett, who has contributed many clever characterizations to the screen.

Three Ingenues Under One Roof

If a tidal wave should wipe Flushing, Long Island, off the map, Broadway would lose three of its most attractive young ingenues. Just at present the Gaumont Company has at the studio in three different productions, Miss Francine Larrimore, Miss Grace Valentine and Miss Alice Dovey. As there are three star dressing rooms, every one is happy. The recently announced Gaumont All-American program is well under way, as well as the policy of a new star for each production, evidenced by the presence of three such Broadway favorites at one time.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil C. Caward — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS
Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00
Canada - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .10c
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS
Remittances — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of Motography. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

Change of Address — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 23, 1915 Number 17

When the Exhibitor Becomes a Censor

WE ARE fighting censorship—all of us. The board of Trade is fighting it, the manufacturers individually are fighting it, the exchanges and the exhibitors are fighting it. We object to censorship, aside from its moral and ethical features, because it gives one man the right to say what a thousand others shall or shall not enjoy, regardless of the legal aspect of such enjoyment.

Therefore, if you analyze it, the exhibitor who selects the films for his program takes on some of the attributes of a censor. When he visits the manufacturer's projection room and rejects a film because he personally does not like it, he is denying his thousand or ten thousand regular patrons the right to see that picture.

That, of course, is his right and privilege. In fact, he looks upon it as his duty. That is what he is there for. But he properly regards his function as positive rather than negative. That is, he is there to book the films he likes, not to knock the ones he does not like.

Only a comparatively small percentage of exhibitors are in a position to see the films before they book them. Those who are able to do so are apt to become blasé and calloused with the watching of many pictures. After a few years of constant attendance at advance showings it takes an exceptionally good production to gain their praise, and those really moderately good are likely to be condemned instantly as "rotten."

So it becomes a question if the exhibitor who relies too faithfully or too long on his own impressions is not doing himself more harm than good. Isn't it quite possible that he is censoring a lot of stuff out of his house that his patrons would like to see, and giving them instead some stuff that they will tire of in time because it reflects his one-man viewpoint?

That is the trouble with censorship—the practical, operating trouble, that is; and it is the trouble also with individual selection. It is using the one-man opinion to decide the tastes of thousands of men, women and children. The same arguments that we brought against film criticism in the trade press a few weeks ago apply against film selection and rejection by the individual.

There are many exhibitors, of course, who can rise above the restrictions of this condition, just as there are a few good censors and reliable critics. But we honestly believe that the exhibitors who can book a film they do not like because they know their patrons will like it are few and far between. The only purpose of this note is to encourage the development of more of them.

The exhibitor is master of his own house. He wants to exercise the privilege of all buyers in all lines; that of selecting what he pays his money for. We would be the last to deny him that right; but unregulated selection and rejection of films with only his personal taste for a guide is sometimes more apt to lead into deep water than is haphazard selection on a hit-or-miss basis. In the latter case he has a gambler's chance of pleasing everybody half the time. In the former he is pretty sure to displease those whose ideas do not happen to harmonize with his.

It may not please the average exhibitor to have his selective proclivities compared with censorship. But just to show that the distinction is not so great as it might be, we might relate an incident that occurred in Chicago a few days ago. The owner of a successful house on the north side was showing a picture whose harmlessness and utter propriety will be realized when it is said that the film had passed the ordeal of the Chicago Censor Board. However, this exhibitor was visited by a lady patron who "bawled him out" for running such a film before children. The exhibitor, moved by some mysterious and occult motive, called up the well known Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, who dictates the morals of the population of Chicago, and related the circumstances to him. Possibly his idea was to have the censor refute the lady. If so, he went to the wrong place. The major canceled the permit for the film and substituted one of those pink slips whose significance is "for adults only." And when the film's distributing office protested, Mr. Funkhouser answered that he had no choice in the matter—one of the office's own exhibitor customers had practically requested the action.

So here is a case where an exhibitor actually insisted upon recensoring a film that had already gained the approval of the official censor board. And he did it because one patron didn't like it. The fact that a thousand others did like it and approve it had no effect upon him.

That is as good an example as we know of the foolishness of the one-man viewpoint. If that exhibitor had been able to take a vote of his patrons on the picture the protesting lady would have been confounded and the incident would have closed immediately.

The exhibitor is not able to take votes on the kind of pictures he shall show. The nearest he can come to it is to study his patrons closely and intelligently until he is able to feel instinctively what they will or will not like. To do this successfully he must absolutely subordinate his own tastes and refuse to recognize them—no easy task for a man of strong opinion. He cannot please them all; he must please the majority. And he should remember that the indignant old woman who thinks a love scene is shameful, the highbrow who exclaims "silly!" at a comedy, and the lowbrow who stamps noisily out during an educational, do not constitute a majority. Add them all together and they make a very small and inconsiderable minority.

Frankly, we believe the exhibitor who leaves his program to a properly operated exchange is just as sure of success as is he who insists on choosing his own films from the manufacturer's screen. Perhaps he will claim there is no properly operated exchange. As to that we cannot argue. But surely if the exchange can be so organized that it can serve efficiently as a selector of subjects for its customers, that is the better system. For so far, it seems, the exhibitor who does his own selecting and his own censoring has been able to show no advantage over his competitor who has it done for him.

The new English import duties on films is the chief subject of discussion abroad. The proposed tax is 16 cents per foot on imported negatives, 2 cents per foot on imported positives and 1 cent per foot on imported raw material. It is estimated that 95 per cent of this raw material comes from America.

Just a Moment Please

The more they come the better they get.

We refer, of course, to these publications personally supervised by the press agents of the various film companies.

Since we last referred to this particular subject Harry H. Poppe, the Horsley dopester, has forwarded to our desk the David Horsley News, and Parsons of Patheville has broken into the limelight with Photoplay Sidelights. Both are newsy little clip-sheets that ought to result in tons of publicity matter getting into the newspapers and the fame of the Horsley and Pathe stars spreading to the four corners of the earth.

IT'S A GAY BIRD, ALMOST AS BRIGHT AS THE ORIOLE.

The San Francisco Rounder says "Everybody is talking about the smashing success of the 'Neal of the Navy' seriol."

Perhaps they were trying to be neutral, but at any rate the "effects men" at the Studebaker theater, Chicago, where Triangle films have their first run, took all the German atmosphere out of "Old Heidelberg" this week by yelling "Hurrah," while imitating the roistering students celebrating the arrival of prince Karl. A couple of "Hoch's" in gutteral tones would have partially, at least, taken the curse off that "Hurrah" stuff.

Speaking of that Triangle bill reminds us that the sudden turning on of the lights at the end of "The Coward" nearly caught us with one corner of our hankerchief to our eyes.

We aren't ashamed of it either, for that Ince production is sure a "tear squeezer." If the matinee girls don't drown the orchestra with their weeps before the week is over we miss our guess.

A VERSATILE CHAP IS MILLER.

A letterhead of the manager of the Orpheum Theater of Keokuk, Iowa, bears in its upper left hand corner the inscription "S. A. Miller, Shoes, 616 Main St.," while the upper right is decorated with "Orpheum Theater, The House of Quality, 417 Main St." In his spare moments S. A. perhaps is marriage license clerk and village undertaker, but we'll bet it's the Orpheum that earns him his three squares per day.

On the reverse side of a beautifully tinted postcard of the Valley Green Inn, Wissahickon, Philadelphia, Pa., our associate ed. Charley Condon, advises us that "It rains beautifully in Philadelphia."

Now we're wondering if Charley is humorously referring to the rain of hits made off Alexander's pitching.

OUR BURG.

On Fri. of last wk. this village was invaded by a whole bevy of notables from sunny Los Anglaize, said bevy consisting of such folks as Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar, Don Meaney and Mrs. Meaney, to say nothing of the rest of the party. All was welcomed as prodigal sons and then departed for the Effete East aboard the w. k. rattler.

W. E. Shallenberger of Noo Yawk and points E. was a visitor to our sanctum on Tues. of this wk. He is modestly proud of the arrangement just completed whereby the Arrow Fillim Corp. is to make Gold Rooster plays for Pathe, and if we was him we'd surely crow.

The closing of some 7,000 liquor dispensaries in Our Burg on Sun last is reported to have boomed the biz. of several of our pitchur shows, besides making less work than usual for the village constable.

That ain't no wild west cowboy you seen on Main St this wk. but Pal Haase under his new bonnet, imported from Cheyenne, Wyo.

We learn with surprise that Bill Barry has discarded his swimming togs for this yr. but it's even money that Bill will be "first in" when the ice goes out in the spring.

BRYAN'S ONLY RIVAL.

A young man connected with the Nichols-Finn organization introduced Richard Bennett at a recent invitation performance of "Damaged Goods," and by his silver tongued eloquence so captivated the throng that unless Joe Finn keeps his eyes peeled the above mentioned young man will be starring on a chautauqua circuit in opposition to an ex Sec. of State.

What's all this we hear about Pete Schmidt running for sheriff?

We'll bite. N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Brink"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ONE of the most intensely interesting, grimly powerful films that has yet been offered as a Mutual Master Picture is "The Brink," the four-reel offering of the New York Motion Picture studios for this week.

Forrest Winant in a scene from "The Brink."

Forrest Winant, Rhea Mitchell and Arthur Maude have the leading roles and all three of them are given plenty of chances to shine. Miss Mitchell makes of Beth Kirkland a most winsome sort of girl, and is especially good in her scenes with Mr. Maude in the last reel, when he confronts her with a revolver and threatens her life if she attempts to interfere with his robbing her father's safe. Forrest Winant has the role of a weakling, which he interprets skillfully, and ere the film ends gives promise of becoming a real man. Mr. Maude, as Grimshaw, the gambler, is smooth, suave and convincing in every scene. His villainy is not overdone or exaggerated, and yet he never lets you forget that he is the villian, ready to go to any lengths to accomplish his evil purposes.

The director of the production is not named on the screen and yet he and the scene builder have arranged and constructed a wonderful set in the rooms representing Grimshaw's library and the adjoining room, and are deserving of praise for the clever manner in which the production is staged and the craft with which the big scenes are worked up to powerful climaxes.

Paul Martin, a lad with a penchant for gambling, finds himself at the bottom of his roll in Grimshaw's palatial gambling house one night and, his plight being noted by the famous gamester, the boy is invited to accompany Grimshaw to the latter's home.

Arrived there, Grimshaw learns in detail of Paul's financial situation and bit by bit the crafty gambler hints to the boy that he can make "big money" if he will consent to help in a series of society buglaries. Horrified at learning that Grimshaw, the man he had believed a "square" gambler, is also the ringleader of a band of thieves, Paul rejects the offer of the older man and plans to depart. Remembrance of his financial plight compels him to return and finally to yield to the gambler's suggestion and then he is met with a series of surprises. Raising a framed picture on the wall the gambler discloses a button that opens a secret panel in the wall. Passing behind this panel the two men enter a large, bare room, where Grimshaw displays all the tools and paraphernalia for crime that he has accumulated. Assistants of Grimshaw's arrive and before they are admitted to the house are shown in a series of reflecting mirrors which the crafty criminal has installed to prevent surprise.

Paul is given a large sum in currency, told that a millionaire named Kirkland is the owner of a string of pearls worth many thousands, and then ordered to force an acquaintance with the millionaire, secure an invitation to his home and then prepare and forward to Grimshaw a plan of the house and a description of the hiding place of the necklace.

Reluctantly, Paul sets out upon his mission and goes through with the whole disagreeable task. In Kirkland's home he meets and falls in love with Beth Kirkland, the millionaire's daughter, and, too late, realizes that he has forever sealed the doors against an honest courtship of her. His love for the girl overpowering every other emotion Paul determines to yet prevent himself from sinking to the depths of thievery, and therefore returns to the city in the hope of inducing Grimshaw to give up his plan of robbery.

The old gambler only laughs at Paul's pleas and then has him whacked over the head with a blackjack and tossed to one side. Grimshaw and his assistants depart to secure the necklace and hours later Paul regains consciousness and sets out to thwart them. He reaches the Kirkland home only to discover Grimshaw at the safe and Beth helpless before the muzzle of a revolver held by another of the thieves. Ere being covered with the pistol Beth had telephoned her father for aid, and Paul, by leaping to her rescue, is able to keep both thieves busy until help arrives.

One of the thieves is shot, but Grimshaw escapes, calling back over his shoulder as he departs, that Paul is one of the band and supplied the plans of the Kirkland home. Paul admits his guilt and explains how he came to fall into Grimshaw's clutches. Beth and her father, seeing a chance for him to reform, set about making a new man of him.

"Selig's Shoo Fly"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE second of "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," Selig's series of screen comedies, is to be released on October 25. The title of this two-reel side-splitting comedy is "Shoo Fly." Again we have the group of realistic rural characters, who with their old fashioned costumes and quaint customs are the cause of much laughter. The story, which not only contains a number of comical situations, but is an original one, is written around a "fly swatting" campaign which is carried on in Bloom Center.

Among the prominent characters in the cast of this picture are Martin Kinney as Prof. Trapp; Fred Carufel as Jim Billings; Williams Hutchinson as Constable Plum; John Lancaster as Ira Pash; Lee Morris as Phil Pickle; Sidney Smith as Johnny West; Ralph McComas as Chubby Green; Martha Mattox as Selina Tubbs, and Lillian Brown Leighton as Mrs. Plum. These names in themselves are enough to start a ripple of laughter through a motion picture audience.

When Professor Trapp and his wife arrive in Bloom Center to sell fly traps and fly swatters to the inhabitants of the small town, a "fly swatting" campaign is immediately decided upon, and all of the people neglect their duties and devote the greater part of their time to swatting the deadly fly. One night Prof. Trapp and his wife give a stereopticon entertainment in the Melodeon Hall showing the danger of the common house fly. To this entertainment all of Bloom Center comes dressed in their gayest array and it is decided that prizes will be awarded to a certain number who catch or kill the largest number of flies.

After the natives of Bloom Center have become adept at the art of swatting the fly, Jim Billings, a commercial traveler, arrives and is suffering from an attack of indigestion. He goes to Phil Pickle, the town druggist, who, nervous because of making a sale, gives Billings Paris green through a mistake.

The judges in the "fly swatting" campaign all leave their work and rush to Jim Billings' aid, and the clerk, being tired of waiting for the return of the judges, dumps the dead flies into a garbage can. Jim Billings recovers and there are three flies which are bothering him most pestiferously. He manages to kill them and place them in a fly trap, and when he hears of the fly swatting contest he presents his three to the judges and as they are three more than any one else has he captures all the prizes.

"Blue Grass"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE central figure in Paul Armstrong's "Blue Grass" is a genial, enthusiastic, even boyishly so, convivial and above all a virile man, and as Thomas A. Wise plays this part in the screen adaptation, produced by the Equitable

The Colonel plays host.

Pictures Corporation, "Blue Grass" is a thoroughly enjoyable film. The picture will be released on October 10 by the World Film Corporation. The story revolves about that sport so truly named "the sport of kings."

Horse racing, race track characters and atmosphere make the highly melodramatic story appealing. Usually the race scenes in photoplays lack this atmosphere which is generally to the detriment of the production. In "Blue Grass" there are genuine race horses, excited crowds and that air of exhilaration which is found at race tracks only. These scenes were taken at Belmont Park during the meet there. Charles Seay, the director, has indeed given the story a colorful production.

Mr. Wise is cast as Colonel Taylor, a Kentucky gentlemen and race horse enthusiast. At the spring meeting his entry, My Lady, is seriously injured and will be unable to race again. This is a sad blow to the colonel, whose financial condition is none too good. The following year "Blue Grass" is born to My Lady. By robbing one pocket to fill another the colonel manages to keep his home. When the second colt is born the Taylor family are in real straightened circumstances.

Much as it is against his principles the colonel decides to sell the second colt. He sends his son to Louisville with the animal and instructs him to secure a certain sum. Morgan is not able to realize one-half of the amount his father expects. Believing he has a sure tip he sells the colt and gambles with the money. He loses and the father disowns him. Virginia Taylor on a visit to Cincinnati meets a wealthy lawyer, Wilfred Warren.

They are attracted to each other and correspond after her return home. Warren and some friends visit Louisville during the spring meeting. Virginia and Warren renew their friendship. The colonel enters "Blue Grass" in an important event, and stakes his every dollar on the outcome. A bookmaker, Kelly, fears the colonel's horse and to insure the success of his own entry, plans to dope "Blue Grass." Warren learns this and frustrates the plot.

"Blue Grass" wins, which makes the colonel the proudest, most contented person at the track. In a happy frame of mind he meets his son, who has just proven that he is worthy of the name of Taylor, and the colonel takes him into his arms. He also consents to the marriage of his daughter to Warren.

The part of the colonel is eminently suited to Mr. Wise whose previous work in pictures has provided him with the experience and knowledge of photoplay acting. His pleasing personality and good humor are impressed upon one in this picture as they were impressed upon the many admirers he gained in his appearances on the stage. George Soule Spencer, a familiar figure to screen patrons, is Wilfred Warren. Clara Whippel as Virginia and Ray Tuckerman as Morgan are commendable. Frank Beamish plays Kelley excellently. Another member of the cast, whose name is not mentioned among the members, renders a splendid character interpretation, this is the man who is seen as the colonel's colored stableman.

The Second Triangle Bill

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CHICAGO got its second taste of $2.00 motion pictures on Sunday, October 11, when the Triangle Film Corporation put on at the Studebaker its second week's offering by screening "A Favorite Fool" and "Oriental Magic," both Triangle-Keystone features; "Old Heidelberg," from the Fine Arts studios and "The Coward," a Triangle-Kaybee production. Unquestionably the honors again go to the Ince studios, for "The Coward" is nothing short of a masterpiece, and held the audience tense in its seats until the final inch of film had spun past the shutter of the projector.

The bill was opened by "Stolen Magic," which featured Raymond Hitchcock, Mack Sennett and Mabel Normand. Mr. Hitchcock really got more of an opportunity to take the center of the screen than he did last week in "My Valet," and proved himself as much of a comedian as on the speaking stage. He may have been even funnier than the audience suspects, for there were certain indications at interesting points in the film that Major Funkhouser had used his shears on it, but it got the laughs and, after all, that was its object. The plot centers about a visitor from India who brings with him a collection of snakes and a "key of magic."

"Old Heidelberg" was the second number of the program, and gave both Dorothy Gish and Wallace Reid splendid opportunities for their talents. While a beautiful picture, presenting life at the German universities in a convincing manner, and though it carried along a pretty love story with an unhappy ending, it can scarcely be said to be in the same class with the Fine Arts feature of the opening Triangle bill.

Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys provoked much laughter in another Keystone absurdity, the story of which concerns the efforts of a certain tramp-like "son of rest" to assist the female owner of a one-ring circus to get back her property, after it has been stolen from her by a brutal ring-master. The seven youngsters, who appear as the children of the circus owner, are lively imitations of their celebrated father, and contribute not a little to the fun making. Polly Moran, a well known Keystone comedienne, has the leading role opposite Mr. Foy.

The big punch is given the program by "The Coward," the five-reel story made under the direction of Thomas Ince. The story develops rather slowly, but never drags, and the indescribably good Ince photography gets over every emotion as portrayed by such steller artists as Frank Keenan, Charles Ray, and Gertrude Claire. Battle scenes of a spectacular sort add their portion to the unfolding of the sad little tale, but it is the tremendously powerful close-ups that make the picture the big, gripping, powerful drama that it is. So clever is the playing that, as the lights went up at the finish many were caught with handkerchiefs to their eyes and moisture still glistening in their eyelashes. "The Coward," alone, would make the second Triangle bill superior to the first week's program.

One of the tense moments in "The Coward."

The second week at the Studebaker started off with even more satisfying box office returns than marked the premier and, from present indications, there seems no reason to doubt that the $2.00 films have come to stay.

"The Campbells are Coming"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE four-reel Universal Broadway feature, "The Campbells are Coming," to be released on October 18, is one of the most stupendous productions ever screened. It is a war drama that is full of gripping situations and absorbing interest. The scenario was written by Grace Cunard, who is not only a Universal star, but a universal favorite. The direction of this production was given to Francis Ford, and there are some startling realistic scenes, which have been convincingly photographed.

A dramatic scene from "The Campbells Are Coming."

The handling of the scene is done with remarkable cleverness, and among those which register forcibly are the ones showing the Sepoys attacking the English town in India, the fight on the hillside, the approach of the Campbells, a stirring scene which fires the spectator with fervor and the scene of the Campbells storming the Sepoys town gates. Grace Cunard plays the part of the Scotch lassie who leaves her Scotch laddie, which part is played by Harry Schumm, to join her father, a missionary in India, and is later captivated by Nana Sahib, an Indian prince, played admirably well by Francis Ford. In support of these two stars are Mr. Denecke as Campbell and Lew Short as the Scotch lassie's father.

The Scotch lassie is a belle of the village. At last the day comes when she is forced to bid farewell to her sweetheart and leave to join her father, who is a missionary in India, and who has gotten her the position of a school teacher there. The little Scotch lassie leaves for India, and on her way there meets Ozimooah, agent for Nana Sahib, who is returning from an interview with Queen Victoria. Ozimooah has gone to ask the queen to continue the pension given Nana Sahib's father, but she refuses the petition because Nana Sahib was only an adopted son of the former ruler. Ozimooah becomes infatuated with the lassie, but on his arrival he loses track of her until Nana Sahib sees her and desires her for his harem.

The uprising breaks out in India against England. The treachery of the Sepoys, the brutality of Nana Sahib and his followers, the extreme cruelty exercised upon the women and children and the anguish and suffering of the English followed closely upon her arrival.

During the rebellion the lassie and her father are taken prisoners and thrown into a fort. Nana Sahib sees her there and takes her by force to his palace and makes her the favorite of his harem, much against her will. She, realizing the uselessness of fighting him, pretends to like him and therefore is given her way in the palace. While he is out with his men she, by a ruse, makes her escape and informs her father and the English colonel of the plans of Nana Sahib and his men. They are able, with her information, to make some headway against the Sepoys, but she is again captured by Nana and taken back to his palace.

When Campbell arrives to relieve Lucknow, with the lassie's sweetheart, who she had left in Scotland, Nana Sahib is taken prisoner, but escapes and returns to his palace to kill the lassie before her sweetheart can save her, but her sweetheart gets there before Nana and rescues her. Nana escapes, but is driven to the jungle, where he is left a prey to the wild beasts without food or drink.

"The Valley of Lost Hope"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IMPRESSIVE mob scenes and a train wreck which far surpasses anything of the kind ever shown upon the screen, and there have been many thrilling railroad accidents done in pictures, are the outstanding features of "The Valley of Lost Hope," produced by Lubin, under the direction of Romaine Fielding, for the V. L. S. E. program. October 18 is the release date of this elaborate, striking production of a story which deals with the days of the gold rush.

We often hear of those people who made fortunes in prospecting for gold. But seldom, if ever, do we hear of the failures. Alluring are the accounts of an individual or group of individuals who "struck it rich," and so seldom are the numbers who were unsuccessful taken into consideration that the days of the gold fever are often looked upon as the most attractive period, the period most replete with opportunities, in the history of this country. "The Valley of Lost Hope" concerns itself with the failures. Men and women who, filled with hope, toiled and suffered hardships only to find that their suffering was needless and their time and energy wasted.

The story is many sided, it does not center about any one character or conclusively develop any one of its many themes. It is an account of a certain valley which, though in appearance promising, is barren of gold, and the many prospectors who buy claims upon the fake reports of a crooked land broker. The broker's son learns of the swindle and determines to make his father refund the money he has received from the gullible people.

The money is returned by the son. But as this comes about through the untimely death of the father, when the train is wrecked, and not through the son's strength of character, no great admiration is felt for him. So it is with the other characters. The good are not impressively so, nor are the bad impressively bad. But in a production of such magnitude as this, the story is of minor importance. There are many incidents, many scenes which compel one's interest and afford excellent entertainment.

The train wreck is wonderful. The two locomotives come head-on at considerable speed and when they collide the coaches are hurled high into the air. This is a sight that will be long remembered by those who see "The Valley of Lost Hope." It is certain to bring a murmur of surprise from every spectator. The explosion which destroys the mining camp is another remarkable scene. Effective staging and the work of a capable cast make the picture a worthy addition to the V. L. S. E. program.

Scene from "The Valley of Lost Hope."

Romaine Fielding is seen as the Reverend John Dean, the official "sky pilot" of the camp. B. J. Roberts plays Bob Ewing, the young man who wins the hand of Helen Dean and the high regard of the prospectors by righting his father's wrong. Mildred Gregory is an appealing Helen. Peter Lang as James Ewing, Robin Williamson as "Snake" Richards and Nannie Pearson as Granny Royce, complete the cast.

"The Gun Runners"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

ASIDE from the story, one of the many details which mark the Pathe-Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy" as exceptional, is the good judgment shown in selecting types to enact the character roles. William Conklin; Edwin Brady as Hernandez; Charles Dudley as the weak Joe Welcher and Lucy Blake as Inez Castro look their parts as well as play them particularly well. The work of the cast and the direction of Harry Harvey from the opening chapter on, has been gratifying, to say the least, and to a great extent these factors are responsible for the popularity which "Neal of the Navy" enjoys.

In the seventh episode, entitled "The Gun Runners," we find all the principals in Santa Maria, lower California. As Hernandez, in "the Cavern of Death," obtained the other half of the map, the struggle for its possession has ceased. But the smuggler is now in love with the beautiful girl, and is determined to capture her. A realistic and thrilling attack upon the house where Annette is stopping furnishes the climax of "The Gun Runners." The action in the picture is continuous and the attention of the spectator is held firmly during all the incidents which develop these splendidly handled scenes of the encounter, between a band of natives and the occupants of the government official's house.

Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr., continue their fine work in the leading parts. Both of these players are alive to the opportunities their parts offer and use them to telling effect. The story has proven adequate to the requirements of "installment" pictures. Even if one has not seen the previous chapters there is much to hold the interest in any one of the two-reel episodes thus far shown.

Having been robbed of the map showing the location of Lost Island Annette journeys to Santa Maria, in an effort to secure duplicate maps by presenting her claims at a mission there. She is followed by Hernandez. The latter is in need of money and promises to "run in" guns and ammunition for the revolutionary leader. In the meantime Neal has earned promotion, and is sent to Santa Maria with a detachment of sailors.

Hernandez persuades the revolutionist to attack the house where Annette is staying, and instructs him to be sure and capture the girl. The bandits fight their way into the house. Hernandez follows and seizes Annette. Just as he is about to make her his prisoner, a company of sailors arrive. Neal, who is in charge of the company, drives the natives away, and saves Annette from Hernandez. He is painfully but not seriously wounded. His superior officer compliments him for his bravey.

A scene from "The Gun Runners."

"John Glayde's Honour"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

AN adaptation from Alfred Sutro's modern drama, "John Glayde's Honour," which is built around a financier who, in attaining his ambition, financial power, neglects his devoted wife and loses forever her love, is the first contribution of the Frohman Amusement Corporation to the Pathe Gold Rooster Program. This play was successfully produced on the speaking stage some years ago. The moral of the story is strong and convincingly drawn. The once loving wife grows to hate the man who puts his work, his desire for wealth, above everything.

A tense moment in "John Glayde's Honour."

C. Aubrey Smith interprets the title role to good effect. The part entrusted to him is well suited and he advantageously uses his dramatic opportunities. The supporting cast includes Mary Lawton as Muriel and Richard Hatteras as Trevor Lerode, the artist. In her scenes with Mr. Smith Miss Lawton is forceful in portraying her emotions. Both the characters, husband and wife, are truly depicted, and finely interpreted.

The play deals with John Glayde, a railroad magnate whose aim it is to become a great financial power. Some of his transactions might be considered "shady," though he does only that which his competitors would do were they given the opportunity. To retain the confidence of his investors he finds it necessary to continually scheme and work. In his preoccupation he entirely neglects his wife. Always alone, she decides to accompany some friends to Europe.

In Paris Muriel meets a young artist. He is attracted to her and asks permission to paint her portrait. After many meetings Muriel and Lerode discover that they are in love. The artist's mother sends a message to Glayde urging him to come to Paris as his wife is becoming dangerously intimate with a certain artist. Glayde drops his business transactions and hurries to Paris.

He warns Lerode that his visits to Muriel must stop. Stunned by Muriel's declaration that he has killed her love by his neglect, Glayde begs her forgiveness. She refuses to listen to him. Fearing that he will kill her lover, Muriel promises her husband never to see the artist again. That afternoon she and Lerode run off to a villa in the country. Glayde follows them. He threatens to shoot Lerode, but Muriel steps between them and tells her husband that it is not love but pride that prompts him to kill. He leaves. In the end he is seen contemplating all that he has lost in attaining his ambition.

This interesting plot is splendidly presented. The settings are artistic and the photography is of a good quality. But the story is strong enough to sustain interest without depending upon an elaborate production for its appeal.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ERE chapter twenty-six of the North American serial, "The Diamond from the Sky" ends, events have so shaped themselves that it is clearly apparent the story is nearing its end, for the various characters who have been widely scattered are again assembling and events that have long puzzled both the characters in the story and the audiences who have been following the picture, are beginning to be explained.

It is in chapter twenty-six that Esther returns to Virginia, accompanied by Marmaduke Smythe, where the two meet Hagar, who has recovered entirely from her lapse of memory.

The family tree of the Hardings, the Lovells, and the Stanleys, is shown by Hagar to Marmaduke, and the gypsy, now fully resolved that Esther shall be established as mistress of Stanley Hall, even goes so far as to announce that the girl who has long passed as Esther Harding, is, in reality, Esther Stanley.

Marmaduke Smythe, much astonished at the revelation, and armed with the family tree which Hagar has given him, departs to investigate the story, ere recognizing Esther as heir to the Stanley fortune and estate, while Hagar, knowing that society will never accept Esther so long as a gypsy is her sponser, prepares to return to her wandering tribe, leaving Esther to reign as mistress of Stanley Hall.

Meanwhile Arthur Stanley, still known as John Powell, dreams of Esther, and longs for her return, much to the chagrin of Vivian Marston who is still seeking to win Arthur's love, and with it the famous "diamond from the sky."

Blair Stanley and Vivian are seated in the library of the Powell mansion one evening, when they are startled by the fall of a heavy body in the room above, and on hastening upstairs, discover that Arthur, who has been asleep and dreaming, has fallen out of his arm chair, just as his dream caused him to believe that he was pursuing Esther in an automobile through the Garden of the Gods, while the vision of the girl ever lured him on and on, until at last the auto went plunging over the edge of a cliff. Arthur, on being awakened by falling out of his chair, is glad to discover the accident but a dream, but the memory of Esther lingers with him even now when he awakes.

Marmaduke is shown Esther's family tree.

Meanwhile Quabba assists Luke Lovell to escape from jail, and Luke later on is taken to an Italian rooming house, and there established until the hue and cry over his escape has subsided.

One night Luke overhears a conversation in the next room that attracts his attention, and peering through the cracks in the thin wall that separates the two rooms, he perceives DeVaux, the man who stole the "diamond from the sky" from Durand, showing the jewel to the keeper of the Italian rooming house. Amazed to discover the precious jewel in the hands of the disguised DeVaux, Luke steals into the room, smashes the light, and while the room is in darkness grabs the diamond and escapes, just as the chapter comes to an end on the screen.

"Nell of the Dance Hall"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

WRITTEN and produced by the western Lubin company, "Nell of the Dance Hall" is the three reel Lubin production to be released on October 10. The story is one of which audiences never tire, presenting the triangular plot of a dance hall proprietor, a girl of the dance hall and a young minister, who saves her from insult, later is the cause of her reform and finally wins her honest love.

Edythe Sterling is cast as "Nell—The Dancing Doll."

Nell gives the sexton a bouquet for his wife.

Her presentation of this character is very good. Nell is a performer in the notorious dance hall run by Keats, which part is taken by George Routh. L. C. Shumway is splendid in the role of the Rev. Miles Justine, a young minister who not only jeopardizes but finally loses his pastorate because of his interest in the girl.

Nell, a dance girl favorite of the western dance hall patrons, is under the influence of Ben Keats, a dance hall proprietor. Rev. Miles Justine lives near by and one day proves a benefactor of Nell's when he punishes Keats for his insulting attention. The dance hall is raided a few nights later. Nell escapes to the minister's home. The Rev. Justine thwarts the pursuing police and throws them off the track. He extracts her promise never to return to the old life and offers her a home. Soon a love affair develops, while Keats, determined to get her back, tells the church trustees of Nell's history.

The trustees order the Rev. Justine to give her up. Nell overhears his promise to do so, determines to take her leave and disappears, leaving an explanatory note. She finds a home with Jerry, the church sexton, and begins work in a factory. The Rev. Justine is stricken with brain fever and in his delirium calls constantly for Nell. She learns of this through Jerry and rushes to his bedside. Nell's attentions are noted by the church trustees; an indignation meeting is called and the Rev. Justine is expelled from the church.

To prolong his life the minister is ordered to the mountains. Nell, learning that he is penniless, plans to get the money to send him away. Refused in her every demand, as the last resort she returns to the dance hall, continuing to send money to the minister which he believes to be coming from the church trustees.

Restored to health Rev. Justine returns and learns of Nell's return to the old life. He is unrelenting until by comparison of handwriting he realizes who his benefactor has been. The truth dawns upon him and with it comes his forgiveness. Nell is led to a newer and better life as his wife.

Famous Players "Zaza"

Reviewed by Charles R. Condon

NO mistake was made in leaving "Zaza" unqualified and without appendages as the title of that immortal drama, as the role of Zaza, properly interpreted, is virtually the whole play—and Pauline Frederick plays it perfectly in this recent Famous Players' release. Miss Frederick's work in "Zaza" is one of her greatest histrionic triumphs. Here she is seen in a role which could not allow her more freedom in the things which are her forte were it written especially for her.

Miss Frederick's excellent self-control in the highly emotional scenes and her natural command of the uncertain moods, flashing spirit and quick, catchy little mannerisms of the Paris music hall singer, Zaza, are as complete and satisfying as her wonderful conception of the character's opportunities and dramatic value. Sometimes it is the contrast between a star and a mediocre supporting cast that causes the featured player's work to stand out in bold relief, but such is not the case here, for Miss Frederick is surrounded by a well-selected and able cast.

Julian L'Estrange is gallant and noble in appearance, as well as deceitful and faithless in fact, as Dufrene, Zaza's married lover. Mark Smith as Cascart, Charles Butler as the Duc de Brissac, and Maude Granger as Aunt Rosa do remarkably well in their parts. Ruth Sinclair, Walter Craven, Blanche Fisher and Helen Sinnott are not quite as prominent as the others in the action, but when brought into the limelight do their share in preserving the high standard set by the leading role.

In either the script or the director's visualization of this famous play can be seen a rare appreciation of the value of even, consistently advancing action and balanced interest. The latter is not allowed to soar and drop alternately, but, while containing enough suspense to make the climax fresh and strong, nevertheless travels at a pretty even pace. The picture contains so much meaty matter and life that a trace of padding would be instantly noticed, but, needless to say, tiring detail and listless action are unknown quantities.

The splendid atmosphere created through French characteristics, both personal and architectural, the striking characterizations and acting, the sumptuous settings, the correct costuming, and the general air of finesse which pervades the entire play reflect upon and reward the untiring efforts of those masters of production, Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford.

Through peculiar circumstances Dufrene is forced into a duel over Zaza, a Paris dance hall singer, whom he has never seen before. Wounded in the duel, he quickly recovers, and becomes infatuated with Zaza, who, not knowing that Dufrene is married, loves and worships him. Rumors of the other's private life reach the girl in time, however, and she investigates for herself. The appearance of Dufrene's little girl on the scene brings Zaza to a realization of the domestic tragedy which she is about to precipitate.

Zaza destroys her contract with Cascart.

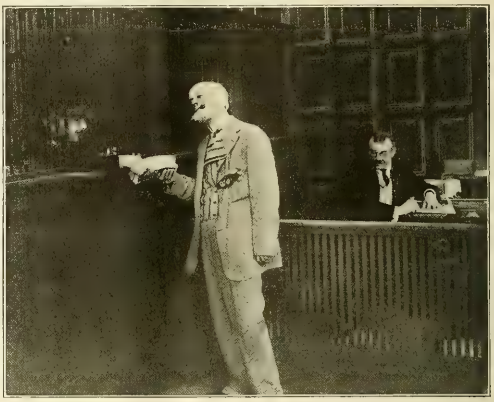
She leaves Dufrene's house without exposing her lover's double life to his wife. Later, Dufrene, now a widower, calls on Zaza, professes his love, and wishes to marry her. But she tells him that, as far as his relations with her were concerned, he died when she learned of his being married, and begs him to leave her alone with her pleasant memories of the time when she loved him and believed her love returned.



"Three Rings and a Goat"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THERE is much good humor and quick action in the second release in the "Wallingford" series, Pathe's picturization of the popular George Randolph Chester stories, being produced by the Whartons. In this episode J. Rufus sells a circus which he does not own, then to keep himself out of jail he must find means to buy it back again. The intricacies of high finance are quite simple as shown in these pictures, and credit for this virtue is due the adaptor, George Brackett Seitz.

The title of the second episode is "Three Rings and a Goat." Silas Bogger, who is on Violet Warden's black list, is the goat. This part is well rendered. Silas is a typical small-town financier. If in the beginning the action seems a bit forced it is soon forgotten in the amusing incidents which follow. The production is splendid, which is what one might expect from the studios of the producers of such offerings as "The Exploits of Elaine."

Violet Warden and her sister Fanny plan to have their friends, Wallingford and Daw meet Silas Bogger, who became rich upon the death of their father. The day of the meeting a traveling circus visits the country town. Blackie gives Silas glowing tales about the wealth of the circus owner, Wallingford. He explains that the government forces Wallingford to sell out the circus every year because he makes so much money.

A tense moment from "The New Adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford."

After the rube is convinced that Wallingford is the real owner he agrees to buy the outfit for $65,000. After the sale is completed Wallingford informs Blackie that it is up to them to buy the circus back again, if they prefer to remain outside jail. Blackie arranges with some of the performers to make Silas sorry that he is the owner of the circus. The performers demand back salary to begin with. Then Silas, seeking protection from the mob, hides in the dressing tent of a lady trapeze artiste. Her husband, a giant, finds him there and threatens to kill him. Bogger is kept busy dodging the giant. Finally he consents to sell the whole outfit back to Wallingford for $10,000.

Burr McIntosh as Wallingford, and Max Figman as Blackie Daw, both render satisfactory impersonations of Mr. Chester's characters. Those who have read these stories, and they are numberless, will find that the Wallingford and Daw of Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Figman corresponds with their conception of the types suggested by the stories. Lolita Robertson as Violet Warden, the charming girl who wishes to "square" accounts with the men who swindled her father, is beautiful and her acting is graceful. The members of the supporting cast are also commendable.

"The Blot on the Shield"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THE innumerable trials and tribulations that can befall a young man when he is down on his luck, and shabbily clothed, are amply illustrated in "The Blot on the Shield," the two-reel "Flying A" feature, scheduled for release on Monday, October 18.

This picture is splendidly enacted by Dick Le Reno, Vivian Rich, and Walter Spencer and was produced under the direction of Reeves Eason. Though slightly melodramatic in several portions, it is a most satisfactory feature.

The scenes of the story are laid in Kentucky, where Col. Taliaferro, a proud Kentuckian, lives on his country estate, with his only daughter, Sally. Taliaferro, who is striving to preserve the family honor which has remained unsullied for more than five hundred years, on his daughter's eighteenth birthday presents her with a beautiful necklace, and pointing to his family shield, impresses upon her his desire that she shall always respect the family name, and preserve the family honor.

William Copeland, a young man decidedly down on his luck, encounters a band of tramps, who suggest that he aid them in a robbery, but when he resents the insult a fight ensues and Copeland eventually makes his escape, hatless, disheveled and dusty.

Shortly afterwards he encounters Speed Allen and his overseer, and the latter, noting the camp of tramps, reports the matter to the sheriff.

Copeland applies for work at Taliaferro's place and though Allen, who is present, objects Sally persuades her father to employ the young man as a groom. As time passes, Sally becomes extremely fond of her new groom, much to the rage of Allen, who loves her and is jealous.

Ere the sheriff breaks up the camp of tramps, Allen's overseer is set upon and murdered by the lawless men, and Allen immediately endeavors to cast suspicion upon Copeland. When the sheriff comes to arrest the Taliaferro groom, Sally hides the young man in a closet opening off her room, and, later, when he attempts to escape from the bedroom window, he is discovered and arrested.

Fearing that his daughter has been compromised, Taliaferro hands her a revolver and suggests that she kill herself rather than have the family honor stained.

About this time Copeland is found by lawyers, who have been seeking him, and advised that he has inherited a vast estate and a title in England. He is able to prove to the colonel that Sally's honor is still unstained, and the tramp, who really killed

The wanderer is engaged as a groom.

the overseer, having been discovered in the meantime, Copeland is exonerated from all suspicion, and the colonel places his hand in that of Sally, and gives his consent to the marriage of the young people.

"The Spider"

Reviewed by John G. Garrett

THERE is danger lurking behind the smooth advances of the wealthy clubman to the innocent hard-working girl who stands behind the counter from morning until night and then goes home to a small ill-ventilated hall room. This theme is very splendidly worked out under the direction of James Francis Dwyer in Essanay's two-reel production to be released on October 23, entitled "The Spider."

A good lesson is shown in this story, which is splendidly photographed and the Essanay Company has chosen well its cast. Ruth Stonehouse plays the part of Ruth Arlison, a young girl from the country, who works in a city department store, and whose longing for a real "swell" dinner in a real "swell" restaurant leads her to elude her country town lover, John Buckland, played by Hugh E. Thompson, and dine with Hartford Medhall, a man fully sixty years old, who looks and acts but forty. John A. Lorenz does especially convincing work in the part of Medhall, the old roue.

Hartford Medhall, a wealthy old bachelor, who is sixty years of age, but who acts and looks but forty, leaves his apartments and goes to the club. Here some of the clubmen, while discussing the man, say that the devil must be on his side as he does not show his age, and Medhall answers them by saying that possibly he and the devil have an entente alliance. When Medhall leaves the club one of the men remarks that some day Medhall will be visited with the fifty years due him for his riotous living.

Ruth Arlison, a country girl, works in a department store. Every night she is met at the door by a chap from her home town who loves her devotedly. They always have dinner together at a cheap restaurant but Ruth longs for the better things in life and wants to dine in a certain high-class cafe which they pass on their way to their eating place.

Hartford Medhall comes into the store one day and, upon seeing Ruth, decides that he will lure her into his web. For some few days after that he comes in every day and makes unnecessary purchases in order to see the girl and at last persuades her to take dinner with him.

The girl's lover gains entrance to the roue's apartment.

Ruth manages to slip home through a side door and thus elude John, who is waiting for her. She dines with Medhall in a high-class cafe that night and he steers her through every course with the suavity which he is known for. The next time he takes the girl to dinner he invites her to come to his studio, telling her it is not his living apartments, and the girl consents.

One of the girls who works next to Ruth, suspecting the attention of the old man, has followed her to the restaurant and later meeting John tells him where the girl has gone. John arrives just in time to see the old man help the girl into his car and drive off and, hiring a taxi, he follows them.

He gains entrance to the bachelor's apartments, and once inside the room he makes a lunge for Medhall, who begs for mercy. The old man trembling drops into a chair and Ruth slips into John's arms. As they turn to leave the bachelor's apartments Ruth is horror-stricken to see that old age has suddenly descended upon her host, his hair having turned pure white and the footprints of time stamped upon his face.

"Buck's Lady Friend"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

GOOD as was the initial release of the Buck Parvin series of the Mustang brand, on the Mutual program, the second installment, entitled "Buck's Lady Friend," goes it one better. In fact exhibitors will hunt a long while before they will find a comedy to equal this latest incident in Buck's career as a film star.

Art Acord, famous cow puncher, again enacts the role of Buck Parvin, a member of the stock company of Titian Films Inc., and has far better chances to exploit his peculiar brand of comedy than in his first appearance. Sylvia Ashton, a lady of considerable avoirdupois, plays "Georgina," Buck's lady friend, and gives it just the right touch to make the part uproariously funny. The player who interprets the role of the property man is unnamed on the cast sheet, but to him is due no small portion of the fun to be found in the film, since he makes a perfect foil for Acord and doesn't appear to be "acting" at any stage of the game.

The public will undoubtedly take a deep interest in the Buck Parvin series, this interest becoming more and more keen as time passes, and future releases apparently give more and more of an insight into happenings in a mythical film studio, for the fact is indisputable that film fans the country over like to imagine they are being shown the inside workings of picturedom and will eagerly follow any series of films which apparently presents this "inside stuff" to them. It was largely this very feature that made the Van Loan stories so popular as they appeared in The Saturday Evening Post, and the same snappy language, comic situations and interest compelling plot, that made the stories fascinating, is to be found on the screen.

As the second story in the series begins we learn that Buck has something on his mind besides his day's work before the motion picture camera. The director, the camera man, the leading lady and other members of the Titan company discover something ails Buck and finally the property man hits upon the truth—Buck is in love!

In glowing terms Buck describes to the property man the wonderful eyes, the kissable mouth, the classical features, the swan-like neck, the shapely hands, and the tiny feet of his "lady fair," until "Props" becomes well nigh as much enamored of her as is Buck himself.

One day Buck calls upon Georgina, his divinity, and after explaining in detail his prowess and fame as an actor, suggests "Let's go down to the Palace theater and see me act." Georgina eagerly accepts the invitation, but alas for Buck's hopes. Arrived at the theater they discover, via the screen, that Buck's "acting" has been all but eliminated by the film cutter. Georgina, much disgusted, leaves her escort and returns home. Buck mopes about the studio next day until he hits upon the idea of inviting Georgina to the studio to see him act, thus proving beyond all doubt that he really is an actor.

A big costume production is on at the Titan studio when Georgina arrives, but this creates nothing like the excitement that Georgina herself causes, for instead of being the "beauty" whom Buck has described to the property man, she is seen to be only a "near-beauty."

Georgina becomes much interested in Dick La Rue, the leading man of the Titan company, and Buck grows more and more jealous as he notes the flirtation going on directly before his eyes. When the action of the play then being staged gives him an opportunity to confront La Rue, he becomes wild with rage and starts a regular prize fight, with La Rue as his opponent. Georgina indignantly departs, declining to remain "where people don't act gentlemanly," and Buck's love affair collapses.

Buck's necktie results in some joshing.

"The Magic Skin"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE second Edison feature to be released through the Kleine-Edison service is an elaborate, artistic production of "The Magic Skin" by the great French novelist, Honore de Balzac. In its tragedy and touch of the weird this charming romance is a splendid subject for screen visualization. Its opportunities for procuring beautiful effects have been grasped and executed with skill by Richard Ridgely, who scenariorized and directed "The Magic Skin." The settings are beautiful and tasteful, but the atmosphere of this picture goes deeper than settings. Mr. Ridgely has created, and maintained throughout, an appealing illusion.

The story follows closely the book on which it is founded. The artist's bargain to give his soul to Mephistopheles in return for the pleasures of the world, and its fulfillment, take place in a dream. In this and a few unimportant details only does the screen version of Mr. Ridgely differ from the novel. The scenes of revelry are vivid but there is nothing even approaching objectionable, and the romantic scenes between Ralph and Pauline are most picturesque.

As the ethereal musician who succumbs to the temptation of the flesh, Everett Butterfield is a convincing figure. The part is a trying one. But its difficulties are offset by the advantages it offers Mr. Butterfield, who acts forcibly but never over-acts his scenes, either as the lover or the twitching, doddering debauchee. Mabel Trunnelle's beauty and fine artistry in conveying her emotions make her characterization of Pauline Coudin strongly appealing.

Scene from Edison's "The Magic Skin."

Sally Crute is an excellent Flora Margot, the adventuress. Miss Crute's wicked glances and spontaneous facial expression effectively photograph. Herbert Prior, William West, George Wright and Nellie Grant have important parts. Completing the cast are Harry Linson and Frank A. Lyon.

Equitable's "The Bludgeon"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

IN this five-reel film of the Equitable Features Corporation, we have the old story of the busy husband and the neglected wife clothed in new vestments, and the "Bludgeon" proves to be a weapon which deals as much misery to the wielder as to the intended victim.

The picture has an air of probability and enough "punch" to justify itself as a feature of merit. Kathryn Osterman as Irene Evendorr, and John Dunn as Irene's husband are given ample opportunity to display their emotional talents. Both of these two are well cast, and their work vies with that of Frank Beamish, who impersonates "Stoney" Brooke.

The ball-room scene, in which Irene appears as Odalisk, assumes quite elaborate proportions. Some very artistic exhibition dancing also characterizes this scene. There are periods of suspense, and a "thriller" is introduced in the final plunge of the two struggling men down a cliff, and their subsequent end as they both sink below the water's surface in locked grip.

When Carl Evendorr, a chemist, perfects a formula which yields him a fortune, for the sake of his wife and little child Rose, he moves into a home of luxury. At first, Irene does not wish to enter society, but the wily flattery and persuasion of Mrs. Wharton, a social parasite, strike at her weak points. At their first entertainment, Irene appears in the costume of Odalisk, a scanty Turkish affair, and ensnares the menfolks. Carl protests, but without avail, and pays the enormous bills.

Carl, an indefatiguable worker in his laboratory, completes another formula, but it does not bring much. Irene has incurred heavy gambling debts, and Mrs. Wharton informs "Stoney" Brooke how to win Irene. Carl finds his wife in Brooke's arms, and at the end of a revolver the latter falsely confesses his guilt. Irene divorces Carl, he taking the blame, and some time after, Hillman, a lawyer and friend of Carl's, marries her. Brooke threatens Mrs. Wharton, and she causes his arrest.

Ten years later, on his release, Brooke forces money from Irene, and meets Mrs. Wharton on his way out. Mrs. Wharton is in desperate need of money, and gets the drop on Brooke. But the latter's strength prevails, and in the struggle the woman is slain.

Carl, come to see his daughter, hears the shot, and rushes into the house. He is seen bending over the dead body just as Irene and the police enter. Hillman assumes the guilt and saves Carl. The police, however, capture Brooke in the garden and bring him in. After making a frenzied confession, Brooke bolts out of the house with Hillman and the police in hot pursuit. In the struggle between the lawyer and Brooke, both fall over a precipice, and the police arrive in time to see them sink in a savage clutch below the water's surface.

Scene from Equitable's "The Bludgeon."

"The Card Players"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IF hypnotic suggestion could actually be used to such good purposes as it is in the Rialto Star Feature release for October 20, entitled "The Card Players," it would prove a wonderful aid to society. In this drama, which deals with the gambling vice, a young man whose passion for card playing is inherited, is cured of his ruinous habit by experiencing, in a hypnotic trance, the tortures of what the hypnotists calls "A gambler's hell."

Experience is the best teacher, and if we could get this experience with all its benefits, in a realistic dream, all humanity would be the gainer. This makes up an interesting theme and it presents several good dramatic situations, which are plausibly developed and well acted. The settings and details of production show good judgment on the part of the director. The scene in which Carl is about to be executed for murder is, perhaps, a bit too vivid. But the incident is of minor importance and its realism therefore does not have a depressing effect. The continuous, well-placed action and the interest-compelling plot make this a commendable offering.

Scene from Rialto's "The Card Players."

William Roselle, who is well known on the speaking stage and in pictures, is featured as Carl Fremont, whose weakness for gambling is inherited. Both his mother and father devote much of their time playing cards. After his graduation from college Carl contracts many debts. His father refuses to pay any more of either his or his mother's gambling obligations. His mother overhears this, and as she is being dunned by one of her creditors, she takes money from her husband's safe. When Fremont misses the money he accuses his son. To shield his mother, Carl takes the blame.

His father disowns him. In spite of the pleadings of his fiancee Carl continues to play cards. A year later the young man is a ragged wanderer, his craving for gambling is stronger than ever. Zimar, Carl's college chum, returns from India, where he has been studying mysticism. Zimar calls to see Nita and is shocked when he learns from her that his friend is now an outcast. They take an automobile ride together and accidently meet Carl, just as he is to be arrested for stealing. Zimar and Nita bring him to his home.

Fremont orders his son out of the house. But Nita intercedes. Zimar expresses the belief that he can "cure" Carl by showing him, in a hypnotic trance, "a gambler's hell." In a dream Carl sees himself sink lower and lower. Finally to obtain money wtih which to gamble he murders his fiancee. He is convicted and sentenced to death. Awakening, Carl resolves to break his habit. After proving himself worthy he secures Nita's promise to become his wife.

The lighting and photography are good. Lucille Taft is a pretty and natural Nita, and Wm. Stieff is a good type for his part as Zimar, the hypnotist and student of mysticism. Charles U. Davis and Madge Orlamond as the game-of-chance loving father and mother of Carl, complete the cast.

"How Molly Malone Made Good"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE appearance of ten of the best known stars of the legitimate stage, a famous prima donna and a cast of well known screen artists in one multiple reel production should make "How Molly Malone Made Good" a popular offering. The Kulee Featuring Company presents this unusual picture produced by the Photo Drama Company. The story is of a young girl reporter who, to secure a job with a New York City newspaper, has to accomplish the difficult task of interviewing ten eminent stage stars in three days. If she fails to gain an audience with one, the plan will not succeed, for she depends on one for an introduction to another.

Marguerite Gale.

To make the story suspenseful there is a jealous girl who is already on the staff of the paper and who does everything to hinder Molly. The actors and actresses on whom the girl calls are seen at their various summer homes, which makes the picture still more interesting, as it is seldom that the public is given an opportunity to see their favorite players as they appear when they are off-stage. Each actor or actress answers the questions, which ask their views on motion pictures versus the speaking stage, and other questions regarding their profession.

The answers are to be published in newspapers throughout the country. Each star's views are to be the subject matter of an article in the magazine section. Robert Edeson, May Robson, Leo Ditrichstein, Julian Eltinge, Julia Dean, Lulu Glaser, Cyril Scott, Henrietta Crosman, Henry Kolker, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Ross, as well as the famous singer, Madame Fjorde, participate in this attraction.

Marguerite Gale is a beautiful and winning Molly Malone, who has exciting automobile and aeroplane trips. There is nothing theatrical about Miss Gale's delightful performance. The cast also includes William H. Tooker, Helen Hilton, W. A. Williams, Armand Cortes and Edward Sullivan. There is a thrilling automobile episode in which Charles J. Ross and Miss Gale star.

"The Fatal Card"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WITH two such popular artists as John Mason and Hazel Dawn co-starring in the Famous Players Production, the melodramatic romance by C. Haddon Chambers and B. C. Stephenson, "The Fatal Card," will be an attraction wherever exhibited. In its artistic settings, locations and details of staging this offering is well up to the high standard maintained by the Famous Players Company.

The splendid production and the acting of John Mason are the strong points of "The Fatal Card," which is a story with a crook whose charming daughter lives in blissful ignorance of her father's "profession," as its central figure. The situations are all melodramatic and its ending is sensational, a young man is to be murdered by a bomb which is set to explode within five minutes, but he is saved by an act of providence.

The story might be shallow in this sensationalism were it not for the judicious acting of Mr. Mason and his associates in the cast. The action is ever spirited and interesting but at times it seems as though the plot could develop faster. "The Fatal Card" is especially interesting and it will be well received on that account.

A happy moment in "The Fatal Card."

The story centers about George Forrester, who, accused of a robbery, is saved from the men at a mining camp who threaten to lynch him, by a young easterner. Forrester thanks his rescuer. He gives the young man a torn playing card and tells him that he hopes some day to return the favor. The card will identify him. Years later Forrester and young Austen meet but do not recognize each other. Forrester's daughter, who knows nothing of her father's past, and Gerald become fast friends.

Forrester's former associates locate him and induce him to join them in a big "deal." They rob, and in doing so, accidentally kill their victim, Gerald Austen's father. Because of a quarrel with his father Gerald is accused. In eluding the police he comes upon the crooks while they are dividing the loot. To save themselves they decide to kill Gerald. Forrester is chosen as the one to murder Austen. By accident he finds the torn card in the young man's wallet, and allows him to escape. Forrester is killed by the explosion of the bomb he manufactured. Still ignorant of her father's complicity in the murder, Margaret promises to marry Gerald.

John Mason plays his ungrateful part as Forrester masterfully. To enlist even a trace of sympathy in such a character, a man who will not hesitate at even murder, is indeed an accomplishment. Hazel Dawn is beautiful as Margaret, which is all that the part demands of her. David Powell as Gerald Austen does well with the part and W. J. Ferguson renders a commendable character portrayal as Jim Dixon.

"The Heart of the Blue Ridge"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

BEAUTIFUL scenery, Clara Kimball Young as a country girl, and the director's keen appreciation of the value of atmosphere are the features of the World Film Corporation's five-part melodrama, "The Heart of Blue Ridge." The scenic beauty of this offering is constantly uppermost in the mind of the spectator. Of course, the impressive hills enhance, they do not detract from, the interest which Miss Young succeeds in centering upon her artistic characterization of Plutina, whose desires are of the simplest.

Scene from "The Heart of the Blue Ridge."

The story deals with moonshiners, men so frequently referred to as nature's noblemen, and revenue officers. This theme is ever popular. It is productive of much action and good melodramatic situations. The city chap, who usually comes into the life of the mountain girl, is not missed in this story. Zeke, the young farmer, is both interesting and worthy of the beautiful girl, whom he finally wins.

Clara Kimball Young makes admirable use of the dramatic opportunities her part affords, and while in this respect the role is not remarkable, her performance will surely delight her numerous admirers. Chester Barnett gives a natural and sincere portrayal of the young farmer, Zeke. Robert Cummings is Dan Hughes, the moonshiner. Mr. Cummings is a most conventional "bad man." His expression of constant fear of the secret service agents seems studied. But it must be said that he is effective in his last scene with Miss Young.

Plutina, an unlettered mountain girl, lives in the district where illicit stills are operated. Dan Hodges, who makes moonshine, is in love with the girl, but she refuses to marry him. Dan learns that there is a revenue agent in the mountain. He goes in earch of him and shoots the officer, wounding him. Zeke, Plutina's lover, takes the detective to his cabin, where he is cared for by Zeke's mother. Hodges warns the girl's grandfather to keep her away from Zeke, as he is going to shoot him for aiding the officer.

Some time later Zeke receives an offer to manage a new lumber camp, as he has been recommended by the secret service agent. He leaves for Norfolk. Zeke misses the train and is forced to wait for seven hours. In the meantime Hodges' still is destroyed by the officers. Dan escapes. He meets Plutina and takes her by force to the mountain, where he intends marrying her. The revenue officer rides to the railroad station to watch for the escaped moonshiners. He informs Zeke of the girl's plight. Zeke sets out to rescue Plutina. He arrives in time to confront Dan as he is about to strike the girl. The men struggle, and Hodges is plunged over a cliff to his death.

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, who has entertained and delighted playgoers in this country for two generations, during the last of which by her masterly delineation of elderly women parts, has been engaged by the Popular Plays and Players to appear in the big five-part feature production, "Barbara Frietchie," which will be released on the Metro program.

Fayette Parry With Gaumont

Fayette Parry—that irresistible little charmer of the legitimate and vaudeville stage—is bringing all of her clever wit and attractive personality to the screen for a little time, and will appear as the next star of the Gaumont "Asino All Star Comedies" on the Mutual Program. Miss Parry will play the lead in a screamingly funny farce entitled "Ethel's Romeo."

Fayette Parry.

Fayette Parry was born in Nebraska about 20 years ago. Even when she was in school and had no thoughts for the stage she was a beautiful dancer and performed in most of the local entertainments. Her first professional appearance was in Denver in the light opera "Martha."

There followed a very successful season in stock in Denver, and then the pretty little ingenue-dancer-comedienne came to New York to try her fortune under the direction of Cecil De Mille. She first appeared in vaudeville at the American Music Hall. New York liked her. She was fresh from the west, and the breeziness of her manner was most delightful. After a season in vaudeville little Miss Parry went to New Haven, where she again played in stock.

Since, Miss Parry has done a variety of things. At times it has been vaudeville, again opera, then stock. She has also appeared in the pictures—having been with Universal, Lasky, Pathe and Kinemacolor. Her many friends will look forward with great pleasure to the next Casino (Mutual) release.

REMARKABLE PATHE SUBJECTS

Two Amazing Productions Photographed by Electric Spark and Showing the Analysis of Motion Scheduled for Early Releases

Pathe will release during the weeks of November 1 and December 13 some very remarkable pictures showing the analysis of motion. These films are the second and third of the kind ever released by any of the film manufacturers. The first of the type, called the "Analysis of Motion," was released by Pathe about two years ago, and at that time secured some very remarkable publicity.

Ordinary motion pictures, it will be remembered, are taken with a camera making sixteen pictures per second, and are projected upon the screen at the same rate. With the "ultra rapid" method, patented by Pathe, a motor is attached to the camera and 1200 pictures are taken in a second. These pictures are projected at the ordinary rate with the consequence that every animate object in the film moves so slowly that the naked eye easily has time to detect the contortions and muscular action of every object. For instance the hurdler running at a record pace is seen crawling along at almost the pace of a snail so that he seems to almost float in the air as he goes over the jumps.

For pure interest and educational value combined it would be hard to beat these pictures.

PLANS ON COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY

Camerman William Alder of Quality Studios Claims to Have Perfected Method of Photographing Motion Pictures in Their Natural Colors

Natural colors on the screen are claimed to have absolutely been discovered by William Alder, cameraman and profesor of cinematography of the Quality studio laboratories. Mr. Alder has devoted nearly ten years of his life to the study of photography, and for the past four years has been working on a color process that will photograph natural colors through the lens of the motion picture camera instead of making the colors on the positive after the printing. His experiments and his labor and sleepless nights have at least accomplished this: The first test process shown at public exhibitions at the Majestic theater in Los Angeles was proclaimed by the audience and the press as being the nearest thing to natural colored photography ever shown. In the next production in which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will appear, Mr. Alder will photograph a few scenes with his new camera, which will be the added feature of the production. One film manufacturer is said to have offered Mr. Alder two hundred thousand dollars for his process and patents on the camera.

$10,000 for an Idea

How would you like to have $10,000?

It is easy to get. All that is necessary is to write the best suggestion for a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky" and the money is yours. But in writing the sequel suggestion consider very carefully these points:

What becomes of the "Diamond"?

What becomes of the child?

What is the fate of Blair Stanley?

What happens to Vivian Marston?

It is unnecessary for one who tries for this fortune to possess any great literary genius, as the judges who will make decision will pay no attention to style, phraseology or vocabulary. All they will be interested in will be the idea, and the idea must be a practical one, replete with picture possibilities and suited to the making of a sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky."

The scenario for this big picturized novel won for its author, Roy L. McCardell, a prize of $10,000, and any motion picture fan anywhere has opportunity now to duplicate the fortune of Mr. McCardell and annex the $10,000 now being offered for a suitable sequel suggestion.

The British Isles are in the throes of the hottest advertising campaign that has ever been attempted there. Pathe's big American serial successes "The Exploits of Elaine," "The New Exploits of Elaine," and the "Romance of Elaine," are taking the British exhibitors by storm, aided by a truly remarkable use of newspapers, billboards and other methods of publicity.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

Vernon Castle, the famous dancer, takes a lesson in hydro aeroplaning
Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

A scene from the Rookies encampment at Ft. Sheridan, Chicago, Ill.
Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Ex-President Taft visits $2,000,000 Columbia highway at Portland, Ore.
Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Members of the G. A. R. march in grand review at Washington, D. C.
Copyright, 1915, International Film Service Incorporated.

Bandmaster of popular recruiting band presented with statue at London, England Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Two victims of the submarine F-4 disaster arrive at San Francisco, Calif.
Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland

William N. Selig arrived from Chicago this week and has been busy with his executive heads, directors, stars and players at the Edendale and Zoo studios. Mr. Selig is always royally welcomed when he comes to Los Angeles, and his official rendezvous—the Hotel Alexandria—is usually thronged with callers waiting an audience with the big manufacturer. He has been the recipient of much social attention by representative people of the West during the present trip.

Siegmund Lubin, head of the great Lubin Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, has completed a tour of the Golden State, during which time he visited the Lubin studios at Coronado Beach, the San Francisco exposition, where he was accorded special honors, and Los Angeles. In this city Mr. Lubin was entertained at the leading studios and at the Fine Arts Film plant was the personal guest of D. W. Griffith. Mr. Lubin was well pleased with his trip west, and will stop at Phoenix, Ariz., on his return, to look over his studio in that city and discuss affairs with Romaine Fielding, manager of the Arizona-Lubin studios.

Eddie Foy, the famed comedian, who has been employed with the Keystone Film Company under a ten-week contract, is now suing that company through his personal attorney, John F. Clark, an eminent lawyer of this city, for $6,000, three weeks' salary. The suit is unique in that Foy claims the contract was canceled by General Manager Mack Sennett after seven weeks. Foy sues in three suits of $2,000 each, filing a suit each week. The first suit for $2,000 was filed Monday, October 4, another October 11, and another will be filed October 18, as the salary claimed by Foy falls due. Just as regularly as Foy's lawyer calls for the money, he is just as politely turned down by the Keystone management. It is stated by Attorney Clark that Foy will file an additional claim for $100,000 damages, alleging that his wonderful prestige and fame of forty-nine years on the stage has been damaged by the foolish antics of so-called screen comedies in which he was supposed to be starred. Foy claims to have been hit in the face with pies, washed down in his night clothes with a garden hose, thrown out of automobiles and subjected to other indignities during the seven weeks before he was fired. The Keystone management simply laugh, shrug their comedy shoulders and say they have nothing to say at this time. The outcome is being watched with much interest by moving picture concerns employing high-priced celebrities.

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation of Los Angeles, which temporarily ceased operations a few weeks ago, after making a number of good pictures, plans to begin immediate operations again within a few weeks. He has a number of good ideas ready and expects to keep the National before the film world in a prominent manner.

Everybody seems to be keyed up watching Triangle Film Company developments. The first pictures are being anxiously anticipated and Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett are much in the public eye. Especially notable attractions are looked for, and judging from reports from the studios, new records in screen productions will be made.

Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, was this week insured for $250,000 by the heads of the Triangle Film Corporation, after passing an examination from fifteen doctors. The idea of the policy is to protect the new organization from loss in case of the death of the noted producer. It is stated that a policy of the same magnitude will be taken out on D. W. Griffith, and a big policy be written on Mack Sennett. These fellows are always putting over something new.

"Capt. Jack" Poland has been appointed associate editor of Photoplayers' Weekly and will co-operate with the new owner and managing editor, J. Frederick Ryan, in an earnest endeavor to make this paper the most representative newspaper of its kind in the West.

Wycliffe A. Hill, former editor of the Movie Magazine, has resigned that position to engage in the motion picture promotion business, as publicity expert for a newly formed company handling projection machines and equipment.

The Scream Club will hold a semi-spectacular Chicken Fest and Get-together Social at Jahnke's celebrated tavern, October 14. All the scribes, correspondents, pencil pushers of the promotion departments, and others, will attend. The program of entertainment includes no shop talk, no movie specials, just eats, suds and stories. Each guest is invited to bring along an extra fish for membership.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, was a visitor at MOTOGRAPHY'S offices Friday. Mr. Shallenberger has just closed an arrangement with Pathe whereby he manufactures a number of releases every week for that concern. As one of the pioneers in the Mutual Film Corporation, Mr. Shallenberger has a splendid record and MOTOGRAPHY predicts that his product will be well worth keeping in touch with. Howell Hansell will be the director for the Arrow Company.

J. W. Brickhouse, formerly traveling representative for the Universal's Standard film exchange, left that exchange on Monday and assumed a similar position with the Mutual Film Corporation, H. & H. Branch, at 117 North Dearborn street. Mr. Brickhouse is remarkable in the number of friends he has among exhibitors and that he will be successful in his new connection goes without saying.

Frank Flaherty, formerly manager of the Universal's Standard exchange on Washington street, severed his connection on Monday and assumed a similar position with Mutual, H. & H. Branch, on North Dearborn street. Frank says he is tickled to death to connect with the eight million dollar program, as he picks it for a winner, it being the only program which is advertising extensively to the exhibitors at the present time.

Claud Plough of the Universal Anti-Trust film exchange, on Lake street, was making arrangements last week to take over the customers of the Standard Universal exchange on Washington street, which was discontinued on Monday, October 11. Plough has the entire 4-story building and basement, and ample facilities for taking care of the increased number of customers. It is not generally known that Mr. Plough started in the exchange business among the very first in Chicago, he being associated with William Swanson at Swanson's exchange when Swanson was booking the Hale Tours for the Selig Polyscope Company. There are few exhibitors left who remember these early days.

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co. Inc.	85	97
Biograph Company	43	56
Colonial Motion Picture Corp.	1½	4¾*
General Film Corp. pref.	38	46
Mutual Film Corp. pref.	51	55
Mutual Film Corp. com.	52	56
North American Film Corp. pref.	70	—
North American Film Corp. com.	66	80
New York Motion Picture Corp.	68	72
Thanhouser Film Corp.	1½	2¾*
Triangle Film Corp.	7⅝	8 *
Universal Film. Mfg. Co.	150	—
Vogue Films Inc.	115	—
World Film Corp.	3⅞	4 *

* Par $5.00.

Mutual Film Corporation.—There is a demand for Mutual common, but very little stock to be had. This situation seems to be based on facts that are now reaching the public, which indicate the Mutual's business has been improving faster than any of the distributing companies.

New York Motion Picture Corporation.—There have been comparatively few trades in this stock—most of them being in 5 and 10-share lots.

Triangle Film Corporation. — It is claimed on the New York Curb that the Triangle Film Corporation in bookings now in hand and foreign business contracted for, will be releasing at the rate of 50 prints per week during the present month, which will be increased each week on a regular schedule. Stock sold within the last ten days as low as 7⅞ and as high as 9¼.

The Strand theater opens up in its new location, viz., the old Globe theater, at Seventh street and Wabash avenue, on Friday, October 15. A very expensive and particularly attractive stage setting is a part of the interior decorations that have been put in and the entire building on the outside will have a very fine electrical display that should serve as an attraction to patrons. The Strand Company has already taught the Chicago exhibitors something about exhibiting, even though it is a new comer in the business, and if it can continue to hold the crowd at its new location a great many exhibitors in Chicago will lose caste as prophets.

H. K. Moss, whom exhibitors will remember as connected with the Mutual Film Company, has opened up a new office at Room 1105 Mallers building, as Chicago office of the Manager's Screen Reports, a New York company headed by Harry Poppe of the Horsley Company and C. V. Morrison, formerly of the Chicago Billboard office. Moss reports a splendid progress for the first ten days and confidently predicts that this service is going to be a big thing for exhibitors throughout the central states.

The Chicago Tribune broke loose with a story on Wednesday about a new talking moving picture, patents for which are held by Charles K. Cregier of the city electrician's department. Patents consist of a machine that synchronizes the phonograph and the film.

Walter Noble Burns, an old newspaper man, recently with the Chicago Interocean, was in Motography's office on Friday last to announce recent connections with the publicity department of a local chain of theaters.

Walter H. Christian, president of the Real Photoplays Company, states that his new picture entitled, "The Cowboy," is now being assembled and will soon be ready for exhibition.

Ralph Bradford, the Minneapolis Triangle manager and the piscatorial expert of the exchange men, was in Chicago to witness the Triangle performance at the Studebaker theater. Ralph is getting fat and expressed himself as particularly pleased with the way in which the Triangle pictures were received by the audience at the Studebaker.

Aaron M. Gollos returned from New York last week. His company is making a rigid campaign for the sales of the charming feature "Sarah Bernhardt at Home" to various state rights purchasers. This picture was booked for a week solid at the Strand in Minneapolis, beginning Monday this week, and a splendid business is being done. The company is also sending out notices to exhibitors about its new five-reel picture, "The Vengeance of the Wilds," a drama in which wild animals take a leading part, which is exceptionally thrilling. Mr. Gollos was featured in the newspapers this week as the claimant against Isac Rosenthal, a dealer in motion picture films, who was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mr. Gollos, charging him with operating a confidence game.

On Sunday, October 17, the Olympic theater will open its doors to a select audience to witness the eight-reel Vitagraph special feature entitled, "The Battle Cry of Peace." The admission price will grade from $2.00 down and as this film had a splendid run in New York, a similar result is expected in Chicago.

The Eitle brothers, proprietors of the Hotel Bismarck, invited the writer to the opening of their "Munich Room" last Wednesday evening and quite a number of film folks were present. A feature of the evening was the dancing of Thomas Keesey and his partner, Miss Freeman.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was a Chicago visitor the past week and returned to New York on Wednesday's century.

Albert W. Howell has been appointed traveling auditor for the Metro Pictures Service for its Pittsburgh, Chicago, Des Moines and Kansas City offices.

So rapid has been the growth of the Chicago office of the Metro Pictures Service that the fifth floor of the College building has seen Metro officials measuring off floor space which would denote that another film exchange is about to enter the College building, Chicago's newest home for film exchanges. Harry Weiss, local manager of that firm, together with Phil. H. Solomon, assistant manager, pride themselves on the fact that they have just signed up their three hundredth contract and that to date not one cancellation has been received which speaks pretty well for these enterprising hustlers as well as for the Metro Picture Service.

The New Castle Theater, State and Madison streets, Chicago's newest theater, opens up shortly with Metro Pictures Service which will have a home here for two days each week. Together with a week's run at the Ziegfeld and Fine Arts Theater and a showing at the Star Theater on Madison street and the Boston Theater on Clark street and the Bijou Dream Theater on State street, it makes a total of five downtown runs for the Metro Pictures which is the highest average operating out of Chicago.

On a recent automobile trip through the territory immediately surrounding Chicago, Mr. Weiss, manager of the Chicago office of the Metro Pictures Service, made four hundred and forty-three miles in five days and landed six contracts. In one place owing to the bad roads it took three hours and fifteen minutes to make seven miles, but Mr. Weiss landed a good contract when he got to the town he was trying to make. Mr. Weiss originally intended to take a few days' rest, but he simply could not keep away from business.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

On Thursday, September 30, Frederick Charles Gunning, better known to the film trade as "Wid," was united in marriage to Helen Renick Fickardt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Fickardt of Circleville, Ohio. The wedding occurred at the home of the bride and was largely attended. Motography joins with a host of Mr. Gunning's friends in the trade in wishing the young people every happiness and extending congratulations.

Jack Abrams has succumbed to motion pictures also. At the present time he is serving at the Balboa studio as technical and art director. For many years he produced vaudeville acts independently. Then he was one of the best known theatrical costumers in New York, being proprietor of the well known "Maison Jacques."

Director Arthur McMakin of the Beauty (Mutual) Company, has just finished an amusing comedy, "The Woman's Votes," in which John Steppling plays a leading role. Mr. MacMakin is now engaged in the production of "Her Adopted Father," a good comedy in which Frank Borsage plays the lead.

The Congress Amusements, of St. Louis, Mo., recently issued invitations to the opening of the Congress Street, Alice at Sarah, St. Louis. For the initial performance in this house they showed Emily Stevens in Metro's "The Soul of a Woman."

Harry Walthall Essanay's leading man, recently went to New York to consult with George Hazelton, author of "The Yellow Ticket," who is an authority on Poe, and who adapted "The Raven," a six-act photoplay in which Walthall is soon to appear. Also some scenes of the play were taken at the Poe cottage and elsewhere.

Miss Gazelle Marche, who played "Innocent Inez" in "The Exploits of Elaine" and lead for the Terriss Film Company in the comedy, "Papa's Wife," is now ingenue lead with the Charles K. Harris Company in the five-part feature, "For Sale—A Baby," being produced at Whitestone, L. I. Miss Marche is a very fascinating and magnetic screen artist, and is coming to the front rapidly.

Miss Gazelle Marche.

Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Sturgeon recently gave a most enjoyable dancing party at the Pavilion de Danse at a neighboring beach. The entire studio force was in attendance and had a glorious time.

Recently there disappeared from the vaults of the Chicago branch of the World Film Corporation several reels of films. It appeared that a minor employee had a pass key; stole the films and disposed of them to a receiver. So precise, however, is the checking system employed that within two hours of the disappearance of the film, the thief was arrested and implicated the receiver of the stolen reels.

Dr. E. J. Boseke, who spent about two months in New York City during which time the Associated Film Sales Corporation was formed, has returned to his home in Santa Barbara, California, and has taken up his duties at the Santa Barbara Motion Picture studios.

Among the recent visitors at Universal City were W. B. Jerome of Chicago, general western passenger agent of the New York Central Lines; Charles D. Pike, of Los Angeles, city passenger agent of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad, and John W. Daly of Chicago, passenger traffic manager of the New York Lines.

The Associated Film Sales Corporation are preparing to send two comedy companies to Los Angeles, California, and they will be located at the D. L. Burke studios, where additions and alterations are now being made.

Harry Spingler, juvenile par excellence, will have a rather important part in a forthcoming six reeler the Universal will stand sponsor for, entitled "Son of the Immortals." This important feature will be directed by Harry McRae Webster, best known for his work while on the directorial staff of the Essanay.

Maurice Tourneur is making a picture on the well known stage success, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," which is to have the advantage, in the cast, of the remarkably powerful and popular artist, Holbrook Blinn, who has placed himself by general consent at the very head of his recently adopted profession; while Vivian Martin's beauty, charm and piquancy are the themes of general admiration. Mr. Blinn and Miss Martin make an ideal pair of leads.

At the Liberty Film Company at San Mateo, the Swedish actress, Sadie Lindblom, took the lead in a photodrama entitled "The Peacemaker," with Frederick Montague in support. She is now appearing in "Love Finds a Way" with Al Lutthringer playing opposite her. Mr. Lutthringer is well known on the speaking stage and this is his first experience in pictures.

John H. Cossar, an Essanay player, is nursing a severe attack of hay fever which he acquired a week ago.

Howard Hickman arrives at Inceville, acts and then goes. One scarcely hears of him and yet he is taking one of the most prominent parts ever seen on the screen and is one of the soundest and best looking actors in the business.

Miss Eugenie Besserer, the popular Selig star, recently entertained a large number of friends to a house and lawn party at her beautiful new bungalow at Los Angeles, Cal. The invitations were unique, being engraved on cards in reproduction of the Selig Diamond S trade mark. The function was in celebration of Miss Besserer's fifth anniversary as a leading member of the Selig stock company.

Francis Ford and his company of Universal players have returned to the Universal City studios from a short stay in San Francisco, where they went to stage a number of boat scenes in the production of a one-reel comedy entitled "Orders Is Orders."

"Bought" is the name of the first photoplay which Barry O'Neill is making for World Film. Fredereick Lewis and Ethel Grey Terry are starred in the picture which is based upon strong and novel plot.

Rollin S. Sturgeon, of the Vitagraph, is once more getting good results from a comparative novice. In the one-reel he is putting on while preparing for his next big feature, he has Corinne Griffin, in the ingenue part and Miss Griffin is a newcomer. It is remarkable what this producer can do with raw material, and he is a splendid judge of potential "comers."

The Detroit Kriterion Film Service, handling the Associated Program for Michigan, are so pleased with the quality of pictures that they have decided to take in a much larger territory than originally contracted for.

It is rumored that George Cooper and Kate Price, both prominent Vitagraph players, are married—Mr. Cooper to a young lady whom he wont name, and Miss Price to a gentleman in New England. In Mr. Cooper's case. dame rumor may be correct, as he has been wearing a sheepish look for the past few days. Kate doesn't affirm or deny the report, but she still wears her sunny smile and looks as if she might be happy. Oh, Kate! if you did, why did you?

Robert Leonard and his company of Rex Players are rapidly nearing the conclusion of the six-reel adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnette's novel, "That Lass O' Lowries." Featuring Helen Ware in the title role. Miss Ware's part in the production ended several days ago and the company since that time has been at work on remaining scenes in which she had no part.

The Associated Film Sales Corporation has just signed up two directors whom it believes are the best that can be had in the business today. Tom Moore and Al Ray are the men referred to. Tom Moore was until recently director and leading man with the Kalem Company, and his work is well known wherever pictures are shown. He is the husband of Alice Joyce, and directed most of her pictures when she was with the Kalem Company. Al Ray is considered to be one of the best comedy producers in the business today, and has been the cause of millions laughing until they cried at the funny films he has produced.

Charles Gay, who is playing important roles in the Centaur Features with the Bostock animals, is a famous trainer of wild beasts, in which line he has been engaged for many years.

The breaking of a dam, depicting thousands of gallons of water rushing madly through the opening, flooding the surrounding territory and setting awash houses, barns and other structures, is but one of the many thrilling realistic scenes presented in "The End of the Road," a forthcoming Mutual Master-Picture, screened at the American studios.

In jumping from a box car to a flat car in one of the Helen Holmes railroad pictures last week, George E. Cummings fractured his ankle badly. Producer J. P. McGowan drove him to the Sister's Hospital where he is resting nicely. It will be weeks before he will work again.

Ruth Stonehouse, Essanay leading woman, has returned from Elkhart, Ind., her old home, where she went a few days ago to act as godmother to Alice Jane Webb, daughter born to Dr. and Mrs. Basil Webb.

The property rooms of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City have just been stocked with a large supply of new furniture. This furniture consists of bedroom, parlor and dining room seats and library equipment.

Charles Richman, Eleanor Woodruff, James Morrison and Zena Keefe have begun work on a big screen story, as yet unnamed, in which the United States navy will figure conspicuously. Important scenes will be taken at Newport, Rhode Island, Annapolis, Maryland, and Cuba.

Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart, author of "The Circular Staircare," a Selig Red Seal play, was recently a guest of Mr. Child, manager of the Pittsburg branch of V. L. S. E., when the Selig production was shown.

Frank Powell, whose masterly direction of "A Fool There Was," added new laurels to his reputation as one of the foremost photoplay directors in this country and who has been associated with the Fox Film Corporation practically since the advent of that company into the motion picture field, is turning out artistic features with the regularity of the old one reeler days. A few of Mr. Powell's successes during the past year include "A Fool There Was," "The Children of the Ghetto," "The Valley of the Missing," "Princess Romanoff," "The Devil's Daughter," and soon to be released are the five-reel drama, "The Woman Pays," featuring Miss Nance O'Neil; an Italian tragedy, "The Final Payment," and the spectacular production of "The Witch."

It isn't often that Daniel Gilfether, of Balboa's acting force, asks for a vacation. But last week he wanted to go to San Francisco to see the fair. Gladly did the Horkheimer Brothers grant Gilfether's wish. In spite of his three score and more years, he is one of the most regular men about the big studio, never missing a day, for he would rather work than do anything else.

Edna Maison is taking the lead under the direction of Henry Otto, in a well written photoplay entitled "Manna." She takes the part of a factory girl who becomes very religious and influences the lives of others in a novel manner. Edna's sister has just returned home from the hospital. She had a slight operation for an injury caused by one of the actors lifting her up in the air and injuring a gland near the heart. She is well again.

Both the big photoplay features which Tom Terriss and his associates in the Terriss Feature Corporation made in Jamaica, West Indies, some months ago have been released by the Picture Playhouse Film Company, and the prints are in the hands of the company's several branch offices throughout the country. The Terriss Company are now engaged in filming other big features at their studio in Yonkers, N. Y.

On every alternate Tuesday and Saturday, the Vitagraph Company releases a three-part film story, which it has collectively named Broadway Star Features. These picture plays, while shorter than the Blue Ribbon Features, which run four parts and over, are their equal in story, production and photography, and are enacted by specially selected casts.

Producer Thomas H. Ince employed the long-distance telephone from Los Angeles to Chicago this week, to engage another man for his staff. The man is J. Parker Reed, well known in motion picture circles as a promoter and producer of features, and his presence at Inceville, will, it is believed, add strength to the general producing forces at the plant.

This week's additions to David Horsley's playing forces were Edward Roberts and Clarence Baker. The former has been cast for an important part in the "Stanley's Adventures in South Africa" series which Frank Montgomery is staging for the Centaur Features, while Mr. Baker is playing heavies in the Centaur Feature company directed by Carl LeViness.

Ernest Maupain, one of Essanay's leading men, who has the part of John Allan, Edgar Allan Poe's foster father, in "The Raven," Essanay's six-act feature photoplay from George C. Hazelton's romance of Poe, is an artist and sculptor of no mean ability, and in his spare moments busies himself painting portraits and landscapes or sculpturing. Several beautiful paintings which Mr. Maupain made have been purchased by Essanay and are used in its photoplays whenever occasion requires. Mr. Maupain is an expert in bas-relief work and has made numerous bas-reliefs of various Essanay players.

Robert Whitworth, the well-known English actor, is the latest recruit from the legitimate stage to join the ranks of film stars, having recently been engaged by the Vitagraph Company. Mr. Whitworth will be remembered for his appearances with Nazimova in "Bella Donna," and with Phyllis Nielson-Terry in "The Adventures of Lady Ursula." His first part as a screen actor will be in "Wasted Lives," a three-part society drama by Ouida Bergere, upon which Director Theodore Marston is now at work for the Vitagraph Company.

Roscoe Arbuckle has been directing a two-reel comedy in which most of the scenes are laid on the beach, in the surf and in the bath houses of popular Pacific beaches. One of the thrilling incidents in the story is the leap of an automobile and an electric beach chair from a fifty-foot pier into the ocean. Minta Durfee, who was the occupant of the chair, narrowly escaped drowning, as the heavy battery caused it to gradually settle into the water after the drop. The prompt action of Arbuckle, who freed himself from the wrecked automobile and went to her aid, averted what for a time looked like a disaster.

Helen Dunbar, who plays old women parts at the Quality-Metro studio in Hollywood, Cal., entertained her friends at her new home there on two afternoons during the world's baseball series with what she was pleased to call "baseball fan soirees."

Charles Giblyn, who is assisting Producer Thomas H. Ince in the production of the Ince-Triangle feature in which Billie Burke will be starred, is in grave danger of gangrene poisoning, according to statements made this week by his physicians. About a week ago Giblyn accidentally stepped on a rusty nail. It pierced his shoe, but he thought little of the mishap. Inflammation soon developed, however, and now he is confined to his bed, under the care of two physicians and a nurse.

George O'Donnell, operatic basso and all-round actor, has been added to the roster of Vitagraph stars and will be seen in the production of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "My Lady's Slipper," under the direction of Ralph W. Ince.

One of the most elaborate and probably the largest set ever constructed for screen purposes in a studio in Manhattan was used at the Rolfe-Metro studios in West Sixty-first street in "The Woman Pays," in which Valli Valli is starred. The set was a ballroom and every inch of the large studio floor space was utilized.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Florida.

The Southern Motion Picture Corporation, West Palm Beach, will erect a building 100x40x18½ feet, to cost $10,000, for the manufacture of motion pictures. Edgar W. Ruff, president and general manager.

Colorado.

George W. Hockenberger has purchased an interest in the Empress theater in Colorado Springs. Plans are under way for many improvements, but just what the changes will be has not been determined.

Georgia.

Macon will soon have its fourth moving picture show. It will be located on Cherry street, in the Small building, and will be ready for opening some time this month.

Atlanta is to have the most remarkable moving picture theater in the entire south, and one that will compete in beauty of design with the famous motion picture houses of the large eastern and western cities. The theater will be erected at the southwest corner of Forsyth and Luckie streets, and cost about $50,000. Peter Mion has leased the theater building for a term of years and promises the best motion pictures that can be procured.

Illinois.

J. B. Gurnell will shortly open his new motion picture theater, the Princess, in Centralia.

The Castle theater, in Havana will be enlarged. The work will be commenced at once and when completed the building will have a seating capacity of about five hundred.

The Majestic theater on Vermilion street, Danville, has been opened under new management.

President of the Alice Theater company, Alfred Hamburger, has acquired another theater located at Prairie avenue and Fifty-eighth street, Chicago. The theater is now in the process of construction and will be known as the Prairie.

The Mutual Motion Picture Producing company, Chicago, capital $10,000; incorporators, Richard I. Gavin, George R. Neff, Jessie Hamm.

Fidelity Film Corporation, Chicago, capital $10,000; incorporators, Michael F. Ryan, William F. Quosse, Robert L. Reid.

A most up-to-date moving picture theater is to be started in Moline in the old Family theater building in the near future by Grando and Sodini.

The National Motion Picture company, Chicago; capital, $1,000; incorporators, Richard I. Gavin, George R. Neff, Jessie Hamm.

McClure will shortly have a motion picture show, to be operated by J. G. Wilson, every Saturday night.

Indiana.

Carathers and Carrier, proprietors of the motion picture show in Wolcottville, have installed a new machine.

Two new moving picture houses have opened in Bluffton. The Gaiety was moved to Bluffton from Fort Wayne, and the Palace, the second new theater, will be managed by W. H. Sawyer.

The Lyric theater in Michigan City has been taken over by Myron Bonheim, of St. Louis, Missouri, who has changed the name to the Franklin and has planned many improvements.

The Family theater in Elkhart will be enlarged.

Iowa.

Schleswig's new motion picture theater, the Palace, has been opened. It seats three hundred and is owned by John Krohnke.

Mrs. John Tredenick is erecting a theater building at Lucas, which will be used as a motion picture theater.

The Garden theater, on Main and Brady street, Davenport, has been opened to the public. The new theater has a seating capacity of 1,000 and the seats are upholstered in morocco leather. The theater is garden effect throughout, the walls being set off by overhanging vases of flowers of various color. Samuel Greenbaum is manager and part owner; associated with him is A. H. Blank of Des Moines.

Maryland.

The Parkway theater on North avenue, west of Charles street, Baltimore, is almost completed. It is owned by the Northern Amusement company, of which H. W. Webb is president. It will be devoted to the production of high grade motion pictures.

Thomas D. Goldberg has purchased the Suburban motion picture theater at the southeast corner of North avenue and Ninth street, Walbrook. Mr. Goldberg will make a number of improvements to the theater.

Michigan.

The Uno theater in Crystal Falls has been sold by W. H. Needham to Lee Wilson of the Menominee range city.

Work has been started on the new motion picture house which will be erected by C. and G. Budde in Bridge street, between Seward and Lexington Avenue, N. W., Grand Rapids. The building will be one story high and will be built of cement, brick and hollow tile. It will cost $5,000.

Fine Arts Theater company, Detroit, $35,000; moving picture theater; stockholders, A. Arthur Caille, Henry J. Guthard and John J. Walsh.

Incorporation articles have been filed at Lansing by the Isis Theater company of Grand Rapids, who will erect a play house on Monroe avenue, N. W., near Crescent street. Among the incorporators of the company, which is capitalized at $45,000, are John W. Goodspeed and George C. and William S. Williams.

George C. Nichols, owner and manager of the Superba and Nichols theaters in Division avenue, Grand Rapids, has purchased a large lot on the southwest corner of Division avenue and Shelby street, on which he will erect at once a new motion picture house. It will have a seating capacity of 800, and will cost $20,000. A strictly modern ventilating system will be installed, and the building will be absolutely fireproof. The theater will be called the Palace.

After another short period of existence the Lyric theater, in St. Joseph, has been closed and the equipment purchased by Hansen & Sather, of the Caldwell theater. The theater equipment was purchased from Louis Kahn, owner of the Lyric for the past few weeks. The theater will not be reopened.

Minnesota.

E. R. Crosby contemplates erecting a motion picture theater in St. Charles.

E. V. Harris and Carney Koerner are contemplating establishing a picture theater in the Roberston building, Litchfield.

Missouri.

The Columbia Novelty Company has purchased property at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Clinton streets, St. Louis, as a site for a building for a high-class motion picture theater. The seating capacity will be 1,200. A garage for baby carriages will be one of the features of the theater.

The Pageant theater, the latest addition to handsome homes for the film drama, was opened in St. Louis September 18.

An explosion of a box of picture films caused a damage of about $150.00 to the North Grand theater, 3624 North Grand avenue, St. Louis.

A motion picture theater will replace the old Singleton home at the southeast corner of Fifteenth street and Troost avenue, Kansas City.

Montana

Planning to buy, sell and conduct moving picture theaters over the state, as well as to furnish other entertainment, the Harrison avenue theater company of Butte, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $100,000 and T. J. Bennetts, George Kelson and Fred A. Ironsides are the principal stockholders.

Nebraska.

A. P. Ake, who has been in charge of the Lyric theater at Wymore for the last eight years, has disposed of the place to Harvey Dimmitt.

A new motion picture theater has been started by Drayton and King in Orchard.

It is rumored that Fairbury is to have a $50,000 motion picture theater within the near future. The structure will be built of stone, concrete and steel and will be absolutely fireproof throughout. The theater will have a seating capacity of 900 and will be under the management of C. W. Bartlett.

The Hamilton moving picture house, a new structure of brick and fireproof construction throughout, has just been completed at Fortieth and Hamilton streets, Omaha, and has been opened. The structure cost approximately $20,000, which makes it one of the real big outlying moving picture structures. E. B. Winn of 2105 Binney street, is owner and proprietor.

Harry Lawrie, architect, has completed the plans for a moving picture theater that will be erected on the site of the buildings now occupied by the World-Herald in Omaha. The buildings will be vacated March 1 of next year and razing will begin. It is expected the new theater will be ready for occupancy by August 1, 1916. The theater will be under the the management of Goldberg Brothers.

New York.

The Plaza moving picture theater at Fifty-ninth street and Madison avenue, New York, was damaged by fire.

The Lion Film Manufacturing Co., New York. Manufacture and sale of moving picture films and machines; capital $100,000.

The village of Whitesboro opened its first motion picture theater, the Whitesboro, seating 400, September 21. It is managed by Mr. Hansom.

A slight damage was caused by a fire which started in the film room of the Majestic photo theater, at 1113 Second avenue, New York, September 28.

The Scenograph Feature Film Company, Inc., Manhattan. Theatrical and motion picture business. Capital, $100,000. Incorporators, I. McCool, 8 East Fifteenth street, New York City; W. M. Westervelt, Arlington, N. J.; J. A. Kuck, Jr., Hastings-on-Hudson.

The Barry MacDonald Film Company, Mount Vernon, theatrical motion pictures; $50,000; A. J. McCarten, L. B. Vanderhoop, A. L. McDonald, Lincoln, Neb.

Plans are being drawn by Mr. Obenhach for a $10,000 moving picture theater of unusual and attractive design in tile and stucco and fireproof construction, which will be built on East Falls street at Portage road, Niagara Falls. It will be designed to seat 500. Eljas and Janicki Eljasznjanichi, brothers, of Thirteenth street, will build and conduct the theater.

H. W. Bell, C. B. Cook, 240 Collins street, Hartford, Connecticut.

A new license for the Victoria theater in Rochester, which was revoked, was signed recently by Mayor Hiram H. Edgerton, and Herbert C. Kelly was named as manager.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk in Reno and at the Secretary of State's office at Carson City, September 17, by the Nevada Motion Picture Corporation, with a capitalization of $500,000. W. B. Alexander, Frank Manson, W. H. Simmons, Samuel Platt, C. W. Mapes and Dr. St. Clair of Reno and E. N. Walter and George C. Walker of Oakland are the principal and active factors of the new corporation, which will build in Reno one of the largest film-making studios in the West.

Work has been started on the new Brace motion picture theater on Sheather street, Elmira.

George W. Brinon, Incorporated, Manhattan, motion pictures, $50,000; C. Stickles, Elsie Greenberger, S. M. Cohen, New York.

Ohio.

Sanford Burke will erect a motion picture theater at 934 Cleveland avenue, Columbus, which will be known as the Milo.

J. K. Peters, proprietor of the Pastime theater in Lorain, has sold the theater to Frank Berrill, of Grafton. The new owner will make some improvements and endeavor to give the public the best in moving pictures.

E. P. Mott, manager of the Lyric theater on East Liberty street, Wooster, and owner of half interest, purchased the other half of the property from his partner, Frank Ramsey of Orville. Extensive improvements are expected to be made next spring, the nature of which has not been announced.

The incorporation of the Federal Photo Plays Company, at Columbus, recently, with headquarters at Cleveland, marks a definite move of the Educational Film Corporation, of Chicago, in the production of motion pictures in Cleveland. The new corporation is capitalized for $150,000. The headquarters of the company will be located in the Marion building.

October 2 the new Auditorium theater on East Fourth street, Dayton, was opened. The theater has been entirely remodeled and furnished and will be managed for the Auditorium Amusement Company, by P. A. Bloch of New York.

The Feature Theaters Company, Cleveland, $30,000; B. W. Price.

The northeastern part of Columbus, to which the name Milo still clings, though it is now part of the city, is to have a new picture show. C. S. Burk is the owner of the new building, which is just getting under way, and its cost will be about $4,500. It is located at 934 Cleveland avenue.

The Non-Rewind Film Reel Company, Toledo, $5,000; Paul F. Reichart.

The Photoplay World Company, Cleveland, $5,000; C. M. Baxter.

The Duchess theater, Euclid avenue and East Fifty-seventh street, Cleveland, has abandoned the contemplated policy of vaudeville and pictures, substituting instead feature photoplay productions. The change takes place the first week in October.

Plans are being prepared by A. Silberberg for the erection of a motion picture theater on Lexington avenue N. E. near E. Sixty-sixth street, Cleveland. The theater will seat 500 persons and will cost about $25,000.

Jacob Janowicz has secured a lease on the McKinley theater in New Philadelphia for a term of years from J. C. Walsh, the owner. R. E. Brunswick will be associated with Mr. Janowicz in the management of the theater.

S. M. Kasse has purchased the Empress Theater on South Howard, near Market, Akron.

Charles V. Gerry, Mansfield contractor, has been awarded the contract for the building of the new moving picture theater which will be erected at Shelby.

It has been announced by G. L. Warson, president of the Educational Film Corporation which has made its headquarters in Chicago, that a complete moving picture studio is to be equipped and in operation at Cleveland within sixty days.

Wilmer & Vincent, at present lessees of the Orpheum theater and Able Opera House, Easton, have added the Northampton theater to their list of leased local play houses, of which J. Fred Osterstock is the manager. The policy of the Northampton will be exclusive photoplays.

Oklahoma.

Lucian Cox assumed the management of the Majestic theater, in Ardmore, September 20. Mr. Cox had his theater redecorated and new furniture installed, and it is now a cozy and pretty little playhouse.

Sand Springs will shortly have a new picture show. It is being erected by Cupp and Chandler on Second street, and will be completed within a few weeks.

Oregon.

The National theater in Portland is now showing moving pictures exclusively.

The moving picture theater in Forest Grove will hereafter be operated on Sundays. The theater is managed by Carl Hoffman.

Pennsylvania.

The new Strand theater, State street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, Erie, is expected to be ready for opening the middle of October. It will be managed by M. J. Hayes of Buffalo.

The name selected for the new theater at Chambers and Hudson streets, Easton, is the Chambers Street theater. It was formally opened September 25.

The Galen theater, in Marysville, was damaged by fire to the extent of several hundred dollars.

The new Butler theater, formerly the Orpheum, in Butler, opened the twenty-third of September.

The new Majestic theater, Avoca, owned by T. J. Dunn, was opened September 16. The playhouse is well equipped with modern appliances. The building is a two-story brick, the interior being lined with fireproof material. The front of the building presents a very attractive appearance, being of brick and ornamental steel.

After weeks of preparation on the part of the decorators and electricians, the new Hamilton theater, located on Hamilton street, near Second, Allentown, has been opened. The theater, which will be devoted to the exclusive showing of feature photoplays, is one of the prettiest in the city. It has a seating capacity of 500 people and is constructed along strictly fire-proof lines. Herbert M. Meeker is manager.

To Charles P. Biggin, 1829 Harlan street, Philadephia—Theater (Marquie), South street, east of Twelfth. For J. T. Gibson. Cost $600.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors has established a branch office in Pittsburgh in the Vandergrift building.

Gibbstown will have a motion picture theater.

The Mishler theater, which since its construction has been known as the home of legitimate drama in Altoona, has changed its policy and will run only high-class pictures.

The Theatorium, 4411 Butler street, Pittsburgh, was slightly damaged by fire.

Film building, 1227-29 Vine street, Philadelphia.—One story, brick, 35x90 feet. Bids due August 20. P. J. Hurley, E. J. Kreitzburg, George K. Heebner, D. Henwood and I. T. Shoemaker. Charles E. Oelschlager, architect.

The Golden theater in Marysville has been reopened after being closed on account of damage done by fire recently.

Film building, 12th and Winter streets, Philadelphia, to D. Henwood, 1509 Wood street. Two stories and basement, brick and stone, 32x53 feet. For B. Alexander. Cost, $6,260. Permit granted.

Howell and Clark have sold the Strand theater on North Main street, Washington, to Allan T. Brandon, of Butler.

Zenith Motion Picture company, Philadelphia, to engage in the manufacture and sale of moving picture machines, supplies and all kinds of photographic films. Capital stock, $500,000. Joseph F. Curtin, Samuel B. Howard, S. A. Anderson, New York city.

To Meyer Teitelman, 1478 Mount Ephraim avenue, Philadelphia, picture theater, 1521-23 Mount Ephraim avenue. One story, brick, 34 by 100 feet.

John Kadow is having plans prepared for a motion picture theater to be located on Washington street, Monitowoc.

A fire occurred in the operator's booth of the Wisconsin moving picture theater, at Twenty-fourth and Walnut streets, Milwaukee. The damage done was the destruction of a two-reel film valued at two hundred dollars. Julius Louis is the proprietor of the theater.

Lander has a new motion picture show, the Iris, opened recently under the management of Searl and Allen.

South Dakota.

R. C. Gibbs will remodel the building which he now occupies on Dakota avenue, into a first class motion picture theater, to be known as the Strand.

Tennessee

Bristol's four moving picture houses and the Columbia theater have all been consolidated under one management and ownership. The Central Amusement Company, headed by L. Morse, proprietor of the Columbia theater, purchased all the houses. C. A. Goebel, who owned the Olympic, Fairyland and Eagle, sold all three to the new company, while manager Kidd, of the American, sold his house in like manner. The new company is capitalized at about $40,000. It is now conducting five different houses here. The Columbia is the only one that is equipped for handling traveling shows.

Avoca Motion Picture Corporation of Nashville, Tenn.; capital stock, $100,000. Incorporators: Harry F. Green, W. H. Hooser, John Trotwood Moore, A. P. Foster, Alf. H. Williams, J. C. Collins, L. M. Hitt, James M. Frank, Joseph W. Byrnes, Harry S. Stokes, E. H. Parker, Joe J. Roache, R. B. Herzer, T. T. McCarthey, A. C. Broadus, W. H. Wassman, Alfred Levine, E. E. French, S. F. Wilson, Joseph C. Higgins, W. C. Cherry, Tom C. Rye, Aaron Bergeda, F. A. Sullivan. To manufacture and sell motion films, stereopticon slides, etc., and engage in the general motion picture business.

The managers of the Dixie Theater company are preparing to move the fixtures of the Princess theater, in Paris, which is the property of the Dixie Theater company, to Humboldt, where they will operate a motion picture playhouse. Will Miller will go to Humboldt to take charge.

Texas.

John's theater, a moving picture show which was operated in Jacksonville for several years, but which has been closed for more than a year, is to be reopened within the next week by John Morris, Jr., who will be manager.

Utah.

Architect Randall L. Jones, of Cedar City, is completing plans and specifications for a new moving picture theater to be built at Kanab, at a cost of about $15,000. The theater will be one of the finest in the state outside of Salt Lake and Ogden.

Virginia

Norfolk is to have one of the largest and best equipped motion picture houses for colored people in the United States. The Lincoln theater will be the name and it will have a seating capacity of not less than 2,500. It will show the best pictures that can be obtained. The Lincoln theater will be located on the west side of Church street, between Queen and Nicholson streets, and will extend from Church street back to Lincoln street, a depth of 240 feet. It will be operated by the Lincoln Amusement company, Inc., one of the largest amusement corporations in Norfolk, and will cost, when completed, about $40,000.

Amendment: Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, Richmond, Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president, and Felis F. Feist, secretary, changing the redemption price of the preferred stock.

The Hocadian Realty Corporation are erecting a motion picture theater at 423-5 Granby street, Norfolk.

West Virginia.

Boehm and Fitzwater have opened a picture show in Ellendoro.

Wisconsin.

The American Photo Play corporation, Milwaukee, headed by J. B. Olinger, has retired from business.

Plans are being drawn for a modern new picture theater in Menasha. It will be managed by John Hrubesky. The building will be of concrete and terra cotta.

The Lay, Milwaukee's smallest theater, has been opened. It will be operated the same as a legitimate house, only two shows being given daily. With a seating capacity of four hundred and sixty it is planned to present the best photoplays.

Work on East Troy's new motion picture theater is progressing.

The Gem theater, in Portage, has been reopened under new management, T. H. Dailey being in charge.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by makes, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	10-11	Jealousy's Fools	Biograph	1,000
D	10-11	The Village Homestead	Essanay	3,000
D	10-11	Wilful Peggy	Kleine	2,000
D	10-11	The Dancing Doll	Kalem	3,000
D	10-11	The Emerald God	Lubin	1,000
D	10-11	The Sculptor's Model	Selig	2,000
T	10-11	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 81, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-11	The Lure of a Widow	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	Blow for Blow	Biograph	2,000
D	10-12	The Great Defeat	Essanay	2,000
C	10-12	Queering Cupid	Kalem	1,000
C	10-12	Romance of a Beanery	Lubin	1,000
D	10-12	The Foreman's Choice	Selig	1,000
C	10-12	Lillian's Husbands	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	10-13	Serge Panine	Biograph	3,000
C	10-13	The Widow's Breezy Suit	Edison	1,000
C	10-13	The Canimated Nooz Pictorial	Essanay	500
S	10-13	Canadian Rockies	Kalem	500
D	10-13	Voices in the Dark	Knickerbocker	2,000
D	10-13	The Dragon's Claw	Lubin	3,000
D	10-13	The Steadfast	Selig	2,000
C	10-13	On with the Dance	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	The Dawn of Courage	Biograph	1,000
C	10-14	All Stuck Up	Essanay	1,000
D	10-14	Nan o' the Backwoods	Lubin	3,000
D	10-14	Title not reported	Mina
T	10-14	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 82, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-14	The Third Party	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-15	Pippa Passes	Biograph	1,000
D	10-15	Gladiola	Edison	4,000
D	10-15	Broncho Billy's Parents	Essanay	1,000
D	10-15	The Law at Silver Camp	Kalem	2,000
D	10-15	Belle of Barnegat	Lubin	1,000
C	10-15	How John Came Home	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Inevitable	Biograph	1,000
D	10-16	The Little Saleslady	Edison	1,000
D	10-16	The Reaping	Essanay	3,000
D	10-16	A Test of Courage	Kalem	1,000
C	10-16	The Price of Pies	Lubin	1,000
D	10-16	In the Midst of African Wilds	Selig	1,000
D	10-16	The Ruling Power	Vitagraph	2,000

Monday.

D	10-18	Bad Money	Biograph	1,000
D	10-18	Inheritance	Essanay	3,000
D	10-18	The Village Outcast	Kleine	2,000
D	10-18	The Apaches of Paris	Kalem	4,000
D	10-18	The Lonely Fisherman	Lubin	1,000
D	10-18	The Brave Deserve the Fair	Selig	2,000
T	10-18	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 83, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-18	Quits	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	His Hand and Seal	Biograph	2,000
D	10-19	The Outer Edge	Essanay	3,000
C	10-19	Adam's Ancestors	Kalem	1,000
C	10-19	Cutting Down Expenses	Lubin	1,000
D	10-19	The Stagecoach Guard	Selig	1,000
D	10-19	The Gods Redeem	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

C	10-20	Cartoons in the Country	Edison	1,000
C	10-20	The Fable of "The Sorrows of the Unemployed and the Danger of Changing from Bell to Hard-old"	Essanay	1,000
D	10-20	The Man in Hiding	Kalem	2,000
D	10-20	Nell of the Dance Hall	Lubin	3,000
C	10-20	Brown's Summer Boarders	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-21	The Vulture	Biograph	1,000
C	10-21	Fun at a Ball Game	Essanay	1,000
D	10-21	When Youth Is Ambitious	Lubin	2,000
	10-21	Title not reported	Mina
C	10-21	Landing the Hose Reel (No. 1 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center Series)	Selig	3,000
T	10-21	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 84, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-21	On the Turn of a Card	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-22	Brute Force	Biograph	2,000
D	10-22	The Land of Adventure	Edison	3,000
D	10-22	Broncho Billy's Parents	Essanay	1,000
D	10-22	A Woman Reclaimed	Lubin	1,000
C	10-22	A Safe Investment	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	The Banker and the Thief	Biograph	1,000
D	10-23	The Broken Word	Edison	1,000
D	10-23	The spider	Essanay	2,000
D	10-23	A Mile a Minute	Kalem	1,000
C	10-23	Playing Horse	Lubin	1,000
D	10-13	In Leopard Land	Selig	1,000
D	10-23	A Woman in the Box	Vitagraph	1,000

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept. 20	Playing Dead	Vitagraph	5,000
Sept. 20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept. 27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept. 27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct. 4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct. 11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct. 11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
Oct. 18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
Oct. 18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct. 25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	10-11	Let There Be Light	American	2,000
C	10-11	Capers of College Chaps	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-11	Miss Trillies Big Feet	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	The Scoop at Belville	Thanhouser	1,000
C	10-12	Down on the Phony Farm	Thanhouser	1,000
S	10-12	See America First, No. 5	Gaumont	500
C	10-12	Keeping Up with the Jones'	Gaumont	500
C	10-12	Billie, the Hill Billy	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-13	The Bread Line	Reliance	3,000
C	10-13	Gold Bricking Cupid	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	Stanley's Close Call	Centaur	2,000
C	10-14	Bing Bang Brothers	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-14	Mutual Weekly, No. 41	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-15	Two Spot Joe	Mustang	2,000
D	10-15	Profit from Loss	American	1,000
C	10-15	Taking a Chance	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Long Arm of the Secret Service	Than-o-Play	3,000
C	10-16	Aided by the Movies	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-17	The Ever-Living Isle	Reliance	2,000
C	10-17	Cissy's Romeos	Casino	1,000
D	10-17	John T. Rocks and the Flivver	Thanhouser	1,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.

THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.

SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Monday.

D	10-18	The Campbells Are Coming	Broadway 4,000
C	10-18	A One-Cylinder Courtship	Nestor 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	The Fair God of Sun Island	Gold Seal 3,000
D	10-19	Lon of Lone Mountain	Rex 1,000
	10-19	No release this week	Imp

Wednesday.

	10-20	No release this week	Victor
C	10-20	Room and Board—A Dollar and a Half	L Ko 2,000
T	10-20	Animated Weekly No. 109	Universal 1,000

Thursday.

	10-21	No release this week	Laemmle
D	10-21	The Greater Courage	Big U 2,000
C	10-21	Prankful Ponies	Powers 500
E	10-21	Insect Oddities	Powers 500

Friday.

D	10-22	The Meddler	Imp 2,000
C	10-22	The Magic Bonbon	Victor 1,000
C	10-22	Almost a Knockout	Nestor 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	A Fight to a Finish	Bison 3,000
D	10-23	A Pure Gold Partner	Powers 1,000
C	10-23	Pete's Awful Crime	Joker 1,000

Sunday.

D	10-24	The Springtime of the Spirit	Rex 3,000
	10-24	No release this week	Laemmie
C	10-24	Poor But Dishonest	L Ko 1,000
D	10-24	The Broken Coin No. 18	Universal 2,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	10-11	The Man of Shame	Broadway 5,000
C	10-11	Some Fixer	Nestor 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-12	The Kiss of Dishonor	Gold Seal 2,000
C	10-12	The Healing of Mary Brown	Rex 1,000
C	10-12	Bashful Glen	Imp 1,000

Wednesday.

	10-13	No release this week	Victor
C	10-13	Under New Management	L-Ko 2,000
T	10-13	Animated Weekly, No. 188	Universal 1,000

Thursday.

D	10-14	The Girl of the Dance Hall	Laemmle 3,000
	10-14	No release this week	Big U
C	10-14	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "When the Wets Went Dry"	Powers 1,000

Friday.

	10-15	No release this week	Imp
D	10-15	A Kentucky Idyll	Victor 1,000
C	10-15	And the Best Man Won	Nestor 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-16	The Yellow Star	Bison 3,000
D	10-16	The Vengeance of Guido	Powers 1,000
C	10-16	No Babies Allowed	Joker 1,000

Sunday.

D	10-17	A Mother's Atonement	Rex 3,000
	10-17	No release this week	Laemmle
C	10-17	Does Flirting Pay?	L-Ko 1,000
D	10-17	The Broken Coin, No. 17	Universal 2,000

Monday.

D	10-18	The Blot on the Shield	American 2,000
C	10-18	Busted But Benevolent	Falstaff 1,000
C	10-18	Rip Van Winkle Badly Ripped	Novelty 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	The Spirit of Audubon	Thanhouser 2,000
S	10-19	See America First No. 6	Gaumont 500
C	10-19	Keeping up with the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	10-19	Alias James, Chauffeur	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-20	The Card Players	Rialto 3,000
C	10-20	You Can't Beat It	Novelty 1,000

Thursday.

D	10-21	Vindication	Centaur 2,000
C	10-21	Hattie, the Hair Heiress	Falstaff 1,000
T	10-21	Mutual Weekly No. 42	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	10-22	The Sheriff of Willow Creek	Mustang 2,000
D	10-22	Visitors and Visitees	American 1,000
C	10-22	The Little Detective	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	Buck's Lady Friend	Mustang 3,000
C	10-23	Deserted at the Auto	Beauty 1,000

Sunday.

D	10-24	The Penalty	Reliance 2,000
C	10-24	The Reformer	Casino 1,000
D	10-24	At the Patrician's Club	Thanhouser 1,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko	5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan	5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing	2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe	24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.	5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000

Associated Service.

Oct.	18	The Misleading Clue	Santa Barbara 2,000
		For the Honor of Bar X	Ramona 2,000
Oct.	18	Saved from Disgrace	Empire 2,000
Oct.	18	Double Reward	Navajo 2,000
Oct.	18	Mistakes Will Happen	Federal 1,000
Oct.	18	You Never Can Tell	Banner 1,000
Oct.	18	In Wrong	Atlas 1,000
Oct.	18	All on Account of a Doughnut	Alhambra 1,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison 7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison 5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine 5,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro 5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro 5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro 5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American 4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser 4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance 4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P. 4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American 5,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players 5,000
Oct.	7	A Girl of Yesterday	Famous Players 4,000
Oct.	11	The White Pearl	Famous Players 5,000
Oct.	14	Blackbirds	Lasky 5,000
Oct.	18	The Chorus Lady	Lasky

Pathe.

Released Week of

Oct	4	New Adventures of Wallingford	Pathe 2,000
Oct.	4	Fresh From the Farm	Phunphilms 1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 80	Pathe 1,000
Oct.	4	Pathe Daily News, No. 81	Pathe 1,000
Oct.	4	Picturesque Zeeland (Holland)	Photocolor 500
Oct.	4	Altar of Heaven (Pekin, China)	Globe 500
Oct.	4	Neal of the Navy, No. 6	Panama 2,000
Oct.	4	The Closing Net	Gold Rooster 5,000
Oct.	4	Pretty Rough on Aunty	Starlight 1,000
Oct.	11	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 2	Pathe 2,000
Oct.	11	When Mice Make Merry	Pathe 500
Oct.	11	An Intimate Study of Birds	Pathe 500
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 82	Pathe 1,000
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 83	Pathe 500
Oct.	11	Neal of the Navy, No. 7	Panama 2,000
Oct.	11	John Glayde's Honor	Gold Rooster 5,000
Oct.	11	Wilful Wallops for Wealth	Starlight 1,000
Oct.	18	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 3	Pathe 2,000
Oct.	18	Geithorn, the Rustic Venice	Photocolor 500
Oct.	18	How Winter Flowers Bloom	Globe 500
Oct.	18	Counsel for the Defense	Balboa 3,000
Oct.	18	Pathe News No. 84	Pathe 1,000
Oct.	18	Pathe News No. 85	Pathe 1,000
Oct.	18	Neal of the Navy No. 8	Panama 2,000
Oct.	18	The Sun Worshippers	Panama 2,000
Oct.	18	An Affair of Three Nations	Gold Rooster 5,000
Oct.	18	Fatty's Fatal Fun	Starlight 1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Oct.	24	The Iron Strain	Triangle Kay Bee 6,000
Oct.	24	The Lamb	Fine Arts 5,000
Oct.	24	My Valet	Triangle Keystone 3,000
Oct.	24	A Gay Old Knight	Triangle Keystone 2,000
Oct.	31	Old Heidelberg	Fine Arts 5,000
Oct.	31	The Coward	Triangle Kay Bee 5,000
Oct.	31	Stolen Magic	Triangle Keystone 2,000
Oct.	31	The Favorite Fool	Triangle Keystone 2,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert
Oct.	3	The Price	Triumph
Oct.	10	The Family Cupboard	Brady
Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable
Oct.	17	The Code of the Mountains	Shubert
Oct.	24	Salvation Nell	California

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

Mutual Program

The Card Players—(Three Reels)—Gaumont.—William Roselle featured as Carl Fremont, whose passion for card playing is inherited. To shield his mother, who has taken money from her husband's safe, Carl takes the blame. His father orders him out of the house. A year later he is a wanderer of the streets, his craving for gambling stronger than ever. His college chum, Zimar, returns from India, where has has been studying mysticism. With Carl's former fiancee he accidentally meets his old friend. They take him to his father's house. By showing Carl, in a hypnotic trance, a "gambler's hell," Zimar cures Carl of his desire for card playing. After proving himself worthy, Carl and Nita are married. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Seeing America First—(Split Reel)—Gaumont—October 2.—Interesting sections of New York below twenty-third street are pictured in the fourth of the Gaumont split-reel scenic releases of the "Seeing America First" series. Harry Palmer's clever cartoons, picturizing the Jones family in the series, "Keeping Up With the Joneses," fills the second part of the reel.

The Corsican Brothers Up to Date—Novelty—October 4.—The Corsican brothers, Nap and Bony, are both in love with the count's daughter. The count does not approve of Nap, and sends his soul to Elysian. To dispose of the second Corsican, the count arranges for a duel with him in the woods. But the fat brother's spirit hovers near and keeps the count from laying his brother cold. The count finds that it is useless to oppose the soul of Nap, so gives up, while Nap's spirit, having saved Bony from destruction, ascends on high amidst the strains of halleluiah music.

Busted But Benevolent—October 8.—When the girls at the swell seashore hotel see blazoned upon the register the names, "Percival Von Der Hyde" and "Alfred Astorbilt," they believe that distinguished visitors have arrived. In reality, however, these two work in a dry goods store, and have a bank roll of $30 between them. When the bill of $374 is handed out to them, they realize that something must be done at once. But the clever little game that they brew up does not work upon the sympathies of the guests, as was expected. The main reason for this is the interference of two tramps who carry off the honors, and some money, too. The would-be aristocrats are finally forced to work out their bill as waiters.

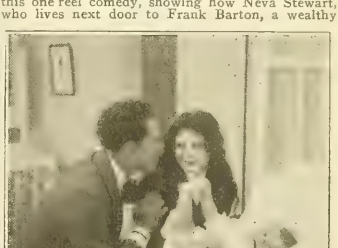
A Corner in Cats—Casino—October 10.—Cissy and Jerry come to a small town and hang out a sign saying that cash will be paid for every cat delivered to them. All kinds of felines are brought in, for which they pay fifty cents a head. Meanwhile the wily pair have sent to the city for 600 rats. These are uncrated at night and turned loose in the town. Immediately cats are in great demand. Cissy and Jerry announce that they will furnish choice mousers at fifteen dollars apiece, and ordinary cats at ten dollars. They do a big business, and that night leave town. Coming across a stray cat, they take him along as mascot and christen the animal "Cash."

Capers of College Chaps—Falstaff—October 11.—A comedy which concerns the adventures of the two "sleepy head" members of a college glee club; showing how they are marooned in a town without any money, and obtain work as musicians in a dance hall. When the wedding of one of the chaps is about to take place, the crank dance-hall reformer comes to the wedding and bids fair to give the boys' secret away, but his old enemy, the dance-hall "bouncer," prevents this, and the marriage takes place.

Miss Trillie's Big Feet—Novelty—October 11. Miss Trillie is beautiful to look upon, but she is afflicted with big feet. Her sweetheart, Billee, gives a reception, and Svengali, a musician and hypnotist, is among the guests. During the festivities, Miss Trillie stubs her bare toe and runs a splinter into it. As little Billee cannot get it out, Svengali brings his mesmeric powers to bear upon the murderous sliver and it is instantly extracted. Svengali thinks that Trillie should be a prima donna, and works his spells upon her. Incidentally, he fascinates half a dozen other people. Taffy, the Laird, and Billee find the girl in a trance, and consternation reigns. But the lover finally revives his beloved with ice cream as the restorative.

The Scoop at Belleville—(Two Reels)—Thanhouser—October 12.—A pretty girl reporter is sent to review a young millionaire, and the next day, the latter is quite jarred when he reads a newspaper article, criticizing him in a semi-humorous manner, and remarking that, while he pities the poor, still he himself could not earn a dollar a day if thrown upon his own resources. He calls up the reporter and tells her emphatically that he will prove to her that he can earn his own living. He disappears and a year passes without news of the missing millionaire. Then in the hour of need the girl unexpectedly comes upon the young man, who is now a telegraph lineman. The wealthy lineman cuts into the wire with pocket kit and telegraphs the girl's story to her newspaper, thus helping her to secure the "scoop." "I said I would work for a year," he remarks, "and my time is up tomorrow. Won't you marry me and help me spend that ten million?" And "Yes" is the forthcoming answer.

Bing-Bang Brothers—Falstaff—October 14.—The Bing-Bang brothers, actors, leave for the backwoods in order to fill an engagement. On arriving at Mayville, they discover that the Carnival Company has failed, and that their services are not wanted. To defray expenses, Bang starts out for New York as baggage in a large hamper. The hamper is dumped off the train at a junction half way to New York, and while waiting there, Bangs hears a conversation of a compromising nature between a vaudeville agent, who had formerly rejected his act, and a young woman. The agent's wife understands that he is on a business trip. Later, the brothers enter the agent's office and enact a replica of his love scene with the young woman. The two are quite happy when the agent sends them away to Australia for a year.



Mutual Weekly No. 41—Mutual—October 14.—Results of hurricane which hit the Gulf States; returning Thomas Osborne, warden of Sing Sing; South Shore Country Club carnival at Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Dumba leaves for home; scene at the Red Sox and Phillies baseball game; sending of the doves of peace from the dome of the capitol at Washington bearing messages to the rulers of the nations; first Naval Advisory Board visits the White House.

John T. Rocks and the Flivver—Thanhouser—October 17.—The "Flivver" is strictly a "poor man's car," but it outdoes the performance of other expensive cars. The advantage of having the endorsement of a prominent and wealthy citizen is thoroughly appreciated by the "Flivver" manufacturers. John T. Rocks has been approached by clever representatives of the company, but he declared that he never had ridden in an automobile, and never could. The company has a rule that if any of their employees getting a salary of less than $1,000 marry, they shall be promptly discharged. Therefore, the young bridegroom clerk makes an agreement with his employers that if he gets John T. Rocks to ride in a "Flivver" he will be given the exalted position of salesman, and retained by the company. By clever strategy he snaps John T.'s picture riding in a "Flivver" and the ad soon appears in the newspapers. The millionaire, admiring the man's nerve, later makes him his secretary.

The Blot on the Shield—(Two Reels)—American—October 18.—Dick Le Reno, Vivian Rich, and Walter Spencer, are featured in this story, that concerns William Copeland, who, while a homeless wanderer, becomes a groom on the place of Col. Taliaferro in Kentucky. After a murder results, and suspicion is cast upon Copeland, Sally, the colonel's daughter, who loves him, hides the young man in her room when the sheriff calls. After he is discovered and arrested, the colonel, who believes his daughter compromised, suggests that she commit suicide to preserve the family honor, but Copeland is proved innocent of the murder and Sally's honor unstained, as the young people happily marry. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Rip Van Winkle Badly Ripped—Novelty—October 18.—Rip Van Winkle has a fortune to leave to his daughter. The burgomeister hears of it and decides that Dora Van Winkle shall marry his son, Piet. He takes Rip into custody and feeds him on salt herring, until he has worked up for the man a terrible thirst. The burgomeister refuses to give Rip anything to drink until he has signed a paper saying that his daughter shall marry Piet. The deed completed, Rip is loosed. He drinks the river dry. Intoxicated by the draught, he wanders up into the mountains with his faithful dog, and they fall asleep. When he awakes, his beard is four feet long, and the dog is three times the size he was before they climbed the mountain. Rip rushes back to town, upsetting everybody because of his hairy appearance. But he is in time to foil the burgomeister's plot, and Dora is given to the man she adores.

Alias James—Chauffeur—Beauty—October 19.—Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage are featured in this one reel comedy, showing how Neva Stewart, who lives next door to Frank Barton, a wealthy bachelor, supposed to be a woman-hater, is able, by dressing in men's clothes, and securing employment as Barton's chauffeur, to prove not alone that he is not a woman-hater, but also that she loves him. Barton, who penetrates the girl's disguise, finally marries her. N. G. C.

The Spirit of Audubon—(Two Reels)—Thanhouser—October 19.—Helen Badgley and Leland Benham as the children. Near a widow and her little daughter lives a widower and his boy. The widower thinks that whatever his neighbor does is about right, but has never paid much attention to her Audubon theories. The little girl has had instilled into her a love for the helpless feathered creatures, and when she sees her little playmate try to rob a nest, she runs for her mother. Naturally the youngsters quarrel and the boy says that he will have nothing to do with a tattle-tale. That night both children have the same dream. Through one country after another they wander,

MINA COMEDIES
SAFETY FIRST—OR YOU'LL DIE LAUGHING AT 'EM!
RELEASED EVERY THURSDAY ON THE GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address

Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

hunting for strange and beautiful birds, and, as the birds cannot see them, they have a delightful time noting their habits. At the conclusion of the dream, the little boy forms new resolutions, apologizes to his little friend, becomes a member of the Audubon Society, and is the champion of the birds henceforth.

You Can't Beat It—NOVELTY—OCTOBER 20.—Bill Pike telephones his wife that he has missed the 5:15, but will get the 11 o'clock express. Then Pike returns to his game of Poker. Mrs. Pike receives a telegram from her brother, informing her that he will be there at 11:30, and expressing pleasure at the prospect of meeting Dill's husband. The latter and his friends come out of the hotel a trifle "lit up," and a sleeping cabby attracts their sense of humor. Bill gets into the cabby's regalia, and drives off at a smart pace. Brother Steve, coming from the station, hails Pike and his equipage. Although confused, Pike drives him to his home. A thief, with his suitcase filled with the family silver, escapes from the house and jumps into the cab, after Steve leaves it. A mounted policeman at last rounds up the robber. Pike, thoroughly sobered, returns the vehicle to the cabby and returns to his home. The interior of his suitcase reveals the family silver. "Yes, a hard battle, but I got it," admits Pike, secretly realizing that the thief must have run off with the wrong bag.

Visitors and Visitees—AMERICAN—OCTOBER 22.—Winifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen, Lizette Thorne, Frank Thorne, and George Wield have the leads in this one-reel comedy, depicting the adventures of two business men in a city, who while intoxicated, help a burglar rob them, much to the amazement of their wives, when the truth is discovered. N. G. C.

The Little Detective—CUB—OCTOBER 22.—Featuring George Ovey. Goldie Goodrich suggests that her two admirers, Jerry and Hank, take the place of two detectives whom her father has sent for to guard his house. Hank, seeing how easy it is to rob the house, succumbs to temptation and gets Bill, a tough customer, to play burglar. That night a real burglar breaks into the house and Jerry decides to prove himself a hero. However, he is collared as the burglar and when the real burglar is caught Mr. Goodrich wishes to reward Jerry for keeping guard over his house. Jerry asks for the hand of Goldie and Mr. Goodrich gives his consent, but suggests that Jerry first consult Jack, Goldie's husband.

Deserted at the Auto—BEAUTY—OCTOBER 23.—John Sheehan and Carol Holloway are cast in the leading roles of this thoroughly funny burlesque on modern weddings. Miss Holloway makes a bewitching bride, and Sheehan a most unhappy groom. Supposed friends of the groom kidnap him as he is about to start to the depot with his bride. The girl disgustedly returns to her home and refuses to have anything more to do with the man she married, since she believes he wilfully deserted her at the auto. Eventually a reconciliation occurs, and the two resume their honeymoon. N. G. C.

Buck's Lady Friend—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG—OCTOBER 23.—This second of the series of Buck Parvin stories, adapted from the Van Loan series that ran in the Saturday Evening Post, is far funnier than was the first offering. It particularly features Art Acord, Sylvia Ashton, and an unnamed player who enacts the role of the property man at the Titan studios. A complete review of the picture will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 81—OCTOBER 11.—Rescue squad complete in demonstration at Mines Week at Panama Exposition; J. A. Whitlesey, Civil War veteran, wigwags peace dispatch from dome of nation's capitol at Washington, D. C.; hull of submarine F-4 placed in dry dock after being raised and lashed to pontoons; Mayor James Rolph, Jr., wins office at primary election, San Francisco, Calif.; 60,000,000 crop of navy beans is harvested, Los Angeles, Calif.; sailors from Pacific reserve fleet at Panama-Pacific Exposition, Calif.; Indiana is asked to celebrate birthday of poet James Whitcomb Riley in proclamation of Governor Ralston; Greece calls sailors of naval base to join great war; President Wilson announces engagement to wed Mrs. Norman Galt; the President and Mrs. Galt attend baseball game at Washington, D. C.

Alone in the City of Sighs and Tears—MINA—OCTOBER 14.—Russ is in love with Rena when along comes Harry Fisher, a sleek city chap. He lures her to the city of sighs and tears with the promise of marriage. Russ discovers a letter to the villain from his city friend that the villain should hurry with his work as they are in urgent need of a blonde. Russ and Old Si, the girl's father, follow in hot pursuit to the great city. Finding themselves out of place, the two rubes take a speed cocktail and the result is worth seeing.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 82—HEARST-SELIG—OCTOBER 14.—Naval Advisory Board visits President Wilson at the White House; prosperity week at Kalamazoo, Mich.; U. S. soldiers give horsemanship exhibition at Panama Pacific Exposition; Pennsylvania State Fire Convention held at Philadelphia, Pa.; Bersaglieri, famous Italian infantry advance toward foe; fashions by Lady Duff Gordon; K-type submarines sent to Honolulu; President Wilson and his fiancee, Mrs. Norman Galt, see the Red Sox defeat Phillies at Philadelphia in second game of world's series.

The Lonely Fisherman—LUBIN—OCTOBER 18.—Featuring Melvin Mayo, Dorothy Barrett and Mary Moreley. Job Morris, a hunchback, after fathering a little waif who was washed ashore, feels his love grow for her until she is the only thing in life for him, and he hopes that some day she will marry him. However, a youth appears, and the girl falls in love with him, and Job, wild with jealousy and passion, upbraids them for being false. Later the girl is cast upon the rocks by the waves and is found by Job, who carries her to the arms of her young sweetheart.

Bad Money—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 18.—Featuring Claire McDowell and Alan Hale. The girl cashier of a restaurant is offered a job in a cleaning and dyeing establishment, which is a counterfeiter's blind. At the end of the week she draws her wages and a secret service agent secures a spurious coin after she has passed it and follows her. He takes a suit of clothes to the fake dyeing establishment as an excuse and here he is bound and put into an empty room. Th girl, having discovered the counterfeiting plant, is locked in another room and by starting a false alarm she effects her escape and frees the prisoner. They are recaptured, however, but at this time the agent's comrades arrive and the gang are captured after a sensational fight.

The Brave Deserve the Fair—(Two Reels)—Selig—October 18.—The story tells of the love of Tom Martin and Leo Binnis for one Vicky Johnson. To test their love for her the girl tells the physician to explain to the boys that she has been injured and disfigured for life. Tom goes to see the girl, while Binnis shows that he could not love her now, and in this way Tom is made happy. For a longer review see page 813 of last issue. J. C. G.

The Apaches of Paris—(Four Reels)—Kalem—October 18.—Featuring Joseph Smith and Laura Hamilton. Dorcelle manages to secure all the mail sent to Paula, an American girl, and she finally falls a victim to the scoundrel's wiles. Marjorie, Paula's sister, unexpectedly comes to Paris and when she finds out the life her sister is living Paula is half crazed and visits a cafe where she witnesses a performance of the "Dance of the Apaches." During Paula's absence Darcelle enters her apartments and Marjorie, confronted by the man, mortally wounds herself to escape him, and when her sister returns the dying girl tells her story to Paula, and Darcelle, cornered in Paula's apartment, leaps from a window and is killed, and Tom Austin, a young American artist, learns Paula's story and forgives her.

Quits — Vitagraph — October 18. — Featuring Wally Van and Nitra Frazer. Billy goes out into the country and there goes into partnership with Madge, who is now owner of the farm. He makes such a good impression on his neighbors that they elect him mayor and on the strength of this he proposes to Madge. His father hearing of this starts out to prevent the nuptials. He is arrested for speeding and brought to trial before Billy, who sends him to the cooler and the father later acknowledges his son has made good and gives him his blessing.

Inheritance — (Three Reels)—Essanay—October 18.—Ruth Stonehouse and Bryant Washburn featured. Alice is forced to accept a position as a cashier in a restaurant. Later she meets James Everett and they become infatuated and are married. His mother is ill and the physician tells him he must not make known his marriage to her, so the son accompanies his mother abroad, leaving his wife behind. His friend, Maxwell, forces his attentions upon Alice and convinces her that Everett no longer cares for her. William Maxwell's fiancee follows him to Alice's house and there kills him. Alice is arrested for the murder. Everett arrives home just when she is convicted, and then Annette, overcome with remorse, confesses, but when friends rush to Alice's bedside they find her dead from the shock.

His Hand and Seal—(Two Reels)—Biograph—October 19.—Featuring Vera Sisson, Madge Kirby and a strong cast. Albert Curwood disinherits his dissolute son, Ed, and summons Weatherby, his lawyer, to make a change in his will. He leaves his property to his niece, Isabel. Weatherby uses some of the money to make a kill in the market and by the time Isabel's twenty-first birthday arrives the estate has shrunk to nothing. He attends her birthday reception and makes an appointment for the next day at his office. Friends present at the reception are Ed Curwood, whom the girl loves, and Count Kavroff, who gives Isabel a signet ring and asks her to have it made to fit her sister Grace's finger. The girl goes shopping the next day and meets Ed Curwood, giving him her brooch to pawn until she gets her inheritance. Later her body is found in a lonely part of the park. After much consternation, Weatherby is suspected because of a thumb print, and later he confesses that he had killed Isabel and attempted to cast suspicion on the count, whose ring he had found in her vanity case.

The Outer Edge—(Three Reels)—Essanay—October 19.—Featuring Henry B. Walthall and Warda Howard. A physician is dragged down to the depths by the drug habit, losing position and wealth. After pawning every available possession except a revolver to satisfy his craving for the drug, he returns to his cheap lodging house to end his life. Half stupefied, he gets into the wrong room, where he finds a woman and daughter almost starved. He takes his revolver and pawns it to buy food for them. His own act of kindness gives him a new view of life and he struggles to break his habit. Many times he almost falls again, but is aided by a nurse whom he had known years before. Finally he throws off the yoke altogether and wins back to manhood and the love of a woman.

Adam's Ancestors—Kalem—October 19.—Featuring Bud Duncan, Rube Miller and Ethel Teare. Peter, commissioned to illustrate a magazine story, "Adam's Ancestors," advertises for two male models, and Bud and his pal get the jobs and are dressed in skins when one Quince arrives to visit his son. He sees Bud and Dud, who have been the cause of some recent difficulty, and the two make their getaway by using their prehistoric clubs. Later they are imprisoned with Long John, a thief, and start to make their escape, but when they see a revolver in the hand of the desk sergeant they return to their cell, raise their clubs and bring them down upon each other's heads and drift into dreamland.

Cutting Down Expenses—Lubin—October 19.—Featuring David L. Lon, Mary Charleson and Jack Delson. John Wilson is advised to purchase two cut-rate tickets by which he could save $40.00. He buys a Pullman ticket for himself and wife, and when they arrive at the train and are ushered to their seats they discover that the names on their tickets read Mary Ann Ohoolahan and Quickelfritsheim and realize they are in an awful predicament. John tells his wife they will have to be strangers and he rushes to the smoking car and tells the conductor he forgot to get a ticket. He is forced to stay up all night. He tries to talk to his wife, but each time the porter interrupts him and at last the young man in the upper berth orders him away. The next morning they hurry to a hotel and are assigned to a room where the young man comes in and sees them and tells the hotel clerk that they are not married. However, John pulls out the certificate of marriage and kicks the other man out of their room.

The Stage Coach Guard—Selig—October 19.—Jack, the stage coach driver, finds Tom, the coach guard, in a saloon and helps him whip several of the cowboys who are there. One of the cowboys vows vengeance and plans to hold up the stage coach, in which are four passengers, including Vicky, a young good-looking girl, with whom Tom falls in love. When the coach is held up, Tom shoots and kills two of the outlaws, while the rest disperse, and later Vicky shows that she admires the dashing coach guard who has saved her from the outlaws.

The Gods Redeem—(Two Reels)—Vitagraph—October 19.—Featuring Maurice Costello, Leah Baird, Van Dyke Brooke and Mary Maurice. Slippery Tom and Nell, the pickpocket, deciding life is no longer worth living, approach the high bridge, where Tom sees the girl take a fatal leap. He manages to save her life and after bringing her to shore each learns the other's story. They go into the country where Nell nurses a small pox patient, and Tom leaves, promising to return when he has made good. It is a long five years before Tom feels he has made good sufficiently to claim Nell for his wife, but their meeting and reunion more than repays both for their long separation.

Cartoons in the Country—Edison—October 20. Raoul Barre's animated cartoons. The star boarder uses the animated "grouch chaser" to hold the attention of the boarding house mistress while he informs an unattractive woman, who seeks lodging, that there are no rooms vacant. As it happens, he made a mistake, for the woman has a very charming sister who was the prospective fellow boarder.

The Fable of the Sorrows of the Unemployed and the Danger of Changing from Bill to Harold—Essanay—October 20.—In a certain western town, an early settler had cabbaged all the corner lots and main street frontage. His son, William H., married Leonora ———, who was of nice family, though they owed money. After "Old Badger" Jimpson had changed his address to "over there," the large end of the scads went to William H., and he changed his name to "W.

MINA COMEDIES
THE FUN FILMS
RELEASED EVERY THURSDAY ON THE GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

Harold." Harold began to find $100 in his clothes when he was looking for a card. This vexed him so he invested in bonds. The next year they threw up a shack with onyx foundation, overlooking the sea. Leonora gave a few dog parties, and one for a prince, but these gayeties petered out. At last, becoming desperate, she fell in love with her husband, which gave rise to much scandal, and they had to go abroad to live it down. Moral: Beware of government bonds.

When Snakeville Struck Oil—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 20.—Featuring Harry Todd, Victor Potel, Robert McKenzie and Margaret Joslin. Simon Slick arrives in Snakeville and buys up all the choice lots in town. That night he and his accomplice attach a hose to a tank car and pipe gasoline to one of his newly acquired lots. Next morning the inhabitants of Snakeville read of how Simon Slick had discovered oil in their town and a mad rush is made to buy up real estate. About this time Slippery Slim discovers the hose and exposes the land sharper. Simon Slick flees, with the entire population of Snakeville in pursuit. He takes refuge in the tank car. Slippery Slim drops a match into the oil tank and Mr. Slick finds himself far out of reach of his pursuers.

The Man in Hiding—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—OCTOBER 20.—Featuring Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde. Tom Ingraham, rescued from the clutches of Lina, an adventuress, marries Ruth and, later he again meets Lina and is persuaded to desert his wife. Years later Ruth accepts a position in the home of Marston, a widower, and when he urges her to marry him she refuses, telling him her story. Tom, after a quarrel with Lina, in which she is accidentally shot, escapes and ducks into the Marston home, where he comes face to face with Ruth and hides him in a closet. Marston returns and discovers the man in hiding, and when Ruth reveals his identity he allows him to leave the house. However, the man walks into the hands of an officer and taking Ruth in his arms Marston again asks her to marry him.

Nell of the Dance Hall—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—OCTOBER 20.—Featuring Edith Sterling, L. C. Shumway and George Routh. Nell, a dance hall girl, under the influence of Ben Keath, escapes to the minister's home one night where she promises never to return to the old life. Keats, determined to get her back, tells the church trustees of Nell's history and they order the Rev. Justine to give her up. Nell overhears the promise of the minister to do so, and leaves, leaving an explanatory note. Later when the minister is stricken with fever, Nell rushes to his bedside, and when the trustees hear of this the Rev. Justine is expelled from the church. The minister is ordered into the mountains, and Nell, as a last resort, returns to the dance hall to get money with which to send him away. Restored to health, the minister returns, and when he learns of Nell's sacrifice he leads her to a newer and better life as his wife. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Brown's Summer Boarders—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 20.—Featuring Jay Dwiggins, Arline Pretty and a comedy cast. Sam Brown, a close-fisted bachelor, marries Edith, and begins to worry over her extravagance. He decides he will take in boarders to make all the improvements pay for themselves and a few days later Will and Harry apply for and secure board at the house. After paying very much attention to Edith and finally they attempt to teach her how to swim. Their actions make Sam want to thrash them, but Edith introduces them as her brothers, Will and Harry.

The Vulture—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 21.—Featuring Augusta Anderson and Charles Perley. When Lady Edith, the wife of Sir James, is introduced to Miss Harleigh, an actress, she says, "I do not wish to meet this actress, 'The Vulture.'" Sir James becomes infatuated by the Vulture and haunts her dressing room and lavishes gifts of jewelry upon her. When Lady Edith, smothering her pride, calls on the Vulture, she is received coldly. Sir James and Lady Edith are on the brink of ruin when she receives a notice that the supposedly worthless estate of an uncle has proven valuable. Time passes and at another reception Lady Edith again snubs the Vulture and the host, Mr. Bradford, publicly denounces her, declaring that the supposed legacy from her uncle's estate was from the woman she calls the Vulture.

When Youth Is Ambitious—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—OCTOBER 21.—A strong cast featured. John Forbes jilts Mary Blake and marries Jennie Jeffreys, his employer's daughter. Mary marries and in later years her daughter Nanette becomes stenographer in the plant of Jeffreys and Forbes, where she meets the son of her mother's old-time sweetheart. Nanette takes Philip to her home and Mary realizes the similarity of her daughter's love affair and hers, leaves to take Nanette from the factory. John Forbes, his wife being dead, is also in love with Nanette, and is making love to her when her mother arrives. Later Mary and John comfort one another and the young man claims his love for Nanette and takes the bewildered girl away.

Beached and Bleached—MINA—OCTOBER 21.—The new stenographer's class doesn't escape the notice of her boss. He showers her with attentions and asks her out to the beach. When Sunday comes it is a perfect day and she enters into the spirit of everything and he has things all his own way. She even ignores the glances of other men and when a certain one gets too fresh he takes a beating at the hands of the boss. Just then the boss wakes up. It was only a dream and when Sunday comes around and he takes her to the bench—Oh! what a difference. Nobody loves a fat boss.

On the Turn of a Card—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 21.—Featuring Harry Morey, Garry McGarry, Carolyn Birch and Louise Beaudet. John Granger immediately after his marriage to Enid becomes aware of her dislike to him and announces that they shall be husband and wife in name only. Their wedding had been the result of the cutting of cards to decide whether he would cancel the debts she owed him or she marry him. Later Enid loves her husband, but conceals her affection, and Granger, seeing Gerald, an old friend of Enid's making love to her, challenges the young man to a duel. However, the girl tells him it is he she loves and all ends happily.

Brute Force—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH RE-ISSUE—OCTOBER 22.—Featuring Robert Harron and Mae Marsh. The young man drains his first cocktail to the dregs and falls asleep over the tale of "Weakhands and Lilywhite." He dreams he is Weakhands and with Lilywhite and his band is living peacefully when Moneywalk invades their territory. They are beaten off, but appropriating Weakhands' idea of clubs and by their superior force they abduct the women, Lilywhite included. Weakhands makes another invention, that of a bow and arrow and the weapon does such terrible execution among Moneywalk's men that Lilywhite is rescued and her companions and Weakhands is again acclaimed a hero.

A Woman Reclaimed—LUBIN—OCTOBER 22.—Featuring a strong cast. Rose Carson is known as "The Queen of Diamonds," and young Larry Moran, a young central office detective, falls in love with her. Information is brought to the chief that Rose is to crack a crib that night of a wealthy uptown residence and the chief assigns Larry to make the pinch alone. She walks into the trap and the young man is about to release her when she deals him a blow on the head and he sinks unconscious to the floor. She then discovers that she had been betrayed by Spanish Ed and also that the young detective loves her. When the chief finds Larry alone, the loot and the lady missing, Larry realizes there is nothing to do but to leave the service. Who has been hiding comes out and quickly snaps the handcuffs on her wrists and returns the loot. Sometime later the chief realizes that "The Queen of Diamonds" has reformed and releases her, and later she and Larry are happy in each other's love.

A Safe Investment—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 22.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Charley Sharp, with the aid of two pals, starts the "Gee Whiz Mining Company" and dividends pay so well that Sharp brings home his share and gives it to his wife to keep for him. She does not know anything about the business her husband is in and invests all of his money in the Gee Whiz mining stocks. Meanwhile the secret service people have been busy and raid the Gee Whiz office. Sharp escapes the clutches of the law and rushes home and finds the awful mistake his wife had made.

The Banker and the Thief—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 23.—Featuring Herbert Barrington, Hector V. Sarno and Isabel Rea. The banker, convinced that he faces imprisonment because he has taken the unsecured notes of a friend, determines to kill himself, but is interrupted by the entrance of a female burglar who declares she stole that she might send her ailing husband to the country. The banker, incredulous, offers her $500 if she will prove her love by drinking poison, and she consents, but drinks only water. Convinced at last he sends her home rejoicing to her husband, and her daring act has saved him. The telephone bell rings and he is told that the matter has been cleared up.

The Broken Word—EDISON—OCTOBER 23.—The cast includes Herbert Prior, Yale Benner and Grace Williams. Bob Clayton, falsely accused of a murder, escapes from the jail. He is aided by a chance acquaintance. Later the two friends work a claim on partnership. They meet Molly Pierson, the school teacher. She favors Bob, and the jealous Dixon reminds him that he is a fugitive from justice, warning him to stop his attentions to the school teacher. Bob promises to leave the town if Dixon will give him his word that he will have nothing more to do with certain questionable women. Later Bob is told that Dixon has not kept his word. He returns to the town and denounces Dixon. The latter tells what he knows about Bob. Molly and Bob cross the Mexican border to safety from the sheriff, and marry.

A Mile a Minute—KALEM—OCTOBER 23.—(An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series.) A trunk is stolen by Hume and Frintz and thrown into one of the box cars. Later when the box car is set at Helen's station the girl discovers its contents and makes a report to Deering, a railroad detective. He discovers the hiding place of the crooks, but he is knocked unconscious by them and placed upon the tracks, where his life is saved by Helen. The girl sees Frintz and his pals board an outgoing freight and she manages to swing aboard the last car, climb to the top and run forward. The yeggmen cut the train in two and by a daring leap the girl telegrapher manages to make the front section. She turns the tables on the thieves, runs the broken section to where the rest of the train has been abandoned and the crooks are made prisoners.

Playing Horse—LUBIN—OCTOBER 23.—Featuring Billy Reeves and Mae Hotely. Billy, when his wedding day approaches, is not brave enough to marry Betsy, and later he is hired by Hyppolite, the hypnotist, to be a horse, as the fake subjects are called, and Dolly, an attractive young woman, is also a horse. Finally Hyppolite is kicked out and Billy puts on a beard and turns hypnotist himself. However, Hyppolite comes across Betsy mooning over Billy's picture and tells her where Billy is. That night there are two in the audience who take an unusual interest in the performance and the entire audience feels their money's worth has been given.

In Leopard Land—SELIG—OCTOBER 23.—John Leiber, his wife and child are happy in their jungle home. The girl is left home alone one day and when her father arrives in the jungle he discovers that he has left his cartridge belt at home. He is attacked by a ferocious leopard and his wife, who is on her way with the cartridge belt, hears his cries and fires at the leopard, frightening it away. The animal, driven from the jungle, approaches John's home, and later John and his wife arrive just in time to scare the animal away. His wife, alarmed at John's wounds, goes to the settlement for the doctor, riding an elephant for that purpose, and ever after that the elephant is a pet of the Leiber family and is most popular with little Fritzi.

The Ruling Power—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 23.—Featuring Edith Storey, James Morrison, Leah Baird, and a strong cast. Hugh Williams is disinherited by marrying Rose, a seamstress, and twenty years later with their daughter, Martha, the couple are forced to move to the tenement district. Hugh dies and his father, now a politician, meets and takes a liking to Martha. An East Side sport makes trouble for Rose and her daughter, and Rose goes to Mr. Williams, asking him to suppress the dance halls and gardens. She denounces him when he refuses and shows him that if the women had the vote in his state they could clean out such places. Later Williams lends his influence to women's suffrage, which wins, and a reunion of the whole family follows.

The Spider—(TWO REELS)—OCTOBER 23.—John Lorenz and Ruth Stonehouse featured in a story of a country girl who meets a wealthy old bachelor and goes to his apartments with him, where they are followed by John Buckland, her lover from the country. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Universal Program

Universal Animated Weekly No. 188—UNIVERSAL—OCTOBER 13.—Historical pageant is feature of Ak-Sar-Ben flower carnival, Omaha, Neb.; wreckage left by devastating hurricane that swept Gulf cities and caused loss of over 600 people at New Orleans, La.; officers of Motion Picture Board of Trade gather for first meeting in New York City; fire fighters on review at Philadelphia, Pa.; Thomas A. Edison heads first meeting of United States scientists who plan to develop most efficient navy at Washington, D. C.; Constantin Dumba and his wife leave for home; members of famous Crocker Brigade meet after half century, Des Moines, Ia.; Astor cup race held at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

A Mother's Atonement—(THREE REELS)—REX—OCTOBER 17.—Old Ben Morrison and his daughter, Jen, live on a rocky island. Jen's mother had run away with Newton, a city chap, while she was yet a baby. Jasper Crane bargains with Morrison for the possession of his daughter, but Jen swims to the mainland and seeks protection from Mrs. Hilton and her daughter, Dorothy, members of a camping party. James Hilton, Dorothy's brother, falls in love with Jen and protects her from the plans of Kent, a refined sensualist, who covets her. Mrs. Hilton frowns upon James' love for the strange girl and Jen realizes she is not wanted. Jen goes to the city and asks Kent's aid in securing work. Kent, engaged to Dorothy Hilton, celebrates the closing days of his bachelorhood on his yacht and invites John Newton and also Alice Morrison, believing that Newton will experience a novel shock at sight of one of his cast-off loves. Kent also invites Jen to add zest to the party. Strange emotions surge in the breasts of Alice and Newton. Alice recognizes her daughter, but she cannot reveal her identity. Newton suffers a change of heart and begs Alice to lead a life worthy of her daughter, he to supply the means. Kent drops out of the party, and James and Jen plight their love anew.

A One-Cylinder Courtship—NESTOR—OCTOBER 18.—The girl, who has returned from the city, where she has brushed up against "higher culture," regards her rustic sweetheart as a nonentity. When Ray invites her for a drive, she tells him that in the city everybody rides around in automobiles. Soon Ray appears in a machine of his own. While he and the girl are out the machine gives proof of its utility by breaking down. Then along comes Neal, the man whom the girl had met in the city, in his "big six." For a while things to be on Neal's side, but the countryman outwits him, and the girl, struck by his "speed," consents to marry Ray, and Neal shows up after the minister has done his work.

The Fair God of Sun Island—(THREE REELS)—GOLD SEAL—OCTOBER 19.—Captain Harding, grown rich by illegally collecting insurance on self-destroyed boats, lives near old Ben and his daughter, fisher folk. The captain cherishes the girl, but as Herbert, her sweetheart, is in the way, he has him shanghaied, through the help of Anderson, his mate. The ship is wrecked. Anderson is picked up and brought back by a steamer, while Herbert is cast upon an island. Meanwhile Anderson bleeds Harding for money and the two finally dash to death down a cliff while engaged in a struggle. Herbert has saved a native girl, Aloona, from sacrifice, and when rescued takes her back with him. Aloona is gladly welcomed, but sadly wanders away while Herbert and Alice are engaged in lover's talk. Securing a canoe, she sets out, and the last seen of her is a silhouette far out on the ocean.

Room and Board, Dollar and a Half—(TWO REELS)—L-KO—OCTOBER 20.—As the husband is jealous of the star boarder, he writes a note to his wife telling her that she will find his body at the bottom of the lake. He thinks this is going to make her feel bad, but it doesn't. Instead, she celebrates by flirting with the star boarder. Husband is about to consign his substance to the fishes when a strange influence makes him walk across the water and into Madame La Rue's, the Mystic of the East. He secures a job there as assistant spook, and everyhting is all right until wifey and the star boarder take a look into the future. The star boarder loses his new friend, the husband gets back his wife, and the cops land some other parties.

Lon of Lone Mountain—REX—OCTOBER 19.—A new schoolmaster has arrived in the mountain community where Melissa lives with her stern stepfather, Dan Hadley. She has a suitor, Lon Moore, who, although himself somewhat cruel, is appalled by the beatings which Melissa receives from her stepfather. The teacher acts as protector to Melissa and finally induces her to come to school, an invitation which she accepts. Lon views this with jealousy, which is easily fanned into frenzy by the other mountaineers, who have

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Book Our New
5 REEL FEATURE
"The Exposition's First Romance"
Peerless Film Exchange
CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

Selling Tickets by Electricity
The system used by the most successful theatres (including the Strand, N. Y., etc.,) throughout the country.
Write for booklet, Dept. M.
Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
Longacre Building, Times Square, New York

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement

in

Motography

decided that something must be done to drive out the schoolmaster owing to the disturbance among their women folk regarding him. Lon, however, learns the man's worth and when an attempt is made upon his life he shields the teacher at the cost of injuries to himself. It is thus that Melissa learns Lon's real love for her and she finds happiness in his arms, grateful that her friend has been saved from injury.

The Meddler—(Two Reels) Imp October 22.—John Ogden and Adelaide Main are deeply in love. A mercenary father and a wealthy suitor come between them, and Adelaide weds Edward Ward. Ogden departs for South Africa and after a few years of misery with her dissipated husband Adelaide dies. Twenty years later Ogden returns to America with a colossal fortune and becomes an important figure in the financial world. Ogden becomes acquainted with Frederick Ward's son and Frederick finally becomes installed in Ogden's office. Later, as Frederick will not betray his employer, Ward is wiped out. The latter tries to kill Ogden, but the crime is averted by Frederick's sweetheart, an actress whom he has known since childhood. Ogden, not understanding the relations of Frederick and the actress, has tried to thwart their marriage, but he finally admits himself a meddling old bungler and smiles upon the happy union of the lovers.

Almost a Knockout—Nestor October 22.—After receiving a vehement lecture from his wife, Mr. Newlywed promises to stay on the water wagon and to return early every night. Frank Marion, however, persuades him to go with him to a prize fight that evening. Wifey hears him say over the 'phone, "I will meet you at the cafe, Marion," and, jumping at conclusions, she resolves to be present at the cafe. In order to do this, she dresses up the janitor in her husband's clothes as an escort. The police close up the prize fight and Mr. Newlywed, true to his word, returns and finds his wife and the janitor just completing preparations. After some chasing around, Newlywed pulls out his guns and starts shooting. Explanations follow and hubby admits that he, too, has been to blame.

A Fight to a Finish—(Three Reels)—Bison—October 23.—Helen holds down the day "trick" and her brother is night operator at a rural station. Helen and her mother are worried over the fact that Tom is associating with Cummings, who is known as a disreputable character. Tom is inveigled into participating in a robbery, but, thanks to his sister's pluck, he is saved from a horrible death and given a chance to redeem himself. Helen is also instrumental in capturing the two bandits and recovering their loot.

A Pure Gold Partner—Powers—October 23.—Ray and his partner, Jack, at last find gold in the Canadian Rockies, and Ray tells the other that as soon as they get the gold out he will take him to see his sister, Janice, whose picture Jack has long admired. Ray becomes a victim to the dreaded mountain disease, but before dying pencils a note leaving his share in Jack's trust for Janice. Pete Reeves, a ne'er-do-well miner, secures the paper. Jack leaves to take the gold to town, accompanied by an Indian friend. In an attempt to get the gold, Jack is wounded by Pete, but the Indian gets off to the city and has the gold deposited. Janice has become worried over Ray, and she and her grandfather come to the deserted camp just as Reeves, too, returns. At first the girl thinks that Reeves is Jack. The latter finally gets on the trail of Reeves and appears just as the villain is forcing his attentions upon the girl. As Reeves accuses Jack of stealing, Janice believes that both men are thieves. Then the Indian arrives with the receipt. Later the Indian stabs Reeves and after Jack has explained things, Janice asks forgiveness for doubting him.

Poor but Dishonest—L-Ko—October 24.—When Hank, an apprentice in the brick yard, makes a hit with the magnate's daughter and with the magnate himself, to the end that he is made foreman of the huge brick pressery, his troubles begin. Among other things and individuals, dynamite figures in the misfortunes that follow, the explosive being the means of catapulting both Hank and his enemies skyward.

Springtime of the Spirit—(Three Reels)—Rex—October 24.—John Tilden and Howard Potter are rival suitors. John gets the girl and Howard moves east to New York. Years later John dies, and Dora, his daughter, now an orphan, comes to live with Howard Potter. On her eighteenth birthday Dora opens a letter which her deceased father had left and reads it is his wish that she marry Potter. The two suitors had been good friends and on his marriage John had promised Howard his daughter's hand when it should have been born and become of age. But Dora has become hopelessly in love with Paul, Potter's younger brother. She feels in duty bound, however, and the marriage is contemplated. Potter hears Paul bid his sweetheart a last goodby, realizes for the first time the state of affairs, decides that he is not worthy of the girl, and sacrifices his happiness for that of the younger people at the last moment, when the ceremony is in progress.

Feature Programs

Fox

Sin—(Five Reels) Fox. Featuring Theda Bara. Rosa, a peasant girl living with her father in an Italian village, is engaged to Luigi, a simple and pious young man. However, when Pedro, leader of the New York Camorra, returns to his old home Rosa goes to New York with him and they are followed by Luigi. In New York Pedro in a boastful moment declares that he will steal the jewels of the Madonna as a proof of his love for Rosa and Luigi is told of this by Rosa. He goes into the church and brings back the jewels and Rosa is dazed at the enormity of Luigi's sacrifice and yields to him. Later when the loss of the Jewels is discovered, Rosa, wearing them, makes her way to the headquarters of the Camorra, where he, upon seeing her, leaves her, and the girl, mad with terror, rushes into the street and is caught by the infuriated mob. Luigi stabs himself at the foot of the Madonna's altar.

Kliene-Edison

The Magic Skin—(Five Reels)—Kleine-Edison.—Produced by Edison under the direction of Richard Ridgely and featuring Everett Butterfield and Mabel Trunnelle, this picture is based upon the novel of Honore de Balzac. The young musician enters into a bargain with the devil whereby he is given a magic skin, whose possessor shall have every wish granted, but with every desire the skin will shrink. Deserting his innocent sweetheart for the pleasures of the world, Ralph sets out to enjoy the passing pleasures of the world. Finally, a physical wreck from his dissipation, he is led off by Mephistopheles. He awakes from his dream and determines to desert the adventuress with whom he has been fascinated, and marry the simple, beautiful Pauline. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

North American

In the Garden of the Gods—(Chapter Twenty-Six of the "Diamond From the Sky"—(Two Reels)—American.—In this chapter Esther and Marmaduke return to Virginia, where Hagar admits that Esther is really Esther Stanley. Arthur, in his home, dreams of Esther and wishes for her return, and Luke Lovell, after escaping from prison, again finds and steals the "diamond from the sky." A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Paramount

The Fatal Card—(Five Reels)—Famous Players.—The cast includes John Mason and Hazel Dawn. George Forrest is saved from a mob which threatens to lynch him, by Gerald Austen. Forrest expresses his gratitude and tells Austen that he hopes some day to return the favor. He gives him a torn playing card as a memento. Years later Austen and Forrest meet, but do not recognize each other. Austen falls in love with Forrest's daughter, who is ignorant that her father has been a crook. Forrest joins his former associates in a robbery. Their victim, the elder Austen, is accidentally killed. To keep themselves from exposure the crooks decide to murder Gerald Austen. Forrest accidentally finds the torn card in Gerald's wallet. He helps the young man to escape. Forrest is killed by the explosion of a bomb he has manufactured. Gerald and Margaret marry. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 80—Pathe—October 6.—General James W. Whittlesey, Civil War veteran, signals a peace message to the world from the dome of the capitol; King Ferdinand reviews the Bulgarian army at Sofia, Bulgaria; worldwide egg-laying contest held at Newark, Del.; people feverishly gamble in Wall street, New York; Pathe's American fashions; the latest dances of the winter season; Miss May Sullivan appears in pantalettes in Pittsburgh, Pa.; double balloon ascension chief attraction of the annual Interstate fair at Spokane, Wash.; frigate Independence is burned at San Francisco, Calif.; Mr. Constantin Dumba, Austrian ambassador, aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam; the football squad of the University of Chicago prepare for coming season, Chicago, Ill.

Pathe News No. 81—Pathe—October 9.—Philadelphia Nations, winners of the pennant of the National League; Boston Red Sox, the American League winners; Rockingham fair held at Salem, N. H.; hurricane strikes New Orleans, La., causing the loss of scores of lives and damages estimated at $10,000,000; Mrs. Norman Galt, future mistress of the White House, shown arriving with President at a baseball game last April; first meeting of the Naval Advisory Board held at Washington, D. C.; cartoon by Bray, Dumba's departure; scenes from the front, officially taken by the French Government.

John Glayde's Honour—(Five Reels)—Pathe.—Gold Rooster play produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation. The picture is based upon the drama by Alfred Sutro, and features C. Aubrey Smith. In his struggle to acquire wealth and power, John Glayde entirely neglects his wife. She decides to visit some friends in Europe. In Paris she meets a young artist, who, attracted to her, shows her a great deal of attention. This sympathy is what Muriel hungers for, and she falls in love with Lerode. Glade hears of his wife's affair with the artist and immediately sets out for Paris. He threatens Lerode, and begs Muriel to return with him. But she refuses, telling him that he has killed her love. Alone with his wealth and power he realizes his error. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Three Rings and a Goat—(Two Reels)—Pathe.—Second episode in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series, featuring Burr McIntosh, Max Figman and Lolita Robertson. Wallingford sells a traveling circus to Silas Bogger. As the circus belongs to someone else it is necessary that Wallingford and his pal, Daw, buy the circus back, or go to jail. Blackie tends to the details of making Silas sorry that he is the owner. After a series of humorous incidents Silas makes up his mind to be rid of his circus at any price. Wallingford buys it back at about one-sixth the price he sold the outfit for. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—Chapter seventh, entitled "The Gun Runners." Annette decides to go to Santa Maria, present her claims, and secure duplicate maps of lost island, to which she is the rightful heir. A revolution is in progress at Santa Maria, and Neal, who has earned promotion, is sent with a detachment of sailors who are to guard American interests there. Hernandez agrees to smuggle guns and ammunition for the revolutionist party. As a return for his services he demands the leader to attack the official's home, where Annette is staying. They force their way into the house, but before any of its occupants can be made prisoners, Neal, at the head of his company, arrives and puts the revolutionists to flight. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

When Mice Make Merry—Pathe.—Animated cartoon from the Bray Studios. These sketches, which show the frantic and vain efforts of a cat to catch the household pets, score a laughing success. It is one of the best cartoons issued by the Bray Studios.

The Altar of Heaven—Pathe.—Views of the Chinese temples near Peking. The Altar of Heaven was the place of worship for the emperors of China for centuries. It is looked upon as the finest and most original example of Chinese architecture in existence. This is an especially interesting scenic offering.

Picturesque Zeeland—(Split Reel)—Pathe.—Scenes of the market place and beauty spots in the Holland town of Middelburg and other Dutch towns where quaint customs are adhered to. The film is in natural colors and is beautiful and instructive.

The Perils of Temptation—(Four Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—Jackie Saunders featured as the girl who yields to temptation and steals jewels from the department store where she is employed. Repentant, she confesses the theft to the wife of the man who owns the store. Mrs. Pierce gives her a position as secretary. Later Mrs. Pierce's jewels are missing. As she makes no statement the girl feels that the only thing for her to do is to leave the house. She is found by Sam Pierce, the son, who is in love with her. Mr. Pierce explains that he took the necklace and pawned it as he was in need of ready funds. He had replaced the genuine jewels with imitations. The imitation jewels in the meantime had been stolen by another son, who is inclined to be wild. When all is straightened out, Sam and Martha marry.

The Counsel for the Defense—(Four Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—In order to win his first case, the young lawyer removes evidence which will accuse his client, a robber. The lawyer keeps the stolen jewels. A year later he is looked upon as a brilliant criminal lawyer. As a wedding gift to his bride, he has the stolen jewels reset. Alone in her room, just after the marriage ceremony, the bride is surprised by a burglar, the man her husband had defended. In struggling with the crook she is killed. When the thief is brought before the lawyer they recognize each other. The lawyer is forced to remain silent.

Willful Wallops for Wealth—Pathe-Starlight.—Heinie and Louie become money-mad. They

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Let Us Send You Our New Proposition on the

Bartola Orchestra

Add Dignity to Your Theatre
Improve Your Music. Write to

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
Bartola Musical Instrument Co.
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

would gain wealth by virtue of their brawn. This is an amusing slapstick comedy of the most pronounced type.

How Flowers Bloom in Winter—(Split Reel) Pathe.—Interesting study of plants and flowers.

Rustic Venice—(Split Reel)—Pathe.—Many views of the beautiful canals and streets of Venice. On the same reel with:

Geithera—Pathe.—Scenic.

Fatty's Fable Fun—Pathe-Starlight.—At the request of the stage-struck girl's father, Heinie and Louie took possession of the dancing school. The dancing master, whom they have thrown overboard, is rescued. He returns to his class and finds Heinie and Louie in charge. He exposes them to the pupils, who become angered and chase the two imposters from the place. They hurry to the home of the girl and ask the father for their reward for curing his daughter of her craze for dancing. He is just about to pay them when the daughter walks in and tells her father that she is still anxious to learn to dance. Heinie and Louie hurry from the house, followed by the irate father.

Universal Special

The Campbells Are Coming—(Four Reels)—October 18.—Featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford in a strong war drama written around an uprising of the Sepoys in India and the timely arrival of the Campbells, who save the town and also a little Scotch lassie. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Underground City—(18th Episode of The Broken Coin)—The savages of the lone island capture Kitty, and finally sentence her to be burned as a sacrifice to fire god. As they are about to throw her into the pit, a strange creature dressed in a tattered suit, appears, and grabbing Kitty from the arms of the natives, sinks from sight. The demented sailor carries her through strange underground passages and brings her into a weird place where there is the hull of an old ship, bags of gold, and a crater with flames shooting out at intervals. Frederick and Roleaux have been cast up on different parts of the island. Roleaux' adventures are not related in this episode. Frederick wins the confidence of a band of natives, and searches for Kitty. After this party has a small war with the chief, whose word that Kitty has disappeared, they will not believe, the underground passage is found. As the demented sailor hears the band approaching, he makes up his mind not to give the girl up. Taking her to the mouth of the crater, he raises Kitty above his head, and awaits the entrance of the intruders as the episode closes.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

The Valley of Lost Hope—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—October 18.—Produced by Lubin under the direction of Romaine Fielding. Ewing, a real estate broker, circulates false reports about the rich gold deposits in a deserted valley. Scores of people invest their savings in the land. The broker's son learns that the people have been swindled. He is in love with Helen Dean, whose brother is the camp preacher. Bob determines to return every cent to the miners. His father refuses. From a letter the workers learn that they have been swindled. They storm Ewing's private railroad car, but the broker escapes. His train is wrecked. Bob secures the money and returns it to the people. The Valley is barren of gold and the disappointed prospectors desert the camp. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

World

Blue Grass—(Five Reels)—World Films—October 10.—Produced by Equitable Pictures Corporation. Thomas Wise is featured as Colonel Taylor of Kentucky. The Colonel is an owner of race horses. When on the verge of financial ruin his favorite colt, "Blue Grass," wins an important race. A rival owner had planned to prevent the victory of "Blue Grass" by foul methods, but this plot is frustrated by Wilfred Warren. The latter wins the colonel's consent to marry Virginia Taylor. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Heart of Blue Ridge—(Five Reels)—World Film.—Clara Kimball Young is featured as Plutina, a country girl, who lives in the moonshine district. A reward is offered by the government for information leading to the arrest of the makers of unlicensed whiskey. Dan Hodges, who operates an illicit still, asks the girl to marry him, and she refuses. Her lover, Zeke, aids one of the revenue officers and is rewarded by being made overseer of a new lumber camp. Dan threatens to kill Plutina's grandfather and sister if she will not marry him. The revenue officer locates the still and arrests a number of Dan's associates. Dan escapes. He meets Plutina and takes her with him, intending to marry her. Zeke learns this and follows. He arrives in time to confront Dan as he is striking Plutina. There is a fight between the two men on the edge of the cliff. Hodges plunges to his death. Zeke and Plutina are happily united. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Triangle Program

Released Week of October 31.

The Stolen Magic—(Two Reels)—Keystone.—Raymond Hitchcock, Mack Sennett and Mabel Normand featured. Raymond Hitchcock is a delver in magic who arrives at the home of a friend with an enchanted scroll and a suitcase full of snakes. An Oriental from whom the scroll has been stolen pursues him and the results of the activities of the snakes, the vengeful Oriental, and the jealous husband is a whirlwind comedy.

Old Heidelberg—(Five Reels)—Fine Arts.—Featuring Doroth Gish and Wallace Reid. Kathie and Karl, who is a prince, when they are young begin their little romance. Karl is sent to Heidelberg, where Kathie's uncle is an innkeeper. Later when war breaks out he is obliged to go and to find out the real wishes of his people he goes into the streets of the city. On every hand he hears denunciations against war and war makers and the prince goes against those around him and declares himself for peace.

A Favorite Fool—(Two Reels)—Sennett Production.—Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys featured. Arling, ringmaster of a small wagon circus, abuses Polly and her seven children. Foy makes love to her and is accepted, but he is ignorant of her flock. He tries to escape, but is caught by his wife and beat up. She then finds that she is the owner of a show, and when Foy reads the paper telling of this he changes his attitude. After some trouble, Foy's wife, thinking he is untrue to her, tries to cut off his retreat and just then a cyclone sends Foy sailing through the air in a cage with a lion. Back on earth, Arling gets the fate of a villain and the married couple agree to bury their differences.

Associated Service

Released the Week of October 18.

Saved From Disgrace—(Two Reels)—Empire.—The oldest son of a widow gets a position as paying teller in a bank. He soon begins to gamble, meddles with the money and books, and later is imprisoned. He escapes from jail and goes into Western Canada, where his younger brother occupies a position in a mining camp. The oldest son then goes to his mother's, where he is nearly captured by the police. She pays the money, however, which he took from the bank and later the boy reforms and becomes a prosperous citizen.

Mistakes Will Happen—Federal.—Hubby returns from a trip, takes off his shoes and steps into what he thinks is his sleeping wife and kisses her. He has gotten into a newlyweds' apartment and they, thinking he is an escaped madman, begin to make things look mighty black for him, but at this time wifey, who has moved a couple of houses away, comes to his rescue.

All on Account of a Doughnut—Alhambra.—Mrs. Newlywed loses her cook and decides to get along without one. One morning at breakfast the important factors are doughnuts, which hubby puts into his pocket unnoticed by wifey. He makes many trials to dispose of them, but they are always returned. Wifey, in the meantime, has lost her diamong ring and realizes it must be in one of the dougnuts hubby had eaten. The ring is returned and wifey promises to get a cook.

In Wrong—Atlas.—Boggs asks Smith, the bookkeeper, who the chicken is that came in to see him and Smith tells him it was his sister. Boggs tells him that he will make him general manager if he will fix it up for him, and Smith goes home, tells his wife of the proposal and she promises to act as his sister. The predicament Smith gets himself into during Boggs' lovemaking is very comical. However, things are straightened out when Boggs runs across another pretty woman to whom he proposes and by whom he is accepted.

Montana Blount — (Two Reels) — Romona.— Montana Blount, a cowpuncher, is in love with Alice. However, a surveyor comes into their lives and is accepted by the girl. Blount sends George a note that if he ever runs across his path he will kill him, and one day when the boys are on the ranch they hear a shot, and knowing George and Blount are out together, they misunderstand the meaning. George had been bitten by a snake and Blount had killed it. After some trouble George clears Blount's name, and he and the cowboy grip hands and swear everlasting friendship.

The Misleading Clue — (Two Reels) — Santa Barbara.—Henry Ross is discovered murdered and it is found out that Robert Stanley, fiance of the dead man's daughter, had quarreled with the man the day before. Suspicion points to him, but the old butler confesses that he had overheard the quarrel between Robert and his employer, and went in to plead with Ross to sanction their marriage and Ross had become overwrought, his heart failed him and he had dropped dead. The matter is then cleared and all ends well.

You Never Can Tell—Banner.—Harold Browning, after graduating from an eastern college, goes on a visit to Charles Canton, a rancher. Canton imagines that Harold is like his father, who is a rough and ready sort of a man, but when the boy alights from the train and claims to be Harold Browning they put him through some stunts before they remodel him into a western man.

Miscellaneous

How Molly Made Good—(Six Reels)—Photo Drama Company.—This is a story depicting the difficulties of a young girl reporter who is given an unusual assignment. She is required to interview ten stars of the stage in three days. The stars she interviews, and who actually appear in the picture are: Robert Edeson, Henrietta Crosman, Julia Dean, Lulu Glaser, May Robson, Julian Eltinge, Henry Kolker, Cyril Scott, Charles J. Ross, Leo Ditrichstein, and Madame Fjord, the famous operatic singer. To accomplish her task Molly uses automobiles, motor boats and finally an aeroplane. Marguerite Gale, plays the part of the girl reporter. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Arkansas.

Jacob Bryan, a former New Yorker and St. Louisan, has moved into his new building on Main street, Earle. The seating capacity of this new building is 500 and is ventilated by an eight-foot fan, driven by an eight horse-power gasoline engine. Mr. Bryan since coming to Earle, about a year ago, has built up one of the best patronized picture shows in eastern Arkansas. He does not spare any expense in giving his patrons the very best pictures on the market. He has just arranged with the General Film company to show its pictures exclusively.

Delaware.

Mirror Films, Incorporated, manufacture of motion picture films and cameras; capital $2,500,000.

The Beacon Films Incorporated, New York. Capital $150,000. To manufacture, sell and deal in and with moving picture films of all kinds. Incorporators, Claude Patin, Elliot Norton, James F. Lynch, all of New York City.

Florida.

I. A. Lantzy, proprietor of the Orpheum theater, Bartow, has purchased a lot on the corner of Main street and Florida avenue, and will shortly begin the erection of a modern moving picture theater.

Price Ten Cents

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
JAN 22 1916

BLANCHE RING
WITH MOROSCO

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 30, 1915 No. 18

LUBIN

QUALITY

MONDAY, NOV. 1 st.
ONE ACT DRAMA
THE SACRED BRACELET
WITH
L. C. SHUMWAY

TUESDAY, NOV. 2nd.
D. L. DON
IN UP AGAINST IT
ONE ACT COMEDY

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 3rd.
THREE ACT DRAMA
A WESTERN GOVERNOR'S HUMANITY
WITH VINNIE BURNS AND
GOV. HUNT OF ARIZONA

THURSDAY, NOV. 4th.
WHEN WAR THREATENED
TWO ACT DRAMA
WITH
L. C. SHUMWAY

FRIDAY, NOV. 5th
ONE ACT DRAMA
THE URCHIN
WITH FRANCIS JOYNER

SATURDAY, NOV. 6th.
BILLIE REEVES
IN THE CELLAR SPY
ONE ACT LAUGH

GENERAL FILM SERVICE
LUBIN
RELEASES

More Wise Men in The Triangle Garden

Last week we told you of Kemble, of Brooklyn. This week you'll be glad to know of Hexter, of Cleveland, who thinks something better than $100,000 of TRIANGLE PLAYS. Hexter is not the type of man who rushes in without investigation. He didn't make a success of his Liberty Theatre in that way.

Then there's Gordon, of Boston. Gordon backs his belief in TRIANGLE quality with his hard cash —about a quarter of a million for two years.

The Dusenburys, of Columbus, have brought the Southern Theatre up among the top-notchers by reason of good judgment and A-1 quality. They have never been satisfied with second best. They've bought the TRIANGLE output.

And the Ascher Brothers, of Chicago. They didn't build their success on mistakes. They're paying bigger money than they ever paid anybody for TRIANGLE SERVICE in the President and Bandbox Theatres.

There must be a reason for the action of all these men that affects YOU. If you have MADE a success—you'll want to keep it. If you have not—you'll WANT to make it. These men instinctively couple success and TRIANGLE in their judgment.

Next week we'll tell you about some others.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

One of the big scenes from Centaur's "The White King of the Zaras."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 30, 1915 No. 18

New Strand and "Carmen" Make Debut

BY NEIL G. CAWARD

FRIDAY evening, October 15, 1915, will long be looked back upon as a memorable date in Chicago's motion picture history, for on that evening the New Strand Theater, on Wabash avenue, threw wide its doors and as the special feature of its initial program offered its patrons "Carmen," the Geraldine Farrar production on which the Lasky Feature Play Carmen and Don Jose.

Company spent months of preparation and many thousands of dollars.

The Strand has long been one of Chicago's institutions, praised and attended by hundreds who never visited motion picture theaters until the Strand came into being, and in its new home bids fair to even surpass the enviable reputation it has already achieved. Manager Cordner of the Strand is authority for the statement that the remodeling of the old Globe theater, to make it the present day Strand, cost more than it would to have erected a totally new building, and this statement is easy to believe after witnessing the wonderful transformation that has been wrought. Today the Strand stands without a peer in the middle West, and its fame and fair reputation should work miracles in winning new patrons to the silent drama.

MOTOGRAPHY, in its issue of October 16, gave a lengthy description of the interior decorations and stage settings of the new theater and so it is unnecessary to again enlarge upon this feature of the house, other than to mention in passing that the audience, which packed the theater to its last seat, found everything beyond its fondest expectations. Conductor Arthur Dunham and his Strand Symphony Orchestra were more satisfying than ever before, the soloists met with a reception at the hands of their audience that might be considered an ovation, the stage setting was praised by everyone with all the adjectives at his or her command, the washed air and ample ventilation system left nothing to be desired in that respect, the projection was perfect, the gray uniformed ushers performed their tasks with all the skill that was to be expected from people as yet unfamiliar with their new surroundings and, best of all, the screen program was a treat from start to finish.

To Messrs. Devine, Partridge, Inderrieden and Cordner, the officials of the Strand Theater Company, MOTOGRAPHY extends its heartiest congratulations upon the opening of the new house and likewise a wish for its unlimited prosperity. Every film man who was present, and there were hundreds of them, expressed a devout wish for the success of the new venture for unquestionably the Strand is doing uplift and missionary work for the whole cause of motion pictures and daily, by its de luxe offerings, converting new hundreds into regular picturegoers.

And now for "Carmen," which had its middle west debut in the Strand's opening bill. Words are hard to find in which to express one's delight at this stupendous photoplay, and one finds himself faced with an almost impossible task in trying to decide whether to praise most the wonderful direction, the elaborate stage settings, the convincing spectacles, the superb photography or the wonderful personality of Geraldine Farrar, the star. Since, however, in the opinion of all, "Carmen" was Farrar and Farrar was "Carmen," the lady seems to have first call.

Carmen claims her share of the spoils.

The grand opera prima donna, who, for an enormous sum, consented to temporarily forego her vacation and lend her talent to the film maker, proved her worth in the first reel alone, and ere the picture had reached its end achieved a triumph that will undoubtedly far surpass any laurels she may ever win on the operatic stage. She is wonderful. Every emotion of the gypsy maid she impersonated was instantly registered on the screen by this artiste, who, until Jesse Lasky sent her to Los Angeles, had never faced a motion picture camera, and in this her first effort she out-Pickforded even so popular a screen star as "Little Mary" Pickford.

Such a vivid, temperamental, cruel, cunning, beautiful, loving, artful, debonair, wholly delightful Carmen has never been seen before, on either stage or screen. Farrar is such a resourceful being that subtitles are valueless insofar as the telling of her portion of the story is concerned, for you read and understand her purposes and desires from her every gesture and movement, the slightest lift of her eyebrow or the curl of her lip, long before the sub-title is flashed to you on the screen. Farrar did not play "Carmen," she was Carmen to all intents and purposes during the moments she spent before the camera, and in that lies her success.

William C. DeMille, who produced "Carmen" for the Lasky Company, has demonstrated his wonderful ability in a telling fashion. Every scene of the multiple reel production has its purpose and leads directly to the point at which the director aimed. The fight in the cigarette factory and the spectacular bull fight scenes are masterpieces of their kind and in watching them one forgets that he is viewing mimic scenes and for the moment imagines he is beholding the events themselves, so faithfully are they produced and so splendid is the photographic treatment.

Wallace Reid and Pedro de Cordoba, who impersonate Don Jose and Escamillo, Carmen's rival lovers, are both beyond criticism in their respective roles and probably no two better impersonations are possible than the ones they give. The rest of the company is satisfying in every respect.

In addition to the "Carmen" feature, a Photocolor picture one reel in length entitled "Geithorn (Holland) the Rustic Venice," a Strand Topic of the Day single reeler, a Globe film entitled "How Winter Flowers Bloom" and a Pathe cartoon comedy entitled, "When Mice Make Merry" were shown, all of which were well received.

France to Direct Vogue Comedies

Charles France, admittedly one of the greatest of comedy producers, has been engaged by the Vogue Film Corporation to direct its first company. The studio on South Pasadena boulevard in Los Angeles formerly used by Lubin will house the activities of Producer France and his comedians. Mr. France was born into comedy. He made his first stage appearance at an early age and has been seen in everything with a touch of fun in it, from Shakespeare to vaudeville and back again. As head of the comedy producing staff of the Edison studios he established an enviable laugh making record.

Some of the comedies Mr. France has produced are still doing their share toward the gaiety of nations and are reckoned among the best ever presented on the screen. Among these are, "The Stuff Dreams Are Made of" and "Why Girls Leave Home." These are both travesties on the well known "blood and thunder" style of melodrama in which the "hero" rescues the bee-u-ti-ful gir-l by catching a thirty-ton safe on his head without breaking his skull. In unique fun making Mr. France excels.

Recently he has been directing Eddie Foy at the Keystone studios. He is known as a creator of slapstick with a reason, the kind in which the grotesque situations and laugh provoking antics are woven together with a story making each successive laugh a logical one.

There is much speculation as to the personnel of the comedians and an announcement is expected shortly from Producer France. The Vogue comedies will be released on the Mutual program.

Anna Held Signed with Morosco

The prize announcement during the past week in both motion pictures and theatricals involves the acquisition to the film world of Anna Held, the internationally famous musical comedy star who has just arrived in this country from abroad, as a result of the efforts of Oliver Morosco, president of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company of Los Angeles.

Anna Held.

In securing this big favorite for motion pictures Mr. Morosco has scored another big triumph for the silent art as the possibilities of Miss Held as a film actress will readily be appreciated. The name of Anna Held is known to practically every man, woman and child in this country and in Europe her fame is equally prominent. Miss Held made her first appearance on the stage in London at the Princess Theater and subsequently appeared all over the Continent of Europe. Her notable success at the Palace Theater is a matter of theatrical history. New York first saw her at the Herald Square Theater in "A Parlour Match," and later at the Lyric Theater in "La Poupee," at the Manhattan Theater in "Papa's Wife," her more recent triumphs on Broadway including "The Parisian Model," "Miss Innocence," "The College Widower," and many others of equal prominence in which she also starred in large cities throughout the country.

During the past months Miss Held has given her entire time to assist her country in recruiting activities. In Paris the star has worked zealously and has rendered valuable assistance which has won her the fervent gratitude of her people and enthusiastic praise from government officials. Miss Held will leave for Los Angeles, where Mr. Morosco's motion picture studios are located, on November 8.

Better Films For Masses, Not Classes

ZUKOR ADVOCATES CHANGE

"I BELIEVE thoroughly in the so-called $2 picture," declared Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company to a representative of MOTOGRAPHY who called upon him the other day, "but I do not believe in charging $2 for the privilege of seeing them.

"By no means let there be any limit placed upon the height to which the quality of motion pictures is to be raised. I know of no film producer who is worthy of the name who does not sincerely hope that standards of photo-play production will be constantly elevated and that the industry, which is still frowned upon in many quarters as purely commercial—rankly commercial—will in time gain recognition as an art. There are still many serious-minded people who declare in all sincerity that there is no art in motion pictures. They will tell you that it is simply a cheap trick of photographed motion, ground out by the yard to catch the dollars.

Adolph Zukor.

"They are absolutely wrong," declared Mr. Zukor, emphatically. "Granting that there are many films strung together in record-breaking time for the sole purpose of meeting a release schedule, I maintain that the introduction of the stage's greatest actors and actresses in the capacity of photo-players and the winning from stage to screen of some of the foremost stage directors of our time, mark the advance of the motion picture from mere 'movies' to art.

"I refuse to believe that directorial and dramatic genius can be strangled by a medium of expression which, losing only the voice, offers in its place the whole world as a background, so as to obliterate all the art for which they have become celebrated in the theatrical world. It seems more logical to me to suppose that the newer field of endeavor and the broader possibilities of the motion picture will serve as a stimulus to artistic imagination."

The speaker paused for a moment and then continued:

"But we are digressing from the $2 picture. My point is that a picture is a $2 picture when it has the intrinsic value which makes it worth paying that amount to see it. That value can be measured only by three standards—the stars who are featured, the plays which are produced and the manner in which they are handled or directed.

"Take the Paramount stars. Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar, Hazel Dawn, Marguerite Clark, Mary Pickford, Cyril Maude and John Barrymore are names that will command the highest scale of admission prices when announced by any theater.

"As for plays, 'Zaza,' 'Carmen,' 'The Prince and the Pauper,' 'Bella Donna,' 'Madame Butterfly,' are plays that cannot be surpassed in any managerial roster. They represent the highest attainments of the theater.

"We still have the third element to consider—the presentation. I cannot better state my case than by referring you to the productions which have appeared at the Strand theater during the last two weeks. If you saw either 'Zaza' or 'The White Pearl' you will realize that genuine art in the presentation of motion pictures was revealed in the staging of those photoplays by Mr. Porter and Mr. Ford, who collaborated in both instances. What they will accomplish in the direction of 'Bella Donna' is still to be ascertained, but we have 'The Eternal City' and the productions already referred to as guarantees of their future performances.

"Now, these are pictures which I feel no hesitancy in calling Two-dollar Pictures, and I would be glad to have any one point out to me wherein I am in error. But there we come to the parting of the ways so far as my acquiescing with the two-dollar advocates is concerned. Instead of taking them away from the public to whose patronage and support the motion picture producer owes his very existence, I believe that he should allow the general public to enjoy the fruits of its own loyalty. That is, instead of reserving these great photoplays for the classes at two-dollar admission prices, I believe it to be the privilege as well as the duty of the producer to give these pictures to the great mass of the public at the minimum admission price.

"Somewhere in Shakespeare—you probably remember it better than I do—there is a line about the ambitious man spurning the base degrees by which he ascended to the position of power, or something like that. It seems to me that it applies with equal force to the two-dollar price question. That is exactly what the motion picture producer does when he demands high admission prices for his films.

"If it were not for the masses of humanity that have poured their contributions of dimes and small change into the coffers of the motion picture producer in the days when the very wealthy classes to whom the two-dollar men are catering scorned the 'movies,' the high-grade pictures which are possible today would be beyond attainment. They would be simply idle dreams, more humorous than serious. For it is the profits of those early days which have gone into the producing of the great features of today. For that reason it seems to me that this idea of charging high admission prices is really a desertion of the public.

"But let us assume that the man was right who said that you cannot mix sentiment with business. Down with sentiment, then, and let us look at the purely commercial aspect of the case. What stage productions have made the most money, the extremely 'highbrow' play that is written for the intellectual pleasure of the highly cultivated few, or the good, old-fashioned play that is written for the masses? You know as well as I do that 'The Old Homestead,' 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' 'Way Down East,' and plays of that character which are intelligible to every normal mind in the country, are the greatest money-makers in existence. And you also know that Shakespeare and the other great names in theatrical history fail to attract dollars into the box office. So far as that is concerned, the Shakespearian companies have had rather hard sledding right here in New York.

"Do not misunderstand me when I say that Shakespeare has not gone well. I am not advocating giving the public poor entertainment because it cannot appreciate good plays or photo-plays. This idea of talking down to your audience is all wrong when applied to the amusement world. I am simply urging the fact that the show, whether play or motion picture, which has the widest and most universal appeal, is the one that will make its producers the most money.

"Taking another purely commercial angle, it seems wiser to me to operate on the 'big sales, small profits' basis rather than on the 'high prices to a few' plan, because the universality of the motion picture demands this method. That is the principle on which my associates on the Paramount program have always operated, and we will keep faith with the public and ourselves in this respect, both because we believe this consideration to be due to those whose support made the motion picture industry the giant it is today and because we believe that along that road lies the true path to success. And that is why we prefer to make two-dollar pictures rather than to charge two dollars to see them."

The Castles in "The Whirl of Life"

The long heralded motion picture feature in which the Castles (Vernon and Irene) tell the story of their lives is due in Chicago in a few days and will be shown to an invited few Friday, October 22.

The feature, which is in six reels, was given its initial performance at the Globe theater, New York, last Sunday, and is running there on the afternoons that the Montgomery and Stone play, "Chin Chin," does not appear.

The story for the picture was prepared by Vernon Castle and the scenario was developed from the story by Catherine Carr, whose work on "The Melting Pot," "The Price," and other big features, is well known.

The production is the second of the Cort Film Corporation, and Mr. Cort has provided the dancing stars with a fine scenic investiture and a fine surrounding cast. Contrary to general impressions the picture is not a dancing picture, the Castles appearing at intervals only in some of their famous dances.

Beginning with the courtship of the famous team, the action moves from New Rochelle to Paris, where the Castles made their first big success. A melodramatic element is introduced after their arrival in America. Through the machinations of a discarded suitor, Irene is kidnaped by a gang of ruffians, which leads to a series of escapes by the fair Irene and many thrilling rescues by the elongated Vernon, who shines as a real hero in the picture. A great deal of space has been given to reviews of the feature by the New York dailies. The Tribune states, "Mrs. Castle revealed herself as a surprisingly good film actress"; The World, "The picture had a much better production than the average film"; The Times, "This scene (a bathing scene) disclosed the secret of Mrs. Castle's dancing, for she, too, wore a bathing suit that caused even the wild waves, for whom bathing suits are no treat, to cease their waving."

A scene that caused much comment especially among the female members of the big audience was the one in a well known modiste's shop on Fifth avenue, where the fair Irene appeared in many different ultra gowns. A scene that will be particularly interesting to Chicago audiences is one taken at the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes. In this scene Irene and Vernon, after many chases and escapes, are finally rescued by a squad of cadets and restored to their home at Manhassett in time to appear at "Castles by the Sea" and so foil the villain.

Among other scenes that are calculated to cause intense interest are a real fox hunt with some of New York's Four Hundred appearing as riders, a beautiful reproduction of the celebrated "Castles by the Sea" with over five hundred guests. This set is one hundred and seventy-five feet long and is very massive.

The picture was directed by Oliver D. Bailey, who was responsible for many of the fine scenic effects in "The Melting Pot." Negotiations are now going on for a showing in the loop which will be for an indefinite run, beginning about the first of November.

Katharine Kaelred, Ince Star

Katharine Kaelred, who has been repeatedly characterized as the most accomplished "vampire woman" of the American stage, will be presented, during the week of November 1, as the star of the sixth Ince contribution to the new Triangle program of $2 picture plays. She will make her appearance—which will constitute her maiden bow from the screen—in the role of a Russian seeress in a tremendously forceful drama from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, entitled "The Winged Idol." It was Ince's intention originally to offer this subject following "The Disciple," starring William S. Hart, but the necessity of exercising special care in the composition of the musical score for it caused him to order its postponement.

Few of America's ardent theater goers are unfamiliar with the work of Miss Kaelred on the legitimate stage. For a number of years she has scored heavily in successful Broadway productions, but it was principally by her sensational interpretation of "The Woman" in "A Fool There Was" that she compelled the critics to laud her in their writings. With a comprehensive knowledge of and a sincere appreciation for her talents, Sullivan undertook the writing of "The Winged Idol" and created for her what is believed to be one of the very best parts she has ever played. A special cast appears with Miss Kaelred, as Mr. Ince always provides a strong support for his stars.

Blackton Masterpiece Reaches Chicago

BY JOHN C. GARRETT

THERE was a capacity house to greet the initial performance of "The Battle Cry of Peace," which occurred at the Olympic theater in Chicago on Sunday evening, October 17. The audience was thrilled and awed at the immensity and gruesome reality of the production and made its approval known by frequent outbursts of applause throughout the performance. The Olympic theater itself was most appropriately decorated with "stars and stripes," with "cannon to right of you and cannon to left of you." Captain Jack Crawford, the poet scout and a prominent veteran of the G. A. R., made a few remarks concerning the need of such a picture to put before American citizens the necessity of preparedness for war, and Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, who made the picture for the Vitagraph Company, was introduced by Health Commissioner Robertson, and spoke as follows:

J. Stuart Blackton.

Ladies and gentlemen: It is a great privilege and an honor to speak on the subject that should be uppermost in every American citizen's mind at the present time—"American Preparedness Against War."

Preparedness is a question which cannot be handled half-heartedly—either the country should be fully prepared, or it should disarm. There is no sense in locking the front door of your house against burglars and leaving the back door and the cellar door and all the windows unfastened.

The man who says, "I believe in a certain amount of preparedness" is as insincere as the friend who says "God bless you, to a certain extent," or as Mr. Bryan was when he said "God bless you" in his letter of resignation to President Wilson. What he meant was "God help you." We must either be willing to fold our hands and accept the inevitable consequences of an invasion by a foreign foe, or we must have a perfectly equipped navy on the Atlantic coast and an army to back it up, to protect us from European invasion, and a similar navy and army on the Pacific coast to guard against Oriental invasion—both navies and both armies big enough to make the American flag respected and feared in the uttermost parts of the earth.

The little navy man and the little army man say this will cost a lot of money. Yes, it may cost a billion dollars; but how much would an invasion in our present state cost us? What would that slight insurance amount to as against the appalling indemnities this, the richest country in the world, would surely have to pay some day if we do not insure against war—not only indemnities in money, but costlier indemnities in priceless flesh and blood?

We are told by the "Peace-at-any-price" crowd that this country's isolation is its safety—its protection the Atlantic on one shore, the Pacific on the other. A deadly parallel to this question of isolation was furnished to me by the highest officials in the War Department at Washington. They told me that when General Grant with the army of the Potomac, commenced his march on Richmond, his entire supply—the ships on the coast—railroads and wagon trains carried in all 30,000 tons of supplies and ammunition.

Any one of the modern ocean liners like the Olympic, Imperator or Mauretania, can carry in her hold 60,000 tons, or twice the supply equipment of General Grant's army. And in addition, each ship can carry an additional load of from 5,000 to 8,000 soldiers.

In the estimate of the War Department, the dimensions of the Atlantic ocean have shrunk to half the size of Lake Michigan.

These same officials in the War Department showed me how one of the European powers could land 800,000 men, 220,000 horses, and supplies for three months, on our coast inside of forty days. And these figures are based on only a 50 per cent estimate of the known shipping facilities of that power. Against such a force, both our army and navy heads admitted that they would be as helpless in our present state of unpreparedness as a cripple in a prize ring would be against Jess Willard.

When I hear the twaddle of the little army men and the little navy men, and the Brothers of Peace and the Fords, Wanamakers, Carnegies and Bryans, I am constrained to say, like the Pharisee of old, "Oh, Lord, I thank thee that I am not as these other men are."

Henry Ford is willing to spend ten million dollars to prevent this country from getting into a state of adequate defense. He has built up a mammoth industry and a huge fortune, and now, apparently, he is willing to spend a good portion of that fortune to make it easier for a lot of barbarians to come and take the rest of it away from him.

The Bible teaches us "When we are smitten on the one cheek, to turn the other." There are two reasons for turning the other cheek—cowardice and diplomacy. If a fellow your own size slaps your face and you turn the other side, cowardice is usually the reason, but if a great husky prize fighter does the same thing, turning the other cheek is pure diplomacy. But when a great country is in a condition where it can be slapped on one cheek and on the other, and then kicked somewhere else, without daring to retaliate, it is neither cowardice nor diplomacy—it is just damned foolishness.

The surest way to get into a fight is to talk loud and keep your hands in your pockets, and the surest way to get along without a fight is to "speak softly and carry a big stick."

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is an American picture made for Americans. It has been criticized, of course, but not by Americans. People of evidently foreign extraction have written and have said to me that they thought it would be nicer to depict the enemy as benign, noble and magnanimous gentlemen. In other words, they want me to show that invasion would be a real pleasure and benefit to the community. Others have said the foreign element in America would be offended by reference to the foreign spy system.

My answer is this—the picture was not made to please foreigners—it was made to stimulate the loyalty and patriotism of American citizens and to put the fear of God and fear of the enemy into their hearts.

Any foreigner who is offended by this picture has no business in this country at this time.

The safest, sanest and wisest statesman and diplomat in the land came out flat footed the other day and said: "It's time we had a line-up of our foreign-born American citizens, arranging them biblically—those on the left who are for their native countries first, and those on the right who are for America first." The man who uttered those words, and whose hands may every good American citizen uphold, is our President, Woodrow Wilson.

Any foreign-born American citizen who feels offended by this picture will bear close watching, and if this picture causes those American citizens who are true and loyal to keep a close watch on those who are traitorous and disloyal, one of the results desired will have been accomplished.

Another of the desired results is to open the eyes of the women of America to the great need of preparedness. Many women are in favor of disarmament. A woman's gentle and compassionate nature naturally abhors war, and with feminine logic they think that if there are no weapons nor munitions of war in America, nor no men who know how to use them, there can be no war. That is not very safe or logical reasoning. There are jails and police forces in every city in the United States. It would be just as foolish to expect to prevent crime and vice by abolishing prisons and police departments as it is to think of abolishing war by disarmament. Just as long as love, hate, greed, jealousy and lust exist in human nature, just so long will there be both crime and wars.

I believe that if women had had a predominating voice in the affairs of Europe, there would have been no war, but that war being a sad and terrible reality, I believe that the women of America, the mothers to whom I dedicated "The Battle Cry of Peace," will, when they learn the crying need of preparedness, exercise their female prerogative to change their minds, and will become a potent factor in safeguarding the nation.

Just one word more—I want to tell you exactly where to fix the blame for this country's unpreparedness. It is not the President nor his Secretaries of State or of War or of the Navy. It is not Congress nor any part of the administration—it is you men and women of Brooklyn, you men and women of America, who are to blame because you did not insist upon your representatives in Congress voting for army and navy appropriations. It is because, carelessly and thoughtlessly, no doubt, and in ignorance of the true situation, the people of almost the entire United States for years past, have let their Congressmen know in no uncertain terms that if they didn't vote for the pork barrel and the post office and for selfish benefits for their own native cities, and against army and navy appropriations, they would lose their jobs as Congressmen.

Recommendations are going to be made at the next session of Congress for bigger appropriations for national defense, bigger than ever asked for before. They will be defeated, tabled and turned down unless the people speak, through their representatives in Congress, and make our government in reality "a government of the people, by the people and for the people."

The eyes of the people are being opened, the day of revelation is at hand, and the people will get what is their right when they learn to spell that word right, M-I-G-H-T. We shall be assured of peace—not the sugar-coated, canting peace of the "at-any-price" crowd, but honorable, dignified, satisfying peace —peace that will protect our families, our homes and our properties, when American people learn that the new phonetic, patriotic and American way of spelling the word peace is P-O-W-E-R.

"Peace and Preparedness" is the slogan of the American public. The present war in Europe, with all of its horrors, has brought to us the reality that in our present unpreparedness for war and lack of men, were we to be drawn into the web, it would mean our almost instantaneous destruction.

In "The Battle Cry of Peace" this stupendous multiple-reel production, which was produced by the Vitagraph Company of America, personages of national and international fame make their appearance. Amongst them is Hudson Maxim, the great inventive genius, whose virile book, "Defenseless America," was the inspiration for the picture. The drama itself is acted by a Vitagraph cast headed by Charles Richman and including such well-known screen stars as J. Rogers Lytton, James Morrison, Mary Maurice, Louise Beaulet, Harold Hurbert, Capt. Jack Crawford, Evart Overton, Belle Bruce, Norma Talmadge, who is the heroine of the play, Lucille Hamill, Tefft Johnson, Harry Northrup, George Stevens, Thais Lawton, Lionel Braham, E. M. Holland, Joseph Kilgour, Paul Scardon, W. J. Ferguson, and William Humphrey. Twenty-five thousand National Guardsmen, 800 members of the G. A. R., 5,000 horses and 8,000 supernumeraries were used in the production.

This photodrama is teeming with scenes of impressing magnitude. There is a railroad wreck, which fairly makes one gasp as the two onrushing engines meet in a head-on collision, a bombardment and sinking of a warship, scenes depicting the firing of New York, the march of the enemy on New York City, the numerous horribly realistic battle scenes and New York vitagraphed from an aeroplane. All of these scenes serve to make this production one well worth seeing and one which is of interest to every true American citizen.

Wallace Moore, the well-known theatrical manager, is managing this multiple reel production during its run at the Olympic theater. In talking with him it was learned that the operators, orchestra and property men, all of whom deserve special commendation for their splendid work in projecting and adding realism to the production, were brought here from the Vitagraph theater of New York City. A review of this picture will be found on page 361 of the August 21 edition of Motography.

THE RAVER FILM CORPORATION

Newly Formed Organization, Headed by Harry Raver, Will Produce Augustus Thomas' Plays with Notable Stars in Leading Roles

The Raver Film Corporation, with Harry R. Raver at the helm, will produce pictures with no fixed standard of length determined in advance. Heretofore feature productions, especially those released on feature programs, have been of uniform length—five reels. Mr. Raver intends to disregard precedent and tell the story of each production in a natural way, consuming as much or little footage as necessary, whether the length be four reels or twelve.

Each production is to be offered on an individual basis and there will be no fixed release dates. Sufficient time will be devoted to each picture to bring out fine details in staging and acting.

While Mr. Raver admits this method will add to the cost, yet he hopes for such a high quality product that Raver films will command higher prices and popularize themselves quickly, thus covering the difference in cost.

Much of the additional time, however, will be taken up with laboratory detail. Here each scene will be given individual attention; appropriate tones and tints are to beautify each production.

The Raver Film Corporation was formed for the purpose of producing in motion pictures the plays of Augustus Thomas and other successes. The Thomas collection numbers twenty-nine standard plays of nation-wide popularity and is conceded to be the most valuable list of picture material controlled by any producing organization.

Harry R. Raver is president of the company and owns control of the $300,000 capital stock. Con T. Kennedy, owner of the Great Kennedy Shows, a twenty-six car western organization, is vice-president. Well-known showmen and theatrical men make up the list of share holders. No stock will be sold to the public, only close personal friends of Mr. Raver being allowed to participate.

No definite market connection has been anticipated. Mr. Raver intends that each production shall be exploited according to its importance and strictly on merit. He believes that features are bound to vary in quality, no matter how carefully produced, depending on the popularity of a star or the fame of a play and they should not be assembled under one class and sold or rented for a fixed price.

He bases his theory on his experience with "Cabiria," which was presented at two dollars admission, top prices, as against other of his films playing at five and ten cents admission. Nearly a million dollars was taken in with "Cabiria," while twenty or thirty thousand dollars was the average on other productions.

"A good production will sell at a profit," said Mr. Raver, "regardless of programs and combinations, as there is a growing demand for the distinctive, exclusive picture."

Percy Winter, son of William Winter, the dean of dramatic critics in America, has been engaged as director of productions. His experience as a stage director dates back twenty years and includes association with the most prominent producing firms in this country. For two years Mr. Winter has been staging motion pictures with one of the largest and oldest studios.

James J. Corbett has been engaged to head the cast selected for Augustus Thomas' famous old play, "The Other Girl," one of the first productions which the Raver Film Corporation will stage in motion pictures. Many interesting incidents in Corbett's early life will be revived in "The Other Girl." The scenario was prepared by George Dubois Proctor in collaboration with Mr. Thomas.

METRO'S MUSICAL SCORES

B. A. Rolfe and Maxwell Karger, Two Famous Musicians, Are Co-operating with Music Publisher to Perfect Accompaniment

Appreciating the importance of the introduction of appropriate music to accompany feature film productions it is difficult to find two men in the producing end of motion pictures so eminently fitted to pass on music as B. A. Rolfe, president of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., and Maxwell Karger, general manager of the same concern. Both are accomplished musicians of the highest order and both men are devoting considerable time just now in arranging and selecting artistic musical programs to accompany the elaborate Metro feature pictures produced at the Rolfe studios. In this work they act in an advisory capacity with S. M. Berg, of the staff of G. Schirmer, Inc., music publishers, who provide a musical program for all Metro pictures to exhibitors. Mr. Berg, one of the ablest musicians in the country, is an expert who is devoting his talents to the study of motion pictures with a view of writing a musical program which shall exactly fit feature pictures in every particular. His programs not only include excerpts from the classics, but the best American composers are called upon to write original music suited to the individual picture.

B. A. Rolfe.

Both Mr. Rolfe and Mr. Karger can qualify as experts in matters musical, both of them, before entering the motion picture industry having been wonderfully successful musicians. Before entering the motion picture field Mr. Rolfe staged and managed several big musical productions that were innovations in vaudeville, including "Ye Colonial Septette," "The Pianophiends," "The Bride Shop" and "The Military Octette." Incidentally, Mr. Rolfe is one of America's greatest cornet soloists.

Mr. Karger entered the amusement field as a musician. Although the fact is not generally known among the fellows in the motion picture industry, Mr. Karger was concert master of the Russian Symphony orchestra and for seven years was first violinist at the Metropolitan Opera House. He toured this country and many foreign lands with Mme. Sembrich and Jean de Reska.

MARIE DORO IN "DIPLOMACY"

Famous Players to Screen Celebrated Charles Frohman Success with Dainty Star in Role She Made Famous.

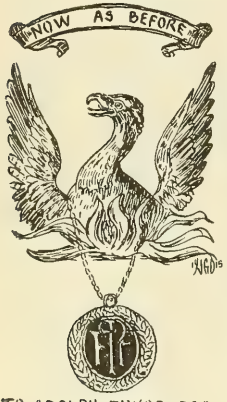
Marie Doro, who created a distinct screen sensation in her first appearance in motion pictures, in the Famous Players Film Company's production of the "Morals of Marcus," and who has repeated this triumph in that company's latest release, "The White Pearl," will, upon her return from Los Angeles, where she will remain for a short time, appear in an elaborate photo-production of the great dramatic success, "Diplomacy," by Sardou. The presentation of this celebrated play on the screen was this week arranged by the Famous Players Film Company through its theatrical affiliation with the Charles Frohman Company, which controls this dramatic property.

Interest attaches to the plan to present Miss Doro in this screen adaptation because of the fact that in the oral version of this famous play she attained one of her greatest stage triumphs. It was only a year ago that Miss Doro co-starred with William Gillette and Blanche Bates in the revival of the great Sardou play at the Empire theater, New York, under Frohman management. This revival was hailed as one of the most notable theatrical events of the season, and Miss Doro scored a great personal success in the role which she will now present on the screen. It was also in "Diplomacy" that Miss Doro won her greatest success abroad.

The scenes of the renowned drama are laid at Monte Carlo and Paris, where Baron Stein and Comtesse Zicka, spies, attempt to steal important British state papers from the first secretary of the embassy, the guilt being cleverly shifted to the secretary's bride. The plot is so splendidly constructed that it is almost fascinating to watch the weaving of a web of suspicion about Dora and the revealing of her innocence. It has an international flavor and hints of war and diplomatic complications, spying and official deception, making it a timely production in these days of warfare.

"Diplomacy" will be the ninth Charles Frohman production to be transferred to the screen by the Famous Players, who have already presented feature adaptations of "The Conspiracy," "The Morals of Marcus," "David Harum," "Are You a Mason?" "The Pretty Sister of Jose," "The Dictator," "The Fatal Card," and "Zaza."

Mutual to Build in Fargo



The announcement was made last week that the Mutual Film Corporation had decided to make Fargo its northwest headquarters, says the Fargo Forum. For the time being temporary quarters have been secured at 11 Broadway pending the completion of the new building which the company will build on Fifth street north. The new building when completed will be 30x80 feet and will be the last word in film exchanges. It is expected to be ready for occupancy about November 1.

B. E. Reed, former manager of the Fargo film exchange, has been slated for manager and is now awaiting the arrival of office fixtures and supplies which he expects to arrive this week. The local office will handle the regular Mutual pictures as well as the Master pictures and serials.

Mr. Reed is one of the veterans of the film game and with his wide acquaintance and knowledge of the northwest and its needs, will prove an ideal representative for the Mutual people.

Suggests Phoenix as Crest

Many are the tributes which were received by the Famous Players Film Company after the fire which totally destroyed the Twenty-sixth street studio of that company in New York. The most remarkable and the most unique form of felicitation which has reached Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, thus far, however, is a suggested coat-of-arms for the Famous Players, sent him by John Gavenlock Dickson of Galt, Ontario, which is reproduced herewith. The familiar Phoenix, arising from the flames, is of course symbolic of the indomitable spirit of the organization which took up active work on the replacing of the old studio while the ruins were still burning.

Convention Favors National Board

The Ohio branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America assembled in convention at Columbus, Ohio, on October 19, for a special session at the call of Max Stearn, president of Ohio Branch No. 1, for the purpose of protesting against the action of the Ohio Board of Censors in rejecting "Hypocrites" and "The Birth of a Nation." Lem S. Miller of Cincinnati was made temporary chairman of the morning session, which opened at 10 o'clock. He introduced George J. Karb, mayor of Columbus, who welcomed the exhibitors and said among other things that he favored a national board of censorship rather than a state board or municipal board. Max Stearn, president of the league, was next introduced. He gave a resume of the work which had been done by the league, citing the number of obnoxious bills that were introduced in the last legislature and which had been killed through the efforts of the officers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. He said that he was of the opinion that the exhibitors of Ohio were ready to give up censorship when a proper substitute that would be satisfactory to the public was presented. He said also that he hoped that the exchange man and the manufacturer would help to solve this difficult problem.

At the afternoon session Charles Williams, chairman of the Ohio Board of Censors, Maud Murray Miller and W. R. Wilson, other members of the board, made addresses. Many of the exhibitors present had seen the picture "Hypocrites," and were of the opinion that it should be passed by the board. Those who had seen "The Birth of a Nation" felt that it should also pass. In the evening a banquet and cabaret entertainment was given. John H. Arnold, lieutenant-governor of Ohio, was the guest of honor. In his speech he also approved the statement made by Mayor Karb to the effect that he was against state and municipal censorship, but rather favored a national board.

The following is a list of exhibitors who attended the convention:

W. D. Belknap, Royal theater, Columbus, Ohio; Charles Weigel, Alhambra theater, 146 West Fifth street, Cincinnati, Ohio; Lem S. Miller, Waldorf American Company, National and Freeman, Cincinnati, Ohio; Leo E. Dwyer, Strand theater, Columbus, Ohio; J. A. Maddox, Majestic theater, Columbus, Ohio; Edward Kohl, National theater, 7507 Linwood avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; B. J. Gorey, Wilmar theater, Columbus, Ohio; O. J. Sybert, Hippodrome theater, Marietta, Ohio; C. A. Frantz, Strand theater, Cambridge, Ohio; J. M. Kaufman, Gallipolis theater, Gallipolis, Ohio; Paul Stuffer; Majestic theater, 499-501 East Main street, and Home theater, 1176 East Main street, Columbus, Ohio; Fred M. Tynes, Columbia theater, Portsmouth, Ohio; Robert J. Harmon,, Exhibit theater, Columbus, Ohio; C. A. Smith, Star theater, Chillicothe, Ohio; E. L. Stanton, Summit theater, 2188 Summit street, Columbus, Ohio; C. R. Walcutt, Northern theater, Columbus, Ohio; Ed. C. Paul, Gus Sun Amusement Co., Columbia theater, Alhambra theater, Springfield, Ohio; John H. Broomhall, Jefferson theater, Hamilton, Ohio; Will C. Bettis, Alhambra theater, Toledo, Ohio; Al. Taylor, Taylor theater, 61 Martin avenue, Columbus, Ohio; John D. Kessler, Star theater, Sandusky, Ohio; W. C. Quimby, Quimby theater, Zanesville, Ohio; Edward Neugebauer, Theater Victoria, Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Steward, Alhambra theater, 2159 North High street, Columbus, Ohio; J. W. Nichols, Gem theater, Somerset, Ohio; S. C. Stancliffe, Subway theater, Schiller & Parsons avenues, Columbus, Ohio; F. H. Pfeiffer, Northern theater, Columbus, Ohio; D. L. Richards, Bide-A-Wee theater, Columbus, Ohio; S. V. Dempsey, Crystal theater, 2573 North High street, Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Sprague, Olmypia and Majestic, Bellaire, Ohio; F. A. Rosevelt, Superba theater, Columbus, Ohio; F. L. Emmert, The Marvel, Cincinnati, Ohio; A. G. Hettesheimer, Orpheum theater, Cincinnati, Ohio; R. C. Fowler, Fremont, Ohio; J. H. Martin, 434 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Al. White, Imperial theater, Zanesville, Ohio; Harry W. Kress, May's Opera House, Piqua, Ohio; F. E. Wylie, New theater, Columbus, Ohio; S. W. Reilly, Champion, 1068 Livingston avenue, Columbus, Ohio; Fred P. Dwyer, Strand theater, Columbus, Ohio; Warner W. Miller, White Palace theater, Mount Vernon, Ohio; Will J. Dusenberry, Grand theater, Columbus, Ohio; Val. Rayburg, 19 S. Main street, Dayton, Ohio; F. D. King, Superba theater, Delaware, Ohio; Otto Luedeking, Cincinnati, Ohio; P. G. Charos, Coshocton, Ohio; W. M. Welsh, Schilley theater, Columbus, Ohio; C. R. Hirbig, Mystic theater, Coshocton, Ohio; W. H. Schull, Pastime theater, Martins Ferry, Ohio; Lew Foster, Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, Ohio; J. A. Zinn, Marietta, Ohio; Max Stearns, Majestic theater, Columbus, Ohio; W. R. Wilson, Columbus, Ohio; S. E. Wall, Plain City, Ohio; C. O. Steinmetz, Wooster, Ohio.

It is announced that Milton E. Hoffman has been appointed assistant to the president of the Peerless (World Film) studio at Fort Lee, N. J. Henry Bayard, the present general manager of the Peerless studio, is moving in a similar capacity to the World Film's Paragon studio, also at Fort Lee, N. J., which will shortly be opened.

The Second Annual Meeting of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation held on Monday, October 4, at the offices of the Corporation, 226-228-230 West 35th street, New York City, was an entirely harmonious gathering. James D. Law was unanimously re-elected president and Herbert W. Taylor secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

Metro Announces Forthcoming Features

OLD FAVORITES CONTINUE

METRO'S second autumnal announcement includes four big feature productions in which a number of noted stars and favorites of the screen and stage will be presented. Simultaneously, work has begun upon this group of pretentious picture masterpieces under the foremost makers of photoplays. A fifth feature picture will be put in production shortly, when Mary Miles Minter finishes her work in "Barbara Frietchie" at the Popular Plays and Players studio at Fort Lee, N. J. Among the artists who will be seen in the new Metro features are Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Emily Stevens, Lionel Barrymore, Henry Bergman, George Le Guere, Valli Valli, Grace Elliston and Edward Brennan. This will mark Miss Elliston's initial appearance upon the screen, after a successful career as a star in spoken drama.

Following the phenomenal success of Emily Stevens in "Cora" and "Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman," two Rolfe-Metro features, every effort possible was directed to obtain a third vehicle suitable for this talented dramatic actress. This was found in "The House of Tears," a powerful five-act photodrama. It affords Miss Stevens unlimited opportunity to display her great scope of histrionic artistry and genius. An unsually strong supporting cast will be seen with Miss Stevens, including Henry Bergman, the eminent dramatic character actor. The picture will be directed by Edwin Carewe, who has many Metro triumphs to his credit, and will be produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., for the Metro program.

Another great Metro achievement will be the five-part picturization of Booth Tarkington's famous novel, "The Turmoil." Valli Valli will be starred in this production, playing the delightful role of "Mary Vetrees." George Le Guere, the master delineator of young men parts on the screen, will be featured with Valli Valli in the lovable and poetical role of "Bibbs Sheridan," one of the best characterizations ever penned by Mr. Tarkington. Many people will be used in this production, and it will be directed by Edgar Jones, who has just finished "The Woman Pays," a five-part feature picture in which Valli Valli is starred. The Columbia Pictures Corporation will produce "The Turmoil" for release on the Metro program.

Grace Elliston, the gifted dramatic actress who has been starred in many productions by Charles Frohman on Broadway, but is perhaps best known throughout the United States and Canada for her wonderfully artistic performance in "The Lion and the Mouse," is the newest star added to the long list of Metro artists. She will make her bow on the screen in a five-act picture which will be produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc. This photodrama is from an original script, and is yet unnamed. John W. Noble, who has just finished "One Million Dollars," in which William Faversham was starred, will direct the Elliston production. Edward Brennan, who became famous as "Dumbar" of Irvin S. Cobb's first drama of the screen, and who has since appeared in support of Valli Valli and William Faversham, will be Miss Elliston's leading man.

Lionel Barrymore, who has long been a favorite star in the silent drama, will have the stellar role in the original five-part photoplay, "The Passing Throng." William Nigh, under whose direction "Emmy of Stork's Nest," with Mary Miles Minter, was made, is the author of "The Passing Throng," and he will also direct it. A strong company of players will be seen in support of Mr. Barrymore in this production. The picture will be produced for the Metro program by the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.

After "Barbara Frietchie," Mary Miles Minter's next picture will be the five-act photoplay, "The Green Witch," a picturization of the novel by J. Breckenridge Ellis. Mr. Ellis is also the author of "Emmy of Stork's Nest," which is now meeting with a tremendous reception throughout the country as a picture of power rather than "punch." The scenes in "The Green Witch" are also laid in the Ozark mountains, giving Miss Minter another opportunity to play the refreshing role of a care-free, hoydenish girl of the mountains, similar to her characterization of "Emmy." Charles Horan will direct "The Green Witch" for the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.

These productions are ready for Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne and their supporting company of noted screen artists, who recently arrived in New York from the Quality Pictures Corporation studio in Hollywood, California, but it is not definitely decided which will be put in production first. They are "Richard Carvel," a picturization of the gripping historical novel of the same name by Winston Churchill; "The Yellow Dove," another picturization from a novel by George Gibbs, which D. Appleton & Co. will publish this month, and "Pidgin Island," a Harold MacGrah thriller of international politics which gives Mr. Bushman exceptional opportunities.

Marguerite Snow, who is now in California, completing "Rosemary, That's for Remembrance," will come East soon with her own company when she will be starred alone in a production for the Metro program.

Edmund Breese will be seen in "The Spell of the Yukon," the third of the Robert W. Serviss poems picturized for his especial stellar talents.

Three new photo dramas, of a decidedly new type, have been selected for Mme. Petrova, and work will be started on them immediately upon her return from her road tour under the management of the Messrs. Shubert.

Pathe Advertising Dept. Reorganized

General Manager L. J. Gasnier of Pathe, has reorganized his general publicity department to take care of the enormous increase in business since he has assumed active direction of the Pathe American interests.

W. A. S. Douglas, who recently returned from the Paris office, has been appointed general publicity director, with entire control of all branches of advertising. Mr. Douglas has also charge of the publicity departments of the Paris and London offices so far as Pathe American pictures are concerned.

Under the new regime, George A. Smith becomes serial syndicate director. P. A. Parsons will remain, as before, trade advertising and publicity manager. A. R. Caughey remains in charge of posters. B. Millhauser becomes editor of Pathe's weekly house publication. H. J. Walsh assumes the duties of assistant syndicate manager.

Pathe will continue to run two film series at the same time. The stories of one will appear in the Sunday papers throughout the country and those of the other, in the dailies. The general direction of the Sunday serial will be in the hands of Assistant Managing Director M. Ramirez Torres; that of the daily will be taken care of by Mr. Douglas. Mr. Smith will have charge of the syndicating organization of both Pathe series.

Harry C. Myers of Universal

"The happy-go-lucky big boy of the movies," as Harry C. Myers has been denominated, is now grown up. His past year as Universal leading man and producer of Victor pictures is responsible for the change, and now with the beginning of his second year the fruits of his experience will be seen.

Harry Meyers.

Mr. Myers' education as a screen actor and producer has not by any means been acquired in a single year, as every one knows who remembers his work as juvenile in the old Lubin comedies featuring Florence Lawrence and Arthur Johnson, to say nothing of his succeeding years there in which he advanced himself from a secondary player to the position of leading man, then as director. In the latter capacity Mr. Myers established himself with the production of the Lubin six-reel feature "The Drug Terror."

The responsibilities of Mr. Myers' position, as well as those cares which he gladly assumes in order that his pictures may be improved—this has broadened him. Instead of leaving the selection of properties to an assistant, Mr. Myers supervises every detail of his productions, even going so far as to design and paint suitable pictures and search shops for certain novelties in furnishings. Together with this he has written a number of comedies, "The Bathing Suit Salesman," "Baby's Two Toofs," and "Father's Child" calling into play his gifts as author, producer, inventor of unique mechanical effects, and, of course, his resourceful comedy acting.

After a strenuous period of continuous acting, which stretched itself out through spring, summer and early fall, Richard C. Travers, Essanay leading man, at last succeeded in breaking away from work long enough to snatch a much needed vacation. He departed from Chicago on board a Lake Michigan freighter bound for the Canadian northland, where he was born and passed his boyhood.

Novel "Epic" Cartoons

C. R. Macauley, one of the foremost of living cartoonists, whose reputation abroad is as secure as it is in this country, and whose cartoons have been known for a quarter of a century in the great papers of New York, has invented an interesting method of reproducing his work in motion pictures. Within the next ten days his art will be shown on the motion picture screens throughout the country, in what Mr. Macauley calls "Epic Cartoons."

The problem the cartoonist had to solve was a method of visualizing every stroke of the pen without the use of thousands of drawings, which took months to make, assemble and photograph before the public saw them on the screen as "animated cartoons."

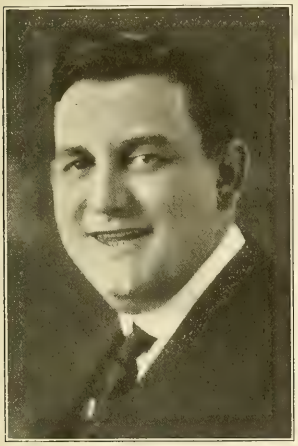
A patent recently granted and others pending bid fair to revolutionize this ever popular branch of motion picture art, for Mr. Macauley has solved his problem and can now work at top speed, as though making a rush cartoon for tomorrow's paper. Aside from the wonderfully life-like motion of his characters and animals, the cartoonist has bridged the difficulty of having his moving objects cast their shadows as they go, a thing heretofore unaccomplished. The drawing of the figures in combination with the employment of double exposures provide startling revelations in the way of effects to be accomplished in motion picture photography, and open up a virgin and almost limitless field.

Changes at Edison Studio

Along with the changes in personnel, the Edison studio itself is being considerably altered to make room for the new organization which is now headed by L. W. McChesney, formerly stationed at Orange, N. J. New offices are being built in, where formerly stood dressing rooms, the idea being to centralize each department's work for greater efficiency. Mr. McChesney has transferred several of his office staff at Orange to the studio. R. H. Webber, who was formerly an aide to Mr. McChesney at the Orange headquarters, now occupies the position formerly held by Miss Bannon. John Gill is also now stationed in the Bedford Park studio, which promises to become the headquarters for the Edison motion picture division.

Producer Not Yet Selected

We are in receipt of the following from the Pathe Exchange, Inc.:



"In view of recent published statements with reference to the coming Pathe series 'Who Is Guilty?' which statements have been at variance with those sent out from this office, we desire to emphasize the fact that 'Who Is Guilty?' is the property of Pathe; that the producer has not yet been decided upon; that before long we will publicly announce as the author of the stories one of the most famous women writers of the time; and that George B. Seitz, the Pathe scenario editor, will write the scenarios and has already finished several."

William Weisfeld, vice-president and general manager of the E. & G. Film Service, Inc., located at 110 West Fortieth street, New York City, Room 603, has closed a very profitable contract with the Associated Film Sales Corporation, for its program for Greater New York, Northern New Jersey and Connecticut.

Dodging Bullets in the War Zone

BY JOSEPH FARNHAM

LET me say unto you all forcefully and completely that I haven't one iota of respect for the marksmanship of the German soldiers, for, through three long months I presented to those sharpshooters three hundred pounds or more of good American fat, broadside, to their "Jack Johnsons," 77's and 305's, howitzers, rifles, bombs and bayonets, and I have come back to my beloved Broadway (and Broad street, Philly,) intact, unblemished save for the loss of thirty-five pounds which goes for both avoirdupois and Johnny Bull's money.

Joe Farnham.

Lend me your ears, or rather your eyes, while I tell to you of the popularity of the camera with these severe fighting gentlemen of the French and English armies. It looks to them like a sure case of typhoid, the measles, a snake in the grass or poison ivy or any other thing they'd like to exterminate. No man and his purpose is honest to them if he carry a tripod and camera. With those funny little black cases containing cameras and photographic material attached to his luggage array, he's a spy sure and sunrise is the time he does his turn. Whether he intends to bring back to the old folks at home a few intimate pictures of shells on their way, or of dying men, or whether he wants just a few feet of a building that once was, it matters not. There is no line in the eyes of these men of war. That's why now I climb languidly into my seat when they force these pictures of war on me and laugh inwardly and snugly at the way the public eats them up and apparently enjoys them, what with the "Ohs" and "Ahs," when the sub-title flashes on "The Charge at Bziz" or "The Drive of the Opunk Army on Pazaz."

For these three months I spoke of earlier in this dissertation, I searched the horizon for somebody else with a camera, and for three months I searched in vain. Even the inoffensive English gentlemen officers were barred by headquarters from taking kodak pictures of their pals to send home to the more timid lads, so where was the chance for the rank outsider?

True, the French government granted permission to four French concerns to "film the war," but the cautious French government also prescribed that Mr. Camera Man must be an enlisted man in the army, and enlisted men usually stay where they are put, and in addition, if a battle springs up somewhere near Mr. Camera Man it's a hundred to one shot he'll "can" the camera and take a chance at self defense with his trusty little rifle.

In addition, the French government is remarkably curious as to what these little "camera fellers" have taken and they look over every half inch of their film with a wonderfully keen eye, aided by the mircroscope, and then tell what's to be and what's not to be—America and the rest of the world receives what the Frenchman says and no more.

As for the attitude of the German gentlemen, I cannot tell, but I do know that we still know how to cut a picture of a battery at practice fire, insert a flash of a shell landing in the midst of an unseen enemy, and then cut back to the battery still at practice again—and thereby hangs the so-called war feature, ninety-nine times out of a hundred.

At this point of this ramble, good, kind hearted reader, you begin to ask of yourself, "Did this 'ere feller git eny films hisself?" and so the reply comes right back at you, "Yep," and "This is how 'twas did."

Liverpool greeted my eyes on the morning of one day called "Der Tag," the eighteenth day of February last, a morn on which Mr. Kaiser, boss of Germany, decreed along with his friends of the "Rich Stag," that all ocean travelers who were not amphibians must sink. Some way or other I had considerable respect for this declaration. I don't know exactly why, but I guess it was because just a few days before the good old Lusitania had made a mad dash ahead of a submarine over the same water in which we were at that particular time—so I, too, stayed up on the top deck all night and recognized each buoy as we sailed up toward the Mersey river, as a periscope.

When I had finally put foot on the landing stage at Liverpool, had any one been looking closely they might have perceived my kneeling right down on terra firma and fondling a little loose dust—but I'm mighty thankful when I am thankful, and it mattered not to me what the common folk thought.

Then London, with its people and soldiers, and more soldiers and people. Immediately I began to wave the marvelous credentials I carried before the War Department officials. Just as quickly the waving stopped, for I realized how much the war depended upon me and my credentials—nothing and not a bit.

So off to France, I declared, to see if France and its departments would be more lenient. I found it better, much better in fact, nearly entirely well, except that the beard bedecked army officer at the Boulogne docks insisted that if I would pass on to Paris, my little black camera cases and their precious contents should be left behind. I argued for full thirty minutes, but said man with the lip muff remained obdurate, and finally admitted that I spoke in vain for "Anglais I comprenez not," he termed and said it. Finally a letter which I carried from Ambassador Page at London to Ambassador Sharpe at Paris, got me through and, with the camera pressed close to my heart, I was again on my way.

Two days was the term of delay before I "got to" the genial French senator who fostered the cause of the Carnegie Peace Foundation, for which organization I made the trip, and it was because of the name Carnegie and not Farnham, that he eventually saw me. Still he was a man, noble and big, whom I will never let pass from my memory—and particularly his letter to General Joffre, commandant of the French army. It saved me from jail many, many times, got me out many times, and made it possible for me to get the pictures which I did get.

Aladdin's funny little lamp had nothing on this selfsame letter. It made it possible for me to bring back a collection of pictures which I can justly boast of as being different from any others that have been brought back to this country, far different from the riff-raff which the public of America has been asked to gaze upon as authentic—pictures taken of maneuvers, the little joker war films which were taken years ago.

Where are the pictures of these tremendous battles, which come at night nine out of ten times, barring the possibility of photography? Do they ever show the figure of the mighty lecturer in them? Not unless it be a close-up of the distinguished camera man talking to General Von Blitz or Prof. Waf, which probably was taken ten miles back from the line at the old barn headquarters, or at least might just as well have been.

But do not construe that with this magical letter to General Joffre, I cared to exercise a permit to stand on the brink of trenches and take pictures—No! Because quite strangely the enemy 35 or 40 yards off in another trench never would take the trouble to holler over first, "May we shoot at you?" They are, as a rule, mighty impulsive. So my work was done where the rifles were not.

I did foolishly butt into Rheims one day when the wild German artillery men decided to do a little bombarding. That was on the tenth day of April and the good book in the archives of the Prefect of the Marne at Chalon-Sur-Marne in the custody of Chef d'Cabinet Bruyere will show that on that selfsame day of April 10, three thousand German 77's and 305's bounced from the walls of the Town Hall and other buildings of Rheims. The day carried with it enough excitement in every minute to satisfy me for many years to come. During this fire we "nonchalantly" took pictures, three thousand feet of them, every bit under fire, but when we got back and had the film developed they didn't look a bit unlike thousands of other feet of film we had taken of other shell-devastated towns far, far away from the range of artillery.

I saw more than five hundred miles of this little scrap, nearly the entire western front, enough to satisfy me, you may be sure. It was a wonderful experience, great, worth a lot in my book of experiences, but thanks only to the bad marksmanship I'm back here to live a bit longer, I hope, and enjoy the thoughts of those three months. Will I go back? Not unless Capt. Kidd comes along and tells me that he hid that bunch of treasure somwhere on the battlefield. And even then I'd hire someone else to watch it until they cut out this little peevishness all Europe is indulging in, while I perch myself on a hill well in the background and watch the watcher I hire.

Freuler Catches Film Infringer

The success of the film version of "Damaged Goods" released as a special feature by the Mutual Film Corporation has tempted infringers and imitators. A concern doing business as the State Feature Film Company, 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York, released a three reel picture entitled "A Victim of Sin" and advertised it with one sheets said to imitate the Mutual's advertising in make-up and announced the picture as "A Photo Drama Based on That Great Moral Play, 'Damaged Goods.'"

A copy of the offending paper found its way into the Mutual offices one rainy afternoon two weeks ago. President John R. Freuler, without delaying to summon representatives of the legal department or others, put the poster in his pocket and stalked off up Forty-fifth street to attend to the matter himself.

Presenting himself as a prospective customer, Mr. Freuler was offered "A Victim of Sin" at a very low figure, while its value just at this time when "the Mutual is advertising Damaged Goods," was pointed out to him. At this juncture Mr. Freuler handed his business card to the person in charge at the State Feature Film office, whereupon, it is reported, a wilted individual accepted warnings and made solemn promises "never to do it again."

Upon the evidence gathered by President Freuler an application for injunction was made in the Supreme Court of New York, American Film Company, Inc., plaintiff, against Eva and William Feinberg, defendants. The lurid one-sheets meanwhile were carted into the Mutual's office and their authors promised to be good.

On Saturday, October 9, Justice Mitchell L. Erlanger signed an injunction restraining the State Feature Film Company from spreading advertisements bearing the name of "Damaged Goods" over its lithos and posters. The injunction was served on William Feinberg.

The Mutual Film Corporation has been informed of similar infringements in Chicago, Boston, Seattle and a number of other points and local legal representatives have been instructed to institute the necessary court actions.

In connection with the matter the legal department of the Mutual Film Corporation has issued an announcement declaring that prosecutions will be instituted against all persons or concerns which exhibit or advertise any infringements on "Damaged Goods" or by any illegal expedient seek to capitalize the advertising and unusual publicity given to this production.

New Producing Organization

Representing a group of capitalists, John L. Dudley, actively associated with various large corporations in New York, together with Jesse J. Goldburg, formerly secretary and general manager of the Life Photo Film Corporation, have organized for the purpose of producing feature photoplays.

The plan of organization has been formulated for the past six months. The first release of the combination is in active preparation, and will be completed within the course of the next four weeks. The name of the production itself has not been given out for publication; some of the facts in connection with this first release and a view of the plans of the organizers have been gathered.

The financial backers of the enterprise represent some of the largest financial interests in the United States. The organization, when completed, will release one picture a week. Contracts are now being entered into with stage and photoplay stars of international reputation.

Directors and a general staff will engage in active production work immediately upon the completion of the first picture; this first release deals with a subject never before visualized, and almost daring in its conception.

George DeCarlton, who has directed some of the most successful photo plays released, and up to a month past was associated with one of the largest picture concerns in the country, has been engaged as assistant to the general manager, and supervisor of productions. Joseph Smiley, for the past three years leading director with Lubin, has been engaged as director for the initial production.

The cast, which was selected after a weeding out process of three weeks, among others includes Percy Standing, Miss Lucy Cotton and Jack Hopkins.

The temporary quarters of the organization, pending incorporation, is at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City. The entire cast has left for Jacksonville, Florida, for the exterior scenes of its initial production.

BERNHARDT IN "JEANNE DORE"

Louis Mercanton Has Produced "Jeanne Dore" With Madame Bernhardt and the Original Cast From the Sarah Bernhardt Theater, Paris.

The great film "Jeanne Dore," with Madame Bernhardt, made for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is now complete, and will shortly be offered as one of the series of photoplay masterpieces under the Broadway Universal Feature brand.

This picture was produced by Louis Mercanton, who was responsible for the two other pictures in which Madam Bernhardt has appeared, "Queen Elizabeth" and "Adrienne L'Couvreure." Mr. Mercanton is a French-Swiss and was educated in England. He has been Madame Bernhardt's personal manager for over five years. "Jeanne Dore" has been adapted by Mr. Mercanton from the play by Tristan Bernard, which Madame Bernhardt was presenting at the Sarah Bernhardt theater in Paris when she was compelled to retire to undergo her operation. Madame Bernhardt considers this story her favorite of recent years, in that it offers her the fullest possible scope for the expression of her own individuality.

Bernhardt has taken the greatest possible interest in the details of the scenes, and this enthusiasm is reflected in her work before the camera. Never, it is claimed, has the Divine Sarah acted so magnificently as in "Jeanne Dore." The principal artistes who appear with her were in the original production at the Sarah Bernhardt theater, Paris. Mdlle. Seylor again assumes the role of Madame Tissot, Mdlle. Costa plays her part of Louise, and Mons. Raymond Bernard also plays his old part of Jacques Dore. It is interesting to note that Raymond Bernard is the son of Tristan Bernard, the author of "Jeanne Dore."

In "Jeanne Dore" Madame Bernhardt appears within ten feet of the audience. Her millions of admirers will have their first opportunity of seeing her act at really close quarters. All the wonderful subtlety of expression which is Madame Bernhardt's greatest attribute, can be studied and enjoyed in "Jeanne Dore" under more favorable circumstances than ever before. It will serve, too, to demonstrate one of Madame Bernhardt's own theories on the importance of the eye. "The eye" says Bernhardt, "is the mirror of the brain, and the cinema has given to eye-play an infinitely greater scope for power and importance."

Another phase of cinema acting which appeals strongly to Madame Bernhardt is the shortness of each scene, which means that the faculties can be concentrated to a much higher degree than on the stage, where some scenes last half an hour to an hour.

Bernhardt was asked how she liked acting before the camera instead of before her usual enthusiastic audiences. She replied, "A true artiste needs no audience to assist her art." She agreed, however, that the camera called for the most acute concentration of mind on the work in hand.

Beverly Will Miss The Pacific

Beverly Bayne, who has just arrived in New York from Hollywood, Cal., where she played opposite Francis X. Bushman in the Quality-Metro production, "Pennington's Choice," is exceedingly fond of swimming and sun bathing, which she will undoubtedly miss in the East. Miss Bayne is an expert diver and Quality Star Enjoying a Sunbath.

in the accompanying snapshot she is shown sunning herself after a dip in the briny Pacific. Miss Bayne will remain in the East indefinitely, as Metro has arranged for her to appear with Mr. Bushman in the numerous feature productions in New York, beginning with "Richard Carvel" and "The Yellow Dove."

David Horsley Signs Cummings

David Horsley has engaged Irving Cummings to play the leading male roles with one of his companies producing Centaur features, in which the Bostock animals also appear as motion picture actors.

By the engagement of Mr. Cummings, Mr. Horsley adds another popular photoplayer to his already long list. As the leading man in the North American Film Corporation's successful serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," now running in many theaters throughout the country, Mr. Cummings scored a hit and is, as a result, very much in the public eye today. His feats in this serial stamped him, in addition to his expressive powers, as a man of intrepidity, to whom the playing of the most dangerous scenes are only a part of a day's work.

Mr. Cummings' initial bow as an actor was made with Edwin Arden's stock company in Washington, D. C. This engagement was followed by two seasons with William H. Crane in "David Harum." The next two years he was with "Texas" and then for a season each with "Way Down East" and "The Man of the Hour" respectively. Following this he joined Lillian Russell's company on tour in "In Search of a Sinner."

His first screen experience was in Powers films, in which he played leads. A year with Pathe Freres followed. From there he went to the Reliance, where he was starred in big features. He left Reliance and went back to Pathe, who featured him in multiple reel subjects. From this concern he went to Thanhouser and when "The Diamond from the Sky" was prepared for production the North American Film Corporation selected him above all others for the leading role. Here Mr. Cummings registered his greatest success and added to his already large number of followers.

"ELAINE" CAPTURES LONDON

Unique Advertising Campaign and Trade Showing in Various Cities Gets Pathe Serial Off on Long Run in British Isles

The British Isles are in the throes of the hottest advertising campaign that has ever been attempted there. Pathe's big American serial success, "The Exploits of Elaine," "The New Exploits of Elaine," and the "Romance of Elaine" are taking the British exhibitors by storm, aided by a truly remarkable use of newspapers, billboards and other methods of publicity. Three months ago W. A. S. Douglas, formerly "serial" manager for Pathe in this country, was sent by Charles Pathe to London with the prints of "Elaine." To Mr. Douglas is largely due the extraordinary newspaper co-operation which is being given. The News of the World, the largest newspaper in the world with a circulation of over 2,000,000, was induced to run the stories of "Elaine" in its Sunday edition. Through its allied newspapers the stories will appear all over Great Britain. The arrangements with all these papers were made upon the basis of the entire number of thirty-six stories. The publicity campaign was started six weeks before the date of release of the pictures—October 18. Special ten hour trade shows were held in all the large cities of the United Kingdom at which the entire first fourteen episodes were put upon the screen. At intervals the projection was stopped and the exhibitors listened to speeches on the publicity program and other topics of vital interest. Refreshments of an elaborate kind were served at these showings, and the bookings obtained by the viewing of the pictures alone amounted to sixty-five prints. After the newspaper campaign was started twenty additional prints were necessary, making the remarkable total of eighty-five prints.

Phyllis Bruno.

It was found necessary to open up a special serial department office at 84 Wardour street, London, in charge of E. A. Boden, formerly Leeds manager for Pathe. The publicity for the serial was placed in charge of Miss Phyllis Bruno, who in light of her achievements in getting publicity for the serial has shown herself a true "live wire" in the American sense. She designed the posters and organized the poster campaign and fine thirty-six sheet posters were put up all over England. The London busses were also utilized and for weeks have been carrying around huge signs advertising "Elaine" and "The Clutching Hand," the mysterious criminal whose doings dominate the first fourteen episodes. The News of the World, at her suggestion, inaugurated a coupon contest by means of which vast numbers of velvet hats, known as "Elaine" hats because they are modeled on one which Pearl White wore in the character of "Elaine," are being given away. Wearing one of these hats Miss Bruno walked the busiest streets in London, made up to represent Miss White. The crowds, already familiar with "Elaine's" picture through the medium of the newspapers, followed her everywhere. Stopping at a well known restaurant so many people followed her inside that it was necessary to close the doors. On leaving the restaurant a "bus," plastered from top to bottom with "Elaine" signs, was waiting for her and she rode around through the heart of the city the solitary passenger.

Pathe's booking exchange at London, England.

Edison Company in Detroit

Fred Abbott, director of commercial films, Edison, is in Detroit, with a party of Edison players working on a sociological film for the Ford Motor Company. The picture is to be educational in that it will show how the Ford organization takes the raw, ignorant foreigner and, through its settlement and allied institutions, makes him over into a highly desirable citizen. The film, written by Director Abbott, will be in two reels. The players are Gladys Leslie, William Fables, Charles McGee, William Casey, Jean Dumar, Arnold Friscoe, and John Beauman, cameraman. The Edison Company also makes weekly a short length of film on current events which the Ford Company distributes free to the exhibitor through the organization's branch offices.

Griffith Signs Marie Doro

The news flashed along Broadway last week that Miss Marie Doro, starring in "The White Pearl" at the Strand theater, has been snapped up by the Griffith Triangle forces. The news was confirmed during midweek when Miss Doro boarded a train bound for the West. She is expected in Los Angeles the latter part of this week.

Ohio Convention Well Attended

The Ohio State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America is holding its annual convention this week at Cleveland.

Reports from the convention city on Tuesday afternoon show that a large attendance is present and much enthusiasm is evident. Monday, the opening day of the convention, was devoted solely to the welcoming of delegates. Tuesday morning the visiting exhibitors were enrolled and given their badges and promptly at ten o'clock Benjamin J. Sawyer, temporary chairman of the convention, called the gathering to order and introduced such notables as Peter J. Jeup of Detroit; L. W. Brophy of Muskogee, Okla.; William J. Sweeney of Chicago; M. A. Miller of New York, and Fred J. Herrington, national president of the organization.

Following the appointment of committees by the chairman, an adjournment was taken shortly after noon, and, following a luncheon, the convention delegates and visitors were taken on an automobile ride to Cleveland manufacturing plants. In the evening a theater party was staged at the Colonial, this affair being largely attended.

Wednesday was to be devoted to business sessions and an automobile ride later in the afternoon and the convention was to be brought to an end by a grand banquet that evening. A full account of the proceedings of Wednesday will appear in the next issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

Executive Board Will Control Mirror

Mirror Films, which was started out some three weeks ago with a remarkable personnel in making up its board of directors, is announcing a few innovations from the new offices of the corporation at 16 East Forty-second street, New York City, and not the least among them is the statement that several members of the board will act on an executive committee which will have something to say in a general way about the varied activities of the organization.

The statement was made by Clifford B. Harmon, president of the corporation, when he gave out the names of the executive or advisory committee. In doing so, he said that the men who had gone into the company had become interested in pictures because of the great public interest in them and that, while they were not going to interfere with the production of pictures in any way, they were going to take an active interest in what was being done.

Captain Harry Lambart, who is director-general of the Mirror Films, will, of course, be a member of the committee. His associates will be Rich. G. Hollaman, Andres de Segurola, William J. Hoggson and Frank S. Hastings, who is treasurer of the company. Mr. Harmon will sit with the executive committee as chairman.

Captain Lambart is known, and so is Rich. G. Hollaman, to the motion picture trade in general. Captain Lambart will have charge of the productions and Mr. Hollaman, because of his long experience in the amusement business, will act in the capacity of advisor in all of the things attempted by the Mirror.

M. de Segurola, whose artistic ability is not questioned, has been making a study of the picture industry for some months with a view to becoming identified with a film organization. His ideas on composition, both dramatic and pictorial, are expected to be of great benefit to the organization.

Mr. Hoggson, who is president of Hoggson Brothers, Inc., bank builders and designers of high merit, will lend his architectural knowledge to the company and will have an active part in the doings of the executive committee.

In speaking of the things which are being done toward organizing the company, Mr. Harmon had this to say: "We are building slowly but we are building well, we believe. The business men associated with this company have been looking into the picture industry for some months and all are of the opinion that a company formed along the lines which characterize the Mirror Films, Incorporated, can be made into a very successful venture. We are hoping along with many other high-class men in the business that we may have a part in the general betterment of the business. I believe that we will be welcomed on that basis. I know that I have always welcomed the advent of men of good intent in any business in which I was engaged and I am of the opinion that the picture business will welcome us. We hope to carry the business on along strictly business lines and to make the best pictures we can with the talent and facilities at our disposal. We have bought a studio plant out on Long Island which is plenty large enough for our present needs."

Clifford B. Harmon, President. Frank S. Hastings, Treasurer. William J. Hoggson, Second Vice-president. Andres de Segurola, Third Vice-president. Richard G. Hollaman, Ex-Committee.

The Executive Board of Mirror Films.

Balboa Studios Are Still Growing

FILM CAPACITY INCREASING

AND still the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, located at Sixth and Alamitos streets, Long Beach, Cal., continues to grow, in an effort to keep pace with the increasing demand for its product. This week the concern has acquired an additional plot of ground, which is needed for more enlargements.

It consists of sixty feet frontage on Sixth street, adjoining the garage on the west. A two-story house occupies the site. It will be vacated by the tenants and made over to conform to Balboa's needs at once. The studio's technical and scenic department will be housed therein.

People passing the Long Beach baseball park recently noted the wrecking of the grandstand and bleachers. It is being done under the direction of the Balboa Company. Norman Manning, business manager, bought the lumber and is having it taken apart, as it is to be utilized further for motion picture purposes. Local fans have no further use for the facilities at the park, because pictures are more popular than baseball.

In two short years the Balboa studio has become Long Beach's largest individual industry. Inquiry at the bank reveals the fact that its payroll is twice as large as any other local salary sheet. The start was made twenty-four months ago in one small building by H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the company. All sorts of odds had to be overcome at the start and the initial growth was in spite of seemingly insuperable obstacles.

Before long, E. D. Horkheimer joined his brother, H. M., and the two have built one of the largest independent producing motion picture studios in the world. As it stands today, the capacity is 20,000 feet of negative film a week. The average number of employes is 250. All live in Long Beach. The company takes no money out of the community, but brings in a large volume which is disbursed there.

The Balboa studios are the admiration of all persons privileged to visit them. As Long Beach is off the regular beat of Southern California's filmdom, many in the business have no idea of the completeness of the local plant. Its equipment and degree of efficiency is the marvel of cinema experts. Balboa's property rooms have no superior anywhere, it is said. They contain a hundred thousand separate items, all card indexed, so that each can be found on an instant's notice when needed in production.

Balboaville is like an individual community. It occupies all four corners of two intersecting streets. The visitor on approaching is struck by the distinctive atmosphere. All buildings are painted green and trimmed in white. That color scheme is used throughout by the company; even in its correspondence, green ink being used on white stationery. Letters are mailed with the green one-cent Balboa exposition stamp. The grounds surrounding the plant are being beautified by an expert gardener.

"We are sparing neither money nor pains," declares E. D. Horkheimer, secretary and treasurer of the company, "to make Balboa the model plant of the motion picture industry. I doubt whether many people of Long Beach realize what we have accomplished here in so short a time. Our product is known far and near, wherever moving pictures are displayed; and that is everywhere, today. We take pride in our business. Its growth is in accordance with plans made at the company's inception. We will continue to make enlargements just as fast as necessary."

In the Balboa studio "panoram," shown on this page, it is seen that the plant occupies all four corners of the intersection of Sixth and Alamitos streets.

In the northwest corner, in the foreground of the picture at the left and center, one gets a glimpse of the open stage having 8,000 square feet, giving some idea of the system of diffusers and lighting control; back left, scene docks; center, property rooms.

In the northeast corner on a plot of ground 200x

A comprehensive bird's-eye view of the Balboa plant showing the arrangement 200 big outdoor sets are erected as needed in various productions.

In the southeast corner the building diagonally across, with big Balboa head on it, houses the wardroom department and a dozen dressing rooms. In this small structure, which was formerly the studio of the Edison Company, prior to the time it left the coast for the east, H. M. Horkheimer began his operations two years ago. Back of the building is another, where the laboratory is located; also the assembling department and the projecting room. The tower is part of the water-cooling system, where the temperature of the water supply is regulated scientifically for the laboratory. This storage tank has 16,000 gallons capacity.

In the southwest corner the first bungalow houses the general offices of the Balboa Company. In the one to the right the scenario and press departments find shelter. The corner of the building on the extreme right, just visible, is the company garage, which accommodates sixteen cars. The newly acquired ground is to the right of the garage and not visible in this picture.

This picture was taken from the top of Balboa's enclosed studio, which is now nearing completion. It does not show in this "shot," neither do the carpenter and paint shops, the double deck of dressing rooms for stars and principals and additional scene docks.

TRIANGLE'S NEW OFFICES

Two Entire Floors of New Brokaw Building on Broadway Near Forty-second Street Leased by Triangle Film Corporation

One of the largest theatrical business leases in the history of upper Broadway was signed last week between Brokaw Brothers, the lessors, and W. M. Seligsberg, counsel for Triangle Film Corporation, the lessees, whereby the latter acquire the entire eleventh and twelfth floors of the new Brokaw building, on Broadway near Forty-second street, New York City. The term of the lease is five years, beginning on or about January 1, 1916. About 14,000 feet of space will be occupied, and the aggregate rental for the five-year term will reach a very large figure. The fact that the building is still under construction has enabled the builder to arrange for more perfectly appointed executive headquarters than probably any other film organization in the city enjoys.

The several offices and departments will include the quarters of the executive offices; the film exchanges, several projection rooms, fireproof storage for films; an indoor motion picture studio for emergency work; a foreign department for export of films to Europe, Asia and South America; an international publicity department, ample space for a library of 25,000 pictures of players and 100,000 items of literary data; an extensive auditing and finance department and large reception rooms for the use of President Aitken and likewise of Directors D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett whenever they shall be in town. One of the conditions of the lease is that there shall be no other film concerns of any sort in the building.

With the acquisition of these offices, the Triangle Film Corporation simultaneously becomes one of the most extensive occupiers of office theatrical space in the country. The corporation has rented large branch headquarters in seventeen of the principal cities outside of New York and controls three model theaters, the Knickerbocker in New York, the Studebaker in Chicago, and the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia. It is constructing new studio plants at Culver City and Edendale, Los Angeles, and it is believed quite likely that another new plant will soon be started on the outskirts of New York.

Siegmund Lubin Back From Coast

"Lubinville" at Indiana avenue, Philadelphia, the Glenwood avenue studio at Sixteenth street, and Betzwood all took on an aspect of Old Home Week on Saturday when Siegmund Lubin, president of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, returned from his three months' tour of the West. Once more is the familiar "my man" and "my boy" to be heard about the plants and once more is the smile on the faces of Lubin employes, for where is the one who does not look upon Siegmund Lubin not as a "boss" but rather as a paternal friend?

During this western trip, Mr. Lubin has enjoyed of studios, prop room, business offices, scenario department, etc.

many celebrations in honor of the "Father of the Industry"; he has been feted at every turn, accorded a day in his honor at the Exposition; been guest of honor of the U. S. Army and Navy officials at the Coast and made the opening address at the new Lubin plant at Coronado, Cal.

Still with it all he is loyal to his Philadelphia, and while there are no mountains to gaze upon in wonderment, there are also no guides to point out that this is 5,000 feet above the level and that is 6,000 feet high, and Siegmund Lubin still believes his happiness is derived from being on the level.

Triangle Films in Moss Theaters

Heretofore in the rivalry between the Loew and the Moss circuits for first-run pictures the Loew people have usually won out through being enabled to offer sixty days for a picture, whereas the Moss people are limited to about twenty days. This gave Loew the advantage in the picture end of the two circuits' popular bills. B. S. Moss believes the annexation of the Triangle service to his vaudeville bills will counterbalance the condition in the future. It is reported that the Moss people are paying a large price for the Triangle service on a long contract.

Men the Public Seldom Sees

The curiosity of the millions who daily crowd the motion picture theaters as to the personal appearance of their favorite film star is proverbial. It has in a measure been gratified by the producing companies. The stars appear sometimes at public balls and other entertainments. But for the most part their "living personalities" are mysteries.

This, to a much greater extent, is true of the big men who are behind the giant corporations that make, distribute and show the moving pictures in America. The names Vitagraph, Lubin, Mutual, Metro, Universal are household words, but what the men who constitute these and other motion picture concerns look like is a mystery.

The group shown in the illustration on this page includes some of the biggest of these men—not in stature perhaps, but in point of achievement. They constitute the officers and directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc. They are assembling for the first regular meeting of the Board of Directors. From left to right they are:

William M. Seabury, general counsel; W. Stephen Bush, vice president; Walter W. Irwin, chairman executive committee, general manager V. L. S. E., Inc.; Joseph W. Engel, treasurer Metro Pictures Corporation; J. E. Brulatour, director, distributor Eastman Kodak Company; E. A. MacManus, secretary, general manager International Film Service; S. L. Rothapfel, director, manager Rialto Theater; William A. Johnston, director; Max Stearn, director, manager Majestic Theater, Columbus, Ohio; Nicholas Power, vice president, president Nicholas Power Company; R. H. Cochrane, director, vice president Universal Film Manufacturing Company; John R. Freuler, vice president, president Mutual Film Corporation; J. W. Binder, executive secretary.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph Company, president of the Board of Trade, is not included in the group, being ill at the time the picture was made.

Just prior to making the picture here shown, the magnates were filmed as they drove up in their motors by the news weeklies. These pictures will be shown all over the country in the current releases of the Hearst-Selig, Mutual and Universal weeklies.

Officers and Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

William D. Taylor to Produce for Pallas

William D. Taylor, who directed the "Diamond from the Sky" serial, has accepted an engagement for the "Pallas Pictures."

Mr. Taylor is regarded as one of the foremost of American producers. He obtained his first experience in directing with the Balboa Company. He produced "The Last Chapter" and "The High Hand" for the Favorite Players Company with Carlyle Blackwell in the lead. The American engagement followed.

W. D. Taylor.

William D. Taylor has a long and successful speaking stage record behind him. He supported such stars as Charles Hawtrey, Katherine Kidder, Harry Corson Clarke, and Sol Russell, and was connected with numerous stock companies. He played with Fanny Davenport in this country and in England for three years and had a great deal of experience both as business and stage manager.

It is not yet decided what his first picture with the Pallas concern will be.

GAUMONT TO JACKSONVILLE

Entire Florida Peninsula Will Be Happy Hunting Ground of Directors Working from New Studios—Reconstruction at Flushing

An ambitious autumn and winter all-American program has just been announced by the Gaumont Company. At the first indication of continuous inclement weather, three companies will be sent by boat to Jacksonville, Florida. Making their headquarters at the recently leased studios known as the Dixieland theater property, the entire Florida peninsula will be used by the directors in producing Rialto Star and Casino Star features. During the winter, extensive reconstruction work will result in the practical rebuilding of the Flushing studios. Several comedy companies will remain there, however, throughout the winter.

"We feel that we are extremely fortunate in securing such a favorable location for winter work," said F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company, in discussing the season's plans. "Jacksonville itself and the territory contiguous to it offer unusual opportunities. It is our settled policy to have a new dramatic star featured in each photoplay we release, and the trip from New York to Jacksonville can be made in so short a time that our booking department has had no difficulty whatever in securing the best Broadway talent.

"Three Gaumont companies at least will winter in Florida. These will leave on a Clyde line steamship when the weather becomes too unsettled for continuous work at our Flushing studios. In addition to the score or so of actors now in our permanent stock companies, we shall recruit our ranks with such talent as our directors find they will require. Together with our big staff of cameramen and their assistants and our technical director and his forces, will go several scene painters. Consequently, we have asked that reservations be made for sixty people. There will be a mountain of baggage, costumes and properties; and a dozen automobiles will be taken, cars belonging to the company and to actors.

"Steamship advertisements speak of the delights of relaxation and complete rest on shipboard, but there will be no rest for our companies. A well known writer of stirring novels, short stories and scenarios has provided a thrilling scenario with a steamship setting. This will be filmed on the voyage. This reminds me that the Gaumont Company has contracted with some of the most successful scenario authors of this country for photoplays. This is to make sure that the Broadway theatrical favorites who star in our releases on the Mutual program will have film material worthy of their art and popularity. However, we are inviting three reel photodramas and one reel comedies from authors generally.

"Our Jacksonville studios are ideal for our purposes. The city affords ample locations for metropolitan scenes, and close at hand are wooded tracts, running water and the ocean and lagoons. On our own property, which is across the ferry in South Jacksonvill, we have several acres of natural beauty. The building is a huge structure completely equipped for photoplay productions. The open-air stage is large enough for our three companies to be working there at the same time, if necessary. Quarters for the directors, properties and scene painters are unusually commodious.

"It is by no means our intention to confine the activities of these three Gaumont companies to Jacksonville and its environs. The whole peninsula of Florida will be at the disposal of our directors. The Board of Trade of St. Augustine has been most cordial in its invitation to us to take advantage of the historic and beautiful spots which make that city so quaintly charming. Next to Santa Fe, St. Augustine is the oldest city in the United States. The opportunities it offers for pictures may well be imagined.

Jackie Saunders in a scene from Pathe's "The Tomboy."

"Palm Beach will also be used as a setting for several society photodramas and comedies. These will be taken after the first of the year when the social season is at its height. Military photodramas require settings of absolute accuracy. The Gaumont Companies have been invited to use Fort Myers, on the West Coast, in filming military scenarios. This is so near the end of the peninsula that the verdure is quite tropical in character. Several photoplays will be made in this vicinity, as well as at Miami, just across the East Coast."

Exhibits at State Fair

Advertising the moving picture industry has been advanced another step by the Universal Film & Supply Company of Oklahoma City, Okla. L. L. Hensley, the enterprising young manager of that office, secured a booth at the state fair for the purpose of demonstrating machines, and exhibiting every known commodity of the motion picture theater, the main feature of the exhibit being a completely equipped miniature theater in which the Universal program was shown to the thousands of visitors during the entire eight days of the fair. The Precision Machine Company took advantage of the occasion, sending its representative, W. W. Evans, there from Columbus, Ohio, to demonstrate its Simplex machine. The adventure proved a wonderful success from an advertising standpoint, being, as far as we know, the first of its kind ever offered at a state fair.

The Universal's booth at the state fair.

Pathe's "Nedra" Staged in Bahamas

Edward Jose, the Pathe producer, has just returned from his trip to the Bahamas with his "Nedra" company, and a batch of interesting stories. With him were Margaret Greene, George Probert, Fania Marinoff, Craufurd Kent and a swarm of "extras." Judging from Mr. Jose's stories and the "stills" he brought with him his Gold Rooster play is a colossal production.

Readers of the book "Nedra," which is by George Barr McCutcheon, will remember that the hero and heroine are wrecked on an island where they are made king and queen by the natives who never before have seen a white man. There is also a stirring battle between the friendly natives and hostile tribe in which the good generalship of the white man decided the victory. Mr. Jose employed in these battle scenes some 2,000 of the native Bahaman blacks and found to his surprise that they did their parts well. One scene, which is particularly effective, shows the defeated savages jumping from a lofty cliff into the ocean below. The cliff used in the scene was some 150 feet high, but the colored actors plunged from it as though it were their own doorstep.

Scene from Pathe's "Nedra."

A British warship was lying in the barbor of Nassau and the officers of it extended many courtesies to the players in the way of permitting them to take pictures on shipboard and entertaining them.

Unique St. Louis Theater

The Gertrude Amusement Company, St. Louis, has taken a ten-year lease on the Lorelei Natatorium on the north side of Olive street, a short distance west of Taylor avenue, that city, and the building is now being converted into a high class motion picture theater. An inclined flooring is being erected over the pool proper, and gives a seating capacity of about fourteen hundred, with spacious aisles, while the present walk about the pool is being converted into thirty-four loges, with a seating capacity of eight to each loge.

The entire interior will be redecorated and the walls and ceiling treated in trellis panels, the color scheme being old ivory and the draperies, carpets, and equipment in the projection booth will be the best that money can buy. One of the features will be a promenade on the east and west sides of the hall, each 15x125 feet. On the promenade, benches are being built to harmonize with the interior construction.

The management is proud of the fact that every seat in the house will give a clear view of the screen, for since there is to be no balcony, there will be no columns or other construction between the patrons in the back seats and the screen. The lobby is of Italian marble with the panels of Georgia Creole, while a large ornamental canopy extends over the sidewalk at the front entrance. A Powers 6A projection machine is used, and the curtain is to be a radium gold fiber screen.

Plans and alterations were made by Clymer & Drischler, who have had a large experience in theatrical work, and when the house opens on October 31, it will be known as the Lorelei Feature Playhouse.

The Gertrude Amusement Company has also leased the lot directly across the street and will erect a high-class airdome, which will be used next summer, when the Lorelei Natatorium will be reopened for the summer season.

Raths & Seavolt Film Company Prospering

Enormous strides have been made by the Raths & Seavolt Film Manufacturing Company, 817 to 823 University avenue, St. Paul, midway between the two cities.

Amusements, in reviewing the concern's activities, writes as follows: "This concern organized only in 1913 and incorporated in February, 1915, and now occupy a two-story and basement double building of its own, amply equipped to manufacture film at the rate of 2,400 feet an hour on positive and 800 feet an hour on negative.

"It was the great filming work of the Raths-Seavolt Company that aided Minnesota to pass its famous forestry referendum when all other referendum amendments were defeated. Commercial and industrial filming is the main forte of this company, but 'Looking for Thrills' is a film production of a city girl and her country cousin visiting the great Minnesota State Fair and Exposition and it is creating a great furore and amassing great bulks of most favorable press comment wherever shown.

"The Raths-Seavolt Company has a list of about six hundred theaters to whom it sends free of charge such film features as it knows will appeal to the general public. All Mid-Northwest exhibitors are urged to get on the Raths-Seavolt free-booking list.

"Mr. Seavolt has been in the film producing game since August, 1909, when he ran the first "free lance" plant in Chicago. Everybody knows Otto Raths, formerly owner of several theaters and now the postmaster of St. Paul."

"Beating Back" Rights Going Fast

W. Ray Johnston, secretary and treasurer of the Beating Back Feature Company, of New Rochelle, announces that during the past week the sale of the rights for Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho of the film "Beating Back," featuring Al Jennings, former Oklahoma bandit and recent candidate for nomination for the governorship of Oklahoma, has been made to C. R. Coulter with offices in the Orpheum theater building, Seattle.

The Monarch Film Service Company of Philadelphia has arranged to take over the booking of this film in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia. J. V. Ritchey's feature exchange in New York City has contracted to handle the entire New England territory, while the Amer-Ross Film Company of Columbus, Ohio, is handling Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. The rights for California and Texas were recently sold.

Ritchey has taken advantage of the great publicity given Jennings in Brooklyn, N. Y. papers, where Jennings is now holding a three weeks' series of evangelistic meetings, and has made arrangements to have the film shown in a number of Brooklyn picture theaters during Jennings' stay in Brooklyn.

A contract with the Nebraska Feature Company of Lincoln to handle Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota has also just been closed.

Under the supervision of Arthur Hull this picture is said to have recently played to $19,799.50 of business in Oklahoma and Southern Kansas which is considered a record breaker for any feature in that territory. Mr. Johnston states that he still has several good territories open to first class exchanges on a percentage basis or on a state rights plan.

Films in Girls' School

The Hamilton Institute for Girls, one of the largest institutions of its kind in New York City, has installed a Power's motion picture projecting machine and once each week the lessons are impressed by visual instruction. The use of motion pictures is designed to present scenes of history, to interest the pupils so that they will ask questions with the desire to know, to stimulate intellectual curiosity and in short to make the teaching of science and history alive and of vital interest. This school also has the use of all slides prepared by the Department of Visual Instruction of the State Educational Department at Albany, N. Y.

Edwin Carewe Director with Rolfe-Metro

Edwin Carewe, who has just signed with the Rolfe-Metro Company, is only thirty-two years old. He has recently finished "The Final Judgment" with Ethel Barrymore as the star, and is now working on Frank Dazey's "The House of Tears," in which Martha Hedman will be the star. On the completion of this he will produce another photoplay with Emily Stevens, his star in "Destiny," and then will undertake a huge feature for the Rolfe-Metro along entirely new lines.

Edwin Carewe.

Mr. Carewe is one-fourth Chickasaw Indian, his maternal grandmother having been a full-blooded member of that tribe. His father is F. M. Fox, an Englishman by birth, but now a practicing lawyer in Corpus Christi, Tex. Mr. Carewe's mother was Miss Sally Priddy, the daughter of James Priddy, a New Englander who went West with the tide of young men of his day, seeking his fortune, and married the daughter of a Chickasaw chief. Through his grandmother, Mr. Carewe became the owner of 189 acres of Indian land, near Ardmore, Indian Territory, where he has a large produce farm, four hundred head of fine breeding cattle and a small herd of Indian ponies.

After playing in stock from one end of the country to the other, Mr. Carewe became leading man for Laurette Taylor and afterward played with Otis Skinner, Nat Goodwin, Chauncey Olcott, Mattie Keene, Hal Davis, Augustin McHugh and Kitty Gordon. Three and a half years ago he had his first motion picture experience, which was with Lubin under the direction of George Nicholls. He left Philadelphia to create the lead for Sam H. London in "The Inside of the White Slave Traffic." Here in the reconstruction of that popular picture he had his first fling at scenario-writing and picture production. He was featured afterward with the Tampa Feature Films and then assisted in the organization of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, of which he became principal director. Mr. Carewe's first work for B. A. Rolfe was a year ago when he played the lead in "The Three of Us" with Mabel Taliaferro as the star.

New Ince Studio Under Way

Official ground-breaking of the tract at Culver City, where Thomas H. Ince will erect a new $50,000 studio for the production of Ince-Triangle features, was held this week amid simple but impressive ceremonies. Surrounded by a galaxy of stars, whose aggregate yearly income approximates three-quarters of a million dollars, Ince, himself, pushed a silver spade into the earth and the formality of the occasion was over.

Due to the dynamic activities current at the Inceville plant in the Santa Monica mountains, it was found impossible to hold an elaborate celebration of the event. It was Ince's sincere wish, however, that all his employes be in attendance if only for a few minutes. So promptly at noon, work at Inceville ceased and the some five-hundred actors, actresses, mechanics and others who draw pay checks from the N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation, jumped into automobiles, costumes, make-up and all, and were whirled ten miles to Culver City.

Scarcely had he stepped from his machine, when Thomas H. Ince hurried to the spot selected for the ground-breaking and, enlisting the attention of his subordinates, turned over the first spadeful of earth.

Immediately following the ground-breaking, Ince addressed a few remarks to those gathered about him.

"This event," said the producer, in part, "marks a new epoch in the annals of our great organization. It is undying evidence of the wonderful advancement of the motion picture art in general—of the New York Motion Picture Corporation in particular. It proves that the public has faith in our ability to make pictures and that is a mighty nice thing to know.

"Six years ago, when I first came to California to make pictures for Mr. Kessel and Mr. Baumann, I was fired with the ambition to build a great studio. The place you now know as Inceville is what I dreamed about every night. But now that that is a reality, I will not be content until I see another great plant in full operation on this spot."

Ince then commended his people on their loyalty to him, on their perseverance and laudable efforts to co-operate with him in the making of his photodramas. He followed this by paying glowing tributes to Messrs. Kessel and Baumann and concluded his remarks with, "Now, let's all go back to work!" The small army of Incevillians then climbed back into the automobiles and within fifteen minutes were again assembled at their various "sets," as though nothing had interrupted the day's work.

With the departure of the Ince contingent from the Culver City property, a corps of one hundred men went immediately to work, laying the foundations of the numerous buildings. It is expected that the entire plant will be in full operation by Christmas.

Drinking to universal peace at Universal City. Left to right, Andrew M. Lawrence, Chicago publisher; Henry MacRae, director general of Universal City; William Dawes, Chicago banker, and Henry Otto, Universal director.

The Essanay Method

In the filming of "The Raven," a melange of George C. Hazleton's biographical novel of the poet, and the poet's poem of that name, arranged and produced by Charles J. Brabin, the Essanay company resorted to music to raise Henry B. Walthall, Warda Howard and other members of the cast up to the required emotional pitch.

George K. Spoor, president of the company, conceived the idea as he stood on the studio floor and watched Brabin and the others working on the intense scenes of the photoplay. There was difficulty in reaching and keeping the pitch required because this play gives an actor little time to get balance. After two or three of the heaviest scenes had been rehearsed and retaken many times without success, Mr. Spoor left the floor and got busy at the telephone.

That afternoon when the members of the cast returned from lunch, they found the "sets" for the play surrounded by wooden screens. When they were called to the floor and prepared to resume their work, they were startled by the music of a full orchestra, playing some of Grieg's Peer Gynt music.

The play was finished in record time for a production of its kind. It was easy to portrary the emotions of Poe, his wife and other characters because of the music. Mr. Spoor, after a consultation with his directing staff, announced that music would be used at the Essanay studio in all future productions. Its tremendous success has established it as one of the first aids in the production of emotional plays.

Gaumont Gets Alice Dovey

In line with its all-American program of American stars in American photoplays, the Gaumont Company has secured Miss Alice Dovey for a Casino Star feature, "The Reformer." This one act farce will be released October 24. Miss Dovey has a wide following because of her successful seasons in musical comedy. She has an assured Broadway position which will make her a welcome addition to the galaxy of stars who have already been featured by Gaumont on the Mutual program.

Miss Dovey's comedy is distinctive, and in "The Reformer" it will have full play. In the spoken drama, comedy of situation now surpasses the comedy of lines, and Gaumont comedy directors have shown in their screen productions that comedy of situations that are plausible is more acceptable to the public than comedy that depends upon buffoonery and vulgarity. Miss Dovey has been provided with a part that develops all her winsomeness under laughable conditions.

Costly Production Completed

Actual field work in the production of "The Diamond From the Sky" has been completed. Director W. D. Taylor, who staged this remarkable photoplay, has issued his last "cut" and all the negative—twelve miles of it—has now been turned in to the laboratories of the American Film Company Inc. This picture, for which the North American Film Corporation paid $10,000 to Roy L. McCardell, has exceeded in cost of production all of its predecessors. One scene alone in chapter 24 is claimed to have cost $11,000 before the crank of the camera was even turned. This scene showed a tremendously large banquet hall, built especially for use in this one chapter, so constructed that it matched to a contractor's nicety with the exterior of the house in which it is presumed to be a part. It was the banquet hall of John Powell, a millionaire in the story, and no wizard of finance nor scion of royalty ever dined amid more wondrous surroundings than shown in this scene on the screen.

Constance Collier Signs with Oliver Moro

Constance Collier is one of the most important acquisitions for the films that Oliver Morosco has yet made and that the progressive manager has been fortunate in securing this star for the screen will readily be appreciated by anyone who has seen her behind the footlights. A dashing beauty of the dark type with jet black hair and eyelashes and with eyes of dark brown Miss Collier presents a splendid screen type and her wonderful power of emotional expression which has made her famous on both sides of the globe makes her a fine subject for the camera in the way of effective register.

Constance Collier.

Despite the fact that she is still young in years, Miss Collier has had an extensive stage career. Of English birth, she made her first public appearance in "The Silver King," with Wilson Barrett's company, at the Theater Royal, Hull. After appearing in a number of other successful productions she later rejoined Wilson Barrett, appearing with him in "The Sign of the Cross" as Ancaria. A series of notable engagements followed, after which Miss Collier was engaged to make her American debut at the Garrick theater, New York, where she appeared as Anne-Marie in "Samson" with William Gillette. Her success in this country was instantaneous.

The vehicle with which Miss Collier will make her motion picture debut is "Tongues of Men," a stage play specially written for her by Edward Childs Carpenter, author of many prominent stage and screen successes, including "Captain Courtesy." On completing this production Miss Collier will appear in another screen play for Mr. Morosco, not as yet decided upon, after which she will star under his management in a New York stage presentation of "Peter Ibbetson," by Du Maurier, which play will also be produced in motion pictures with Miss Collier after its run on the legitimate stage.

Sennett Razes Mountain

In planning the reconstruction of the Keystone Film Company's producing plant at Edendale, Cal., all available land surrounding the original site has been purchased by Mr. Sennett, and even with this additional territory it was found that the plans required a greater area as a site for the new building. The land lies at the foot of a high hill and after figuring every possible way to gain more space, Mr. Sennett sent for the steam shovel and enough of the hill was cut away to add a flat space of two acres to the ground area.

The first building in the new group has been completed. It is a five-story structure, in which carpenter shops, paint shops and other mechanical departments will be housed. The interior studio, with a complete artificial lighting system, will be erected on the reclaimed two acre space which has been cut out of the hill. The office building will be started immediately and the entire plant is expected to be finished shortly after the first of the year.

Differs with Metro President

Robert C. Morris, president and editor of The National Moto-Photo Weekly, published in Louisville, Kentucky, after reading the viewpoint of President Richard A. Rowland, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, as printed in a recent issue of MOTOGRAPHY, takes issue with the Metro executive and writes us as follows:

Louisville, Oct. 16th, 1915.

Editor MOTOGRAPHY: I wish to take time from my very limited quota of that valuable commodity to say just a word while your exceedingly interesting editorial on page 797 of October sixteen is fresh in my mind.

You have surely struck a vital chord in the future relation of the screen star and the spoken drama and I trust that the fullest appreciation of it may be had by all those who should be intimately concerned—but, let us at this important juncture go a step further and consider this one intensely interesting point to the great advantage of the motion picture exhibitor, who might otherwise be fearful that his efforts are to bring about his own undoing in the eventual loss of his best asset, viz., the stars whom he has helped to make famous.

Why should those who have labored so long and assiduously to attain so important a goal quietly step aside and relinquish the cream of their commercial accomplishments to those who have been compelled to take a back seat because the motion picture prince has, by his tremendous efforts, accomplished the apparently impossible, and overthrown the old, or so-called "legitimate stage" for the motion picture screen?

No, the success belongs to those who are responsible for it and if all those who have good stage facilities in their exhibition houses will brush them up and get them in order and those who have not and those who are now building new houses will look to that most important adjunct of their respective houses for the future and arrange for the appearance of those stars on their own stages when the time is ripe for such presentation to the public, then will they be able to reap the full benefits of their own labor.

Should Madame Petrova, Francis Bushman, Mary Pickford or any other of the now famous stars appear on the stage of the legitimate theater? Certainly not. Should not our motion picture houses, which have helped to create the great reputations of these important personages, be the ones to present these stars to their public at prices ranging from $1.00 to $2.00 per seat, for the brief time which they could allot to any one house? I say, by all means this is the only thing to consider.

Let us have the stars appear in person in the legitimate drama, but let the legitimate drama presenting these stars be enacted upon our own stages and the complete cycle of theatricals will have been attained, and again we record the new for the old, the "survival of the fittest."

Robt. C. Morris, President and Editor.

Templer Saxe of Vitagraph

Templer Saxe, Vitagraph player, whose experience on the speaking stage fitted him to play a wide range of characters, has brought this experience to the field of motion pictures, where he is seen alternately in a strong dramatic role and then in the lighter comedy parts. He was born at Redhill, twenty miles from London, England. Mr. Saxe was destined for the diplomatic service. He graduated from two universities, of Bonn and of Brussels. At the latter, he obtained the degree of Ph. D. M. A. Oxford was to have come next, but reverses of fortune compelled his father to abandon the idea of a diplomatic career for his son. During his college days he was interested in amateur theatricals and when it became time for him to choose a profession, he turned to the stage. Mr. Saxe studied with the famous Albert Randegger at the Royal Academy, London, and with other eminent masters, preparatory to becoming an opera singer. His first engagement was with the German-Reeds, at Saint George's Hall. He stayed with this organization a year and then signed with Carl Rosa, as leading barytone of the Carl Rosa Light Opera Company.

Templer Saxe.

Coming to this country, he made his debut as leading juvenile in "A Ladies' Paradise," at the Metropolitan Opera House. He sang the principal barytone parts in "The Sultan of Sulu," "Piff, Paff, Pouf," "The Earle and the Girl" and "The Blue Moon," all of these engagements being in New York City. On the road, he appeared in "The Gay Musician," "Countess Coquette," "Morocco Bound" and "Yama." Thus he had considerable stage experience before entering pictures.

With the exception of desultory work with several of the minor picture producing companies, all of Mr. Saxe's experience has been gained under the Vitagraph banner. He has appeared in a number of pictures both single part and feature, and has made good in every character where he has had to face the camera.

A WONDERFUL MINIATURE

Rolfe-Metro's New York Studio Houses a Unique Replica of the United States in Miniature That Proves Useful

The United States in minature, an innovation to be used in obtaining scenic effects, is now under construction at the Rolfe-Metro studio in West Sixty-first street, New York City. When completed it will be possible to photograph exteriors, absolutely correct in topography and vegetation, of any locale in this country. The miniature United States is being built on a platform fourteen feet deep which will eventually extend around the walls of the entire mammoth studio. There are mountains, plains, caves, railroad tunnels, lakes, rivers, creeks, bridges, trees, farms, small towns and even some of the prominent cities of the United States will be faithfully reproduced. On the wall, back of the miniature panorama, canvas is stretched upon which is painted an appropriate background to lend the essential distance effect. The miniature is to be permanent and is being installed at a great expense.

E. J. Shulter, the technical director at the Rolfe-Metro studio, conceived the idea of the miniature several years ago, and has been working it out ever since. He says it is going to prove invaluable in obtaining desired effects through opened doors and windows, showing exterior settings. Heretofore, such effects have been made through the aid of painted drops, which Mr. Shulter says no longer deceive the average motion picture patron. It will also be possible to obtain views from the window of a train, and similar effects, without going out of the studio. This will not only add to the artistic value of Rolfe-Metro pictures, but will prove a saving in the cost of production.

At the New York City end of the miniature the principal building will be the Grand Central station. Other railroad stations in Los Angeles, Denver, New Orleans and other cities will be reproduced. There will be miniature motor boats, steamboats and yachts, going under their own power in lakes, rivers and bays. It will be possible to produce snow, rain and wind storms, and even a tornado. In the first section of the miniature, now completed, approximately two hundred miles of the country is shown. There is a practical miniature train, one of the few imports that has reached this country recently from Germany, that traverses through the countryside, skirting mountain sides, passing through villages, tunnels, over bridges and around seemingly dangerous curves. It was necessary to take out the electric equipment in the engine and install steam, to obtain the right effect.

Howard Estabrook the Star

The Pathe Exchange wishes to announce that through an unintentional error in some of its advertising matter for "The Closing Net," Howard Estabrook was merely featured with others where he should have been starred exclusively. It is making this announcement in fairness to Mr. Estabrook.

What Is Comedy and Why?

BY BENNIE ZIEDMAN

SHAKESPEARE said that "all the world's a stage," and Edward "Komic" Dillon, one of the Griffith producers, and until recently director of Mutual-Komics, goes Billy Shakespeare one better by contending that "all the world's a comedy" to him. Perhaps that is why he is so well qualified for his position as producer of humorous subjects. There have been so many unsuccessful comedy photoplays issued in the past year that it is a difficult task for a director to determine whether or not the planned action will be laughable when projected in the silent theater. "Just what is a comedy?" is the subject Edward Dillon was requested to discuss. "Logical surprise for the participants in the play is really the backbone of comedy," says Mr. Dillon. "The unexpected is always good for a laugh—something at which even the audience will be surprised in the outcome. But yet it must be absolutely logical and make them think 'Well! Who would have expected that! But still it is possible!'

Edward Dillon.

"The fellow who stands directly in front of the lens and makes faces, without any specific reasons for them, means absolutely nothing to the intelligent audience. The serious situation to the players usually affords humor to the audience.

"To cite an instance, in one of my recent pictures, entitled 'Home Again,' the much abused situation of mistaken identity plays a principal part. A fellow goes on a lengthy lark, his wife tires of living in their apartment alone; she sublets it to another couple and moves to a local hotel. The husband later decides to go home and naturally comes to the apartment. He fails to find anyone present, goes to his room and climbs into bed. Then there is the husband of the couple who are residing in the flat, at whom his wife is peeved, and when he sees the husband who has been on the lark, it confirms the suspicion in his mind that his young wife loves another. You can imagine the complicated situations presenting themselves that are absolutely serious to the players, but yet the audience that is susceptible will giggle, and others may laugh heartily.

"The actor or actress who endeavors to appear funny on the screen without the aid of the humorous situation is working for naught. It is absolutely imperative that the situation in itself lead to a laughable climax.

"There is another thing that the present comedy producer doesn't realize is imperative, and that is a well-worked-out, plausible scenario. There is where some of the boys fall down—they work hard to make something out of nothing and when it is projected on the screen it looks just what it is—a painful effort with a narrative theme.

The Comedy Director.

"There is as much work attached to the producing of a comedy, or I might say at times more, than the average drama. It is not the easiest thing in the world to give your audience adequate cause to laugh. Slapstick comedy is all right for a certain element of people, but the clean-minded young girl, the tired business man, the faithful wife, and the intelligent class of motion picture attendants in general, are more in favor of the clean, refined, light comedy than the riff-raff or slap-stick comedy.

"At times, however, one must resort to slap-stick comedy for peculiar reasons, and then it takes the master mind to force a look of refinement in that particular situation. I suppose that most every producer of comedy subjects looks at this stated situation in a different light, and it would be very interesting to me to become acquainted with the various views.

"Speaking of multiple-reel comedy subjects, it is much more difficult to hold the attention of an audience with a comedy than a drama, for the simple reason that you haven't the dramatic characters to get sympathy and to arouse curiosity as to the outcome."

The above statements of Mr. Dillon seem to ring true, for he has proven by some of his past efforts that he knows comedy. It is a known fact that Dillon is never without a smile, and "kids" his company into being serious in scenes. He employs a capable set of players who understand him like a book and consequently interpret his directions.

Essanay's Tasty Announcements

The advertising department of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, presided over by Victor Eubank, has prepared and is mailing to exhibitors the country over splendidly printed, tastefully designed announcements of the near release of "The Raven," which will star Henry Walthall, supported by Miss Warda Howard.

The front and back cover of the announcements are olive green in color and bear in white lettering text matter descriptive of the treat in store for the public when "The Raven" is released. The two inside pages bear a beautifully designed bit of color work, depicting a scene suggested by the sub-title "And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting; and his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's that is dreaming."

The dignified presentation of Mr. Walthall in this six-reel photoplay is announced as follows on the back cover page: "Essanay is presenting Mr. Henry Walthall in what we consider the most pretentious and artistic photodrama ever offered to the public. Director Charles J. Brabin, with the assistance of the author, George C. Hazelton, has spent many months in the preparation and production of this masterpiece. "The Raven" is known the world over as the greatest work of Edgar Allan Poe. Mr. Walthall has portrayed the character of Poe with that consummate skill for which he is noted throughout the world of photoplays. It remains only for you to pass judgment."

In addition to the announcements described above, the Essanay publicity department has also prepared a quantity of "Raven" cut-outs which undoubtedly will prove mighty effective advertising for the theaters running the Walthall feature. Attention might also be directed to the artistic advertisement on the back cover of this issue of MOTOGRAPHY, the design for which was sketched by the celebrated artist, Palenski, at the suggestion of Victor Eubank.

"ROXY" TO TOUR COUNTRY

Mutual Film Corporation Sending Master Exhibitor to All Parts of Country to Describe His Methods and Inspire Mutual Exhibitors

S. L. Rothapfel, known as America's most successful motion picture exhibitor, will make a tour of the United States to deliver to exhibitors a message of success. This announcement comes from the office of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, which is conducting the tour as a constructive contribution to the development of the motion picture theater. The itinerary covers twenty-seven of the biggest centers of the country, where Mr. Rothapfel will address gatherings of exhibitors. It has only been possible for the Mutual to get a limited portion of Mr. Rothapfel's time, and it is hoped that conditions will make it possible later to have him speak before the exhibitors in many centers not covered in his present itinerary. This tour will deliver to the exhibitors of the nation first hand knowledge of the methods and experiences by which Mr. Rothapfel arrived at his many successes, among them the management of the Lyric theater in Minneapolis, the organization of the projection for the Keith Circuit, the Regent theater in New York, the famous Strand theater and—next to come—the new Rialto theater now building at Forty-second and Broadway, New York City.

S. L. Rothapfel.

Mr. Rothapfel will tell the exhibitors of the country at first hand just what have been the factors of his remarkable success and how the lessons drawn from his experience may be applied to the improvement of any theater and applied to the solution of every exhibitor's problems.

"The message which Mr. Rothpafel will carry," remarked President Freuler, "is in fact a message to the whole great body of exhibitors, regardless of their affiliations. No exhibitor who hears him recount his wealth of experiences as an exhibitor can fail to gather information and inspiration which will be reflected by profit at his box office if he takes the lesson home with him. We are not sending out Mr. Rothapfel with an impression that the exhibitors need to be lectured to, but rather with the idea that every live exhibitor will enjoy the experience of hearing from the nation's most successful exhibitor and his methods."

Mr. Rothapfel's itinerary as it is outlined follows: October 21, Philadelphia; October 22, Washington; October 23, Atlanta; October 25, New Orleans; October 27, Dallas; Ocotber 29, El Paso; October 31, Los Angeles; November 3, San Francisco; November 7, Portland, Ore.; November 8, Seattle, Wash.; November 10, Salt Lake City; November 12, Denver; November 14, Kansas City, Mo.; November 15, Omaha, Neb.; November 16, Minneapolis, Minn.; November 17, Milwaukee, Wis.; November 18, Chicago, Ill.; November 19, St. Louis, Mo.; November 20, Indianapolis, Ind.; November 21, Cincinnati, Ohio; November 22, Detroit, Mich.; November 23, Cleveland, Ohio; November 24, Pittsburgh, Pa.; November 25, Buffalo, N. Y.; November 26, Albany, N. Y.; November 27, Boston, Mass.

This itinerary will be strictly followed, as Mr. Rothapfel's varied interests demand his return to New York on schedule time.

Mr. Rothapfel will be accompanied on this tour by Silas Bent, special representative of the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Bent will, in addition to "covering" the Rothapfel tour, give general publicity co-operation to Mutual branch managers in the cities visited. Mr. Bent brings to his work a long and varied experience among the nation's greatest newspapers and in publicity work for important financial interests.

MUSIC BY THE FOOT FOR FILMS

Unique Solution of Problem that Confronted V. L. S. E. Organization in Setting Its Pictures to Musical Score

Remember the days when a tin pan piano and a bass drum constituted the musical embellishment of the average "moving picture?" Today we have our symphony orchestra with its scores from Beethoven, Bach, Mozart, Wagner, etc. So do times change.

But even with these ambitious innovations, the producers and exhibitors of moving pictures still had another step to go—the adaptation of every bar of the music to the theme of every foot of the film.

Here was a man-sized job—how to measure the action of the picture to the musical score, so that they would both come out equal at every part of the picture, and would be so exact that any orchestra might take the score and follow the movement of the play with absolute correctness. It was a question, primarily, of mathematics, but even so it was some time before a system of computation was devised before the undertaking was gotten down to a certainty.

As an illustration, on the opening night of one of the most notable photoplay productions now before the public, the orchestra, notwithstanding a three weeks' rehearsal, found at the conclusion of the picture that it was a page and a half behind the play's action in the musical setting. It was left to Frank Stadler of New York, who prepares the orchestrations for the Winter Garden, Hippodrome, Ned Weyburn's Town Topics, and other productions, to provide the remedy for this condition of affairs. Mr. Stadler, who is now arranging the musical settings for many of the features released by the V. L. S. E., saw that the problem was simply one of devising some sort of a system that would so time the music that it would finish just as the film ended.

He remembered that Beethoven had overcome the dfficulty of proper timing for this sonatos by a mechanical arrangement known as the metronome, invented by a friend of his. This is an arrangement with a little bell attached, which may be set for the movement of the music and used as an exact guide to the right measure, the bell giving warning at the expiration of each period, so that the leader knows whether he is in time or not.

With the metronome, a stenographer, and a watch, Mr. Stadler began the measurement of the Lubin V. L. S. E. feature, "Tillie's Tomato Surprise." He found that the film ran ten feet to every eight seconds, and he set the metronome for eight second periods accordingly. The stenographer made a note of the action of the picture each time the bell rang, with the result that when the entire picture had been run, Mr. Stadler had a complete record of the production.

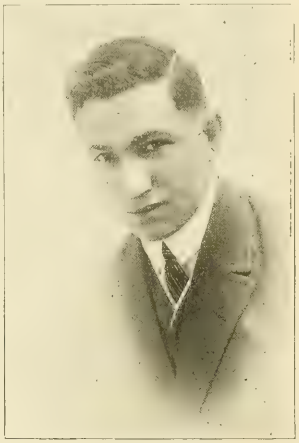
All that was necessary then was to select from the classics and the popular melodies the music which would give a suitable atmosphere and a harmonious accompaniment to the theme of the play, so synchronizing the music with the eight second periods that every bar of it fitted the spirit of the many score of scenes of the produciton. Only one who saw "Tillie's Tomato Surprise" without the music and then with it can appreciate the heightened effect the musical accompaniment gave the picture.

And only one who appreciates the difficulties which orchestra leaders have had heretofore in timing their score with the film can understand for what greater efficiency Mr. Stadler's method makes.

Essanay Not Buying

Despite the fact that several announcements to the effect that the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company is no longer buying scenarios have been made, a flood of manuscripts continues to clutter up the mail daily received at the big Chicago plant of the Essanay Company.

The writers of all submitted scripts are having their brain children returned to them accompanied by a printed announcement which reads as follows:



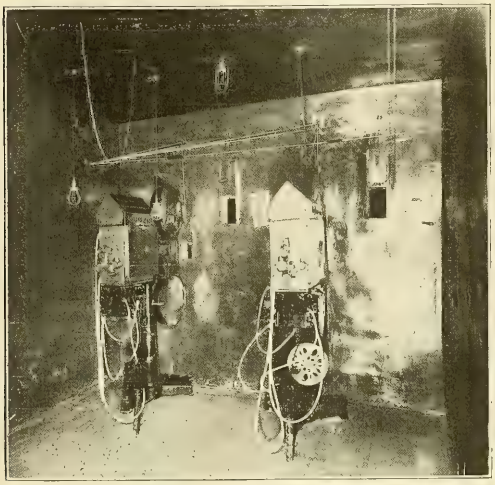
In line with its policy of progress, the Essanay company has discarded the scenario from its business. The reason is that Essanay photoplays are beyond the scenario stage.

The high art of production as standardized by this company cannot be sustained by mere scenarios. Already Essanay has on its staff a number of the highest paid dramatists in this country. These men, experienced in the technical construction of the drama, are producing plays instead of scenarios. Besides this expert dramatic corps, the most famous authors and playwrights in the world are contributing to the Essanay program. The idea is that nothing is too good for the thousands who expect the best of Essanay.

With such writers as George Ade, Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Albert Payson Terhune, Mary Roberts Rinehart, James Oliver Curwood, Edwin Balmer, Henry Oyen, Edith Ogden Harrison, James Oppenheim, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, Maibelle Heikes Justice and Justus Miles Forman Essanay stands alone in the field as the producer of the greatest photoplays. The day of the scenario has passed. This is a new day—Essanay day!

He Is "Some" Operator

Herman H. Goldberg, the young man pictured just below, is a man with a record. It isn't meant to insinuate that the Bureau of Criminal Statistics over at the Chicago city hall has a card bearing his finger-prints, or that a full face and a profile view of him is on file at such institutions as the Joliet penitentiary, but that he is famous. First of all he is chief operator of "The Birth of a Nation" show at the Colonial theater, and next to that he has shattered a few records in the way of good projection and care and attention to his films, any or all of which would entitle him to special mention. Mr. Goldberg has been in charge of the projection of the "Birth of a Nation" picture since it first opened at the Illinois theater away back in June, and on Monday night of this week celebrated the two hundred and seventy-first run of the picture with but one stop in his projection in all that long period. This one stop was occasioned when one of the carbons became loosened and caused a delay of about fifteen seconds while it was readjusted. Mr. Goldberg is furthermore using the same identical print with which he started last June and a most minute and careful inspection of the film fails to show the slightest trace of "rain," or a scratch of even the most minute kind, a fact that eloquently testifies to his care of the prints in his possession. A fellow employe of the Epoch Producing Company, in commenting on Goldberg and his care of the film, asserted as he pointed to the reels of film lying on a shelf in the projection room, "That's Goldberg's baby, all right, and no infant ever had the care or attention that he gives that roll of celluloid." In his projection of "The Birth of a Nation" Mr. Goldberg is assisted by J. M. Wolfberg.



Herman H. Goldberg.

Recently fresh fame came to Mr. Goldberg through his being called upon to superintend the construction of the projection booth at the Studebaker theater, Chicago, and at that time MOTOGRAPHY, in commenting upon the projection at the Studebaker said:

In the center of the house and at the rear a new concrete projection booth has been erected and the equipment installed therein under the supervision of H. H. Goldberg, who is in charge of the projection of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial, is up-to-the-minute in every respect.

The booth is eight feet high and has inside dimensions of 11 by 10 feet, with a projection aperture 6 feet 8 inches from the floor. It contains two specially constructed Simplex machines, equipped with several unusual and made-to-order devices, which have a throw of 72 feet. The screen, an alabastine sheet 18 feet in size, erected some 19 feet back of the curtain line, is fastened in a shadowbox of excellent construction and the whole is masked by some black gauze-like drapes which are drawn aside as the picture goes on the screen. This screen, like the projection booth, was built under the supervision of Mr. Goldberg and is satisfactory in every particular.

Interior booth of the Studebaker Theater, Chicago.

GAUMONT SILENCES RUMORS

Makes Official Announcement That All Rialto Star Features and Casino Star Comedies on the Mutual Program Are Made in America

Baseless rumors having gained currency that the motion pictures of the Gaumont Company released on the Mutual program are not made in America, a categorical denial has just been made by that company. Both the Rialto star features and the Casino star comedies are made by Gaumont either at Flushing, N. Y., or Jacksonville, Fla. They are distributed only by the Mutual Film Corporation.

"The slightest investigation would convince the most casual inquirer of the falsity of such a statement," was the remark of F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company, when the rumor was called to his attention. "Every Gaumont motion picture on the Mutual program is made here in America. The only reason I can conceive for such a statement having been made is that the source which has inspired it fears the competition of the Gaumont pictures. The attack is evidently concerted, since our branch agents report having heard it in different parts of the country.

"Just to look at a list of Gaumont releases of Rialto star features and Casino star comedies is sufficient to convince one at a glance that the All-American program of this country is just what it purports to be. Before me I have a list of stars Gaumont has recently employed in pursuance of its policy of securing a new Broadway favorite as star in each release. The only star even with a foreign name is Fania Marinoff, who was born in Russia. As she made her debut in Denver as a child, it can be seen that all her stage experience has been in this country.

"Who could be more American than William Roselle or W. C. Fields? Both are Gaumont stars. Fayette Perry comes from Nebraska. So does Alice Dovey. Grace Valentine was born in Ohio. Tempest and Sunshine are Kentucky girls. And yet unscrupulous persons try to convince exhibitors that these Gaumont stars are not in American productions! The cast of each Gaumont release is published in the trade papers. One has only to read the list of actors to know absolutely that Gaumont would not transport an entire company of Americans to take pictures in Europe. In addition to that, one has only to see a Gaumont picture on the Mutual program to recognize its American setting."

Earl Metcalfe Now Lubin Director

Earl Metcalfe, popular idol of photoplay fans, leading man for Lubin for the last four years, has reached out and gotten a firm grip on the top rung of the motion picture ladder of success. Recognition of the time and study "Met" has put in since his association with the Lubin Company, coupled with the extraordinary way in which he has thoroughly grasped the intricacies of making pictures, has received a recognition from Messrs. Singhi and Lowry, controlling heads of the Lubin forces, and Earl has been promoted to the rank of director. He has already begun work on his first picture, with Billie Reeves as his star, and in that combination of Reeves and Metcalfe, those who know predict a product which is going to do some regular revolutionizing of what comedy in pictures is.

Earl Metcalfe.

Metcalfe's stage career began at fourteen years of age, and was interrupted to return to the Cincinnati Law School. Then came a resumption of his theatrical career, which has since continued uninterrupted. He was for three years a member of traveling repertoire companies, then in vaudeville in support of Zelda Sears and Stella Hammerstein, and from vaudeville came to the Lubin stock company.

The Equity Motion Picture Company has purchased the J. W. Gunby studio, located at Ridgefield Park, New Jersey, one of the most up-to-date steel and concrete studios in that vicinity, in connection with a large developing and printing establishment, with every facility for the production of high-class one and two-reel comedies, with the same company that was located at Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Nell G. Coward — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada	Per year, $4.00
Foreign	Per year, 5.00
Single copy	.10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, OCTOBER 30, 1915 Number 18

Features, or Program, or Both?

WHEN, in the evolution of motion picture exhibition, order gradually succeeded chaos, what we now know specifically as "program" was the key to development. Apparently the future of the business, as a definite, well regulated, orderly industry, depended upon the perfection of the program system. One after another there were established the three big exponents of program and centers of program distribution now operating so satisfactorily and successfully.

Originally the word "feature" had no specific meaning in the business. Any film supposed to be exceptionally good or to have cost an unusual sum for production was a feature. Naturally, on this basis, it was not long before every film was dubbed a feature, and the term lost what little significance it ever had.

But when multiple reel pictures began to show their possibilities there was an opportunity to return to the word. Obviously not all pictures could be multiple reels, so there was little danger that the name would be abused.

But once the multiple reel "feature" got fairly started, it displayed a decided ambition to monopolize the whole show. When an exhibitor with a five-reel program substituted a five-reel feature there wasn't room for much else.

A good many exhibitors found that their patrons liked the feature. They found, too, that it gave them a chance to make more noise, do more pretentious advertising, and attract a bigger crowd. This, in turn, encouraged a higher admission price, with which they could pay more for a better feature. So the feature game was fairly started.

The three big program units soon found themselves hedged around with a growing circle of feature producers. These were companies that specialized and concentrated on big productions—sometimes on a single big production. And enough exhibitors to make the game good raised the feature banner and discarded the program.

Today the exhibitor, with an open market and a free choice, takes features and adds program for "filler." That is with a five-reel show he uses a three-reel feature and two singles; a four-reel feature and a split reel comedy; a five-reel feature and nothing else—and so on. He still has some use for program, but he has become essentially a feature customer, and consequently a very poor program customer.

This is not theory. The exhibitor actually is doing that. And he is willing to pay more for that kind of a show than he would have to pay for a straight program. That being the case, the feature is bound to increase. If it increases faster than the market, what is going to happen to the program?

No doubt there will always be programs, program manufacturers and program exhibitors. It would be a serious mistake to expect elimination of the whole scheme, no matter what future years may develop.

But for the encouragement of the greatest possible amount of business, the intensive cultivation of the opportunity we have, it is time to consider whether the feature has not become more important than the program. It would seem that the way to the greatest expansion does not lie with the program.

It is not a question of production nor of producers. Some of the best features we have are produced by the so-called program manufacturers. All of these manufacturers, indeed, are turning out stuff right along that classes as features—only it is released as part of a definite program. The question is wholly one of policy—of distribution methods; whether a film shall be sold at a certain fixed price with its program, or separately as a feature at a higher price.

Inasmuch as the well known program manufacturers are all in shape to meet whatever demand there may be for features without any particular change in their systems, they can study this marked development in public taste without embarrassment. If the public is willing to pay more for features, it is only just that the extra profit be divided between the exhibitor and the producer.

Speaking of California

OUR old friend, Don Meaney, having turned his back at least temporarily on the Golden State, has seen fit gently to disparage the well known glorious climate and marvelous atmosphere of the popular American paradise. While he would not deny the silver lining, it seems that Don has observed California skies to be not always cloudless.

Furthermore, he finds the emporiums of the farthest west to be short on stock. It is not possible to buy there, ready-made, all the articles a modern property man may want. In this respect he thinks Chicago, or even, at a pinch, New York, would have it all over any metropolis of the coast.

Nothing could be more pleasing to us than to have Don and the goodly company he represents settle down in the city by Lake Michigan. The mere presence of such good friends is a pleasant thought; and there is plenty of proof that Chicago produces pictures as excellent as any that ever struck a screen.

But about California. We have seen many wonderful pictures come out of California. We have seen some more than wonderful film enterprises grow big there. At the moment we have no figures on the total film plant investment in the state, but we know it is enormous, and constantly growing larger. So it does not seem likely that there will be any general exodus of film folk from the coast. Rather we are inclined to think that time will remedy the shortage of prop-room merchandise noted by Mr. Meaney.

As to that glorious climate, we have long suspected that California herself must have enjoyed the services of press agents graduated from the theatrical school. But they do get pictures there, Don; corking pictures. Even the amateurs with kodaks bring back a bigger percentage of useful impressions on their emulsion than they seem to get this side of the Rockies. And we imagine they'll go right on getting them.

For, criticize the climate and the stores as you will, and as they deserve, there is one thing you must admit. When it comes to locations, there is nothing else quite like California. In its collection of samples of Nature, the state is like a twenty-year-old prop-room—you can find everything in it.

There are lots worse places to take pictures than California.

N. G. C

Just a Moment Please

Done your Christmas shopping yet?

—

Not that we mean to be personal, but you can see for yourself it helps us to fill this lovely white space and brings us that much nearer the bottom of this column.

—

And, anyway, we always begin to think about Christmas as soon as the world's series is over.

—

Speaking of baseball reminds us that about a week ago a chap down in Kansas submitted for our inspection a story telling how to get rich in the picture business, basing his article on his own success as an exhibitor. Thinking his story would be presented to better advantage if we had some photographs of his house we wrote him, asking for the "pics" and today received the following reply:

Replying to your favor of recent date, asking for a photo of my show to use with the article I submitted some time ago, will say that I will be unable to furnish same. Just a few hours after I mailed the mms. a cigarette-smoking operator set fire to the film on the re-wind and the other five caught and the inside of the booth was burned out, destroying my machine. I have not reopened since and I do not think I will, but will return to my first love—newspaper work. With all my original advertising ideas I think I prefer a steady salary of $35 per week to a picture show.

If you wish to use the matter I sent you, you may do so, but just at present I am disgusted with the picture show business, except writing a scenario occasionally that gets by, and I am sorry I cannot oblige you by sending the photos.

—

Ain't that exasperating?

—

Just when you think you are going to discover the key to certain wealth, to have the chap that's giving you the tip prove to be a flivver at his own game.

—

Oh well (sigh), maybe somebody will yet come along with an idea that will make us a millionaire over night. (Note to Vic Hodupp: Don't read that as a tip to invite us over to see your Wallingford stuff on the screen, for we know darn well that's being made by Ted Wharton and we know him, too, so you can't fool us with that.)

—

ANOTHER PLUTOCRAT—ALMOST

Speaking of millionaries and such reminds us that Tom North, who publishes V.L.S.E. Pals, out in Seattle, Wash., has a friend named Jensen, proprietor of the Liberty theater of that burg, one of them photoplay palaces you read about but seldom own, who almost got rich over night. In a letter to North, published in the last issue of Pals, Jensen writes:

Hello, Tom! I'd sure been out of the theater business now if I had played my hand right. There was a fellow drifted in on the stage Wednesday and he came into my office and says: "Mr. Jensen?" I couldn't very well say "Yes" right off for he might have been a deputy sheriff or anything, so I stalled around awhile and finally he says as how he's a show man and he's got a show and wants to play here Saturday night. I came across then and told him my real name and he followed his chatter with an offer of FIFTEEN DOLLARS for the house. I must a got panic stricken or something for I turned to my typewriter and started writing without saying a word and he says "What you writin'?" And I says "I'm making out a bill of sale; you've bought a theater." And the last I saw of him he was talking to Bill Riggs that runs the pool room and Bill told him the only people that ever come to the theater was people I owed money to and they was taking it out in theater tickets.

And at that, I think we're doing almost as well as Von Herberg, for a small place. I see that all his operators has automobiles. Well, our operator has a motorcycle. He found it.

—

We lamp with much surprise by this week's issue of the incomparable World that Jim McQuade, in his column, chronicles the visit of "Francis G. Bushman" to our burg. Whaddaya meanly, "G," Mac? Didya think his middle name was God?

—

Commodore Blackton, who is visiting us this wk., was introduced from the stage of the Olympic theater by an official of the Health Dept., but the genial commodore was easily able to even survive such an experience and may now be said to have "Passed the Board of Health."

N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Miracle of Life"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

WITH a story which if not handled properly and carefully all of the beauty and appeal would be lost in it, to work upon, Harry Pollard directed the four-reel American Mutual Master-Picture "The Miracle of Life" and obtained exceedingly satisfactory results.

Happiness comes to the woman and her husband.

The story contains a wonderful lesson and digs down into one's heart. It lays bare the soul of "a woman" who committed a wrong against herself, her home and society and then idolizes her when she sees her folly and brings into the world the little life, as she before denied one.

There are two principal characters in this production, a woman, which role is splendidly portrayed by Margarita Fischer and a man. Joseph Singleton is cast as the latter. The photography in this production is as clear and beautiful as crystal and a novel idea is used in the subtitles which are put into poetry and ribbons outline all of them. In each of the four corners appears a live baby's head. It is bounteously supplied with scenes of surpassing splendor. Among those scenes which are noteworthy for their beauty are the scenes showing the Three Wise Men going to see the Christ Child, the scene of cupid at his telephone switchboard and the scene in "Babyland."

A man and a woman who have long been sweethearts are married. The man brings his bride home and they are very happy in each other's love. One night while in attendance at a ball the wife feels a sudden revulsion against her husband. He cannot understand her actions, but she knows the revulsion means—the coming of a child.

The young wife is horror-stricken at the thoughts of becoming a mother and at last goes to the home of an elderly woman friend and asks her aid. From the friend she obtains a deadly potion which will extinguish the young life about to be brought into the world.

The wife returns home, slips past her husband into her boudoir and places the bottle on her dresser and lies down on the bed sobbing with grief. She falls asleep and then gets up, places the bottle to her lips and lies down to await its results. She swoons away and when the doctor is called in he tells the young husband the true state of affairs.

Later the husband gets a divorce from his wife, marries another woman and establishes a very happy home. The young divorcee for a short time is happy spending her time at dancing, clubs and gay after-theater parties. Then comes old age and loneliness. One night the old woman is sitting before her grate fire when there appears a little child who says she is the child that might have been.

The little one takes the old lady by the hand and leads her through the world. Everywhere in the kingdoms of animals and plants she is shown happiness which attends the rearing of young and then she is taken through "Babyland." Later comes a vision of death and the old woman sees herself refused entrance at the gates of Heaven and ordered to the region of everlasting punishment.

Then comes the awakening and once more she is the bride of a few months and she is clasping in her hands the bottle which contains the deadly potion. With a cry she rushes to an open window, pours out the contents of the bottle and then calls her husband to the room and tells him the secret. We last see the couple admiring a precious baby which is cooing in the cradle.

"My Madonna"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE theater-going public enjoys and appreciates a picture that is full of life, that has fine dramatic situations, and is replete with superb scenery. Not every drama can boast of this combination of pleasing qualities. This Popular Plays and Players production, to be released by the Metro Pictures Corporation on October 25, embraces all of these features, and one more: that of novel photographic effects.

"My Madonna," the photoplay, is adapted from the poem of the same name by Robert W. Serviss. No less distinguished persons than Madame Petrova and Guy Coombs carry the leading roles. In their support are Evelyn Dumo, Albert Howson, and James O'Neill. Madame Petrova gives a wonderful impersonation of fascinating Lucille. Mr. Coombs, too, scores a triumph as Robert. There is not the slightest trace of cheapness or sham anywhere in the production, splendor and realism being the dominating qualities.

Robert (Guy Coombs) a struggling artist, has long been seeking a model for Madonna. By accident he meets Lucille, a loose woman of the demi-monde. She is attracted to the poor artist, and during the time that she is posing for him, love springs up. On the quiet Lucille pays an art merchant to buy the completed Madonna and the artist's rise to wealth is rapid. Robert marries his model, but his money and the demands of society tend to reduce his affections.

The baroness then has her portrait painted, and during the process Robert becomes devoted to her. The baron is delighted at Robert's interest in his wife, in whom he has lost all interest, because he is sure that he can thus win Lucille's affections. But Lucille will have nothing to do with the baron.

The art merchant seeks to purchase some of Robert's paintings from Lucille.

The baron is killed in his house by a workman, whom he had formerly robbed of his wife. Robert comes down stairs and is in just the situation that circumstantial evidence requires when the baroness and her servants enter. The baroness accuses Robert of her husband's death and Robert gets a life sentence.

Lucille's love for Robert, however, remains unchanged. She becomes a charity worker among children, and in this way runs up against the guilty workman, procures his confession to the murder, and has Robert freed. She then adopts the murderer's orphaned child. Robert, thinking Lucille no longer cares for him, makes his way sadly to the church where his Madonna hangs. Before the picture the two meet and their bonds of love are again made secure.

Triangle's Third Bill

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

FOR the third consecutive time the Ince studios unquestionably carry off the honors of the Triangle bill with "The Disciple," the superb production in which William S. Hart is featured. The whole Triangle bill for the current week is pleasing, and beyond a doubt superior to last week's offerings, but the Hart film stands out above all others.

Thomas H. Ince and S. Barret McCormick are credited with being the authors of the scenario in which Hart is starred and they have constructed for him one of those roles for which he is so well fitted and which gives him every opportunity to display his talents. Hart appears as Jim Houston, a frontier missionary, and upon arriving in Barren Gulch sets out to spread the gospel among the Gulch's rather uncouth inhabitants. Mrs. Houston, Jim's wife, becomes infatuated with "Doc" Hardy, an ex-physician and now keeper of the Gulch's biggest and wickedest dance hall. Hardy persuades her to elope with him, but ere they can marry is called back to the Gulch on business and Mrs. Houston, who has already regretted her hasty step, takes the chance offered to return to her husband. She reaches his cabin in the midst of a terrific rain storm to find that little Alice, her daughter, is dangerously ill and in need of immediate medical attention.

Polly Moran in "Her Painted Hero."

Meanwhile Houston has learned of Hardy's return to town and, knowing him to be a doctor, sets out to bring him to Alice's bedside at the point of a gun. There Hardy saves the child's life and is confronted by the woman with whom he had eloped. Houston raises his gun to kill the despoiler of his home, but is confronted with a vision of the crucified Christ and spares the man's life, though ordering him out of the camp.

Hart's work in this production is a wonderful bit of emotional acting and will win him thousands of new admirers, while the same photodrama will serve to introduce to the screen Dorothy Dalton, a pretty stock star, in the role of Mrs. Houston. Robert McKim is splendid as "Doc" Hardy and never for a moment overacts the part assigned him. Thelma Salter is both sweet and capable as little

William S. Hart, Dorothy Dalton and Thelma Salter in "A Disciple."

Alice Houston and Charles K. French as Birdshot Bivens, the sheriff-friend of Jim Houston, has a part that he puts over in a convincing fashion.

No review of this production would be complete without a word of praise for the wonderful rain-storm scene in the fourth reel, the thunder and lightning being staged with remarkable realism. The western atmosphere of the whole picture is convincing, as is always the case when Ince stages a story of the frontier, and the costumes, settings and props are all in keeping with the locale of the story.

The Fine Arts Film Company offers "The Martyrs of the Alamo," a historical drama of the days when Texas was fighting for its freedom, and Director W. C. Cabanne has screened a most interesting bit of American history in a stirring fashion. The play features no particular star but such well-known and already popular thespians as Sam De-Grasse, Walter Long, Tom Wilson, A. D. Sears, Alfred Paget, Augustus Carney, John Dillon, Fred Burns, Ora Carew and Juanita Hanson are seen to advantage. The battle scenes are spectacular in the extreme and the settings all quite as they might have been had a cameraman been present during the stirring events themselves. Such never-to-be-forgotten characters as Santa Anna, Sam Houston, David Crockett and James Bowie are prominent in the production, which pictures in detail the defeat of the Americans in the Alamo under the leadership of Colonel Travis, and the final defeat and capture of Santa Anna after a pitched battle with the forces of Sam Houston.

A meeting of the Alamo's defenders in "Martyrs of the Alamo."

Comedy aplenty enlivens this week's bill, the laughter beginning with the screening of "Her Painted Hero," in which Hale Hamilton and Polly Moran are featured. The story has to do with a stage struck girl, in love with the touring star, who shakes her fiance to become the "angel" of the star in a new venture in which she is herself to be the leading woman. The scenes "back-stage" are ludicrous in the extreme and end in a riot when the curtain goes up with Polly hanging from it.

The closing number of the program is "A Game Old Knight," from the Keystone studios, with Charles Murray as the hero, Harry Booker as the king, Louise Fazenda as the ugly princess and Cecile Arnold as the pretty princess. The game old knight, upon invading the king's castle in search of the beautiful princess, incurs the anger of the monarch and, with his valet, is sentenced to be tortured. The scenes in which the executioner wrecks vengeance upon him brought howls of laughter from the audience and utilize some rather unusual stage effects, even for a Keystone comedy.

"An Affair of Three Nations"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

UNCOMMONLY interesting and admirably acted, "An Affair of Three Nations," the first of a series being produced by Arnold Daly and Ashley Miller, is a worthy addition to the formidable group of Gold Rooster plays. It is a mystery story giving to the producers and a cast of well known players many occasions for good dramatic effect. The element of mystery is maintained to the closing scenes, but from the beginning there are enough developments to hold the attention. In this respect "An Affair of Three Nations" has an advantage over the average detective photoplay. All the developments are not crowded into the last two reels.

Scene from "An Affair of Three Nations."

The story is an adaption from the novel "Ashton Kirke, Investigator," by John T. McIntyre. In this picture the peace of three nations, the United States, Russia and Japan, are at stake. Some time ago it might have been incredulous that a certain document, a scrap of paper, in the possession of a certain clique, would precipitate war, but now it is perfectly acceptable. Also it is quite possible that Ashton-Kirke, after solving many problems and having several thrilling adventures, averts war when he prevents the "papers" from falling into the hands of the wrong party.

The direction of Arnold Daly and Ashley Miller is highly satisfactory. Mr. Daly is known best on the screen as a detective, and in the role of Ashton-Kirke he has plenty of opportunity to display that wonderful presence of mind that makes the detective so attractive whether he be the subject of a novel, a photoplay or a production on the speaking stage. Mr. Daly gives a fine performance as the young man of wealth who undertakes to solve mysteries for the pleasure it gives him. At the solicitation of Dr. Morse's secretary and niece, Kirke promises to learn the reason for the doctor's constant worry.

Unknown to Morse he commences his investigation. After learning a few facts, the detective visits the Secretary of State, who gives him much helpful information. Upon returning Kirke learns that the doctor has been murdered. The reason for the threatening letters which Morse has received, Kirke discovers, is that the doctor, while unaware of the fact, had a copy of the treaty between the United States and Russia.

While the party of Japanese are anxious to secure the document they are not responsible for the murder. The doctor's housekeeper shot him accidently. Kirke finally obtains the copy and delivers it to the Secretary of State.

Sheldon Lewis plays his part as Dr. Morse excellently. Louise Rutter is an appealing Stella Morse, and Doris Mitchell an expressive Nanon, the housekeeper. Charles Laite, William Harrigan, Charles Krauss, Geoffrey Stein, Martin Sabine and George Melville are the other capable members of the splendid cast.

"The Man Who Could'nt Beat God"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE accusing power of conscience is the theme of "The Man Who Couldn't Beat God," the five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, released on the V. L. S. E. program October 18. This story, written by Harold Gilmore Calhoun, was awarded second prize in the recent Vitagraph-Sun Scenario Contest. Maurice Costello makes his debut on the V. L. S. E. Program as Martin Henchford, who believes he has strength of character and ability enough to realize his every desire.

The direction is by Mr. Costello and Robert Gaillard. Estelle Mardo, as Elizabeth Bradford, has the leading feminine role, which she enacts effectively. Mr. Gaillard as Elmer Bradford, Denton Vane as Leslie Gilman and Naomi Childers as Hilma Lake, play their important parts with ability. The cast is completed by Charles Eldridge, Edwina Robbins and Mary Maurice. The story plays in England and America. The directors are deserving of praise for the true atmosphere of the scenes laid in England.

Martin Henchford, Lord Cyril Rexford's gardener, grows tired of his master's insults and abuse and kills him. Lord Cyril's death is attributed to a fall from his horse. Martin vows to forget that he is a murderer and leaves for America, where he is determined to make a name for himself. He begins as a sandhog in the construction of a new tunnel.

His strong personality attracts Elmer Bradford, owner of the construction company, and he promotes Martin to overseer. By hard study Henchford earns a partnership in the firm. Though he is advancing rapidly toward his goal, Henchford cannot free himself from the cloud which the knowledge of his crime casts over him. He wins the hand of Bradford's daughter, but his happiness is not complete, for on the night of his wedding he is haunted by the vision of Lord Cyril.

Five years elapse, Martin Henchford, now a prominent politician, is elected governor. From the strain of an uneasy conscience and his official duties, Henchford suffers a complete break-down. His physician orders a sea voyage. The governor requests to be taken back to his old home. He escapes from his nurse and visits the scene of his crime, where a vision of his victim so excites him that he dies from shock.

A scene from "The Man Who Couldn't Beat God"

In depicting Henchford's ability and force in his political victory the author has not paid a very high tribute to his character. since Henchford's opponent is one of those politicians who believe in defeating the reform candidate by kidnaping him just before he is to make an important speech. There are any number of men with political ambitions who would be highly elated if the only object standing between them and success was a machine boss of this type. But, as with the other developments in the plot, Henchford's rise from laborer to governor is plausible.

"The College Orphan"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A FEATURE film of a rather unusual sort is "The College Orphan," which Universal will release as its Broadway Feature on Monday, October 25, for the story is laid almost entirely in and about a college and has for its principals college youths, co-eds and the unhappy little "orphan" mentioned in the title of the production.

Carter DeHaven and Flora Parker DeHaven are the featured players in the story and both of them photograph well and appear capable of becoming regular screen stars should occasion demand. The scenario for "The College Orphan" was prepared by Louis V. Jefferson and the production was staged under the direction of William Dowlan, all of which will serve to assure exhibitors of its excellence.

The Dean interrupts the dance at the frat house.

Jack Bennett awakens one morning to discover that his father has received a lengthy bill from a certain cafe proprietor for damages caused by Jack the night before, during a gay carousal of a party of his friends. Jack is summoned before his father, heartily lectured and told that when he departs for college he is to be placed on an allowance of $15 per week as punishment for his gayety.

At college Jack soon becomes exceedingly popular though he finds himself unable, for financial reasons, to live at a frat house and accordingly goes to Mrs. Blanding's boarding house, where Daisy Woods, an orphan, is the maid of all work. Jack is kind to Daisy and the latter, who has never received attentions and kindness from others, immediately falls in love with him, though Jack is engaged to Irma Brentwood, daughter of his father's partner.

Bruce Howard, an upper classman at college and also a roomer at Mrs. Blanding's, becomes Jack's enemy and endeavors by every means in his power to undermine the latter's popularity. While celebrating a football victory Jack and his friends attend a burlesque theater where they break up the show by their boisterousness, and end by kidnapping a lot of the chorus girls and taking them to the frat house for a dance. The dean learns of what is happening and sets out to put a stop to proceedings. Learning of his coming, the frat boys hide the chorus girls, don feminine apparel and resume their dancing. The dean is amazed when he confronts the party to discover that the supposed "girls" are college men disguised and departs much mollified.

Bruce Howard, however, sees in the kidnapping of the chorus girls and the excitement it has aroused a chance to cause Jack much trouble. He bribes one of the chorus girls and conceals her in Jack's room at Mrs. Blandings, though he is seen taking her thither by Daisy. When Jack returns he is horrified to discover a girl in his apartment, and still further amazed when she tears her clothing and screams for help. As a result of the escapade Jack is expelled from college, and disinherited by his father.

Cast upon his own resources Jack resolves to make good by himself, being encouraged in this resolution by Daisy. He sends the latter to his mother in order to free her from the bondage she endures at Mrs. Blandings and in hope that she may have a chance of telling his father the real facts about the cause of his dismissal from college.

Daisy is finally placed as a maid to Irma Brentwood, and while there learns Jack's father and Mr. Brentwood are planning on bidding on a big government contract. Bruce Howard, while calling on Irma, sees the bid and steals it, for the purpose of underbidding Jack's father. Daisy sees him steal the paper and later herself obtains it. Realizing its importance she gives it to Jack and on the day the bids are submitted Jack is able to foil both his father and Howard by submitting a bid lower than either of them.

Jack, after being awarded the contract, turns the bid over to his father, and is given a chance to explain Howard's duplicity. Daisy is then introduced as his affianced wife and the prodigal is taken home.

"The White Pearl"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

"THE White Pearl," a Japanese story of decided fascination and uninterrupted interest, affords Marie Doro a splendid opportunity to establish herself even more firmly than before as an excellent actress for the screen. In portraying the part of Nancy, later O-Nyoko-San, in this late Famous Players production, she brings into play her many dramatic resources, fairly electrifying the role with her personality and making a naturally pretty girl fascinating.

Everything savors strongly of the East, even down to the bamboo borders enclosing the cut-ins. The director has done exceptionally well in making the illusion so perfect. There are minor physical incongruities in the production which are, however, best forgotten in summing up its general attractiveness and effects. The story, although not strikingly original, is clear and entirely free from the ponderous intricacies and useless detail often met with in features.

The unique manner of introducing Marie Doro in the first part of the film is worthy of mention. A Jap is shown gazing intently into an open oyster shell which he holds in the palm of his hand. Strongly outlined against the shadows of the interior reposes the diminutive form of Marie Doro.

Nancy, the daughter of a sea-captain, loves Bob Alden, the son of a wealthy ship owner. The latter, not liking the match, puts up a barrier of separation between the two by sending Bob to Yokohama to take charge of the company's offices there. A dying sailor has bestowed a pearl of great value upon Bob. The gem had been stolen from the forehead of a Japanese idol and ever since its disappearance the people have prayed devoutly for its safe return. Bob gives this pearl to Nancy for a pendant.

Marie Doro in a scene from "The White Pearl."

The kind-hearted old captain prescribes a sea trip for his daughter's health. It happens that Nancy and Bob become passengers on the same ship, bound for Yokohama. Not far from its destination the boat springs a dangerous leak; the crew mutinies, kills the the captain, Nancy's father, and takes the only life-boat. Later, the inert body of Nancy is discovered on the shore, lashed to a raft, with the pearl about her neck. Bob is picked up by another ship and taken to Yokohama.

The natives are delighted at the return of the jewel in the keeping of this fair goddess, into whose custody they believe the gods have ordained it to fall, and treat her with utmost deference. All goes happily until Nancy, now known as O-Nyoko-San, is kidnapped and pressed into service as a geisha girl. Her charms captivate a Captain Featherstone, who buys her from the keeper of the tea-tavern.

At this juncture Bob appears and saves her from the fate which is imminent. Her memory has been lost, but slowly returns as Bob relates the past. The trouble brought by the Buddha's pearl into her life ended, the lovers embrace in a manner that would have caused Bob's father no end of discomfort were he not too far distant to know of or disturb their bliss.

"A Rheumatic Joint"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

TAKING the men who were mixed up with the ruin of Violet Warden's father in the order in which their names appear on her "black-list," Wallingford and Daw in "A Rheumatic Joint" proceed to square accounts with the suspicious and alert Cornelius Rockewell. Rockewell knows all the tricks of crooked business deals, having been, in his younger days, one of those men who are referred to by friends and persons charitably inclined as "shrewd," but like everybody else he has a weak point, and J. Rufus finds it. This is the third episode or adventure in Pathe's "Wallingford" series, produced by the Whartons, and in its two reels there is much comedy and good humor.

As with the two former episodes, "A Rheumatic Joint" is elaborately staged and splendidly acted. The popularity of George Randolph Chester's stories speaks for their quality and that quality has been effectively carried to the screen. With the high class presentation the stories are being given it is only natural that this Pathe series should be quite as popular.

An attack of rheumatism causes Wallingford to try Zwick's Sanitarium. He finds the treatment rather strenuous and not at all to his liking, and makes his escape shortly after entering the place. However, the trip to the sanitarium had its reward, for Wallingford learns there that Cornelius Rockewell will pay well for a cure for his ailment. Blackie and J. Rufus open an anti-old-age cure. By "accident" Onion Jones meets Rockewell and tells him of the wonderful cures affected at the Wallingford Sanitarium.

A humorous moment in "A Rheumatic Joint."

The millionaire visits the place to investigate. His coming is expected at the sanitarium and all is in preparation. Rockewell's investigation is thorough, but so too are the "cures" at Wallingfords. Cornelius after much sleuthing wishes to take the treatment, but Wallingford refuses him as a patient telling him that they only cure worthy people, and Rockewell has not earned his money honestly. Rockewell's only chance to be cured is to buy the establishment. The price staggers him but Cornelius must be cured, so he pays $150,000 for Wallingford's interest. Violet then crosses the name of Rockewell off the list.

As the genial J. Rufus Wallingford, whose personality is so pleasing and whose manner so assuring, Burr McIntosh gives a consistent portrayal, realizing the full strength of the character. Blackie Daw is handled splendidly by Max Figman and Lolita Robertson makes Violet Warden a most charming person. Edward O'Connor is a convincing "con" man as Onion Jones.

"Out of the Ashes"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

MANY are the mistakes made in a man's life. Some are minor and are soon forgotten while others are enormous ones and change the whole course of an existence. Some mistakes are unavoidable and some are unnecessary. The big mistake made by Dr. Thorne, the young physician, in "Out of the Ashes," the two-reel American production, to be released on October 25, was an unavoidable one, but one which nevertheless changed the whole trend of his life.

Dr. Thorne calls Joe a "cur."

Ed Coxen is cast as Dr. Thorne, a young physician, who after patiently watching over a sick child all night, takes a bracer in the morning. He is called upon to perform a serious operation and then when he faints from overwork, and the patient's death is the result, the cause of it is laid, by the matron who smells the whiskey on his breath, to drink, and the physician is disgraced. Winifred Greenwood is an appealing Madge, wife of a brutal foreman, which part is strongly portrayed by George Field. The man cast as Jim, a half-wit is not mentioned in the cast, but he deserves exceptional praise for his rendition of this character, which is splendid.

As the story opens we see young Dr. Thorne brooding over his dismissal from the hospital corps and the disgrace that followed from it. He thinks the matter over and finally decides that there is only one thing left for him to do and that is to go West and there enter into some other work and forget himself and his past.

Thorne arrives in a small mining camp and after some time manages to get a position as bookkeeper in the offices of the Silver Bell Mining Company. Joe, the foreman of the Silver Bell Mine has a wife and a little daughter. The man is cruel to them and also is very bitter toward Jim, a half-wit, who takes pleasure in talking to Madge, and playing with the little girl. One day when Joe comes home and finds the lad there he deals him a blow and the half-wit goes away vowing vengeance. He meets Dr. Thorne, who sympathizes with him and then gives him part of his watch fob, which the poor boy admires and treasures highly. Thorne also wins the friendship of Madge and the baby.

Jim falls asleep and dreams that to wreak vengeance on Joe, he has set his house on fire. The place blazes up and the wind being strong sets fire to the whole town. When he awakes and finds it all a dream and he rushes to see Madge and the baby.

That afternoon the little girl is knocked down by a runaway team and injured so that only the services of a surgeon can save her life. Dr. Thorne hears of the accident and comes to the house. Here he tells Madge that he is a surgeon and will operate but that there must be no interruption and she stations Jim at the door telling him to let no one in the house. Joe, who has heard that the doctor is at his house, approaches and Jim remembering Madge's cautioning will not let him in. In the struggle which follows, Joe's revolver goes off and he is killed. A year later we see Madge, her baby, Dr. Thorne and Jim happily playing together on the hilltop which overlooks the town and as the picture fades, the doctor takes Madge into his arms.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

"MINE Own People," is the title of chapter twenty-seven of the thrilling North American serial, "The Diamond from the Sky." As the title suggests this chapter is significant of biblical happenings, in fact even the costumes of Hagar, the Gypsy (Eugenie Forde) and Esther (Lottie Pickford) resemble those in the Bible story of Ruth and Esther. The inspiration for the story in this chapter was gotten from the book of Ruth, sixteenth verse, first chapter, which reads, "And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: For whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

The gypsies welcome Esther and Hagar, their queen.

Arthur Stanley has now gotten a new expensive plaything, an aeroplane. Luke Lovell brings "The Diamond from the Sky" to Quabba and asks him to take it to Virginia to Esther and Hagar, while he remains to revenge himself upon Arthur and Blair Stanley. When Esther and Hagar receive the jewel they seal it and enclose the transcribed prayer of Esther's dying mother and send it to Arthur. The prayer reads, "O, child of my heart, not a diamond but a loving mother's prayer is the true 'charm against harm!'" When we last see the precious gem it is before Arthur Stanley in a velvet case with a bottle of poison lying beside it and Arthur preparing to drink a toast of death.

In this chapter Arthur Stanley has at last come to the realization of his follies. He is a dissipated and wasteful young man and his strong constitution has battled more or less successfully with the drug habit, but his will has grown weak and his better self is silenced and there is only one friend who now remains true to him and that is his servant, Parker.

In Richmond Hagar prepares to leave to join the Gypsies and leaves a note telling Esther of her parentage and that she is leaving. However, Esther discovers Hagar's intentions before she has gone and pleads with her to take her with her. Accidentally the Bible falls to the floor and opens to a chapter in the book of Ruth and using this as her guide Hagar promises to take Esther with her and together they leave for the Gypsy camp, where after some few days they decide to travel toward the West.

In Los Angeles Luke Lovell remains in order to revenge himself upon Arthur and Blair Stanley and he is ever watching an opportunity to harm them. To keep Arthur from thinking and to keep him engaged Blair and Vivian get him interested in an aeroplane, hoping in this way that he will thereby kill himself or become so reckless in spending money and entertaining that he will soon be ruined.

Blair keeps to Arthur's business affairs while "John Powell" keeps to his wild pleasures and Vivian waits for the reappearance of "The Diamond from the Sky." She is continually reminding Arthur of the fact that he had promised it to her and pretending her interest in the diamond is deep affection for him.

One day while Vivian and Blair are out motoring John Powell's secretary comes to him bearing proof of Blair's treachery and show Arthur how Blair has doctored accounts and cancelled checks and now the Powell property is on the point of ruin. Parker, Arthur's man servant is bothered by Vivian's maid and one day the woman hints at a secret she holds over her mistress' head and Parker submits to being kissed to learn the secret and is shown the marriage certificate of Vivian and Blair, dated the year before and this certificate he brings to Arthur Stanley.

He takes all these proofs of his perfidy, "The Diamond from the Sky," and his mother's message and lays them out before him and also a small bottle containing poison and as the picture fades out we see him locked in his library alone with these things and his thoughts, waiting for midnight to come so he can drain the poisoned cup and drink a toast of death.

"The Strange Unknown"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

A WEIRD, uncanny production is the Lubin three-reel picture "The Strange Unknown," to be released October 28. The mystery of the "strange unknown" is kept up until the strong climax, the murder of Leon Bassel is reached, and the settings are most appropriate for the action of the picture.

Helen Eddy, a young woman of exceptionable dramatic ability, is cast as Meta, daughter of Andrew Clark (Melvin Mayo). L. C. Shumway, the well known Lubin actor, takes the part of Lark Whitney, an artist in love with Meta and who has attracted the attention of Blanche, Meta's sister, who is portrayed by Dorothy Battett. George Routh as Leon Bassel, Adelaide Bronti as Ida, the maid, and Robert Gray as Dr. Thompson, complete this strong cast.

A tense moment in "The Strange Unknown."

There is one point in the direction of this production which is very noticeable. A clock is used which is very prominent in the picture and the time registered thereon is not in accordance with the action of the story. This, however, is a minor point, which is noticed frequently in other productions and does not detract from the stirring interest in this picture.

Meta Clark lives in New York with her father, a wealthy banker. Her thoughts, however, are in Paris with Lark Whitney, an American artist, who is engaged to the girl. In Paris, Blanche Clark, an actress and step-sister to Meta, meets Lark Whitney and falls in love with him. Meta's father dies and she telegraphs to Lark asking him to locate her sister, Blanche, and bring her home with him. Leon Bassel, an admirer of Blanche's, reading in the papers of Clark's death, also leaves with Lark and Blanche hoping that when the girl arrives home she will fall heir to part of her father's estate and then he can marry her.

Once arrived in New York they discover that Meta's mind has been slightly affected from grief and the doctor gives warning that she must be watched as she may do herself harm. Leon persuades Blanche to give Meta a prescription which causes mental disorder and the girl suddenly disappears and as her cloak is found at the river, having been placed there by Leon, the conclusion is that she has drowned herself.

Sometime later Blanche becomes sole heir to her father's estate and she gives Leon a large sum of money and tells him to leave her. She goes to Lark and he becomes fascinated with her and one night when he is attending an informal affair at her home a pair of woman's hands protrude through the velvet curtains at the hall door.

The next evening Leon calls and gains entrance to the house and Meta who has been kept a prisoner in the attic has managed to come down into the library. She sees the revolver which Leon is handling and manages to get hold of it and it is discharged and the maid coming into the room finds Leon dead.

Lark and Blanche arrive home and Lark finds a few strands of Meta's hair in Leon's cuff and then tells Blanche to take him to the woman who is in the house. Knowing that there is but one way to keep Blanche's name clear he takes Meta out and leaves her on a street corner making it appear that she has been wandering about since her disappearance.

Later Meta recovers, the drug having died out and Blanche, filled with shame, returns to Paris leaving Lark and Meta to their own happiness.

"When California Was Wild"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

FRITZI BRUNETTE makes her debut with animals in "When California was Wild," the single reel Selig wild animal picture, scheduled for release on Saturday, October 30.

Though this is Miss Brunette's first appearance in Jungle-Zoo films, she acts like a veteran with the animals, and is both fearless and brave. That it is not all play or make-believe is clearly shown in one scene when Miss Brunette falls into a bear trap, and later is confined in this narrow space with a bear which has been badly wounded.

The story of "When California Was Wild" is from the pen of

A tense moment from Selig's "When California Was Wild."

John J. Sheridan, and was produced under the direction of William Robert Daly. Supporting Miss Brunette are, Charles Murphy, Lillian Heyward and Harry Linkey.

John Foster, a trapper, with his wife and pretty daughter, live in the wilderness. Following a hunting trip, his daughter returns to the cabin with some game while Foster prepares a bear trap. While he is so engaged he is attacked by a large bear, and only saved by the opportune appearance of Tom Howard, a hunter, who shoots and kills the animal.

Foster later dies as a result of the wounds received when he was attacked by the bear, and May has to take her father's place as a trapper, in order to eke out a living.

She often meets Tom Howard while making the rounds of her various traps, but refuses to marry him when he proposes. One day Tom discovers the tracks of a mountain lion, and sets out to follow the beast. As he comes face to face with the lion he raises his rifle, but the shell fails to explode, and May, appearing just then, sees Tom and the lion locked in a death grapple. She rushes toward him to render such assistance as she may, but inadvertently falls into a bear trap.

Later Tom succeeds in overpowering the lion and, not having noted May's appearance in the vicinity, goes away, leaving her helpless in the bear pit. When he reaches her home May's mother explains her anxiety over May's prolonged absence, and the two set forth in search of her.

May, meanwhile, has been having an exciting time in the bear pit, for a huge specimen of the bear tribe is attracted to the spot and is sniffing about the edges of the trap and on the very point of falling into it, when Tom appears, notes the bear, and shoots it.

The bear falls into the pit with May, but Tom, by heroic work, is able to save the girl he loves, ere she can be injured by the bear in its death agony. May is pulled out of the pit, and out of gratitude consents to marry Tom.

"The Sun Worshippers"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN THE mysterious brute man the intriguing smuggler, Hernandez, has a most valuable assistant, which is conclusively proven in the eighth episode of the William Hamilton Osborne serial "Neal of the Navy," produced by Balboa for the Pathe Exchange. In this chapter, which is entitled, "The Sun Worshippers," the, apparently, simple-minded giant uproots a tree with his powerful hands. At the top of the tree Neal is signaling the warship and to up-root it is an easier task for the shaggy creature than to climb after the young man.

Scene from "The Sun Worshippers."

As in the preceding chapter the action takes place in Southern California. This release derives its title from a secluded city where there lives a band of people who practice an ancient religion which calls for the sacrifice of humans by fire as a devotion to their god, the sun. To these people Hernandez gives his fair captive, Annette, and they prepare to deliver her to the flames.

The photography is particularly good and some remarkable scenic effects are procured. The temple of the Sun Worshippers is a splendid set. Nothing much is shown in detail but the general effect is good; better perhaps than if more ornaments and properties were brought to the fore. Director Harry Harvey is injecting realism into this production to an extent that reflects credit upon his ability, for there are a number of reasons whch make this not easy of accomplishment.

Annette and Neal have been captured by Hernandez. He brings them to a city of the Sun Worshippers, and for a consideration gives Annette to the people. Neal is imprisoned. Meanwhile Hernandez has instructed Inez and Joe Welcher to bring Mrs. Hardin to the city. From worry over the strange disappearance of her son and Annette, she is in such a weakened condition that she can hardly make the trip.

On their way they meet a detachment sent from the ship Florida to search for Neal. Mrs. Hardin is taken aboard and receives medical treatment. Neal breaks the rusty bars on his cell window and from the beach signals the ship. Annette, whom the Sun Worshippers are preparing to sacrifice also escapes. She reaches the beach in time to persuade the Brute Man not to kill her foster brother. Hernandez while peering over the cliff above them drops the torn map of Lost Isle, which the girl recovers. Returning to the ship, Neal sends a shot crashing through the temple of the Sun Worshippers.

Neither William Courtleigh, Jr., as the promising young gunner, nor Lillian Lorraine as the beautiful and courageous heiress of the treasure island, are called upon to perform any perilous feats in this episode, but they are active. Edwin Brady is a villainous looking Hernandez. Lucy Blake as Inez Castro and Charles Dudley as Joe Welcher are fine types for the parts, as has been mentioned in previous reviews.

Essanay's "The Outer Edge"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "The Outer Edge," the three-reel Essanay release of Tuesday, October 19, Henry Walthall has another opportunity to give one of those portrayals of a "down-and-outer" for which he is famous. This time it is a drunkard and drug user that he impersonates, and so vivid is his playing that at times he is well nigh gruesome, as he chatters and grimaces to himself before a cracked mirror. Eventually, however, manhood reasserts itself and Walthall becomes again the great and honored physician he was before his fall to the depths.

Dr. Rownlee, still drunk, calls on the sick child.

The story is from the pen of Henry Oyen and has been splendidly produced by E. H. Calvert, with careful attention to detail and much thought on the selection of locations. The story moves easily along to its big climax and the star has been given every opportunity by his director to register the emotions which he is a wizard at depicting. Certain scenes are handled in a symbolical fashion rather than played out in all their grimness, and for this Director Calvert is to be complimented. One of the most striking examples of this sort is the death bed of the little lad whom Dr. Rownlee is called upon to save. Instead of actually depicting the death of the child, due to the drunkenness of his physician, a flash of the bed chamber with the blanket pulled up over the little sufferer is given, and one instantly comprehends what has happened.

Warda Howard has the leading feminine role, that of Grace Elbert, the nurse with whom Rownlee is in love, and Sydney Ainsworth appears as Cameron, the man who brings about Rownlee's downfall. Both are satisfying in the roles assigned them.

As the story opens we see Rownlee, a famous surgeon, beginning his courtship of Grace Elbert, one of the nurses in the hospital, and learn that Cameron, employed by a milling company, is his rival for Grace's hand. While Grace and Rownlee are in the park the nurse receives a note summoning her to the bedside of a child who is seriously ill. She departs to minister to the sufferer and Rownlee, on his way back to the hospital, encounters Cameron and is led by the latter to indulge in strong drink until his mind is considerably befuddled.

Grace finds the child so near death that after a consultation with another physician it is decided his only chance for life depends upon securing the services of the famous Dr. Rownlee. A note is hurried off to the doctor summoning him to the child's bedside but when he arrives he is so drunk that it seems dangerous to permit him to assume charge of the case. Inspired by his love for Grace, Rownlee endeavors to brace up long enough to perform the operation, but death results and Rownlee realizes that he is to blame.

As a result of the mental suffering which he endures on account of his failure to save the life of the child, Rownlee seeks solace in drink and drugs, and when we next see him is a wreck of his former self. He sinks lower and lower until he becomes nothing but a drunken sot.

Driven desperate, at last, he buys a cheap revolver and plans to end his life. By mistake he wanders into the wrong room in the hovel which he calls home, and thus stumbles upon a mother and child who are dying of starvation. Despite his drunken condition Rownlee is still enough of a man to feel the need for aiding these sufferers and, after bringing aid from the nearest police station, pawns his revolver to buy food for the starving. The ambulance surgeon sent by the police department declares the child is so sick that no power can save him—unless Dr. Rownlee, who disappeared some time before, can be found and induced to operate upon him.

The mention of his name rouses the drunkard and shaking off the mists that fog his brain Rownlee declares his identity and offers to do what he can to save the child. The operation he performs is successful and he sees a chance to begin life anew and fight until he wins his way back to the heights. In this new determination he is aided by a chance meeting with Grace, now deserted by Cameron, whom she had married, and the film ends with a resolve upon the part of these two to build their lives anew.

Clipper's "The Idol"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FEW pictures as good as "The Idol," the three-reel Clipper production, to be released on October 30, have been seen. The story of this photo-drama is one which is well adaptable for screen use and it is admirably handled by all of the players. It concerns the effects of popularity on Cecil Fordyce, who after becoming an idol of the theater-loving public, acquires a craving for drink. This results in his losing his position and finally sinking to the lowest depths of degradation, from which he is saved by the efforts of a young girl who is now the "idol" of the people. The dramatic situations are strongly acted by the cast.

The direction of this production was given to William Bertram. E. Forrest Taylor does some of the best work of his career as Cecil Fordyce. Little Helene Rosson, the actress who has gained favor with her work in recent productions is cast as Joyce Ferndon the girl who takes Fordyce's place in the public's fickle affections. Jack Prescott does convincing work as Sigmund, a violinist, who falls in love with Joyce. Al Fordyce as the manager, Ashton Dearholt as the leading man and Robert Klien as the stage director, complete the cast.

Cecil Fordyce is a famous actor and is the idol of the public. He starts in to living a fast life and is soon a drunkard. His manager cautions him repeatedly about his ruining himself but the young man still continues to satisfy his craving for liquor. Finally he loses his engagement and because no one can depend upon him he is unable to secure another one. At the end of five years the former idol of the public is a typical "down and outer" and lives off from the money he manages to beg from passers-by.

Joyce Ferndon, a young actress is now the idol of the fickle public. Her manager gives her the script for her new play, in which she is to play the part of a Salvation Army lassie. To secure local atmosphere the girl joins the Salvation Army and is soon an enthusiastic member. While at the theater the girl had attracted the notice of Sigmund, a violinist who attacked her one night and when she managed to get rid of him through the interference of her manager the Italian vowed vengeance.

One night Fordyce is thrown out of a saloon and falls on the sidewalk at Joyce's feet. The girl dresses the former "idol's" head, as he has severely cut it in the fall, and before leaving him asks him to come to a meeting sometime. Fordyce does attend the meeting and then resolves to reform. He gets a position as a laborer and finally works his way up to the position as foreman of the gang.

Sigmund, who has learned of the girl's whereabouts manages to get two of his confederates jobs with Fordyce and they, in that way, keep track of the girl. One day they receive a letter from Sigmund and Fordyce manages to read part of it and in this way learns of a plot to kidnap Joyce. He follows the gang to a saloon and after a terrific struggle rescues the girl.

Later the girl receives notice that she must report for rehearsal and she writes Fordyce a letter telling him of it. When the former actor receives the letter he is insanely mad and goes out and indulges in a wild carousal. The next morning he calls on the girl and denounces her for leading him on. Just as he is leaving the theater, the leading man is taken sick. As they are taking him to the hospital, Sigmund, who is lying in wait for Joyce, manages to level his revolver at her, but Fordyce overpowers him. When the manager sees Fordyce, he realizes that he is the man for the principal role in the play. On the opening night of the new play there are two idols enthusiastically greeted by the public.

Cecil upbraids the actress for "leading him on."

"The Final Judgment"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS picture, of the Rolfe-Metro brand, has quite a novel beginning. A glimpse of a play in which Ethel Barrymore, as Jane Carleson, the actress, is playing, is given and, after a climax, in which she kills her enemy, the camera is drawn back, revealing a crowded theater. Then Jane responds to the encores, and the novel introduction is complete.

Jane Carleson has a distinguished triad of suitors, namely: Murray Campbell, an assistant district attorney; Hamilton Ross, famous chemist and criminologist, and Henry Strong, a man of enormous wealth. Campbell is accepted. Ross immediately leaves for Russia to solve a mysterious murder. Here he discovers that the fumes from a poisoned Eastern incense have caused the death. The discovery would never have been made but for his secret chemical processes. An invitation to Campbell's wedding rousing his ire, he withholds the secret from the Russian authorities, and returns at once to America, determined to use this fiendish means to put Campbell out of the way. Ross then writes Campbell, warning him against a certain millionaire who is holding clandestine meetings with his (Campbell's) wife.

Henry Strong is with Campbell when he receives the note, and chides him about receiving perfumed letters from ladies, being married but three months. Campbell tells him to open it to satisfy his curiosity. This Strong does and receives the poison. When Campbell learns the import of the letter, he attempts to strike the millionaire, who at this moment collapses in death. The maid witnesses this last scene. Campbell is convicted and sentenced to execution.

Ethel Barrymore in a scene from "The Final Judgment."

Jane begins to suspect the chemist, and resolves to obtain evidence to free her husband. She secures incriminating notes and the oriental box of poison from the chemists's laboratory. She then sets a trap for Ross, planning to have him come to her house. Within calling distance she has stationed the chief of police and a doctor. Soon after entering, Ross notices the incense box is smoking in the center of the room, and flies into a frenzy. The doors are locked. Thinking that they are both going to perish, the chemist confesses his guilt. The incense, however, is spurious, having the perfume of the original, but not the deadly power. The wicked chemist falls into the grasp of the law, and Jane and her husband share a most deserved happiness.

The play has been adapted from George Scarborough's original story, and under the direction of Edwin Carewe assumes the characteristics of a first rate drama of unremitting interest. The picture is free from the bane of the over-intricate plot.

Ethel Barrymore's art cannot help but charm. As Jane, she is convincing and wholly satisfying in her role of the loyal wife, who turns detective to vindicate her husband. Mahlen Hamilton, H. Cooper Cliffe and Percy G. Standing have prominent parts in the play, and interpret them with great sincerity and success.

"The Mystery of Room 13"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THOSE who find pleasure in calculating just how a story will end in all probability will learn that their deductions are incorrect if they form hasty conclusions as to the one guilty of murder in "The Mystery of Room 13," the four-part Edison release for October 29. If uncertainty is the keynote of success in detective stories, this offering is successful for there are at least four characters on whom suspicion falls and the guilty person is the one least suspected.

The story was written by Lee Arthur and it is plausibly developed. While it is a mystery story there is no heroic detective and the melodramatic tendency is judiciously handled. "The Mystery of Room 13," which carries a pleasing romance, deals with an American heiress who marries a foreign nobleman who proves worthless. The Count is murdered and the wife and her sincere friend are threatened with arrest.

George Ridgewell, who has but recently been added to the Edison staff of directors, produced the picture. His work is commendable, the action is continuous and the settings appropriate. As most of the action is placed indoors the settings are of great importance.

June Baxter marries Count Rizzo. Returning from the church the newly married couple are halted by an Italian girl who denounces the Count whom she declares has betrayed her. Rizzo does not deny this. The next morning he calls at June's home. Clay Foster, her friend and the manager of the manufacturing company she has inherited, warns Rizzo to leave immediately. Upon returning to his hotel the Count writes June a letter in which he states that he is willing to return to Italy and give her a divorce if she will call at the hotel and agree to his terms.

June's aunt advises her not to visit Rizzo but the girl is determined and leaves for the city. Mrs. Montague asks Foster to follow and see that no harm comes to June. Her conversation with the count is overheard by a maid. Foster arrives at the hotel and secures the room adjoining Rizzo's. The next morning the count is found dead. As June and Foster are about to leave the hotel they are arrested on suspicion.

The maid gives an account of what she has heard and on this testimony June is placed under arrest. To prevent this Foster informs the police that he is the guilty one. Just as he is to be led away a newspaper reporter calls the police captain aside and gives him proof that the count was murdered for his money by one of the waiters. The waiter confesses when he is examined. June is free to marry Clay Foster, who has long since shown an affection for her.

Marc MacDermott gives an especially good portrayal in the heroic role. He is cast as Clay Foster and while the part makes no great demands upon him, there are some dramatic moments in which he is seen to advantage. Guido Colucci is well cast as the Count Rizzo. The leading feminine role is capably rendered by Lillian Herbert and Carlton King is breezy and assured as the reporter, Bruce Spencer.

Scene from "The Mystery of Room 13."

"A Girl of Yesterday"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

With Mary Pickford well in the foreground throughout the picture and a finished production, the absence of a story of any moment in "A Girl of Yesterday" is a great deal more than excusable. Strange as it may seem it is even gratifying, for it permits one to sit back and enjoy to the utmost the much discussed talents and screen technique of the star. The part of Jane Stuart, the prim little girl whose bringing up is Puritanical to the extreme, gives Miss Pickford opportunities. But the virtue of the role is that it gives her freedom, which is quite different from the opportunities most actresses require.

"A Girl of Yesterday" is described as a delightful and novel romance. It is all of delightful as it is a rapid succession of the most entertaining incidents, and novel in its unpretentiousness. There is nothing attempted that is not fully realized. The play is nearly all comedy. The humor arising from the romance of a little girl who upon receiving a rich inheritance is "taken up" by society. Before she was rich Jane was a person to be spoken of as Miss Prim, and usually with a smile.

Jane attends her first dance dressed in a gown her grandmother used to wear. But for all of that she is the center of attraction and quite captivates a young man named Stanley Hudson. Mrs. Monroe, the hostess, diplomatically offers Jane the services of her modiste. Later, on a yachting trip, Jane is dressed fashionably and receives so much attention from Stanley that Rosanna Danford becomes jealous and attempts to compromise the girl. But the slight misunderstanding between Stanley and Jane is not of long duration and in the end of the story his belated proposal is accepted.

Glenn Martin, the famous aviator, makes his screen debut and is seen as the bird-man who aids Rosanna in her attempt to compromise Jane by taking her for a flight and causing her to walk a long distance back to the yacht; explaining that the machine is disabled. When in or near his machine Mr. Martin is entirely at home but while he is a distance from it he is apparently conscious of the camera. However he is not featured as an actor and both he and his graceful machine are interesting.

Scene from "A Girl of Yesterday."

Jack Pickford has the part of Jane's brother. He is a capable light comedian as the brother who takes for granted his sister's many kindnesses, which is a way most brothers have. Marshall Neilan is a handsome Stanley Hudson, and Frances Marion a pleasing villainess as Rosanna Danford. Donald Crisp and Gertrude Norman have well suited character parts.

"Divorced"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

Many are the occasions for dramatic action in the part which Hilda Spong, who has won distinction on the English speaking stage and whose appearances here were marked with success, plays in the five-part drama entitled "Divorced," presented by the Equitable Pictures Corporation for release through World Film. "Divorced" is an original script by Edwin Arthur, and it depicts maternal love. Miss Spong is seen as Leonore Manson, a woman of little moral character who murders her lover to prevent him from telling her son of her sin, and whose only concern when tried in court is for the son's future happiness.

The character of Leonore is such that there is little sympathy felt for her until she suffers because of her son's blighted future. A mother's love will always be a favorite theme with dramatists. No matter how bad or vicious a woman may be she can win sympathy the moment her unselfish love for a child manifests itself. And for this same reason it will always receive a warm reception from audiences. The author of "Divorced" has drawn a strong character of this kind. Leonore is not led astray, she disregards the marriage vows realizing her sin and of her own volition, which is preferable to being led astray by some transparent "ruse."

The story begins with her marriage to Ralph Manson. Later, when their child is three years of age, Manson deserts Leonore. She obtains a divorce and manages to support herself and her son on the alimony. But after his death she is forced to mortgage the home. The real estate broker is attracted to her. Hadley's friendship for the lonely woman develops into infatuation.

Years later Eugene, her son, is sent to college. The boy does not know that the money for his education is being advanced by Hadley, his mother has led him to believe that her income from his father was sufficient to their needs. At college Eugene becomes acquainted with Madeline Deland. Hadley's son is in love with Madeline and he is jealous of Eugene. He learns of his father's affair with Mrs. Manson and makes it known to Madeline's mother.

Mrs. Delange breaks her daughter's engagement to Eugene, telling him the reason. Eugene confronts Hadley. The latter becomes impatient and starts to give an account of his relations with Leonore. Driven to desperation, she shoots and kills her lover. Leonore is tried for murder and acquitted on the grounds of temporary insanity. Madeline has remained loyal to Eugene and in the end marries him.

Scene from Equitable's "Divorced."

The picture is capably handled, having colorful settings and was produced by the Triumph Film Corporation under the direction of Edward Warren, who has used his material effectively. In the supporting cast Lyster Chambers, Charles Hutchinson, Lucy Cotton and Fred Eric are agreeably cast and give good performances.

A Plaza Theater in Sioux City

Announcement was made last evening by J. E. Bryant of the Plaza Theater Company that his company had been successful in closing a deal with the owners of the Selzer building in Sioux City whereby the building, which is a three-story structure, will be remodeled and made into one of the finest motion picture theaters in the northwest. The Plaza Theater Company secures a 10-year lease on the building and will occupy the entire structure. The first two floors will be occupied by the theater proper, and the echo pipe organ will be located on the third floor.

Mr. Bryant was asked regarding the expense of remodeling and equipping the new Plaza. In reply he stated that it would cost approximately $20,000 to remodel the building and another $20,000 to install the fixtures and furnishing, making an expenditure of about $40,000. The Selzer building is an exceptionally well constructed building, having cost about $40,000 to build. The same general scheme of interior decorations will be carried out in the Sioux City Plaza as was used in the local Plaza.

Eclair Company Now at Tucson, Arizona

That the Eclair Film Company of Los Angeles, newly organized by Robert Levy, will arrive in Tucson, Ariz., within two or three weeks to begin the filming of feature pictures, with Tucson as a permanent location, was the announcement made last week by William Henry, attorney for Mr. Levy, after looking over the ground as to its picture possibilities.

Mr. Levy has organized his company just recently and has taken over the western contracts of the Eclair Film Company, as well as their scenery and props, and with three other producers has formed a combination known as the Film Producers Company of Los Angeles, through which pictures of the four companies will be released in the west. In the east the companies will release through the Anglo-Peerless Corporation of New York City.

Andrew Arbuckle of Balboa

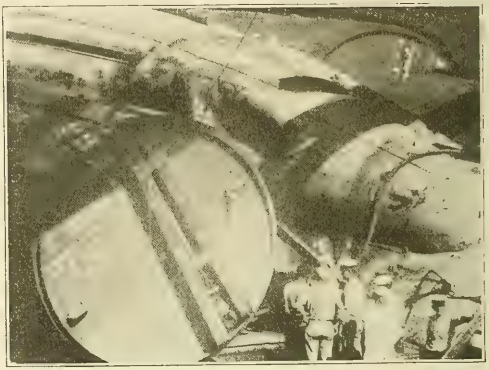
Wrong again!

This is "Andy" Arbuckle of the Balboa studio, not Maclyn, his older brother, of legitimate stage fame. Yet the two look enough alike to be peas of the same pod. And Andrew Arbuckle is a comedian also—a good one, too. He has been doing some of the best work in his entire career in Balboa feature films recently. He came to the Horkheimer brothers with a good reputation for work done at Lasky's and in a number of Griffith's pictures.

"Andy" Arbuckle.

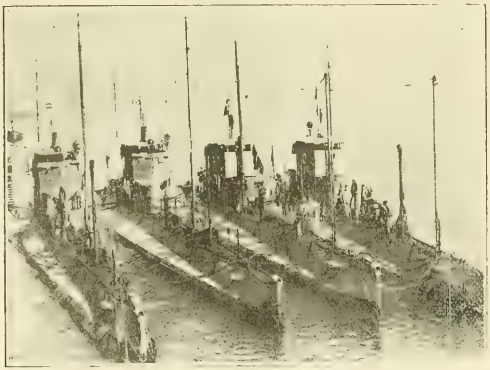
Born in Texas the year that Grover Cleveland first became president, Andrew Arbuckle has has a varied career. He began his young manhood in mercantile pursuits. But seeing how easy his older brother made money on the stage, "Andy" thought he'd have a try. So he organized a quartette and went into vaudeville. Then he played in several sketches.

Coming to the Pacific coast, he though he'd have a try at the picture game. Being fat and good-natured, he was cast for the part of a politician in "The Woman." Next he played in "Old Heidelberg" under the direction of John Emerson. He was also in "Peer Gynt" with Cyril Maude and "The Reformed Candidate" with his brother Maclyn. Since joining the Balboa Company, Andrew Arbuckle has had a rapid rise. In a five-reel production entitled "A Message from Reno," he is featured with Ruth Roland.



Ince Re-engages Stars

Unimpeachable evidence that many of the big stage stars are seeking the motion picture studio as a field of permanent livelihood is furnished most strikingly, perhaps, by the recent action of Thomas H. Ince in placing under long-term contracts three of the most illustrious figures of the footlight realm—Frank Keenan, Bessie Barriscale and William S. Hart. This distinguished trio of artists is now bound to appear exclusively in Ince productions, come what may in the nature of flattering offers from the theatrical magnates, and the binding process is an adamantine argument in support of the photoplay's popularity.



News of the Week as Shown in Films

"Smoke-eaters" of Philadelphia give demonstration of fire equipment
Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly

U. S. submarine F-4 raised from the waters of the bay of Honolulu.
Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly

Four K-type submarines leave for Honolulu. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

The first meeting of the Naval Advisory Board held at Washington, D. C. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Terrible hurricane strikes New Orleans causing great damage. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

President Wilson and his fiancee, Mrs. Norman Galt, at a world's series ball game. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

Another startling surprise was sprung on the professional public of the Coast Monday night when Andrew Arbuckle, playing leads opposite Ruth Roland at the Balboa studios, Long Beach, eloped and married Mlle. Duquesne, former noted opera singer, who has recently returned to California after an extended tour of Europe. The couple only met two weeks before the ceremony, and while it was noticed they were often together, intimate friends had no idea that a romance was brewing. A big reception was given the newly-weds at the Balboa studios under the direction of the Horkheimer brothers and Mr. and Mrs. William Conklin. Andrew Arbuckle is the younger brother of Maclyn Arbuckle, famous as a comedian, and of Kathryne Arbuckle, leading woman at the Universal Pacific Coast studios.

At a called meeting held at Hoffman's Cafe Wednesday night, some forty moving picture players took up the re-organization of the old Photoplayers Club of Los Angeles. Fred Mace presided at the meeting and in a short talk stated the objects of the call. Committees were then appointed to solicit membership to the club at five dollars per month dues with no initiation fees. The project has been under way for some time, but it is a question of who shall become leaders in the way of officers and directors. With able men at the head there is no reason why a strong and substantial photoplayers' club could not be organized and made one of the big clubs of the West.

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation, is making strenuous efforts to resume the production of pictures at the Hollywood studios of that organization. Mr. Parsons has made many friends since his advent into the motion picture field because of his honest efforts and intentions to do the right thing. He is now surrounding his corporation with a staff of capable business heads, players of ability and will give personal supervision to all departments, employing competent technical experts to supervise the various branches of production.

Eddie Foy is having a busy time with his attorney, Hon. John F. Clark, filing weekly suits and attachments against the Keystone Film Company for unpaid salary claimed to be due by Foy. The Keystone management has given bond for $9,000 and is playing the "watchful waiting" game, pending trial of the case and decisions by the courts.

And now comes the press agent of the Quality Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles, featuring Francis X. Bushman the Metro star, with urgent requests that the story be denied that in a picture scene posed recently for Quality features the handsome athletic actor knocked out the celebrated prize fighter James J. Jeffries in a battle royal. A number of the leading publications played up the story because it apparently came direct from authentic sources and made good reading. It's now up to the press agent to "make good." Several of the papers are holding the copy as originally received from the P. A.

Thomas H. Ince was insured this week for $250,000 in favor of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The idea being to protect the Kessel and Baumann interests against possible loss in the case of the death of the noted producer. Several of the largest companies will distribute the policy.

Joseph Galbraith, well known star, formerly a leader in stock and later with the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, will leave for New York about November 1, to return to the legitimate stage.

Billie Burke, the famous Broadway star who has been the favored feature artist in Thomas H. Ince's monster Triangle program production at the New York Motion Picture studios, finished her first picture this week and departed for New York. Miss Burke was delighted with her success in screen work and may be induced to return to the motion picture fields at a regular salary as a permanent artist.

Charles Giblyn, the well known director of the New York Motion Picture organization is confined to his home suffering from an accident that may prove serious. Giblyn stuck a rusty nail in his foot while producing an important scene featuring Billie Burke.

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co. Inc.	86	96
Biograph Company	43	55
Colonial Motion Picture Corp.	1½	4½*
General Film Corp. pref.	40	47
Mutual Film Corp. pref.	51	54
Mutual Film Corp. com.	51	54
North American Film Corp. pref.	72	..
North American Film Corp. com.	67	80
New York Motion Picture Corp.	69	72½
Thanhouser Film Corp.	1½	3 *
Triangle Film Corp.	7⅜	7⅝*
Universal Film Mfg. Co.	150	..
Vogue Films Inc.	118	..
World Film Corp.	3⅞	4½*

* Par $5.00.

Mutual Film Corporation has made a very extensive campaign into the Canada field with very flattering results. Progress and expansion have been shown in many new lines since the new management was installed in the spring of this year. The regular weekly program, without any extra rental, now consists of 28 reels, made up of two three-reel subjects, five two-reel releases and eleven single reels. The company is now supplying a program consisting of David Horsley productions, Mustang Film Company, American Film Company Inc., Gaumont Company, Thanhouser Film Corporation, Reliance Motion Picture Company, and, in another 60 days, there will be added to this the production of Vogue Films Inc. (which will supply a large part of the comedies), and the Signal Company, a new company just being organized. There has been some demand for both preferred and common the past week.

Thanhouser Film Corporation. — A studio is to be erected at Jacksonville, Fla., in December and another at Hudson Bay. In the opinion of Edwin Thanhouser, Florida is practically virgin territory for motion picture purposes. With the Florida studio as a base, this company expects to make pictures up and down the coast, also through the West Indies and the Bermudas. Earnings of this company are reported very satisfactory and stock is wanted at the above mentioned bid price.

Triangle Film Corporation.—Several large transactions have been unofficially reported in connection with this company. W. F. Kemble of the Crescent theater in Brooklyn is reported to have taken over the exclusive rights to Triangle films for a period of two years, and the reported consideration is $750,000. In connection with the above, Mr. Aitken, as president of the Epoch Company, which controls "The Birth of a Nation," is reported to have disposed of the right to exhibit that production in 16 Western states to H. A. Sherman of the Elliott-Sherman Film Company of Minneapolis for $250,000. On October 25 many new exchanges for the Triangle film will be opened and it is expected, by the first weeks in November, releases will be made from coast to coast.

North American Film Corporation.—Bookings are reported fairly close to $900,000. The gratifying part of this result is that no bookings, to start after December 1, are included. The management expects, on the date of the last release, November 22, they will reach the $1,000,000 mark. The sequel of ten numbers, for which the prize of $10,000 will be given, will not be released until around March 1, 1916. This additional revenue comes to the North American Film Corporation.

Vogue Films, Inc.—It is very rare in any industry that a company can start its operations on a more or less definite basis and under a policy which will practically insure profits of 100%, but the plans, releases, contracts and expenditures scheduled practically guarantee this result. Stock has advanced sharply in the last two weeks, and none was to be had last week under 130.

World Film Corp.—On June 24 the World Film Corporation directors declared an initial dividend of 3%, and, while they did not stipulate the fact, it was generally understood this was to be considered a quarterly dividend. At the monthly meeting a few days ago, no action was taken relative to dividend, so that it would appear as if the policy with reference to dividends had not been definitely decided. Stock, however, scored an advance during the past week.

MIDDLE WEST NEWS

By Wm. N. Noble
Missouri

Moving pictures were taken Sunday of the river carnival at St. Louis, Mo., which were the closing features of the St. Louis fall festivities. Col. C. C. Butler, chairman of the arrangements committee, arranged for a film company to use the harbor boats Erastus Wells, The Huntress, and several fast speed boats. The parade was started at 2 p. m. with decorated motor boats starting from the free bridge, and exceedingly fine pictures were taken which will be shown in theaters throughout the country.

Less than a month after she was to have made her debut as a moving picture actress, Miss Esther Prothero of St. Louis, Mo., died in St. John's Hospital. Miss Prothero had contracted to play her first film engagement with the Universal Company at Los Angeles, Calif., November 1.

NEW YORK NOTES

An air of solemn but busy silence now greets one on entering the publicity department of the Famous Players Company, where formerly the incessant clicking of four typewriters defied a visitor to become audible. What's the reason? There's Ben Schulberg apparently doing a Barney Oldfield on his machine, while Lloyd Robinson's hair-comb, pushed back to the middle of his head, is threatened with disorganization so fast does he pick at his typewriter, and George Yohalen's Remington is neck and neck with Miss Cohen's Underwood. But nary a sound! Are they stalling? Stealthily approaching B. P.'s machine to inquire the why of the rehearsal, the aforesaid visitor discovers written across the top of the machine "Noiseless Typewriter."

Carl H. Pierce returned from the Coast last week, caught his breath, brushed the dust of the Morosco studios off of his clothes, and hustled right off to Ohio to renew the "Hypocrites" vs. Censorship finish fight. Watch the text pages for ringside reports of the battle.

H. K. Tootle is now advertising and publicity director for the Gaumont Company, succeeding C. W. White, who is now devoting his time to executive duties. Mr. Tootle's headquarters are at the Gaumont studio in Flushing.

Don Meaney, manager of productions of the Quality Pictures Corporation, is at present a Manhattan resident, having come on from the Quality studios, located at Hollywood, California, with the Francis X. Bushman company. Others accompanying Mr. Bushman were: Beverly Bayne, Helen Dunbar, Lester Cuneo.

Peter Sampson, representing the United Photo-Plays Company of Chicago, arrived in town last week, and immediately set out after Eastern states' rights men. Mr. Sampson has with him a print of the United's productions, and has so far encountered little difficulty in getting territorial buyers interested.

"The Whirl of Life," a six-part feature starring Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, produced by the Cort Film Corporation, has opened at the Globe Theater for an indefinite run. It is being presented by the Authors' Film Company, Inc. The projection is under the direction of Will C. Smith, assistant general manager of the Nicholas Power Company. Powers 6B machines are used.

After a few days' illness which, for a time, threatened to become serious, Arthur James has returned to the helm of the publicity and scenario departments of the Metro Pictures Corporation.

It is with deep sorrow that we learn of the death of Merritt Crawford's father. Mr. Crawford is well known in New York film circles through his present connection with the publicity department of Metro and his former connections with the Motion Picture News and Reel Life. Motography extends Mr. Crawford sincerest sympathy in his hour of sorrow.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

W. J. Sweeney left Chicago on Monday to attend the exhibitors' convention at Cleveland, Tuesday and Wednesday.

H. E. Brient of the Peerless Film Exchange is spending a few days in Chicago. As Chicago is dry Sunday now exactly the same as Des Moines, Brient does not change conditions, so we shall expect to see less of him on Sunday than heretofore.

"Walt" Bloeser, the well known exhibitors' friend of the Chicago Tribune, leaves for New York on Thursday to be gone two weeks. New York film folks are requested to prepare the implements of the torture chamber to welcome him on his arrival.

Chris Whelan and his partner Tom Diggins are conspiring together and may take a railroad trip east soon.

The Newman Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, manufacturer of brass lobby display frames, etc., advises that it has supplied its products to the following theaters during the past week: Bradford theater, Bradford, Pa.; Pike theater, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Academy of Music, Selma, Ala.; Franklin theater, Michigan City, Ind.; Strand theater, Ottumwa, Ia.; Strand theater, Flint, Mich.; Majestic theater, Bucyrus, O.; American theater, East Moline, Ill.; Casino theater, Mason City, Ia.; Albany Park theater, Chicago, Ill.; Grand theater, Moultria, Ga.; Margaret theater, Anaconda, Okla.; and the Wigwam theater, Reno, Nev.

John T. Rock has his hands full these days in looking after the interests of the Vitagraph Company at the Olympic theater, where the Vitagraph 8-reel picture, "The Battle Cry of Peace," is being exhibited.

J. Stuart Blackton, vice-president of the Vitagraph Company of America, is a Chicago visitor this week. Mr. Blackton made an inter-act speech at the Olympic theater on Sunday night which was the subject of a great deal of comment by Chicago newspapers on Monday. One point that Mr. Blackton registered with his hearers was, "If there is any one in the audience whom this film will offend they have no business in this house tonight." Mr. Blackton and Theodore Roosevelt are similarly minded regarding hyphenated Americans. Mr. Blackton was the guest of the National Security League at the La Salle Hotel on Tuesday evening, where he made a short address. If the country had more men with Mr. Blackton's spirit, enthusiasm and energy, and fewer professional pacifists, the public at large would know more about the need for preparedness than they do at present.

The Band Box theater, on Madison street between Clark and La Salle, opened on October 16. This is Chicago's newest and smallest loop theater. A Bartola instrument has been installed for the musical requirements.

Aaron M. Gollos announces that he has practically closed arrangements for the sale of the New England states on the two-reel picture "Sarah Bernhardt at Home."

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, left on the Century Saturday for New York. Mr. Shallenberger states that he has practically disposed of all of the stock in the new company that he cares to sell at present.

Ed J. Mock, publisher of Motography, went to Cleveland on Tuesday to attend the exhibitors' convention, and will go from there to New York where he will visit the leading film companies.

John Edward Simmons, designer of the fastest hydroplane in the world, with his wife, was a guest at the advertising man's home on Monday to eat the fish which were captured on a recent piscatorial expedition made by the ad man and a prominent member of the Nichols Finn Advertising Agency.

The Strand "Theater Beautiful," was host to several members of Motography last Friday evening at its premier in its new location, Seventh street and Wabash avenue. The theater decorations are the most pretentious that have ever been assayed by a moving picture theater in Chicago and the presentation of Lasky's "Carmen" was received, by a house which had not a vacant seat left, with thunderous applause. Expressions of delight were heard on every side over the dainty and beautiful decorations.

Ed Kaufman, producer with the Mustang brand, American Film Manufacturing Company, who is temporarily disabled due to a fractured wrist, forwards to us, out of the breezy West, an advertisement which he clipped from an Oklahoma paper. The advertisement purports to call attention to a picture being shown at one the Altus, Okla., theaters in which big Bill Russell of the American Company stars, entitled "The Garden of Lies." The advertisement reads, "Jane Cowl in 'The Garden of Flies' the greatest feature of the season." The ad writer must have been witnessing a bush league pennant game from the bleachers in left field, or be an ardent advocate of the "swat the fly" movement.

A. H. Sawyer of the Cort Film Company is stopping at the Congress Hotel and spreading the propaganda concerning the Cort-Castles film "The Whirl of Life" which is to have an early Chicago showing.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Jay Hunt, who directed "The Protest," a three-reel feature with Crane Wilbur, which was recently released as Centaur Star Feature on the Mutual program, has been selected by David Horsley to direct the two-reel Centaur Features in which the Bostock animals make their appearance as motion picture actors.

An unusual tribute was paid a screen artist when Mary Miles Minter, the dainty Metro star, dropped in with a party of friends to see her latest picture, "Emmy of Stork's Nest," run off at the Eighty-first Street Theater in New York. The manager of the theater observed Miss Minter and her party as they entered, and soon the word was passed around that the charming little actress was in the audience. The operator found her with a spotlight and she arose and bowed in appreciation. After the picture was completed there was a rousing ovation for Miss Minter and she was obliged to appear on the stage.

Miss Theodora Harris, one of the best and foremost professional writers of photoplays, who has had many of her conceptions produced by the leading motion picture manufacturers, has been engaged by David Horsley to write feature scenarios and has joined the regular staff of writers at Mr. Horsley's studios in Los Angeles.

Bill Steiner is a pioneer film renter and manufacturer, having started in the film business in 1895, when the longest film made was fifty feet. In 1898, Mr. Steiner was doing business under the firm name of the Kalatecnoscope. He was connected with this company until the organization of the firm of Paley & Steiner in 1903, who manufactured films under the title of the Crescent Film Company. The length of the pictures at this time had increased from five hundred to one-thousand foot lengths. The business of the Crescent Film Company was the renting and selling of pictures as well as making them. In 1906 the Imperial Motion Picture Company with headquarters at Twenty-eighth street was organized by Mr. Steiner with branch offices in Washington and Troy. The Imperial Motion Picture Company was prosperous until 1910, when the General Film Company cancelled its license, which cut off the supply of film, leaving Mr. Steiner with nothing excepting law suits. Later he formed a partnership with Jim Maher under the name of the Photo Drama Company. This company has prospered for several years, putting out several successful productions, including "After the Ball," "The House of Bondage" and others.

"Bill" Steiner.

But the crowning achievement of Mr. Steiner's career is the production of the twelve-star masterpiece entitled "How Molly Made Good," six reels, featuring Robert Edeson, May Robson, Leo Ditrichstein, Lulu Glaser, Cyril Scott, Henrietta Crosman, Henry Kolker, Madame Fjorde, Julian Eltinge, Julia Dean, Chas. J. Ross, and Mabel Fenton and Wm. H. Tooker, Helen Hilton, W. A. Williams and Armand Cortes, which will be released within ten days.

Work on the production of the Ince-Triangle feature in which H. B. Warner will be starred was begun in earnest this week under the direction of Charles Swickard. For some of the big scenes, the company has gone to Pine Crest in the mountains beyond Los Angeles, where it will remain for a week before returning to film the many elaborate interiors.

Lillian Walker, Vitagraph Player, is the first of the screen players to take up equaplaning. The sport has so fascinated Miss Walker, she has joined the snowbirds, so as to indulge in this exhilarating pastime all winter.

The one real Casino Star comedy, "A Corner in Cats," recently released by the Gaumont Company, has proved a source of annoyance to Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, its heroine, despite the fun the comedienne got out of the part. Various small boys who have seen the production in the neighborhood of Miss Fitzgerald's home have had the impression that she is still desirous of receiving cats. She is kept busy receiving felines from all parts of Flatbush.

Sam Bernard, the Broadway favorite, who arrived at the Keystone Studios this week to begin work under the direction of Mack Sennett, was greeted by so large a group of old friends that for a moment he thought the rialto of the Metropolis had been shipped on ahead of him. Weber & Fields, Vincent Bryan, Harry Williams, Jean Havez and a number of other New York favorites now appearing under Mr. Sennett's direction, met Mr. Bernard at the train and escorted him to the bungalow which Mr. Sennett had leased in anticipation of his arrival.

Production of the spectacular war drama in which Frank Keenan is to be starred is at a standstill, this week, because Enid Markey, the beautiful Ince-Triangle leading woman, is suffering from a fever blister.

Graham Baker, cartoonist and former newspaper man, has written a series of motion picture scenarios for the Vitagraph Company, that introduces a new comedy character to the screen in Itsky, the inventor.

Mabel Normand, featured Keystone star, who recently passed the crisis of an illness that very near had a fatal termination, has fully recovered and is up and about again. She will take a rest of several weeks, however, before resuming work.

To strengthen his Gaumont stock company for the winter season at Jacksonville, Fla., Director Richard Garrick has engaged Miss Lucille Taft and Fred Bailey.

Busch's Gardens—forming one of the beauty spots of Southern California—are being used this week as the location for some scenes in the current Ince-Triangle feature in which Mary Boland, Willard Mack and Frank Mills are appearing under the direction of Walter Edwards.

Rollin S. Sturgeon, managing director of the Western Vitagraph Company, announces his next feature will be from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, and entitled, "God's Country and the Woman." To get the backgrounds necessary for the topographical realism, he will take a company to Alaska.

William H. Thompson, the "dean of the American stage," has finally succumbed to the persuasions of Producer Thomas H. Ince. He has consented to remain at Inceville and appear as star in more Ince-Triangle features, under the direction of the man who once supported him in vaudeville.

Henry W. Pemberton, leading man of the Gaumont Rialto Star Features, has been elected a member of the board of trustees of the White Rats Actors' Union of America. He succeeded W. W. Waters.

William S. Hart, Jack Standing, Clara Williams and a large company of Inceville villians are working in the newly erected Western village atop the plateau at Inceville this week enacting some scenes for the current Ince-Triangle feature in which Hart will be starred.

George Phillips, formerly a member of the well remembered Frawley Stock Co. with his sixteen years experience on the stage, has turned his talents to moving pictures, playing heavy leads for the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company on the Associated Program.

The members of the Selig Company Company who worked in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" are planning to celebrate the occasion of filming the last of the rural photoplay series, "When the Circus Came," by giving an old-fashioned "apple paring" in Melodeon Hall, the principal building of the village of Bloom Center, erected especially for the series.

Mary Miles Minter, the young Metro star, has been selected to play the role of "Little Nell" in "The Old Curiosity Shop," which Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., will produce at an early date.

Jacques Jaccard has started production on the first of what is to become a series of western features, starring Harry D. Carey in the leading roles. The entire company consists of some of the best actors, supported by the most expert riders and ropers in the business.

Yale Benner, Edison, is around again at the Edison studio, rather weak but cheerful as ever, since a serious operation which he recently underwent. Mr. Benner became ill shortly after his appearance in the Kleine-Edison release, "Vanity Fair."

Harry Hadfield, the well known dramatic director, has arrived at the Lasky studio, and is now studying camera direction under the supervision of Cecil B. DeMille. He will be several weeks before starting his first production. Mr. Hadfield recently produced "My Lady's Garter" in New York.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, recently completed a tour of inspection of his various motion picture branch studios. He visited the new studio at Las Vegas, N. M., where Tom Mix, the Selig Western star, is engaged.

Carl W. Geenan, a member of the acting and directing forces at the Rolfe-Metro studios, will wear the colors and emblem of that company in the two-mile roller skating match, which is the principal event of Motion Picture Night at the Arena skating rink, October 21.

"Streets of Silence" is the title of a new and original photo-play, written by Anthony P. Kelly of the Lubin scenario force, which will have its production under Director George Terwilliger and which will be released through the V. L. S. E., Inc., offices, with Ormi Hawley as the star. This will set at rest the constant rumor that Director Terwilliger is to leave the Lubin Company. The picture will be begun at once at the Lubin Philadelphia studios and then Director Terwilliger with his company will proceed to the western Lubin branch at Coronado, Calif., where he will complete this picture and begin his next.

Fannie Ward, who made such a pronounced success in "The Marriage of Kitty," for the Lasky Company, will arrive in Hollywood on October 18 for an engagement of several months. Her former leading man, Jack Dean, will accompany her and appear with her in the photodramatic productions.

William Garwood has returned to that dear old California where he is due to take the lead in a series at Universal City.

Lionel Barrymore, a recent addition to the long list of Metro stars, will have the stellar role in a Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., feature which will be put in production in a few days.

Word reaches the home office of the Lubin Company that Director Edgar Lewis with Ethel Clayton and House Peters, and his company of sixteen are encamped at the bottom of the Grand Canyon at Arizona.

Gordon Sackville, known to the screen fans for his splendid character impersonations in Balboa features, has been a soldier, sung in opera and conducted a motion picture theater.

Under the direction of Otis Turner, J. Warren Kerrigan, who has returned to Universal City from Lake Tahoe, is working in the title role of Meredith Nicholson's serial story, "Pennington's Legacy," a five-reel drama. Bert Grasby, Lois Wilson, Maude George, Harry Carter, G. A. Williams and Mary Talbot support Kerrigan in this picture.

Bill Stinger, who was injured a few weeks ago in a comedy, "The Movie Nut," released on the Associated Program, is now out of the hospital and back at work at the Banner studios in San Mateo. Bill fell off a 35-foot bridge and he only weighs 300 pounds.

The Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company has for its president and general manager Dr. E. J. Boeseke. President Boeseke has under his control the Santa Barbara, Empire, Ramona, and Alhambra brands, now being released by the Associated Program.

William Wolbert has completed his first Western Vitagraph picture and "The Wanderers" promises to be a most interesting photoplay. He had a fine cast which included Hazel Buckham and Mary Ruby in the girl's parts and William Duncan and George Holt in the male leads.

Chester Barnett, World Film's very popular leading man, has taken a hard earned vacation. He is spending it at his Missouri home. For over a year Mr. Barnett has worked continuously in World Film feature, sometimes under three directors at once and has vastly increased his popularity with motion picture theater goers.

Congratulations are in order for Bryant Washburn and Edmund F. Cobb, Essanay leading men, who in the last few weeks have become proud possessors of bouncing babies—Mr. Washburn's a a boy and Mr. Cobb's a girl. The former is Bryant Washburn IV, the popular Essanay actor's father and grandfather also bearing that name. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb have not yet decided on a name for their little one. Bryant Washburn IV was born Tuesday, October 12, while little Miss Cobb came into being on September 26. The mothers and the babies all are doing well, say the proud husbands and fathers. Mrs. Washburn formerly was Mabel Forrest, an Essanay actress. Mrs. Cobb at one time also was an actress.

Producer Wm. Robert Daly has begun work on a two-reel Selig Special entitled "The Making of Crooks." In this production, Jack Pickford makes his initial appearance as a Selig player. He is supported by a strong, well-balanced cast.

Robert Leonard has just written a three-reel drama entitled "Idols of Clay," which will be produced by him at the Pacific Coast Studios of the Universal Film Company in the near future. Miss Ella Hall will play the leading feminine role in this production, that of a twelve-year-old girl, and Leonard himself will play the part of a lonesome man who lives next door.

Frank Powell, director of photoplays for the Fox Film Corporation and known throughout the world as the producer of "A Fool There Was," and other noted film successes, has purchased the famous Teller Estate on Bradish Ave., Bayside Park, Bayside, Long Island. The estate includes a twelve-room house and spacious grounds which are noted for their natural beauty, and they will no doubt be utilized by Mr. Powell in many of the features films he has in course of production.

Frank Dazie, of the scenario staff of the Metro Pictures Corporation, has left for the Berkshire Hills to complete two scenarios. Some of the scenes are laid in the Berkshires, and while in that locality Mr. Dazie will also select and "Mark" some locations, as well as absorb atmosphere.

This week finds Director Walter Edwin putting the finishing touches on "Canavan, the Man Who Had His Way," the five-reel picture which has been adapted from Rupert Hughes' story, "Canavan." Billy Sherwood, the handsome college student from New Orleans, plays the light juvenile opposite the ingenue, Miss Della Connor.

Stella Razeto is slated for a prominent part in the new serial adapted from "The Journal of Lord John," by C. N. & A. M. Williamson, in which William Garwood will have the title role. The production will be directed by E. J. LeSaint.

The Socialist Party of Cliffside, N. J., secured as the feature of its entertainment last Thursday night, the Bosworth, Inc., film, "In the Valley of the Moon," Jack London's well known subject, starring Myrtle Stedman.

Joseph Byron Totten, Essanay actor-director, who has been heading a company of Essanay players "down East," has returned to the Chicago studio with his troupe, headed by Darwin Karr, leading man recently engaged by Essanay. Mr. Totten directed the production of several feature photoplays on and near his estate in Connecticut, among them being "The Call of the Sea," "The Village Homestead" and "The Lighthouse by the Sea."

Because of illness, Francis Worcester Doughty has been compelled to relinquish his post as scenario writer for the Centaur Features, to which he was recently assigned by David Horsley. His place is assumed by Charles Mortimer Peck, who takes up his new duties at once.

Balboa claims to have the youngest leading lady before the public today in Helen Marie Osborn. Only recently she celebrated her third birthday anniversary and on that occasion she was elevated to stellar honors, playing opposite no less a screen favorite than Henry King.

The new Vitagraph studio in Hollywood is progressing famously and when completed will be one of the best equipped and most handsome studios in California. The stage itself is completed and the property rooms, scenic decks and costume departments will soon be finished. The blue prints show numerous buildings yet to be built and Vitagraphville will be yet another film colony in itself. Plans are being drawn for several bungalows among other things.

Part of the action of "The Code of the Mountains," World Film's forthcoming release in which Mollie King is starred, is based on Charles Neville Buck's successful novel of the same name, was placed in the Philippines. A Filipino village was erected for the purpose at Coytesville and it attracted much attention amongst the inhabitants of Northern New Jersey.

William Wolbert is starting work on a one-reeler Western, with strong heart interest, "When Lin Came Home." J. Carleton Weatherby plays "Lin" and George Holt plays the elder brother.

Work on the "Broken Coin," featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, is going ahead with all possible dispatch. They are at present at work on the production of the eighteenth installment, which leaves only five to be made.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, Motography has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	10-18	Bad Money	Biograph 1,000
D	10-18	Inheritance	Essanay 3,000
D	10-18	The Village Outcast	Kleine 2,000
D	10-18	The Apaches of Paris	Kalem 4,000
D	10-18	The Lonely Fisherman	Lubin 1,000
D	10-18	The Brave Deserve the Fair	Selig 2,000
T	10-18	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 83, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	10-18	Quits	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	His Hand and Seal	Biograph 2,000
D	10-19	The Outer Edge	Essanay 3,000
C	10-19	Adam's Ancestors	Kalem 1,000
C	10-19	Cutting Down Expenses	Lubin 1,000
D	10-19	The Stagecoach Guard	Selig 1,000
D	10-19	The Gods Redeem	Vitagraph 2,000

Wednesday.

C	10-20	Cartoons in the Country	Edison 1,000
C	10-20	The Fable of "The Sorrows of the Unemployed and the Danger of Changing from Bell to Hard-old"	Essanay 1,000
D	10-20	The Man in Hiding	Kalem 2,000
D	10-20	Nell of the Dance Hall	Lubin 3,000
C	10-20	Brown's Summer Boarders	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	10-21	The Vulture	Biograph 1,000
C	10-21	Fun at a Ball Game	Essanay 1,000
D	10-21	When Youth Is Ambitious	Lubin 2,000
	10-21	Title not reported	Mina
C	10-21	Landing the Hose Reel (No. 1 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center Series)	Selig 3,000
T	10-21	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 84, 1915	Selig 1,000
D	10-21	On the Turn of a Card	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	10-22	Brute Force	Biograph 2,000
D	10-22	The Land of Adventure	Edison 3,000
D	10-22	Broncho Billy's Parents	Essanay 1,000
D	10-22	A Woman Reclaimed	Lubin 1,000
C	10-22	A Safe Investment	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	The Banker and the Thief	Biograph 1,000
D	10-23	The Broken Word	Edison 1,000
D	10-23	The spider	Essanay 2,000
D	10-23	A Mile a Minute	Kalem 1,000
C	10-23	Playing Horse	Lubin 1,000
D	10-13	In Leopard Land	Selig 1,000
D	10-23	A Woman in the Box	Vitagraph 1,000

Monday.

D	10-25	Arline's Chauffeur	Biograph 1,000
D	10-25	The Destroyer	Essanay 3,000
D	10-25	The Price of Ambition	Kleine 2,000
D	10-25	The Net of Deceit	Kalem 3,000
D	10-25	The Inevitable Penalty	Lubin 1,000
C	10-25	Shoo Fly (No. 2 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig 2,000
T	10-25	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 85, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	10-25	The Prince in Disguise	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-26	A Mystery of the Mountains	Biograph 2,000
D	10-26	Miss Freckles	Essanay 2,000
C	10-26	The Knaves and the Knight	Kalem 1,000
C	10-26	Playing in Tough Luck	Lubin 1,000
D	10-26	The Race for a Gold Mine	Selig 1,000
D	10-26	To Cherish and Protect	Vitagraph 3,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.
THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.
SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday.

D	10-27	Harvest	Biograph 3,000
C	10-27	The Seventh Day	Edison 1,000
C	10-27	Dreamy Dud in "Up in the Air"	Essanay 500
S	10-27	Scenic	Essanay 500
D	10-27	By Whose Hand	Kalem 2,000
D	10-27	The Man of God	Lubin 2,000
C	10-27	Itsky, the Inventor	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	10-28	A Trick of Fate	Biograph 1,000
C	10-28	Fun at a Ball Game	Essanay 1,000
D	10-28	The Strange Unknown	Lubin 3,000
	10-28	Title not reported	Mina
T	10-28	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 86, 1915	Selig 1,000
D	10-28	The Unforgiven	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	The Coming of Angelo	Biograph 1,000
D	10-29	The Mystery of Room 13	Edison 4,000
D	10-29	Broncho Billy's Cowardly Brother	Essanay 1,000
D	10-29	The Wonder Cloth	Lubin 1,000
C	10-29	A Case of Eugenics	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Sheriff's Trap	Biograph 1,000
S	10-30	Niagara Falls	Edison 500
E	10-30	Yardville Folks	Edison 500
D	10-30	The Lighthouse by the Sea	Essanay 3,000
D	10-30	Rescue of the Brakeman's Children	Kalem 1,000
C	10-30	His Body Guard	Lubin 1,000
D	10-30	When California Was Wild	Selig 1,000
C	10-30	The Shabbies	Vitagraph 2,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig 5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin 6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay 6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig 5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph 5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	10-18	The Campbells Are Coming	Broadway 4,000
C	10-18	A One-Cylinder Courtship	Nestor 1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	The Fair God of Sun Island	Gold Seal 3,000
D	10-19	Lon of Lone Mountain	Rex 1,000
	10-19	No release this week	Imp

Wednesday.

	10-20	No release this week	Victor
C	10-20	Room and Board—A Dollar and a Half	L Ko 2,000
T	10-20	Animated Weekly No. 109	Universal 1,000

Thursday.

	10-21	No release this week	Laemmle
D	10-21	The Greater Courage	Big U 2,000
C	10-21	Prankful Ponies	Powers 500
E	10-21	Insect Oddities	Powers 500

Friday.

D	10-22	The Meddler	Imp 2,000
C	10-22	The Magic Bonbon	Victor 1,000
C	10-22	Almost a Knockout	Nestor 1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	A Fight to a Finish	Bison 3,000
D	10-23	A Pure Gold Partner	Powers 1,000
C	10-23	Pete's Awful Crime	Joker 1,000

Sunday.

D	10-24	The Springtime of the Spirit	Rex 3,000
	10-24	No release this week	Laemmle
C	10-24	Poor But Dishonest	L Ko 1,000
D	10-24	The Broken Coin No. 18	Universal 2,000

Monday.

D	10-25	Out of the Ashes	American	2,000
C	10-25	Tillie, the Terrible Typist	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-25	Hobo Nerve	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-26	The Conscience of Juror No. 10	Thanhouser	2,000
S	10-26	See America First, No. 7	Gaumont	500
C	10-26	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	10-26	Touring with Tillie	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-27	The Blood of Our Brothers	Centaur	3,000
C	10-27	Love and Artillery	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-28	The White King of the Zaras	Centaur	2,000
C	10-28	The Soap Suds Star	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-28	Mutual Weekly No. 43	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	Playing for High Stakes	Mustang	2,000
D	10-29	The Smugglers' Cave	American	1,000
C	10-29	Jerry to the Rescue	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Idol	Clipper	3,000
C	10-30	An Auto Bungalow Fracas	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-31	The Feud	Reliance	2,000
C	10-31	Zabisky's Waterloo	Casino	1,000
D	10-31	The Fisherwoman	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	10-18	The Blot on the Shield	American	2,000
C	10-18	Busted But Benevolent	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-18	Rip Van Winkle Badly Ripped	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-19	The Spirit of Audubon	Thanhouser	2,000
S	10-19	See America First No. 6	Gaumont	500
C	10-19	Keeping up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	10-19	Alias James, Chauffeur	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-20	The Card Players	Rialto	3,000
C	10-20	You Can't Beat It	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-21	Vindication	Centaur	2,000
C	10-21	Hattie, the Hair Heiress	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-21	Mutual Weekly No. 42	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-22	The Sheriff of Willow Creek	Mustang	2,000
D	10-22	Visitors and Visitees	American	1,000
C	10-22	The Little Detective	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-23	Buck's Lady Friend	Mustang	3,000
C	10-23	Deserted at the Auto	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-24	The Penalty	Reliance	2,000
C	10-24	The Reformer	Casino	1,000
D	10-24	At the Patrician's Club	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	10-25	The College Orphan	Broadway	6,000
C	10-25	An Heiress for Two	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

	10-26	No release this week	Gold Seal
C	10-26	By Return Male	Imp	1,000
D	10-26	The Millionaire Paupers	Rex	3,000

Wednesday.

D	10-27	A Life at Stake	Victor	2,000
C	10-27	Tears and Sunshine	L-Ko	1,000
T	10-27	Animated Weekly No. 190	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	10-28	No release this week	Laemmle
D	10-28	The Flag of Fortune	Big U	2,000
C	10-28	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "The Lost Roll"	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	The Craters of Fire	Imp	3,000
	10-29	No release this week	Victor
C	10-29	The Frame-Up on Dad	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Superior Claim	Bison	3,000
	10-30	No release this week	Powers
	10-30	Title not decided	Joker

Sunday.

	10-31	No release this week	Rex
D	10-31	The Man From Argentine	Powers	2,000
C	10-31	Father's First Murder	L-Ko	1,000
D	10-31	The Broken Coin, No. 19	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Corsican	Sun Photoplay Co., Inc.		5,000

Associated Service.

Oct.	25	The Reckoning	Ramona	3,000
Oct.	25	O'Hara of the Mounted	Federal	2,000
Oct.	25	When Stubs Leaves the Bowery	Santa Barbara	1,000
Oct.	25	The Paradoxical Burglar	Alhambra	1,000
Oct.	25	Love's Old Sweet Song	Deer	1,000
Oct.	25	Shot at Sunrise	Monte	1,000
Oct.	25	The Plaid Coat	Banner	1,000
Oct.	25	Safety First	Empire	1,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000

Metro Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released Week of

Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P.	4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000
Oct.	28	His Wife	Thanhouser	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	7	A Girl of Yesterday	Famous Players	4,000
Oct.	11	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	14	Blackbirds	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	18	The Chorus Lady	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	25	The Yankee Girl	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Oct.	28	The Masqueraders	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Oct.	11	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 2	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	11	When Mice Make Merry	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	An Intimate Study of Birds	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 82	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	11	Pathe News, No. 83	Pathe	500
Oct.	11	Neal of the Navy, No. 7	Panama	2,000
Oct.	11	John Clyde's Honor	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	11	Wilful Wallops Wealth	Starlight	1,000
Oct.	18	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 3	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	18	Geithorn, the Rustic Venice	Photocolor	500
Oct.	18	How Winter Flowers Bloom	Globe	500
Oct.	18	Counsel for the Defense	Balboa	3,000
Oct.	18	Pathe News No. 84	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	18	Pathe News No. 85	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	18	Neal of the Navy No. 8	Panama	2,000
Oct.	18	The Sun Worshippers	Panama	2,000
Oct.	18	An Affair of Three Nations	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	18	Fatty's Fatal Fun	Starlight	1,000
Oct.	25	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 4	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	25	Police Dog to the Rescue	Pathe	500
Oct.	25	An Intimate Study of Birds	Pathe	500
Oct.	25	Pathe News, No. 86	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	25	Pathe News, No. 87	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	25	The Eleventh Hour	Victory	3,000
Oct.	25	Whiffles Woos and Trouble Brews	Pathecolor	1,000
Oct.	25	Neal of the Navy, No. 9	Panama	2,000
Oct.	25	Comrade John	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	25	Dough Nuts	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Nov.	7	The Lamb; Douglas Fairbanks	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	7	My Valet; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	3,000
Nov.	7	The Iron Strain; Dustin Farnum	Triangle Kay Bee	6,000
Nov.	7	A Game Old Knight; Chas. H. Murray	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	14	The Coward; Frank Keenan	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	14	Old Heidelberg; Dorothy Gish	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	14	Stolen Magic; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	14	A Favorite Fool; Eddie Foy	Triangle Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released Week of

Oct.	3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert	5,000
Oct.	3	The Price	Triumph	5,000
Oct.	10	The Family Cupboard	Brady	5,000
Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	17	The Heart of the Blue Ridge	Shubert	5,000
Oct.	18	Bludgeon	Equitable
Oct.	24	Salvation Nell	California
Oct.	25	Divorced	Equitable
Oct.	27	The Master of the House	Equitable	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

Mutual Program

Gold-Bricking Cupid.—NOVELTY—OCTOBER 13.—John Gettum opens a matrimonial agency and sends out fliers with bold headlines reading, "Why Work? Marry Money." His office is soon filled with a motley array of applicants. To all the women, Gettum gives the name and address of the same man, and to all the men, the address of the same girl. He is prevented from sneaking off with the money, by Lena, who says she will not be satisfied with anybody except Gettum himself. Lena keeps him in the office until the happy moment of his promise arrives. John's angry clients return. He leaps from the window and is pursued through the park by the disappointed mate-seekers. John throws off his coat and jumps into the lake. Lena's woe is changed to joy when in the coat she finds all the cash which Gettum has collected. Then the latter is arrested for trying to swim in the lake.

Ethel's Romeos—CASINO—OCTOBER 17.—Charlie, Albert and Frank, from insufficient data, jump to the conclusion that Ethel's rich brother is about to bequeath a gold mine upon her, and each one of the impecunious boarders tries to win Ethel. She receives three proposals in one short morning, and is so frightened that she says "Yes" to every one of the suitors. Jake, the wealthy brother of Miss Simpson, an old lady upstairs, arrives, and the boys, taking him for Ethel's brother, bestow upon him a royal welcome. The Romeos all rush out after a parson. Jake has been taken into their confidence, and when the three clergymen arrive, he pays each one his fee, although no ceremony is performed. Then he kicks the Romeos out of the house. Ethel faints, and from the way that brother Jake revives her, it is clear that some day one of the three ministers will be called back.

See America First—(SPLIT REEL)—GAUMONT—OCTOBER 19.—A sight-seeing tour of the city of Washington, explained and pointed out by the Mutual Traveler, as she has conducted the other scenics under this name. The camera has recorded interesting views of the nation's capitol and other famous public buildings and also glimpses of well-known figures in political and diplomatic circles. "Keeping Up With the Joneses" and their funny camel will, as usual, occupy the second half of the reel. This animated cartoon is drawn by Harry Palmer.

The Vindication—(Two REELS)—CENTAUR—OCTOBER 21.—Featuring the Bostock animals. A detective play dealing with a plucky wife's determined efforts to free her husband from the false accusation of murder. The wife's fearlessness and shrewdness leads to the conviction of the real murderer. A moment of suspense in a lion's cage is one of the dramatic incidents of the film.

Hattie, the Hair Heiress—FALSTAFF—OCTOBER 21.—Hattie's father had invented a wonderful hair tonic, amassed a great fortune, and left everything to his daughter. All the swains of Jinx Junction are anxious to impress Hattie. The ice-cream man is among these, and feels pretty confident. On seeing one of his rivals refused, he takes courage. But to his grief, he also is refused, and Hattie shows him the picture of her husband-to-be. "He is horribly bald," remarks the ice-cream man. "I know," she replies, "ever since we met and fell in love I have been trying to make him grow a head of hair like those in papa's advertisements. Up to date my efforts have failed, but I will devote my life to this sacred cause."

The Penalty—(Two REELS)—RELIANCE—OCTOBER 24.—A drama laid in the desert country of the far Southwest. A young fellow, thwarted in his first love, is saved from debasing instincts of revenge by a great crisis which actuates him to forget his own bitterness in the cause of the woman he has loved and lost, and for the sake of that woman's husband. When the two last mentioned are attacked in the wilderness, the boy's manhood returns, and forgetting his thoughts of revenge, he saves their lives.

At the Patrician Club—THANHOUSER—OCTOBER 24.—At the Patrician Club, the day has been unusually tedious, and one member, desiring diversion, prevails upon an old waiter to tell them a story. The old servant explains that he had formerly been a storekeeper in a small country town. Unknown to him, a wealthy young man had been paying attentions to his daughter and the girl eloped with him. Fearing the worst, the storekeeper rushed out in search of her. His clerk handed him a letter from the rich man, saying that he was married and could not wed the girl, but would provide a home for her abroad. The heartbroken father had searched the world for his daughter, but in vain. As the old waiter concludes, a man appears in the doorway of the club and the servant flashes out a revolver. The men have to act quick to prevent him from doing harm. "He is the man," the servant exclaims. Later, the stranger fully explains matters. The storekeeper's jealous clerk had written the false note supposed to come from the wealthy man. The latter had never been married before. Conscience had troubled the clerk, and had led him to write a confession to the girl's husband.

Out of the Ashes—(Two REELS)—AMERICAN—OCTOBER 25.—Featuring Winifred Greenwood, Ed. Coxen and George Field. Dr. Thorn is disgraced because of the death of a patient while operating and he goes west to try and forget himself. In the west he meets Madge, wife of Joe, the foreman of the mine. Later he saves the life of Madge's baby and Joe is killed by a half-wit, and leaves Madge to marry the doctor. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Touring with Tillie—BEAUTY—OCTOBER 26.—Featuring Frank Borzage, Neva Gerber and Lucille Ward. Tillie Gray and her Aunt Pansy are touring through California when they meet one Cliff Burridge, owner of a ranch. They have captured a stray chicken and Burridge warns them away from the ranch, claiming the chicken. Later he repents of his action and follows the women, and that night leaves a note in their camp saying that if they need him to whistle. He persistently lays siege to Tillie's hand and she manages to escape from him, but two tramps invade Tillie's camp and Cliff arrives just in time to drive them away, and Tillie then decides to accept half ownership of his ranch.

The Blood of Our Brothers—(THREE REELS)—CENTAUR—OCTOBER 27.—Featuring Crane Wilbur and Celia Santon. Kindheart, a shepherd, woos and wins Devotion, daughter of Infirmity and sister of Valor. After the wedding is celebrated, Braggart, with a company of soldiers, makes his appearance and announces that war has been declared. Kindheart refuses to enlist, exclaiming that he cannot shed the blood of his brothers. The next day the soldiers march away, and all shun Kindheart but Devotion and Infirmity. The months pass and a baby is born to Devotion and Kindheart. Kindheart returns from the village one day to find the lifeless bodies of Infirmity, Devotion and his baby, and on the wall discovers a picture with a blood stain on it and as one possessed with madness he swears to find its owner. Time passes and Kindheart, with his beloved violin and the blood imprint, is scanning to find the replica of that on the bloody picture which he always carries. His wanderings lead him to a wayside inn where Lust and Loot are making merry, and after obtaining the finger prints of Lust he finds they are the same as those on the picture, and avenges the death of his wife and dear ones. He then plunges upon the back of a horse tied outside and dashes off, and in his madness to kill he seizes the rifle of a fallen soldier and in fiendish glee his rifle sends missiles of death among his own brothers. At last he is in the native mountains again, the story of his sufferings written in deep lines upon his haggard face. He tenderly picks up a wounded lamb and soothes it like a child as the picture ends.

Artillery and Love—NOVELTY—OCTOBER 27.—Charlie hits the cop on the post with a potato, and therefrom ensues a race. Edith protects Charlie from the enraged policeman, and he falls in love with his fair deliverer. Edith's sweetheart, George, arranges a boating party for Edith, and Charlie is left behind on shore. The lovers leave the motorboat and row to a deserted island. They are coolly settled in a sequestered nook, when a detonation from a nearby fort, which is having target practice, throws them violently from their seats. George rows away for his life, leaving Edith to her own resources. Charlie, from afar, has been watching for his chance. He paddles to Edith's rescue. The girl transfers her affections to Charlie, and parental blessings fall thick on that courageous youth.

The White King of the Zaras—(Two REELS)—CENTAUR—OCTOBER 28.—Ada Payne, now in Africa seeking Stanley, is captured by the people of a French adventurer who has made himself the king of the Zara tribe and who has discovered a diamond mine. Andre Despard, the white king, falls in love with Ada Payne, who rejects his advances.

Jack comes upon the diamond mine while the king is showing it to Ada, and the king becomes jealous of Jack and resolves to poison him. However, an old hag intervenes and the whole party escape just as the king is about to feed them to the lions. Meanwhile Stanley and his party engage in a fight with the natives of the Congo, but finally outwit their pursuers.

The Smugglers' Cave—AMERICAN—OCTOBER 29.—Featuring Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson and Walter Spencer. Nancy leads a life of misery due to the hardships and cruelties inflicted on her by her father, who is the chief of a band of smugglers, and he promises her in marriage to Pete, another member of the gang, and the girl resolves to escape from both of them. Paul, a revenue officer, who has seen the girl, joins the gang under a disguise and after a spectacular fight they are arrested, and to Nancy's amazement Paul's identity is disclosed and the girl is rescued from her suffering and given a home of love and happiness with Paul.

Playing for High Stakes—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG—OCTOBER 29.—Featuring Anna Little, Jack Richardson and Walter Spencer. Nellie and her Aunt Nancy come to Lone Star to make a home for her brother Bert. Nellie is introduced to "Dandy" Jim, owner of the Lone Star saloon. He falls in wove with the girl and later, when Bert falls into evil ways, Dandy helps him out, and one night when Bert robs his employer's safe Dandy manages to return the money to the company's safe without Bert knowing it. Some time later Nellie, realizing the true worth of Dandy, promises to become his wife.

An Auto-Bungalow Fracas—BEAUTY—OCTOBER 30.—Featuring John Sheehan and Carol Halloway. John and Carol are saving to buy a bungalow. One morning Carol receives a check for $3,000 left her by her uncle, and she determines to buy a bungalow and an automobile to surprise her husband. Her husband unexpectedly discovers that Carol is keeping something from him and becomes jealous. He follows her to the bungalow and finds there the auto agent and the real estate agent, and thrashes them, but later when explanations follow both are reconciled, and John buys the bungalow.

The Idol—(THREE REELS)—CLIPPER—OCTOBER 30.—Featuring E. Forrest Taylor and Helene Rosson in a story of two stage stars. The man takes to drink and after some months of a gay life is out of a position and slowly sinks to the depths of degradation, and the girl, who is now the idol of the fickle public, joins the Salvation Army to get atmosphere for her forthcoming play, and through this medium she meets the man. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 84—HEARST-SELIG—OCTOBER 21.—Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, rides in an aeroplane at Long Beach, N. Y.; U. S. troopers participate in Roman race at San Francisco Exposition; sea sled designed to be used to rescue aviators tested at Boston Harbor; keel is laid for the first U. S. electrically driven warship, California, at New York; President Wilson lays corner stone at memorial amphitheater in Arlington National Cemetery; newest model of submarines, G type, gathered for practice at Newport, R. I.; Motion Picture Board of Trade is organized to protect and advance the interests of the motion pictures; city employees of New York presented with prizes by Mayor Mitchell; U. S. Naval Reserve cadets invade Rookies' camp at Ft. Sheridan, Ill.

Broncho Billy Evens Matters—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 22.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. Broncho Billy's wife becomes ill, and having no money to buy medicine, Billy steals it from the storekeeper. He then flees the country, leaving the medicine and remainder of the money with his wife. The sheriff and storekeeper trace Broncho Billy to his home, where they see his wife's condition. The storekeeper brings her food. Years later Broncho Billy returns, now a wealthy man. The storekeeper has gone into bankruptcy, and his store is being auctioned off. Broncho is the highest bidder and buys the store and then turns the deed over to the distressed storekeeper.

Broncho Billy's Parents—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 15.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. Broncho Billy, at the age of seveeen, holds up a street car. He is traced by the police to his home. He is sent to a reform school, but escapes and goes West. Years later his parents are notified to leave their home town on account of the notoriety gained by their son. They also go West. Broncho, now an outlaw, one night enters a house with the intent of stealing money left there by the stage coach. His mother recognizes him as he points the gun at his father. A happy reunion then takes place.

The Destroyer—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 25.—Featuring Nell Craig. Edmund Cobb and John Lorenz. Gordon Rockwell and Kenneth Randall are both in love with Frances Burnham, who accepts Randall's proposal of marriage. However, before marrying he asks Rockwell, who is a physician, to give him a physical examination, and Rockwell's assistant substitutes infected blood for that of Randall's in the blood test. When the news is broken to Randall he leaves the country, and later when Rockwell discovers the mistake he keeps it a secret and a year later he marries Frances. However, his conscience bothers him and after writing a note to Randall he poisons himself and Randall returns just in time to forgive him and is united with the girl he loves.

The Net of Deceit—(THREE REELS)—KALEM—OCTOBER 25.—Featuring Roland Bottomley. The representative of a foreign power orders La Farge and Babrielle to secure the formula of the explosive about to be sold to the government. The girl meets David, a fisherman, and engages him in a violent flirtation. He then determines to kill her and, climbing upon the balcony, he sees Fanshell Mallott, the representative of the other government's secretary, giving the siren the formula. After this the girl returns to the city and finds her thoughts reverting to David, and then resolves to seek him and beg his forgiveness, and it is at this time he takes her in his arms.

The Inevitable Penalty—LUBIN—OCTOBER 25.—Featuring Octavia Handworth and a strong cast. Alice elopes with Stephen, the dissolute nephew of her father's only enemy. Later Stephen forges a check and is caught before he can escape. On the eve of his trial, Morgan, who is in love with Alice, is working late preparing the case, when the evidence is taken from him by a masked figure. Morgan pursues and the chase leads to a bedroom, where Alice appears before him in a negligee. She tells Morgan that Stephen had not married her, but had promised to if she prevented his conviction by stealing the evidence against him. Stephen, in the meantime, escapes from jail and arrives to find Morgan and Alice in a seemingly compromising position. Later Stephen is killed while trying to escape from the guards who come after him and Alice faints in Morgan's arms as the picture ends.

Shoo Fly—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—OCTOBER 25.—Second of the "Chronicles of Bloom Center" series. The story tells of a fly swatting campaign in Bloom Center in which all the natives participate, and of how one Jim Billings, a commercial traveler, by catching three flies, manages to capture all the prizes. For a longer review see page 855 of last issue. J. C. G.

The Prince in Disguise—VITAGRAPH—OCTOBER 25.—Muriel Lacey reads of a prince disguised as a beggar and when little Tommy McGuire, son of a wash lady, climbs the fence, she concludes he must be a prince in disguise. They go for a walk and finally come to the home of Mrs. O'Brien. She takes them in and phones to the police. When the little girl is taken home by her mother, Tommy tells Mrs. O'Brien that Muriel was a nice little girl, but "Wasn't she funny?"

Arline's Chauffeur—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 26.—Featuring Isabel Rea and Jack Mulhall. Disowned by his father, the young man is forced to earn his living. His father calls on a banker and later has an unusual amount of money in the house, and two crooks, aware of this, plan to enter the house that night. The banker's daughter is deserted by a drunken chauffeur and the young man saves her from him, and is given the job as chauffeur for the family. He is later the means of rescuing her at the risk of his life and a reconciliation with his father follows, and the love affair which has been progressing comes to a romantic climax.

The Mystery of the Mountains—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—OCTOBER 26.—A strong cast featured. The mountaineer visits his cousin to ask him for money, but he is met with an indignant refusal and he is later ejected from the house by the butler. He goes part way home and decides to return again, and enters this time unannounced and finds his cousin dead. He is arrested for the murder on evidence supplied by the butler, and taken to the calaboose, where at the same time a young moonshiner is brought. Late that night the mountaineer's daughter brings him a file with which to escape, and the moonshiner is offered his liberty if he will help hunt for the fugitive. The young man locates the mountaineer in a hut with his daughter and for the girl's sake is tempted to go back on his word. He decides to go to see his mother, who is ill, and on the way to the mountains finds the doctor attending an insane patient. He proves to be the butler and, dying, he confesses the murder of the mountaineer's cousin, and the moonshiner then hastens to the mountaineer with the good news, and is thanked by the girl.

The Knaves and the Knight—KALEM—OCTOBER 26.—Shifty applies for the job as a cook in order that he may get the Vandergraft silverware. Bud also has designs upon the silverware and manages to sneak in the dining room and don a suit of armor. The Vandergrafts entertain two professors at dinner and Bud's manipulation of the habbred which goes with the armor creates a fight. Bud taps Shifty on the head with the spear and, scared out of his wits, he flees. Bud is in the act of taking the valuables when Vandergraft sees him and Bud, seeing Shifty, runs after him, but finally recognizing the man in the armor. Shifty throws Bud into the lake.

Miss Freckles—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—OCTOBER 26.—Freckles' mother takes in washing in Hogan's Alley, while Freckles "rushes the can" for her lazy father and fights with other neighborhood ragamuffins. After one of these fights, Freckles is given a good scrubbing in the wash tub by her mother. Shortly after she receives a letter informing her that she has been bequeathed an immense estate, including a mansion on Fifth avenue. With her parents, Freckles moves into her new home. She is most unhappy in the midst of all her splendor and longs to be back in Hogan's Alley, where she can fight. About this time she awakens and is delighted to find it was only a dream.

Playing in Tough Luck—Lubin—October 26.—Featuring D. L. Don. When Don overhears Rosie Oldgirl proclaim that the man she marries will get a hundred thousand dollars on their wedding day, he turns from Edith and begins paying marked attention to Rosie. The next morning he calls on Rosie at 4:30 a. m., but insists on getting the hundred thousand before they marry. She gives him a check on the bank in which she has ceased to deposit her money and he, discovering this, meets George and tells him that Rosie is waiting to marry him. George marries Rosie and then the two go to the good bank, where they come out loaded with money.

The Race for a Gold Mine—Selig—October 26.—Featuring Tom Mix. Griner, a Mexican, who thinks John Meade's claim is worth something and who is in love with Meade's daughter, Nell, and Tom, Nell's sweetheart, are both trying to buy the claim from Meade. Nell tries to prevent her father from accepting Griner's offer, but her objections are overruled. Tom rides in with enough money to buy it, and he and Nell ride off to her father's home. Griner overhears them talking and there is an exciting chase between Tom and Nell and the Mexicans, in which the Mexicans are outdistanced. When they arrive they find Meade with several large nuggets in his hand and he tells them of the rich find. Meade takes Tom into partnership and Tom takes Nell in his arms.

To Cherish and Protect—(Three Reels)—Vitagraph—October 26.—Featuring Harry Morey and a strong cast. After gambling with the customers' stock and losing, the firm of Poole, Crane & Bream are ruined and draw lots to see who should commit suicide, as all are insured for an amount sufficient to cover their loss. Bream is secretly in love with Crane's wife, and he and Poole trick Crane so that he draws the fatal card. Crane promises to end his life at 12 o'clock that night, but instead he stumbles over the dead body of a suicide and exchanges identities with the dead man. Helen is cheated out of her insurance money and marries Bream. Later Bream and Poole meet Crane and they try to "frame" him, but Bill, the burglar's, dying confession clears him. Bream kills himself and Poole is sent up, while Crane and his wife are reunited.

Harvest—(Three Reels)—Biograph—October 27.—Featuring Franklin Ritchie, Grethen Hartman, Louise Vale and Jack Drumier. Noel Musgrave plans to elope with Mrs. Vane, but his uncle, Sir Anthony, threatens to disinherit him, so he goes into the north of England, where he meets Brenda and they are married according to the Scotch law. Five years later he is informed that his uncle has died, leaving him his fortune and title, and that Amy Vane is free to marry him. Being tired of Brenda and realizing that they are not legally married, he leaves her. Brenda takes their child, Roy, and vows that "he who sows shall reap the harvest." Noel marries Amy Vane and fifteen years later she dies and her daughter meets Roy, and Noel learns that Roy is his son. In the end Brenda obeys the dictates of her heart, finding happiness again with Noel and the young lovers.

The Seventh Day—Edison—October 27.—Featuring Sally Crute and Raymond McKee. Minnie Hope, who works behind the ribbon counter, longs for the social life. She spends all her salary for clothes to wear on Sunday. Dudley Dreamer, a grocery clerk, has the same desires. One Sunday they meet in the park. Each believes the other to be the pampered child of some millionaire. After dinner at a smart restaurant, Dudley spends his last cent to take Minnie to her home in a taxi. No sooner has he left her at the door of the hotel where she says she stons, than Minnie hurries to her boarding house. The next day one is more surprised than the other when they meet in the boarding house. They make the most of it, however, and continue the friendship started on deception.

Dreamy Dud Up in the Air—Essanay—October 27.—Cartoon by Wallace A. Carlson. Dreamy Dud and Wag are in the forest when the trees suddenly come to life and toss the two high into the air. Dreamy Dud finds himself in the clutches of an eagle and is taken to its nest for dinner, and the eagle then returns for the dog. Dud escapes and lands on a planet and is tossed into space by a comet-mounted policeman and he falls and awakens to find himself on the floor beside his bed.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Book Our New
5 REEL FEATURE
"The Exposition's First Romance"
Peerless Film Exchange
CHICAGO, ILL. 5 Wabash Ave.
DES MOINES, IA. Family Theatre Bldg.

Selling Tickets by Electricity
The system used by the most successful theatres (including the Strand, N. Y., etc.,) throughout the country.
Write for booklet, Dept. M.
Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
Longacre Building, Times Square, New York

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY

The Finest Film Laboratories in the World

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING
American Film Laboratories
"The Tiffany of the Film Trade"
69-71 West 90th St., New York City
We are successful because we produce the best quality possible
LOUIS B. JENNINGS, Pres. and Gen'l Mgr. EDWIN S. PORTER, Vice-Pres.

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

By Whose Hand? — (Two Reels) — Kalem—October 27.—Featuring Harland Moore and Marguerite Courtot. Officer Cornwall, hearing a shot, rushes into the house and finds Melville lying wounded on the floor and discovers Violet hiding behind a screen. The girl begs for mercy and tells him her story. She had met Melville two months before and he had urged her to elope with him, but he had abandoned her and she had come to his residence, and, angered at his proffer of money, she seized the revolver lying on his table and while engaged in a struggle the weapon was accidentally discharged. The soft-hearted officer is about to let her go, when an old man breaks out of the closet and denounces both Violet and Melville. According to Miller, they had entered the house and while engaged in a struggle Violet shot her pal and, terrified, she struck the old man with the butt of the revolver and then dragged him into a closet. Violet and Melville confess their guilt, and Cornwall picks up the phone and calls up headquarters.

The Man of God—(Two Reels)—Lubin—Oct. 27.—Featuring Earl Metcalfe, Ormi Hawley and Kempton Greene. Three bodies are washed ashore on a desert island—a priest, a girl and a man. Later the three regain consciousness and the priest, realizing the man's intentions toward the girl, keeps watch over her, while the man says that some day he will have his way. Later the priest falls ill and the girl throws her arms about his neck and pleads that he live for her. In an instant the priest becomes a man and starts to enfold her. The man watches outside, but doesn't see the embrace relax or doesn't hear him tell her that he will not die and leave her unprotected. The girl goes for a gourd of water and the man enters the shack and accuses the priest of desiring the girl for himself. Later the man is killed by a snake bite, and soon the day of deliverance comes and the priest forces her to meet the rescue party alone.

Itsky, the Inventor—Vitagraph—October 27.—Featuring Hughie Mack, Harry Fisher and Florence Natol. Hoozis, about to be married, asks Itsky to invent something to wake him up in the morning. The apparatus depends upon the sun for its motive powers, and as Hughie's wedding day is a rainy one Hoozis sleeps until the afternoon. He rushes to the bride's home just in time to see her remove her false teeth and other artificialities, and, overcome with gratitude at the thought of how he escaped marrying her, he goes to Itsky and overwhelms the inventor by his thanks.

A Trick of Fate—Biograph—October 28.—Featuring Charles Perley, Augusta Anderson and Hector V. Sarno. The prospector discovers a rich pocket of gold and that same day a wandering stranger is brought home, who has hurt his leg. Some time later the stranger hurls himself upon his benefactor and kills him for his gold, and then subdues the woman who strives to kill him. She manages to entice him to drink until he falls into a stupor, and then binds him to the chair with wet rawhide. He is aroused by the clutch of the contracting thongs, and hour after hour until death releases him he hears the woman's taunts, "Can this gold save you now?"

Broncho Billy's Cowardly Brother—Essanay—October 28.—Featuring G. M. Anderson. Broncho Billy and his brother are both in love with the same girl, but she decides to marry Broncho's brother. One Sunday morning an outlaw creates a panic in the church by "shooting up" the place. The sheriff, who is the girl's father, is shot when he attempts to arrest the outlaw. Broncho's brother is offered the sheriff's star, but is afraid to take it. Broncho Billy takes the badge and at the risk of his life captures the outlaw. He then turns the badge over to his cowardly brother, whom the girl thinks made the arrest and lauds him for his heroism.

Fun at a Ball Game—Essanay—October 28.—The storekeeper arrives at the ball park, discovers that a beautiful blonde has relieved him of his bank roll and he has to accept the job of selling peanuts in order to gain entrance to the park. He comes face to face with the blonde and demands that she return the money, but she summons two ball players who proceed to wipe the ground up with him.

The Strange Unknown—(Three Reels)—Lubin—October 28.—Featuring a strong cast. The story concerns the love of Blanche Clark, an actress, for Lark Whitney, an artist, and of his love for the girl's stepsister, Meta. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Unforgiven — Vitagraph — October 28.—Featuring Charles Wellesley, Zena Keefe and D. Rogers Lytton. Mario Campanini neglects his wife, Rita, who later meets the Count di Turino and elopes with him one night. She is happy with the count until one night in the castle-like home she discovers that the count is keeping in seclusion an insane wife. Horrified, she returns to her husband, but he orders her to go back to her lover and stay there. She has become one of the unforgiven. At this point Mario wakes from his nightmare just as his wife smilingly enters the room.

The Coming of Angelo—Biograph Reissue—October 29.—Featuring Blanche Sweet, Walter Miller and a strong cast. Theresa is favored in the love of Guido, leader of the colony. Angelo arrives from over the sea and for the first time love enters the girl's life. Guido becomes aware of Theresa's love for Angelo and prepares to die. However, he later feels a great wave of hatred sweep over him for Angelo, and inveigles him into a cabin and locks him in with a bomb which he has prepared. Theresa arrives upon the scene just in time to rescue her lover as the bomb explodes and hurls Guido into eternity.

The Mystery of Room 13—(Four Reels)—Edison—October 29.—The cast includes Marc MacDermott. Count Rizzo is found dead, from a knife wound, in the room of his hotel. His wife who left him directly after the marriage service because she learns that he has betrayed a young girl, is accused of the murder. June has come to the hotel to discuss with her husband the consideration he demands for permitting her to obtain a divorce. To save June this notoriety her friend Clay Foster claims that he murdered Rizzo. Foster is about to be led off to prison when a newspaper reporter proves to the police that the crime was committed by a waiter at the hotel. June is free to marry her sincere admirer, Clay Foster. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Wonder Cloth—Lubin—October 29.—Featuring Ada Gleason, L. C. Shumway and a strong cast. William Grant, a young chemist in Armstrong's employ, is in love with Armstrong's daughter. Later Grant perfects a bullet-proof cloth and brings this discovery to Armstrong, who tells him that as long as the experiment was conducted on his time and at his expense he considers the invention his property. Grant resigns his position and goes home, where he hangs the bullet-proof vest on the wall. Later he invents a new cloth and hears that Armstrong is that day to subject himself to revolver shots to prove that he has invented a new bullet-proof cloth. The young man rushes to the test grounds and there saves Armstrong's life, and after that everything ends happily.

A Case of Eugenics—Vitagraph—October 29.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Mrs. Newlywed takes a fancy to the little Drake baby, a prize winner and a eugenic baby. Its mother leaves it in the care of Mrs. Newlywed, who is delighted, and Mr. Newlywed, who is not. He pretends to be sick so that his wife will be so busy taking care of him that she will have to get rid of the baby. The scheme works until finally, when Mr. Newlywed develops symptoms of mania, Mrs. Newlywed takes the doctor's advice and returns the baby.

The Sheriff's Trap—Biograph—October 30.—Featuring Isabel Rea, Jack Mulhall and Hector V. Sarno. The young son of a widow is approached by representatives of a railroad who seek a right of way across their property and when he refuses to sign the document they seek the aid of the ranch foreman, who beguiles the mother into signing the document. He tries to get the boy to sign his name, but fails and later in a quarrel the boy fires in self-defense and the foreman falls. The boy makes his escape and, passing the schoolhouse, he sees the teacher's horse tied outside and urges her to loan him the horse and she consents. Later it is discovered that Jackson had died of heart failure and no sign of a bullet wound had been found on him.

Niagara Falls—(Split Reel)—Edison—October 30.—Scenics with Niagara Falls as their subject are numerous, but one can enjoy these Edison views immensely. The photography is excellent. On the same reel with:

Yardville Folks—Edison.—Chickens, pigs and puppies are the actors in this entertaining picture.

The Lighthouse by the Sea—(Three Reels)—Essanay—October 30.—Featuring Darwin Karr and Betty Brown. Jack Collins, a sea captain, is in love with Mary Harper, daughter of the lighthouse keeper. Miguel Fernando, a trader, being jealous of Jack, has him cast adrift in a row boat and he lands on a desert island. Two years later Jack returns home to find that Fernando has betrayed and deserted Mary and to save her good name Jack marries her. The child is born and shortly after Mary dies. Years later Fernando returns to claim his child and only the vision of his dead wife prevents Jack from killing him.

Rescue of the Brakeman's Children—Kalem—October 30.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. Coleman releases the brakes on an empty box car to which is coupled a flat car, and allows them to run wild down the main line on which the president's special is coming. His children, Helen and Paul, are playing on the flat car, and Helen is informed of the children's peril, and knowing that the special is due shortly, commandeers a freight engine and sends the locomotive down the parallel track and overtakes the runaways. Cutting the bellrope free, the telegrapher fastens one end to the air lever, holds on to the other, and then jumps from the engine to the flat car. Thus she stops the locomotive, after which she turns her attention to setting the brakes of the two cars. Learning what has occurred, Coleman vows never to touch liquor again and at Helen's request the man is not prosecuted.

When California Was Wild—Selig—October 30. —Fritzi Brunette's first appearance in animal pictures, in which she proves her skill and bravery by appearing with bears and a mountain lion. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

The Shabbies — (Two Reels) — Vitagraph—October 30.—Lillian Walker and Evart Overton. The Jones family, once well-to-do, are obliged to live in reduced circumstances. By mistake they receive an invitation to Mrs. Van De Water's ball. They utilize the lace curtains and piano cover to make ball dresses, while Margaret's dress coat makes a suitable dress suit for Dick. They all go to the ball and make a great hit in their improvised costumes, and after a great deal of fun and embarrassment a joyous ending is provided by the marriage of Margaret and Phillip Jones, a young millionaire.

Universal Program

A Millionaire for a Minute—Joker—October 6. —(In place of "No Babies Allowed.") Zeke is madly in love with Jane, a country school teacher. When Zeke's uncle dies he inherits a fortune in India. Holdandgrab hears of it and his female accomplice comes to the village, gets Zeke's attention, and grieves poor Jane. The Hindu arrives and gives Zeke a bronze ring—his fortune. Zeke becomes dejected when he learns that Holdandgrab is the accomplice's husband. The ring is a magic one and grants Zeke whatsoever he may wish. Jane's father admires the ring and persuades Zeke to exchange it for Jane's hand and $2,000.

By Return Male—Imp—October 20.—A family quarrel brews when eager Slim Hoover refuses to take Mrs. Slim to the theater. Slim accepts an invitation to attend a "Jink's night" at the club. He puts on his evening clothes under his street clothes to hide from Mrs. Slim the fact that he is going out. Mrs. Slim has written a letter to her mother charging Slim with ill-treatment and announcing her intentions of returning to her mother. She requests an answer by return mail and gives the letter to Slim to mail. Slim forgets his family troubles in the society of a danseuse at the "Jinks." When the male returns with the unmailed letter Mrs. Slim decides to straighten out her family affairs without the aid of her mother.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 189—Universal—October 20.—Dixie Highway celebration held at Chicago, Ill.; President Wilson lays corner stone for memorial to G. A. R. heroes at Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.; mayor gives medals to street cleaners in New York City; three 55,000-barrel tanks hit by lightning and make spectacular blaze at Tulsa, Okla.; largest city pier built at Chicago, Ill.; Columbus Day celebration at Chicago; Mexicans cross International Bridge following bandit attacks in Rio Grande Valley, Brownsville, Texas; the Wyoming returns to New York after mimic battle; British artillery starts for the front from London, England; keel of U. S. electrically driven warship, California, laid by Secretary of Navy Daniels at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Pete's Awful Crime—Joker—October 23.—Cast with Gale Henry, William Franey and Max Asher. Pete, who is very near-sighted, and Jake are rivals for the hand of Miranda, a wonderful cook. To help his cause Jake purchases a new suit. He gives the old clothes to a farmer, who uses them to dress a scarecrow. Pete comes upon the scarecrow. Thinking it to be his rival and determining to be rid of him, Pete shoots the dummy. Pete is conscience stricken and returns to the ranch and confesses his crime. The men are just about to hang him when Jake appears. Pete is so glad that he is not a murderer that he steps aside and helps Jake win Miranda.

An Heiress for Two—Nestor—October 23.—Eddie and Lee are tired of work and on their vacation search for an heiress. Lee meets Mrs. Brown, but his pleasant conversation is stopped by the jealous Mr. Brown. Eddie has the good fortune of becoming acquainted with Mrs. Brown's daughter. The boys are invited to the Brown home to a reception. They do a slight favor for an old maid who gives them her card. Mr. Brown spies Lee among the guests and gives him the chase. He calls a policeman and has both the boys arrested. All efforts to get out of jail are futile until the boys think of the old maid and call her up. The story ends with the two boys under the "wing" of the old maid heiress, their future well provided for.

The Millionaire Paupers—(Three Reels)—Rex—October 26.—Mrs. Burne-Smith and Mrs. Winthrop have determined to make a match between their children, regardless of the fact that the two have never met each other. Both are opposed to the plan and when the time for the meeting comes, Enid Burne-Smith escapes. She gets rooms in a tenement and secures work. Enid becomes very friendly with Mabel and her sweetheart, George. Allen Winthrop in disguise moves into one of his tenements to investigate the actions of the agent in charge. Enid happens to room in the same house. Mabel has been placing herself under obligations to Martin, the landlord, and refuses to let Enid pay the debt, thus releasing her from the clutches of the agent. Martin admits to George that he bought dresses for Mabel, and Enid, seeing that the lovers are about

Good Features at Reasonable Prices

George Ade's
Just Out of College
Five reels of sparkling comedy
Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan

Rupert Hughes'
All for a Girl
An exceptional 5 reel comedy drama
Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky

Rex Beach's
The Spoilers
Selig's 9 reel masterpiece
Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois (except Cook County)

Charles E. Van Loan's
Little Sunset
A clean 4 reel baseball comedy drama
Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois

Thorns of Passion
A thrilling 4 reel emotional drama
Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin

Write, Phone or Wire

F. O. NIELSEN
609 Schiller Building
'Phone Central 7847
CHICAGO ILL.

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement in Motography to be parted, says the dresses are hers. Then Enid is left out in the cold, and even Allen is disappointed in her. Enid returns to her home. Later Allen looks in vain for her. The two mothers arrange a meeting between their children and there is a joyful meeting between the two. The plans of the matchmakers have been more than fulfilled, and as the picture closes, Enid and Allen are contemplating their honeymoon.

Tears and Sunshine — L-Ko — OCTOBER 27. — Father and son are grieved over the loss of a recently departed one. Their grief is shared by their neighbors, Mrs. Whosis and her beautiful daughter, who are in the same fix. Father and mother are getting along beautifully with their flirtation when the children interfere, but they are easily bought off. Father decides to make Mrs. Whosis a beautiful present. He is speedily relieved of it by another admirer of Mrs. Whosis who is also trying to make a hit with the widow. Father, however, manages to recover the necklace and to present it to the widow.

The Frame-Up on Dad—NESTOR—OCTOBER 29. —Father and mother have arranged a marriage for their only son, Ray, with Jane, a girl having plenty of cash. Ray is finishing a school term, and has wooed and won Billie. Father's scheme rather upsets their dreams of future bliss. As father has told Ray to bring home a chum with him, a brilliant idea enters the youth's head. He and Billie are married and Billie, in disguise, accompanies him home as his chum. Jane's interest in the chum affords the latter no little embarrassment. Mother is let on to the secret first, and father's suspicions are aroused at no distant date. A calamity is averted, and with mother, son and daughter in-law comprising the opposing element, father is forced to come to terms.

A Life at Stake—(TWO REELS)—VICTOR—OCTOBER 27.—In this story Agnes Brandon, wife of Jack Brandon, being tired of the ranch monotony, falls an easy prey to the deceit of Akron, an unscrupulous man of the world and a cattle buyer. Although she still loves her husband, Akron has cleverly made it appear that Jack is unfaithful, and the woman is finally coaxed to leave for the city with the cattle buyer as escort. But through the help of Jude, whose wife Jack has helped during her sickness, the trouble between the man and his wife is straightened out, and Akron is defeated.

The Flag of Fortune—(TWO REELS)—POWERS—OCTOBER 2.—Grandpa, grandma and their granddaughter, Bettie, are in desperate circumstances. Years before, grandpa had made out his pension papers, but they became lost mysteriously and up to the present time he had been unable to receive the pension due him. The rent is badly in arrears, and in the nick of time Bettie is employed by a motion picture firm. She is delighted on receiving the munificent sum of $5 for her day's work, but grandpa is rather dubious about her becoming an actress and the next day accompanies Bettie to the studio. Grandpa is at last persuaded to impersonate the old soldier in the play. During the act the long-lost pension papers fall out of Grandpa's old flag, where they had been placed by Bettie when a baby. At the end of the story Bettie becomes engaged to the leading man.

The Lost Roll—(LADY BAFFLES AND DETECTIVE DUCK, EPISODE 10)—POWERS—OCTOBER 28.—Hubby hides his poker winnings in an old coat, and his wife subsequently donates the coat to a tramp. But Lady Baffles and her assistant are onto the situation and follow the tramp to the second-hand store where he sells the coat. Detective Duck has been summoned by hubby and he disguises himself as one of the dummies in the store. As the crooks pass out with the coat in their possession, Duck falls against Baffles, who is carrying the coat. When the crooks are far enough away they stop to count the money. To their disgust, they find only a baker's roll in the coat with a sarcastic note from Duck. Duck restores the roll to the couple, remarking that the case was quite too simple for one of his genius.

The Superior Claim—(THREE REELS)—BISON—OCTOBER 30.—With M. K. Wilson, Sherman Bainbridge and Edith Sterling. Martin Stavnow is saloonkeeper and a leading figure in a western town. He covets Grace Wendel, although he is many years her senior. Paul Winston, detained in town by an accident on the railroad, becomes acquainted with Grace and, missing his train, he decides to stay for a while. Love develops between the two, and Stavnow's jealousy is fanned to a white heat. He demands Grace's hand from her father, but he tells Stavnow that she is the one to make this momentous decision. During a card game at the saloon Stavnow slips two cards into his rival's pocket and then accuses him of cheating. The boys then start Winston out on the desert without food or water. Later Stavnow finds a picture beneath the boy's chair. It happens to be that of his former wife. Realizing the import of this, he starts at once after Paul. Both father and son are later rescued by the relief squad. Finally everything is satisfactorily explained and the son, having a "superior claim," the story ends, the two fathers blessing the union of their children.

The Man from Argentine—(TWO REELS)—POWERS—OCTOBER 31.—The cast includes Sydney Ayers and Doris Pawn. Carlos Lopez, to save his father from suspicion, leaves his home and comes to America after the mysterious theft of some important state papers. Living in a cheap lodging house he becomes acquainted with a cabaret singer, with whom he falls in love. He learns that his father has come to New York and there is a happy reunion. The father pleads with his son to return home, reminding him that, ac cording to a tradition, he is betrothed to Bonita. Helen is disconsolate when she learns that her lover has gone away. At the last moment Carlos determines to remain in America and marry Helen.

Father's First Murder—L-Ko—OCTOBER 31.—Father doesn't like motion picture actors and therefore chases Hector out of the house with a brace of Krupps. Daughter agrees to marry Sweetgrass, a friend of father's. Meanwhile, Hector writes his sweetheart, telling her to hang a rope out of her window and they will elope. The plans all go wrong. Sweetgrass and father get Hector's note, father is pulled out of the window by his great toe, Sweetgrass falls out of a second-story window, and father shoots Hector in the excitement. Father imagines he is an assassin and tries to light out in minister's clothing. Kidnappers confuse pa's identity with that of the minister. Hector, pa and Sweetgrass all attack each other from the rear, and no one gets the girl.

The Cass-Janey Feud—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—OCTOBER 31.—In this story of the Kentucky mountains, Joan loses her heart to Bill Cass, marries him, and they move from Springtown into the mountains. Four years of happiness pass. Cass, on a trip, meets Janey, his old rival, and the latter renews his threats of revenge. On his return, Joan sees her husband cleaning his rifle, and realizes the significance. That night, crossing the corral in a blinding storm of wind and snow, a lantern in his hand, Cass becomes a target for his enemy. He is wounded, and while Janey is searching for the body, Cass manages to drag himself to the house. In desperation, Joan thrusts the limp form of her husband into the closet. A battle of wits then ensues, and Cass and his wife are the victors, Cass recovering consciousness and getting possession of his rifle.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Little Gypsy—(Six REELS)—FOX.—Featuring Dorothy Bernard. Babbie, daughter of Gypsy parents, who has been adopted by Lord Rintoul, is in spite of her training a gypsy at heart and her greatest amusement is to dress up in ragged clothes and to go to the village and here she ensnares the heart of a young minister. In her anxiety to defend the striking workers of the village she is arrested for inciting riot, but she escapes and the minister is obliged to protect her from the soldiers. After many adventures Babbie's true parentage is revealed and she becomes the wife of the minister.

Kliene-Edison

The Green Cloak—(FIVE REELS)—KLEINE-EDISON.—Featuring Irene Fenwick. Ruth, daughter of Professor McAllister, after returning from a Western trip, refuses to marry John Gilbert. A stranger comes to the house and Ruth introduces him as Paul Duncan a friend from the West. When Duncan catches sight of the butler he evinces a strong desire to leave the house, but is urged to stay, and the professor leaves him alone in the library, where he later finds him strangled and gripped in his left hand are silken tassels torn from a woman's cloak. The tassels prove to have been torn from a cloak worn by Ruth and she is arrested and accused of the murder. She then admits that the dead man is her husband, but denies having had anything to do with his death. Later it is discovered that the butler had choked Duncan for him being false to a robber gang. At the close Ruth and Gilbert are shown united.

Mutual Masterpictures

The Miracle of Life—(FOUR REELS)—AMERICAN—OCTOBER 21.—Featuring Margarita Fischer and Joseph Singleton in a story which carries out the idea of motherhood as the most precious thing in a woman's life, and those who fight against it are doomed to not only have an unhappy old age, but everlasting punishment after death. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

J. C. G.

North American

Mine Own People—CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN OF "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"—NORTH AMERICAN.—"The Diamond from the Sky" is given by Luke Lovell to Quabba and he takes it to Richmond to Hagar and Esther and these two women, who are Arthur Stanley's best friends, return the diamond to him. Blair Stanley and Vivian have now gotten Arthur interested in an aeroplane hoping that this will be the means of his death. As this chapter closes, we see Arthur Stanley with "The Diamond from the Sky," the message from his mother, which is proof of his perfidy, and a bottle of poison lying close at hand, locked in his library. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

J. C. G.

Paramount

The Girl of Yesterday—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS.—Featuring Mary Pickford. Jane inherits a large estate from her uncle and the handsome young man next door undertakes to bring her into society. The first affair the girl goes to she appears in one of her grandmother's black silk dresses and all the men crowd around her and rave about "old fashioned girls." Later the hostess takes Jane in hand and then the little lady takes up horseback riding, golfing and aviation. She goes to a house party on the Monroe yacht and there she has several adventures, among which is a trip skyward, and after this there is a misunderstanding, but in the end Jane becomes a girl of today and marries the right young man.

The Chorus Lady—(FIVE REELS)—LASKY—OCTOBER 18.—Cleo Ridgeley featured, as Patricia O'Brien, a chorus girl, who has dependent upon her her little sister, Nora. Nora comes to the theater where "Pat" is rehearsing, and Crawford, who is conducting the show, struck by Nora's youth and beauty, places her in the company and at once begins paying attentions to her. At the dress rehearsal the star is taken ill and "Pat" is given the chance of her life. Nora goes to Crawford's apartments, leaving a note for her sister, and "Pat," half dressed for the stage, finds the note, flings on a coat and rushes to Crawford's apartments, arriving there just before Nora does, and when the girl comes in she finds Crawford making violent love to "Pat" and she demands that he choose between them, and he chooses "Pat." In the meantime detectives hired by Crawford's wife come to Crawford's apartments, and Danny, who is one of them, finds the woman is his own girl. The picture concludes with all misunderstandings cleared away.

Pathe

An Affair of Three Nations—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE.—Gold Rooster play produced by Arnold Daly and Ashley Miller. Aston Kirke, a young man of great wealth, delights in solving mysteries. He is called in to discover the reason for the strange letters and drawings which Dr. Morse receives. He learns that the doctor, while unaware of the fact, is in possession of a copy of the treaty between Russia and the United States. The doctor is murdered. Kirke, however, manages to keep the paper from falling into the wrong hands, thus averting a possible war. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

A Rheumatic Joint—(TWO REELS)—PATHE.—J. Rufus Wallingford and Blackie Daw in this adventure set about squaring accounts with Cornelius Rockewell. Rockewell is in search of a cure for old age. Wallingford and Daw open a sanitarium. Rockewell visits the institution and makes a thorough investigation, but they are ready for him, so he "falls." Wallingford refuses to treat Rockewell because he has not earned his money honestly and they only cure worthy people. The only way for him to be cured is to buy the place, which he does, for $150,000. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Big Beautiful Doll—PATHE-STARLIGHT.—Heinie and Louie learn that a wealthy woman is to receive an imported doll, for which she is to pay a fabulous sum. Louie is dressed in doll fashion and taken to the house. Another young man has the same idea for making some easy money. His girl friend plays the doll. Heinie and Louie are kept at their wits' end to hide the other doll. They all but get away with it, when the real doll is brought in. This is one of the best Heinie and Louie comedies thus far offered.

Pathe News, No. 82—PATHE—OCTOBER 13.—President Wilson, accompanied by his fiancee, Mrs. Galt, pays a visit to New York; fire department gives display at Philadelphia; Red Sox beat Phillies, 2 to 1, in second game of world series; Pathe Paris fashions; scenes from the front; aerial bomb being manufactured near Los Angeles, Calif.; 30,000 processionists jubilantly celebrate Mayor Thompson's Sunday saloon closing order.

Pathe News No. 83—PATHE—OCTOBER 16.—New York's "Little Italy" celebrates Columbus

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:

Your patrons demand better Music. Install a

Bartola Orchestra

and your music problem is Solved Sold on easy payments.

Write for Catalogue

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

Goes POSTERS

POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE

GOES—CHICAGO

Day; demonstration of new army transport methods made at San Diego, Calif.; Miss Dixie and Miss Chicago with Governor Dunne attend the opening ceremonies of the Dixie Highway at Chicago, Ill.; Pathe fashions; the keel is laid of the California, the first electrically propelled battleship to be built; President Wilson lays the corner stone of the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater at Arlington, Va.; scenes from the front; celebration of Columbus Day at Chicago.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels—Pathe-Balboa—Chapter Eight, entitled "The Sun Worshippers.") Annette and Neal, who have been made prisoners by Hernandez, are taken to an old city of Sun Worshippers. Annette is prepared to be sacrificed and Neal is put in a cell. Inez is ordered by Hernandez to take Mrs. Hardin to the city. On their way they meet a detachment from the Florida in search of her son. Neal escapes from the city and from the beach signals the ship. Annette also frees herself from the Sun Worshippers and reaches the shore in time to prevent the Brute Man from killing her foster brother. On board the war vessel, Neal sends a shot into the temple of the Sun Worshippers, completely destroying the place. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Universal Special

The Broken Coin—(Nineteenth Episode)—October 25.—Count Frederick and the native succeed in finding an entrance to the grotto where Kitty is in time to save her from being thrown into the depths below. In an attempt to escape from the natives the sailor is killed. Sachio informs King Michael that with both parts of the coin he is certain to find the hiding place of the scripts and plans belonging to the King of Gretzhoffen, not knowing that one-half of the coin is a duplicate of the one which Count Frederick had made for King Michael when the puppet discovered the loss of his, which is now in Kitty's possession. Therefore, Sachio does not find the hiding place of the treasure by following the directions on the coin. Kitty and Frederick seclude themselves in a cave on the top of a high cliff and are nearly dead with starvation when they discern a boat on the horizon. After they light a signal fire the episode closes.

The College Orphan—(Six Reels)—Universal Broadway Feature—October 25.—Carter DeHaven and Flora Parker DeHaven are featured in this comedy drama of college life that abounds in frat house pranks, football games, plots and counterplots, and ends in happiness for the principals. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

The Man Who Couldn't Beat God—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—October 18.—Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature starring Maurice Costello as the English peasant who murders his overbearing master. Martin comes to America, where he determines to forget his crime and make a name for himself. Starting as a sandhog, he earns promotion rapidly. Years later he is elected governor. The strain of his official duties and his uneasy conscience causes him a complete physical breakdown. His physician orders a sea voyage. The governor returns to his home in England. Tuned by his conscience, he visits the scene of the murder. There a vision of the man he killed so excites him that he dies from the shock. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

World

Divorced—(Five Reels)—World Film.—Presented by Equitable Pictures Corporation. Hilda Spong is featured. After the death of her worthless husband Leonore Manson accepts financial aid from Robert Hadley, whose wife has divorced him. Years later her son Eugene's engagement to Madeline Durand is broken because her mother learns that Leonore is Hadley's mistress. Eugene confronts Hadley. To prevent him from telling her son the truth Leonore shoots her lover. She is tried for murder, but acquitted. Madeline remains loyal to Eugene and marries him. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous

The Flame of Passion—(Five Reels)—Terriss. Featuring Tom Terriss with a strong cast. William Lanyon dies and leaves his estate to his nephew, Dick Lorient, and in the event of his death the property passes to John Stark. Lorient is engaged to his cousin, Dulcie Lanyon, a New York girl, and Stark, with the assistance of his mistress, plans to bring about Dick's death and obtain the estate. Lorient goes to Jamaica and through the charms of "The Woman," Stark's mistress, and by a rapid consummation of alcohol, he is soon a wreck. Dulcie comes to his assistance, but is abducted by Stark, and the siren in an attemp to stab her paramour is stabbed by him and dies. Dulcie makes her escape aided by Dick and they flee. Stark and Dick close in deadly combat with the result that the arch-villain is hurled down in a crater to death in the flames.

Associated Service

Released Week of October 25.

The Reckoning—(Three Reels)—Ramona.—Dick Clyde, in love with Louise, leaves for the west and after writing many letters to her receives no reply, for the letters have been intercepted by the girl's father. After some time, Louise sets a day to marry Robert Howe, a power in the market, and the night of the wedding a dinner is given at her home, and Dick, who has arrived in town that day, is invited. When Dick arrives he recognizes Howe and while smoking with the men tells a story of how a man had left a pathetic little wife waiting for him in a foreign country. Howe leaves the party and some time later the clerk at the hotel where Dick and Howe stay phones the former and says that Howe has killed himself, and left a request that Louise be spared the knowledge of his past, and a happy future is foreseen for Dick and Louise.

The Wolf Girl—(Two Reels)—Federal.—Silas Strong and his daughter, Lona, live in the woods, and here comes Broderick, the lumber king, and his son, Fred. Fred plans to do away with Silas and the old man is later found dead, and Lona, knowing the cause of his death, seeks justice. She fellows Fred to the city and there becomes a cabaret dancer, and the boy, not recognizing her, becomes a victim to her. Like a wolf she trails him down, giving him a bad record, and one night he is shot during a raid on a gambling den. The nurse that is called in happens to be Lona, who tells him who she is, and then the boy falls back dead. Lona has avenged her father's death.

Shot at Sunrise—Monte.—General Nuisance asks his daughter, Rena, to secure information relative to the strength of the enemy. Once inside the enemy's lines she meets Colonel Nutt, who falls in love with her. Major Fritz, Rena's lover, tries to get the girl, but is ordered to be shot at sunrise. Meanwhile Rena, who has been captured, manages to gain her freedom, and she is nearing the place where they are firing at Major Fritz. She is being pursued by the enemy and just as she arrives on the scene of the shooting a bullet which Fritz dodged lands among Rena's pursuers and they flee. Afterward Fritz is released and Rena takes him back to her father and also brings back the important papers.

Released Week of September 25.

Breaking Into Society—Santa Barbara.—Stumpy, after getting into a fight in the Bowery lunch room, finds himself jobless. He and a friend arrive in a small town, where Mrs. Justgotrich sees them and offers them $500 each to be her guests. She then invites the women who snubbed her to meet her old friends, Baron Eyeland and Count Yourchange, but two pretty maids at the house raise havoc with Mrs. Justgotrich's plan and her social aspirations are destroyed.

Love's Old Sweet Song—(Two Reels)—Deer.—Stella, a New York dancer, tiring of her life on Broadway and after severing her connection with George Sinclair, who will not marry her, goes to Wild Horse, a western town, where she meets and marries Andy Sims, owner of the Bar X ranch, whose favorite song is "Love's Old Sweet Song." Some time later Sinclair stops off at Wild Horse and there is introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Andy Sims. Unnoticed by Andy, Stella scribbles a note to Sinclair telling him she is married and begging him to go away. However, the man tries to get her to return to New York with him and she refuses, and Andy overhears the conversation. The New Yorker is escorted to the train at the point of a gun and Stella is preparing to leave when she comes across their favorite song, "Love's Old Sweet Song," but when Andy arrives he tells her again "Love's Old Sweet Song."

SOME NEW THEATERS

Arizona.

The DeLuxe theater on East Congress street, Tucson, after being thoroughly renovated, a new screen installed and a new ventilation system put in, has been opened to the public.

The new theater being erected on Sullivan street, Miami, will be known as the Crystal. Joe. Norcross and William Garrett have leased the theater and intend giving the public first-class pictures. The theater is almost completed and is very pretty.

Colorado.

Trinidad is to have a new picture show to be opened by E. G. Hower on North Commercial street. The house will have a seating capacity of 600 and cost about $1,500.

Georgia.

A. Samuels and C. Douglas Danford, both of Atlanta, will be the owners of the proposed new motion picture theater which will be erected in Griffin. Contracts have been let.

Illinois.

A permit has been issued for a new motion picture theater to be built by A. Woykofka at 1836 South Fifteenth street, Springfield. The new theater will be of hollow tile construction and fireproof and will be built at a cost of $3,000.

Lake Amusement Company, $2,500, moving picture theaters, Jacob Perbohner, Samuel Keller and Morris Kompel.

Mrs. E. E. Endicott, who has been in charge of the Wood River moving picture airdome, Alton, is planning to have a new picture theater built for both summer and winter months. The theater will cost somewhere near $10,000, according to the present plans.

The work of remodeling the front of the Vaudette theater in Sterling is progressing rapidly, and when completed it will be very attractive. Mr. Tift is manager.

Arthur W. Parker is installing in the Star and Crescent theaters in Pontiac, two Wurlitzer orchestra and pipe organs.

Robert Kneedler, proprietor of the Opera house at Collinsville, was electrocuted while endeavoring to repair a motion picture machine.

Indiana.

Dickson Brothers, lessees of the Yarnelle and Orpheum theaters in Wabash, announce that they have purchased the Logan theater, owned by H. S. Logan. The theater will be renamed the Colonial, following extensive repairs.

The Allardt Brothers of South Bend have taken a lease on the Boyer opera house at Kendallville from the manager and owner, A. M. Boyer. The new owners propose to use the theater for high-class moving pictures, and occasionally vaudeville. The change became effective October 11.

Iowa.

Bruno Weber, formerly manager of the Dreamland theater in Waverly, has purchased a theater at Albia.

The management of the Idle Hour theater in Leon has purchased new opera chairs and is having the theater redecorated. The improvements will make the theater very comfortable.

Kentucky.

John B. Elliot, of Lexington, recently became the owner of the Grand moving picture theater, Frankfort, the assets of the Frankfort Amusement company, which operated the playhouse, having been disposed of by master commissioner Walter Jeffers. It is understood it will be continued under the active management of E. K. Lyon.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

MAE ALLISON
WITH AMERICAN

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 6, 1915 No. 19

LUBIN

Monday Nov. 8th

ETHEL CLAYTON

In

"THE ORGY" (One act drama)

Tuesday Nov. 9th

D.L.DON

In

"HALF A MILLION" (One act comedy)

Wednesday Nov. 10th

L.C.SHUMWAY

In

"THE SECRET ROOM" (Two act drama)

Thursday Nov. 11th

VALENTINE GRANT

In

"THE GHOST OF THE TWISTED OAKS" (Three act drama)

Friday Nov. 12th

L.C.SHUMWAY

In

"A NIGHT IN OLD SPAIN" (One act drama)

Saturday Nov. 13th

BILLIE REEVES

In

"HIS THREE BRIDES" (One act comedy)

GENERAL FILM

LUBIN

RELEASES

Sigmund Lubin

Triangle Spells Dollars to These Men

Hulsey, of Texas, doesn't think in nickels and dimes. He thinks in big sums—like a regular Texan. A hundred thousand a year won't stop Hulsey. So—his theatres in Dallas, Waco, Galveston and Houston are all in the TRIANGLE now.

And Jake Wells—everybody knows Wells. He has come into the TRIANGLE Garden, because he wants the best. So Richmond and Norfolk will have TRIANGLE Service. Costs don't worry Wells. He's after results.

Simpson & Gordon, of Rochester, made a success of their Regent Theatre. But it wasn't big enough. Now they've bought a little insurance for more success—they've joined the TRIANGLE Family.

Out in Seattle, there's a man by the name of Jensen. You'll find him at the Liberty Theatre. Jensen will spend money if you can show him something worth while to spend it on. He's a TRIANGLE recruit—for nearly as much money as the President of the United States gets.

TRIANGLE and Success are interchangeable terms to these men—they investigated: then they bought. Doesn't this evidence affect you?

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

A big scene from Pathe's "At Bay"

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 6, 1915 No. 19

Ohio Votes to Join National Body

ENTHUSIASTIC CONVENTION HELD

THE Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' Convention held in Cleveland, Ohio, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 19 and 20, was one of the best attended and most enthusiastic gatherings that has ever assembled in the Buckeye State.

Ere adjourning on Wednesday the exhibitors voted to unite with the national organization of exhibitors, headed by Fred J. Herrington, and went on record as being unalterably opposed to motion picture censorship in all of its varied forms. Canton, Ohio, was chosen as the next meeting place of the Ohio exhibitors, the date to be set by the executive board of the state organization.

Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, the national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, called the convention to order on Tuesday morning, October 19, and B. J. Sawyer of Cleveland was unanimously chosen temporary chairman, and W. H. Horsey, of Cleveland, temporary secretary.

At the Tuesday afternoon session interesting and stirring addresses were delivered by Peter Juep, of Detroit, Michigan; L. W. Brophy, of Muskogee, Oklahoma; William J. Sweeney, of Chicago, Illinois; M. A. Miller, of New York City, and Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh. The chairman then appointed the following committees, who were instructed to make their reports at the opening of Wednesday morning's session:

Resolutions: L. Smith, Alliance, O.; S. Bullock, Cleveland, O.; E. J. Bradford, Defiance, O.; Harry Levine, Barberton, O.; G. T. Sharp, Springfield, O.; Miss R. M. DeGrasse, Toledo, O.

Nomination: J. H. Clark, Ashland, O.; E. P. Mott, Wooster, O.; R. E. Jacobs, Findlay, O.; V. Hardin, Barberton, O.; P. M. Kennedy, Youngstown, O.; R. R. Moore, Akron, O.; Mrs. M. R. Baker, Toledo, O.

Order of business: Mr. Abrams, Canton, O.; E. S. Nichols, Clyde, O.; G. F. Broadwell, Oberlin, O.; Peter Tender, Alliance, O.; W. G. Castle, Kent, O.

By-Laws and Constitution: R. R. Moore, Akron, O.; F. M. Branch, Medina, O.; W. DaWalt, Bellevue, O.; W. F. Roth, Bellevue, O.; B. Feurstone, South Loraine, O.; H. T. Palmer, Painsville, O.

When Wednesday morning's session was called to order by Mr. Sawyer, Mr. Bullock of Cleveland offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Conditions now confronting the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Ohio render it absolutely necessary that we organize as one solid, compact body, for our future protection and defense; therefore be it

Resolved, That we proceed to organize and enroll ourselves as Ohio State Branch Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, subject to the rules, constitution and by-laws of the National organization, known as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Fred J. Herrington, president.

Further Resolved, That a committee be appointed to take any further action that may be deemed necessary to complete final organization.

Upon the motion of Mr. Slimm of Cleveland, seconded by Mr. Brecht of the same city, it was decided to nominate the various officers from the floor, and the following officials were accordingly elected by acclamation: Lemotte Smith, Alliance, Ohio, president; Frank Beverstock, Mansfield, Ohio, vice-president; W. H. Horsey, Cleveland, secretary; L. H. Becht, Cleveland, treasurer; F. M. Kenney, Cleveland, national vice-president; Charles A. Megown, Cleveland, Max Stearn, East Liverpool, and J. H. Clark, Ashland, were chosen as members of the executive board.

Mr. Bullock then offered the following resolutions, both of which were carried unanimously:

Resolved, That we, representing the organized exhibitors of Ohio, in convention assembled, hereby pledge our hearty co-operation in our respective communities, to make effective the plan outlined by Hon. Judge George Addams of Cleveland, for the proper control of school children, patrons of motion picture theaters.

Be it Further Resolved, That a committee be appointed from this body to assist Judge Addams and his co-workers, in perfecting a feasible plan with a view to putting it into practical operation as soon as possible.

Resolved, That we are unalterably opposed to Motion Picture Censorship in all and any of its varied forms, knowing from actual experience that the judgment of our patrons, supported by the existing penal laws of Ohio is all sufficient to meet the socalled evils complained of by the advocates of censorship.

Upon motion of Mr. Becht of Cleveland, seconded by Mr. Kenney of Cleveland, it was voted to hold the next state convention in Canton, Ohio, the time to be set by the executive board of the organization. Following the adjournment of the convention, a banquet was held, which was largely attended, and the exhibitors then scattered to their homes. The register of attendance shows the following to have been among those present:

C. Neufer, Peoples theater, Elyria, O.; B. J. Sawyer, Manhattan theater, Cleveland, O.; George F. Broadwell, Apollo theater, Oberlin, O.; H. T. Mandelbaum, Motion Picture Supply Company, Cleveland, O.; Ernest Schwartz, Erie theater, Cleveland, O.; F. M. Kenney, Clark theater, Cleveland, O.; Charles A. Megown, Cameraphone theater, Cleveland, O.; Fred H. Brandt, Cleveland, O.; Peter Tender, American theater, Alliance, O.; William J. Loveman, Roodman Piano Company, Cleveland, O.; John R. Lakin, Caille Bros. Company, Detroit, Mich.; A. P. Lombard, Precision Machine Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; C. W. McCombes, National Movie Stamp Corporation, Cleveland, O.; H. M. Nible, R. A. Duke, W. E. & M. Co., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; John E. Niebes, Library theater, Detroit, Mich.; M. A. Miller, New York, N. Y.; W. J. Sweeney, Chicago, Ill.; L. W. Brophy, Yale theater, Muskogee, Okla.; A. Mahrer, New Palace theater, Cleveland, O.; A. Goldman, Monarch theater, Cleveland, O.; W.

H. Horsey, Carlyon theater, Cleveland, O.; C. C. Clark, Cleveland, O.; Alex. Goldman, Monarch theater, Cleveland, O.; J. H. Simpson, Ideal theater, Cleveland, O.; Fred J. Herrington, Coliseum theater, Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. G. Costley, Kent, Ohio; T. G. Boak, Kent theater, Kent, Ohio; J. C. Meyers, A. S. Lambrigger, Grand theater, Orrville, O.; Emmett W. Rutledge, Plain Dealer, Cleveland, O.; C. M. Baxter, Photo Play World, Cleveland, O.; M. A. Malaney, Moving Picture Bulletin, Cleveland, O.; G. Schroeder, Schroeder Art Film Manufacturing Company, Cleveland O.; W. J. Slimm, Marquis theater, Cleveland, O.; I. H. Morris, Home theater, Cleveland, O.; Charles L. Blatz, Ivanhoe theater, Sandusky, O.; Benjamin M. Glick, L. H. Stiglitz, New Colonial theater, Cleveland, O.; P. F. Machamer, New Sigma theater, Tiffin, Ohio; A. R. McCandlish, Olympia theater, Cleveland, O.; S. Aubley, Corona theater, Cleveland, O.; E. S. Bowerfried, Lyceum theater, Cleveland, O.; O. L. Merrifield, Cleveland, O.; Samuel Bullock, Columbia theater, Cleveland, O.; Samuel E. Morris, Crown theater, Cleveland, O.; L. T. Akers, Photo Play World, Cleveland, O.; George W. Heinbuch, Superior theater, Cleveland, O.; Willis DaWalt & Wife, Lion theater, Bellevue, O.; William F. Roth, Royal theater, Bellevue, O.; Frank Beverstock, Grand theater, Mansfield, O.; C. R. N. Morris, Mutual Film Corporation, Cleveland, O.; F. E. Simmons, Dreamland theater, Cleveland, O.; R. E. Jacobs, Lyceum theater, Findlay, O.; R. N. Morris, Mutual Film Corporation, Cleveland O.; N. J. McGuire, Criterion Film Company, Cleveland, O.; L. Israel, Fountain theater, Cleveland, O.; James Delves, Pittsburgh, Pa.; G. W. Sahwar, Pittsburgh, Pa.; I. W. Shearer, Pittsburgh, Pa.; H. J. Mandelbaum, Metropolitan theater, Cleveland, O.; M. Soniar, New York, N. Y.; L. J. Shafranek, Diamond Curtain Company, Cleveland, O.; J. E. Bates, F. M. Sultzburgh, Picture Play House Film Company, Cleveland, O.; C. J. Goeppinger, Melba theater, Cleveland, O.; Ed J. Mock, Motography, Chicago, Ill.; Clyde E. Smith, Mutual Milm Corporation, Toledo, O.; V. J. Bradford, Defiance, O.; Gertrude K. Smith, Cleveland, O.; V. Hardin, Barberton, O.; Harry Levine, Barberton, O.; William Etter, Barberton, O.; Harry L. Hamilton, Barberton, O.; S. H. Barck, Market Square theater, Cleveland, O.; P. M. Kennedy, Colonial theater, Youngstown, O.; Max Stern, Diamond theater, East Liverpool, O.; W. C. Kurzmann, National Carbon Company, Cleveland, O.; James S. Wilkinson, Broadway theater, Cleveland, O.; E. P. Mott, Lyric theater, Wooster, O.; S. N. Lichter, Union Film Company, Cleveland, O.; F. E. Hartzell, Lyric theater, Alliance, O.; W. H. Miller, William A. Robertson, Olympic theater, Barberton, O.; Mrs. D. D. Granger, Karoyn theater, New London, O.; Mr. & Mrs. R. R. Moore, Ideal theater, Akron, O.; Miss C. M. DeGrasse, Pastime theater, Toledo, O.; Mr. M. R. Baker, Toledo, O.; F. J. Schad, Gordon Park theater, Cleveland, O.; J. H. Clark & Son, Opera House, Ashland, O.; Lemotte Smith, Smith Amusement Company, Alliance, O.; F. M. Branch, Medina theater, Medina, O.; R. R. Fitzwater, Carter theater Advertising Company, Cleveland, O.; Frank L. Greenwald, Exclusive Feature Company, Cleveland, O.; C. P. Bricker, Lodi, O.; J. E. Scoffile, Sunbeam theater, Cleveland, O.; G. T. Sharp, Springfield, O.; R. C. Stuefe, Orpheum theater, Canton, O.; E. H. Klueck, Toledo, O.; H. E. Smith, Dallas, Texas.

Mrs. W. J. Slimm, Marquis theater, Cleveland, O.; Henry A. Rosenberger, Cozy theater, Cleveland, O.; P. G. Atsalas, Orpheum theater, Youngstown, O.; B. Feurstone, Faris theater, South Loraine, O.; James H. Peterson, Grand theater, East Palestine, O.; M. E. Moran, Keystone theater, Cleveland, O.; E. S. Nichols, Harkness theater, Clyde, O.; J. A. Martin, L. S. Wisner, Pastime theater, Berea, O.; Samuel Smolin, Family theater, Cleveland, O.; P. Adler, Cleveland, O.; Mrs. S. Shagrin, Delmar theater, Cleveland, O.; Mrs. L. Israel, Globe theater, Cleveland, O.; H. T. Palmer, Guy Wyman, Utopia theater, Painsville, O.; Frank Gross, National theater, Cleveland, O.; Arnold Goodman, East Cleveland, O.; August Caleb, Ezella theater, Cleveland, O.; Henry A. Lustig, Avenue theater, Cleveland, O.; L. H. Becht, Mall theater, Cleveland, O.; D. Warner, Standard Film Company, Cleveland, O.; S. M. Kasse, Empress theater, Akron, O.; Philip Faldfesser, Cleveland O.; G. L. Fleischman, C. G. Fleischman, P. E. Bondy, George Kurtz, Atlas theater, Toledo, O.; D. Adler, Strand theater, Cleveland O.; L. P. Stinchcomb, Park National theater, Cleveland, O.; Ralph A. Hayes, Variety theater, Cleveland, O.; F. H. Schumacher, Alhambra theater, Akron, O.; I. L. Horn, Fremont, O.; H. C. Kliehm, Lawrence theater, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. F. E. Simmons, Dreamland theater, Cleveland, O.; Kit Carson, Enjoy U theater, Cleveland, O.; P. W. Smith, Bridge theater, Cleveland, O.; Edward Kohl, Cleveland, O.; Altoona & West, Cleveland, O.; H. C. Supplee, Lorain theater, Cleveland, O.; Ray L. Griffin, Martins Ferry, O.; M. H. Cohen, Cleveland, O.; W. H. Shull, Martins Ferry, O.; C. E. Hutsenpiller, Virginia theater, Cleveland, O.; Emery N. Downs, Knickerbocker theater, Cleveland, O.

V. L. S. E., INC., CUTS MELON

Twenty Per Cent of Net Profits of Company Divided Among Employees on Pro Rata Basis—Practice Will Continue

Monday last was melon-cutting day at the home office of "The Big Four." On that day there were distributed the checks, representing twenty per cent of the net profits of the company for a period of thirteen weeks from July 12 to October 9, among all the employees who had been with the organization during that time, from the youngest office boy to General Manager Walter W. Irwin.

No one was left out of the share, whose affiliation with the company bridges the dates mentioned, the principle being that all were inter-dependent—that the impression a courteous salesman makes upon a customer is nullified if the 'phone operator is unduly abrupt when that customer calls—that the value of an order is materially lessened if it is improperly handled by the shipping or booking departments—that the general efficiency is impaired if working quarters are not properly cared for.

The directors of the V. L. S. E., therefore, established the unusual precedent of making the office force as well as the sales force eligible, but credited the sales force, because of the creative character of its work, with two shares per dollar of salary of the fund, and the office force with one.

The unit value of each share was fixed by dividing the total number of shares necessary to include all participants of the fund, into the total amount of the disbursement.

It is significant of the spirit of co-operation which apparently prompted the division, however, that the directors made the following statement:

The Board begs leave to enter your lives to the extent of making a personal suggestion, which is this: that each one continue to "cut his cloth" only to the extent of his salary; and that those who do not possess a savings bank account, will establish one with their share of the fund; and with scrupulous care, add to that account the whole of each succeeding distribution, so that this organization may be the means of creating for many, a life capital, the possession of which will be of inestimable satisfaction, and maybe, of unusual benefit, in an unfortunate hour.

This distribution is to be a permanent affair, the division being made every thirteen weeks, or four times a year. It means in reality, a most substantial increase in salary, but the donors are anxious to make it clear that it is not to be considered so, but solely as a token of appreciation of the efforts of the organization, and will in no way affect future advances in wages.

In connection with the whole spirit of co-operation which events have proved is the guiding force of the V. L. S. E., and which is responsible for this division of profits, General Manager Water W. Irwin makes this interesting suggestion to the staff:

And now how can we primarily increase our efforts and efficiency? The answer is, by taking in another partner—the exhibitor. Be fair and honest with him at all times; study all of the conditions of his business, and then, advise and aid him, so that he may dispose of our product, not only at the best possible price, but to the greatest number of people.

In other words, work for him, and thereby for his success.

When our partnership is composed of three—the manufacturers, the sales organization and the exhibitors—then, and not until then, will we possess the strength of Gibraltar.

A salesman's duty is only half performed when he has sold our goods to the exhibitor; the other half, equally as important, is to see to it that the exhibitor resells to his substantial advantage.

In other words, a salesman in our force is not only held responsible for the volume of business he does, and the prices he obtains, but for the degree of success attained by each exhibitor in his territory.

V. L. S. E., Inc., now has a staff of more than two hundred employees, with offices in nineteen cities. It is beginning the second half of its first year this month.

Newspictures for Paramount

"Paramount Newspictures" is the name of the celluloid newspaper which will make its initial appearance on the Paramount program November 8. Sponsored by the Paramount Pictures Corporation and carrying with them the prestige which that statement implies, they will be booked through Paramount exchanges in the best theaters throughout the country which realize the value of the slogan "See What You Read."

Every week one thousand feet of film taken by experts with a new idea in mind will tell a vast public what is going on in the world in a way best calculated to arrest attention.

This Paramount Weekly, according to the plans and specifications of the Paramount Corporation and Walter E. Greene, who is in immediate charge of the venture, will contain many unique ideas and indeed, judging from what has been done in the past by the company which is responsible for it, it is more than likely that the film world will again rub its eyes and say: "Why didn't I think of that?"

Some of the features about which more detailed information will be made public later are claimed to have never before been seen on the screen. The subjects will be culled from the best the world affords.

Binder Interests Chicago Men

On Saturday afternoon, October 23, J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, entertained a score or more of Chicago film folks at a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle. The meeting was called for the purpose of explaining the purpose of the Board of Trade and increasing the membership in that organization among Chicago film men.

Following a delicious luncheon, Mr. Binder explained that already some sixty per cent of the film manufacturers and more than sixty-seven per cent of the prominent exchanges of the country had taken out memberships in the Board of Trade, while more than eight hundred and fifty names had been enrolled in the "Big Six Class" of members which includes such names as Richard Harding Davis, Rex Beach, David W. Griffith, and enables even minor employees of film concerns to have a part in the Board's activities.

Mr. Binder also explained in detail the "function chart" which hung on the wall at his back and illustrated the formation of the Board and the means by which its activities will assist every branch of the motion picture industry. The functions of the Board are to be threefold—legislative, commercial and through publicity channels. Under "legislative" Mr. Binder mentioned the fight which will be waged against censorship wherever it crops up, the opposition to inimical legislation of any character affecting the motion picture industry and things of that character. The publicity function of the Board will concern itself principally with the creation of favorable legislation and the influencing of public opinion, through the appearance in the leading magazines of the country of articles by the world's greatest literary lights, favorable to motion pictures. The commercial function of the Board will include such things as the formation of a mutual insurance company among film men, the establishment of a credit bureau which will be prepared to give the financial standing and responsibility of any given film exhibitor, or manufacturing company.

Following the luncheon and the address by Mr. Binder practically every man in the room who had not already applied for membership in the Board of Trade filled out an application blank and paid over his initiation fee and first year's dues. Among those who attended the luncheon were Messrs. Von Runkel of V. L. S. E., Juddel of Mutual, Magie of Universal, Bell of Bell & Howell, Rock of Vitagraph, Brockell of Famous Players, Pyle of Bartola Musical Instrument Co., Worthington and Redfield of Fox, Beadell of National Waterproof Film, Rothacker, Sawyer and Aldus of Industrial Motion Picture Co., Sweeney of the Exhibitor's League, Myer of the Seeburg Piano Co., Boening of American Cinematograph Co., Mead and Estey of the Motion Picture News, Hildreth of the Billboard and Caward of Motography. Representatives of the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago American were also present.

JUDGE SUSTAINS CHARGES

Holds Motion Picture Players Who Appeared on New York Streets in Costume Were Guilty of Disorderly Conduct

Magistrate Krotel, in the Jefferson Market Court, New York City, last Thursday made an announcement of more than ordinary import to motion picture players and their employers. In effect it was that he would sustain charges and punish actors who in costume tried to do "film stunts" in public thoroughfares, without an especial permit or license. This declaration he made to counsel for George Kleine. The lawyer was trying to explain why Traffic Officer William D. Knealy should not have arrested George Bickel, Dan Crimmons and Max Moree when, on Monday morning, he saw them garbed as regulation pirates, with big mustaches, clanging cutlasses, long-barreled revolvers, and sixteenth century boots, alight from an auto and make their way toward a vacant lot in the vicinity of Fourth avenue and Thirteenth street, where it was afterwards explained it was intended to make a bit of film history.

Knealy, evidently thinking he had caught red handed the band of thieves who had been operating in Manhattan in the guise of motion picture actors, grew considerably excited and blew his whistle loud enough to attract a small army of policemen, who, surrounding the luckless thespians, escorted them to the Mercer street station where bail was quickly supplied.

In court, however, Knealy charged the alleged offenders with disorderly conduct in appearing on a public thoroughfare in masquerade. Magistrate Krotel sustained his charge, found the actors guilty, but suspended sentence.

Bickel is of the team of Bickel & Watson, noted comedians: Crimmons is of the team Crimmons &

Gore, also comedians, and Moree is noted in legitimate drama and vaudeville.

Magistrate Krotel's decision will likely prove vexatious to the many troupes of motion picture actors obliged to pass through the city's streets in stage costume in order to save time, or who must get local color to scenes supposed to be enacted in Greater New York.

An arrangement may be made by which special yearly permits will be issued to Mr. Kleine and other moving picture firms, enabling their employes to perform their necessary duties while in costume without molestation.

Audrey Munson in Thanhouser Feature

From the quiet lanes of New Rochelle comes the news that an art sensation is due in motion pictures. Edwin Thanhouser has engaged Audrey Munson, who is known in the world of the palette, brush and claypile as "The Venus of Washington Square," also as the "Panama-Pacific Girl" and the "Exposition Girl." Miss Munson has done some startling work among painters and sculptors, and Edwin Thanhouser considers her the logical subject for a new kind of film production which he has long had in mind. Not content with causing stage celebrities to migrate "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," he has now saddened the hearts of the Washington Square soft collar and flowing tie contingent by snatching from their midst "Divine Audrey" and he promises that in "Inspiration," which is the title of her first release, he will give the pro-and-con-ers of motion pictures something to talk about. But the supporters of things filmic need have no fear—for the Thanhouser ideal is a lofty one, and he can be trusted to the most delicate task carte blanche.

Audrey Munson in Thanhouser's "Inspiration."

ESSANAY'S BIG OUTDOOR STAGE

While Waiting Completion of Big Addition to Studio, Essanay Directors Are Working on Big Open Air Platform in "Yard"

The great increase in the output of Essanay photoplays and the extra studio space needed to produce its multiple reel features has resulted in the building of a new open-air studio, 200x200 feet, which has just been completed. It was first used by Director Charles J. Brabin in filming "The Raven," taken from Poe's life and his poem of the same title, written by George C. Hazleton and featuring Henry B. Walthall.

In the last three or four months the Essanay company has been forced to augment the staff of directors to meet the output demand for multiple-reel features and the photoplays that are being released through the regular channels.

While work on the new two-story indoor studio is being rushed and it will be completed some time this winter, there was an immediate demand for extra floor space, so the outdoor studio was constructed. The indoor studio will be 350x175 feet and will have the offices of the company on the second floor. It will be the largest enclosed and artificially lighted studio in the world.

It took two weeks to erect the outdoor studio which has a polished floor and joints of hickory supporting heavy tarpaulin curtains which can be manipulated to regulate the lighting. While it has been erected under the pressure of increased business, it will be used permanently, even when the new studio is completed, for interior sets that may demand the peculiar quality of film that can be obtained only by sunlight pictures. The outdoor studio is capable of holding several different sets, allowing many directors to work at the same time.

Willets Scenarioizes Song

"I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier," adapted by Gilson Willets, the famous author, from the Feist song hit, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," will be released on Monday, December 13, as a Selig Red Seal Play in four sensational acts.

Harry Mestayer, the notable stage star, will play the leading role, that of Jerry Warrington, who felt duty call and left mother and sweetheart to go on the firing line in defense of his country. Mr. Mestayer will be supported by Miss Eugenie Besserer and an all star cast of Broadway favorites.

Gilson Willets, inspired by the popular song, has written a strong preachment on the horrors of war and graphically picturizes the sacrifices of wives, mothers, and sweethearts when Mars, the god of war, holds sway.

Thousands of soldiers participate in the battlefield scenes which are said to be most realistic. The slogan of "preparedness" now being discussed is also touched upon in a deft and yet vitally convincing manner.

"I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier" will be released through V. L. S. E., and it is freely predicted that for heart interest, appeal to patriotism, and talented acting, the Selig Red Seal production will be a most exceptional one.

Stricken Soldier Directs Pathe Coloring

It is interesting to note in connection with the four part drama in Pathe color, "The Adventures of a Madcap," that its coloring in the Pathe factories at Vincennes, France, was made possible by a chance happening. The man in charge of the coloring department was fighting at the front when the picture arrived from America. Shortly afterwards he was wounded in the leg and while convalescing, directed the coloring of the picture.

West Must Remain Producing Center

BY E. D. HORKHEIMER*

As to the relative merits of the East and West for producing motion pictures, there is no longer any debate among men foremost in the business. If the silent drama consisted principally of players and properties, the East would undoubtedly be favored. But since cinematographic productions depend more on other considerations—such as scenery, climate, etc. —which cannot be found anywhere to compare with Southern California, from a photographic standpoint, this part of the Pacific coast has naturally become the world's picture producing center.

Ordinarily, a discussion of this subject would be uncalled for, but since the representative of a screen hero who has gone East for a season of work recently declared that New York and its environs are superior in every regard to the "land of sunshine" for film purposes, it is not untimely to set forth a few of the facts in the case once more. Particularly is this true, since it has been variously estimated that between seventy-five and eighty-five per cent of the motion picture plays are now being staged in and about Los Angeles.

Why is it, let me ask to begin with, that all of the biggest American photoplay producers have migrated to the West? The industry had its start in the East, where all the leading manufacturers had their first studios. But it wasn't long until the Biograph, Vitagraph, Selig, Essanay, Universal, Lubin, Kalem, Famous and many others came to Southern California. It is true that some of these still maintain eastern studios; but they have found that for all-the-year-round outdoor work the sunny climate of the Pacific Coast cannot be excelled.

To be sure, the East has some sunshiny weather, but its photographic qualities are nothing like those of Southern California. The sort of sunsets we have out here week in, week out, come about once a year along the Atlantic. Mind you I'm not decrying the East, for I'm an easterner myself. But I realize that the Atlantic seaboard has picture-making difficulties which cannot be satisfactorily overcome.

As for the contention that the East's lack of sunshine can be offset by indoor studio work with artificial lights, no one who knows anything of the niceties of photographic art will maintain that a better picture can be made under artificial lights than with natural light. A substitute is never equal to the genuine article. It is unnecessary to argue this point, because of its obviousness. Furthermore, working under artificial lights is extremely hard on the eyes. It is well known that many players are laid up from the strain. It takes most of them a long while to get used to the brilliant arcs; while some of the best ones never do.

I realize that there are certain times and conditions when artificial lighting becomes necessary in picture making. During the rainy season, most of the western studios resort to it, in order to keep up with their work. But it is never to be preferred to sunlight. In emergencies it will answer. As for the photographic variations sometimes noted in pictures filmed under both conditions, that is the fault of the cameraman.

The critic of the West declared it to be greatly handicapped in the matter of props and costumes available. I would call attention to the fact that for this the Pacific Coast region can hardly be blamed. Rather is it the fault of the particular studio which lacks the equipment necessary to make productions from start to finish.

A motion picture studio should be complete in every detail. Some companies make a practice of renting all of the props and accessories as they need them. Naturally, such manufacturers will be handicapped. But at Balboa we hold it to be wasteful and unbusinesslike to rent articles that are needed constantly.

Pictures, constructed cinematographically, are not merely portraits in action. They must have attractive backgrounds. Save in winter scenes, these must indicate life and verdure. In the East, you get it only a few months out of the year. The rest of the time the trees are bare and the ground is hard and cold. But in Southern California, flowers and foliage never disappear. The supply is constantly renewing. When pinched in this regard, eastern picture producers go south for their exteriors. Those who have worked in that section know full well that it cannot compare photographically with the West.

We are told that the producer is interfered with by western municipalities. Well, what about the way in which New York has driven all the studios off Manhattan Island, just recently? Furthermore, the law there requires all film to be carried in double-lined galvanized iron cases; and it may not be taken in subways, street cars or elevated railroads. Such conditions are hardly advantageous to the screen producer.

Where picture makers have trouble in getting permission to work in public, it is usually because some of their fellows have abused privileges previously extended and made themselves nuisances. Time permits to work in parks and other public places are granted in Los Angeles and vicinity and will always be renewed, during good behavior on the part of the beneficiaries.

You can't photograph on the big estates in the East unless you have access to the owner or submit to the graft of a caretaker. Balboa has never had the least bit of trouble in getting permission to work on the grounds of the most exclusive people in Pasadena, Long Beach and Hollywood. We know of other companies that have the freest entree to the homes and estates of the rich in and about San Francisco and Santa Barbara.

There is some truth in the contention that eastern studios have a greater number of good actors to pick from and can cast types easier, but this advantage is offset by the fact that the players in the West are more experienced before the camera. Good actors on the Pacific Coast never seek for work long. The many studios here are constantly in need of more talent. As for New York's foreign quarters, they are all beginning to show unmistakable signs of Americanization. These must be eliminated, if photographed on the spot. We find it simpler to build sets for such localities, and use trained "extras" of which the West has an army.

*Secretary and Treasurer the Balboa Amusement Producing Company.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that those big producers who have not yet located in the West are now negotiating for sites in or around Los Angeles. We don't have to go two or three hours away for our mountains as the New York producer does. They are in Southern California's back yard; while the Pacific borders the front. Although we have practically perpetual sunshine, the land of snow and ice is so close at hand that all of the Rex Beach and Jack London Alaskan stuff is put on right here.

As for the charge that California climate is enervating, all I can say is that the steady growth of the picture industry in this vicinity doesn't indicate it. As natural as it is for the South to be the center of the cotton industry and Pittsburgh to be the iron mill hub, just so is Southern California the habitat and established home of the cinematographic activities of America. As a proof of this, I need but to cite that all of the real big American pictures have been produced here.

Film plays will continue to be made in other parts of the country, just as there are sporadic examples of all industries everywhere. But let any picture-goer compare the eastern and western screen productions as to setting, costumes, lighting effects, photography and the various other important elements that enter into ideal cinematography; nine out of ten will favor the western-made pictures. By this I do not mean the so-called western dramas featuring frontier life and cowboys, but the strong red-blooded photoplays of everyday and present-day American life.

VOGUE COMPANY GROWING

Priscilla Dean, Famous Ingenue, Engaged by Director France—"Russ" Powell, Lillian Brown Leighton and Wilton Welch Also Signed

Priscilla Dean has been engaged by Producer Charles France as ingenue of the new Vogue comedies. "Pretty Priscilla" her friends call her and in such matters they seldom err.

Miss Dean has had a wealth of stage experience, beginning with child parts in the companies of Joseph Jefferson and James A. Hearne. It was her great beauty and charm and undeniable appreciation of the genuinely humorous that attracted the attention of Producer France and made him enlist her under the Vogue banner.

Surrounding Miss Dean will be as capable a coterie of funmakers as ever caused a laugh anywhere. There will be "Russ" Powell, the gigantic girthed Vogue baby, a sort of infant terrible whom Broadway will remember as the fun-fountain in "The Madcap Duchess" and "The Chocolate Soldier." He weighs 300 pounds, does Russ. Once he fell off to a mere 289 (round house scales) and he was greatly perturbed, yes, greatly. But now he is back to his normal weight, despite which he is as nimble on his feet as a Winter Garden chorus girl at the first rehearsal.

For the grotesque comedy Miss Lillian Brown Leighton has been signed. One of those irresistible laugh-getters is Miss Leighton the kind that "gets" everyone the instant she makes her entrance. Her early comedy training was in the legitimate as was that of William Scott who will play the light parts. He scored successfully under Kelcey and Shannon, and later with Maude Adams he established a reputatin for polite comedy that received the approval of those difficult to please on little old Broadway.

The character parts will be played by Wilton Welch and M. Morante, two of the most capable comedy character leads in the business. As they are required others will be added to the forces at the Vogue Los Angeles studios. Producer France has an established reputation for making pictures that carry logical laughs and that in essence will be the production policy of this new company, releases of which will be on the Mutual program.

Goldie Colwell, who has been appearing in David Horsley's comedy releases since the formation of his present company last May, and who has been leading woman for George Ovey in the Cub Comedies, has been transferred from the Cub organization to Director Jay Hunt's company producing two-reel Centaur Features, another of Mr. Horsley's brands.

Wilton Welch.

Priscilla Dean.
Three new principals of Vogue Company.

Russ Powell.

William Elliott in Pathe Film

"Comrade John," the Pathe Gold Rooster Play for release October 29, is particularly noteworthy in that it features William Elliott, one of Broadway's best known stars, as well as Ruth Roland, who is one of the cleverest leading women in pictures today. This, by the way, is Miss Roland's first appearance in a Gold Rooster Play.

William Elliott.

Mr. Elliott is an unusually versatile man, being musician, painter, writer, producing manager and above all, actor. He first appeared before the public as a boy violinist and later was with a number of stock companies playing juvenile roles. He had hardly attained manhood before he secured an engagement with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon. Later he was with Mary Shaw in "Ghosts," and then with Robert Hilliard. He considers the great training of his career to have been obtained when he was with Richard Mansfield in "The Merchant of Venice," "Beaucaire," "Beau Brummel," "Heidelburg," "The Scarlet Letter," and "Richard the Third."

For some time he was associated with David Belasco in "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Grand Army Man," and "The Music Master." His work in these productions stamped him as among the very greatest of the young actors of America.

Following his marriage to the younger daughter of David Belasco, Mr. Elliott determined to devote himself to producing plays instead of acting them. "The Governor's Lady," and "The Drums of Oude," were two successes identified with his name.

SECOND PALLAS SUBJECT

Dustin Farnum in "The Call of the Cumberlands," by Charles Noville Buck, Next Offering of New Paramount Producers.

Immediately following the completion of its initial subject, "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington, starring Dustin Farnum, Pallas Pictures, the new Paramount producing organization of Los Angeles, became active on its second subject, an adaptation of Charles Neville Buck's well known romantic drama, "The Call of the Cumberlands."

For the Cumberland mountain scenes the entire company has been taken up to the Thousand Pines, a favorite elevation for Californian mountain climbers and called by them "The rim of the world." It is in the heart of the famous Bear Valley country, whose mountain lakes are exquisitely Swiss and whose scenic charms, its 2,000 feet precipices and canyons are known to painters all over the world. Here the producers have chartered a big hotel, which figures prominently as a fashion center during the summer season and recently closed for the year but reopened for the Dustin Farnum picture. In addition to the hotel, twenty cottages have been taken over by Julia Crawford Ivers, who is directing the production, in order to accommodate a large company of players, cameramen and attendants to the caravan of motor cars and five-ton trucks on the upper trails of the San Bernardino mountain.

Under the direction of Miss Ivers the mountain roads have been rail-fenced in replicas of Abe Lincoln's time, cabins in keeping with the story have been erected and hundreds of other details preparatory to the actual staging of the scenes have just been completed.

Supporting Dustin Farnum in "The Call of the Cumberlands" is an exceptionally strong cast including such well known screen favorites as Myrtle Stedman, Winifred Kingston, Herbert Standing, Page Peters, Howard Davies, Dick Le Strange, Joe Ray and Virginia Foltz, the well known Los Angeles society woman who in this production returns to her former love, the drama. The camera work is under the supervision of Dal Clawson, known as the "prize cameraman of the Coast."

Sarah Bernhardt in "Jeanne Dore"

One of the big productions of the current screen season is the appearance of Sarah Bernhardt in the picturization of "Jeanne Dore," adapted by Mr. Louis Mercanton from the play by Tristan Bernard, and which is being released by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

This picture was produced under the personal direction of Mr. Mercanton, who was responsible for the two other pictures in which Madame Bernhardt has appeared, "Queen Elizabeth" and "Adrienne L'Couvreure."

One of the attractions of the new film is its perpetuation of the facial expression of this famous actress of the present age. Future generations will not be able to say of the histrionic artists of our present, as we have to say of the actors and actresses antecedent to ours, that we have no direct or persuasive record of the means by which they exerted so powerful an influence over their contemporaries. "Jeanne Dore" not only tells its own tale, but it enables us to make a study of everything except the voice that appertains to the method and the fascination of the Rachel of her age, from the elegant play of her features to her mode of gesture and pose. She herself has spoken of the power of the eye. "The eye," she says, "is the mirror of the brain, and the cinema has given to eye-play an infinitely greater scope, power and importance. A true artist needs no audience to assist her art." Well, now we have Bernhardt's eye-play under the searching analysis of the camera.

Sarah Bernhardt in a scene from "Jeanne Dore."

"Jeanne Dore" was the play in which this great actress was appearing at the Sarah Bernhardt Theater in Paris when she was compelled to undergo her recent operation. She considers this story her favorite of recent years, in that it offers her the fullest possible scope for the projection of her own individuality.

Another Team Breaks Into Pictures

One after another the stage favorites are taking to the screen. This time Tom Waters has succumbed to the motion picture epidemic, taking his wife, May Wallace, with him. They are engaged in making a one act comedy for the Gaumont company at Flushing, L. I. This is called "Does It Pay to Advertise?" It will be released on the Mutual program November 7. In this connection it is interesting to note that "Stuffy" Davis, the well-known Broadway press agent, is appearing in the same company as himself. Tom Waters is one of the old-timers, and his broad comedy is admirable for screen purposes. His first engagement professionally was as pianist for the late Bill Nye. After touring with the humorist, Waters went with "One of the Bravest," at that time one of the most popular attractions on the road. Musical comedy has been the medium through which he has entertained America, and as a comedian he has played in some of the most famous productions of the last two decades. Among his later successes are the leading humorous roles in "The Pink Lady," "The Candy Shop," and "Coming Thro' the Rye." At the head of his own company he starred for nine years in his own play, "The Mayor of Laughland." For this play Mr. Waters wrote the music also.

Thomas Waters.

Mrs. Waters began her theatrical career in that bucolic yet thrilling melodrama, "Only a Farmer's Daughter." Quitting the drama after a few seasons, she went in for farce comedy where her laugh-provoking abilities were soon recognized. Her greatest success in this line, perhaps, was with Donnelly and Girard in "The Geezer." To show her versatility Mrs. Waters next essayed comic opera, appearing as one of the three daughters in "Wang." Later she was prominent in the support of Weber and Fields.

Pavlowa Film Screened

Anna Pavlowa made her film debut last Friday evening when three thousand people, guests of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, filled Clune's

The Duke and Fenella in Universal's "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

Auditorium, the largest theater in Los Angeles, to witness the private view of "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

Mayor Sebastian and other city and county officials were present, together with the leaders of Los Angeles society and other prominent citizens of the community. It is said to have been the largest and most representative gathering ever assembled to witness a similar performance.

A full orchestra accompanied the picture, which consists of eleven reels, with appropriate music and the general verdict of those privileged to be present was that it is the greatest picture recently released.

Lois Weber, who adapted "The Dumb Girl of Portici" for the screen, and Phillips Smalley, who assisted her in directing the picture, were both present and heartily congratulated. Pavlowa's interpretation of the role of Fenella excited constant admiration and the excellence of the supporting cast, which included Douglas Gerrard, Edna Maison, Laura Oakley, Rupert Julian, Betty Schade and Hart Hoxie, was highly commended.

Equitable Signs Gerda Holmes

Gerda Holmes, whose work with Thanhouser, Essanay and other feature producers during the past few years attracted the attention of numerous other concerns of equal importance, announces through her manager that she has contracted to appear under the management of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation and that within the next two weeks she will leave for New York to assume her new duties.

Miss Holmes, who made her first big mark in Klaw & Erlanger's production of "The Round Up," in which she played the featured feminine role, was drafted from that production by the film field because of her work. Her appearance in films was the means of such rapid advancement that after a year with Essanay, during which she played leading business with Francis X. Bushman and Richard Travers, she left to star in "The Victory of Virtue." This work caused Equitable to contract for her services.

Attention to Detail Makes for Success

BY E. H. CALVERT*

WHEN beginning a production, the first thing I do is to study my story carefully from every angle, see what changes I deem necessary to improve the script, if any, then cast it, carefully considering the various types of characters required. Perhaps it was my experience as a soldier in the United States army for twelve years that makes me realize the importance of system, for I consider it one of the greatest essentials in the business of motion pictures, as well as any other kind of work. However, no matter what leads me to believe this, I put the thought into action with everything I do, thus saving myself a lot of unnecessary labor and at the same time improving my results upon the screen. Detail is another important item with me, and I think every producer should make the small matters concerning his productions stand out as well as the work of the stars who take the leading parts in his story. The time has passed when motion pictures attract only the cheaper and more ignorant patrons, and in each reel I produce my aim is to make it of the highest standard in every minute particular, so that even the best educated, the best informed, the most cultured and the greatest travelers can find no flaw in the settings, locations, backgrounds and properties used.

E. H. Calvert.

If my story is laid in foreign lands or represents any particular period of the world's history, I read, study and acquaint myself with everything pertaining to the country or year of my script. In my estimation there is not a subject in the whole set of Encyclopedia Britannica with which every director in the film business should not be familiar. Being blessed with an unusually good memory, I seldom forget things once learned, and make it my business to constantly keep adding to my storehouse of knowledge for the sake of my productions. The study of human nature is indispensable and I find myself constantly going about the world probing into the characters of people of every type, for I never can tell, a week ahead of time, but that I may need just such an individual in my next picture.

When working on "Crimson Wing," which I consider my biggest picture up to the present date, I used 1,500 men in some of the scenes and played the lead myself. I set out with the determination to make it look as if it had really been produced in France and Germany. Even to the wine bottles I gave my undivided attention, for I know, as others of you do who have ever given foreign atmosphere any consideration, that there is a certain kind of wine put up in these countries in bottles of a peculiar shape, that cannot be imitated by any American brand. Therefore I had these bottles made especially to order with as much importance attached to them as I used in the selection of the uniform I wore in my various scenes.

By being enabled to make use of the estates of Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, the author of the story, and of Mr. McCormick, my sets and locations were as full of local color as if I had taken my entire company of players to Europe and made the picture there.

Having been an actor myself for a number of years, both on the legitimate stage and vaudeville as well as before the camera, I know just what expressions and pantomiming will get ideas over, and being quite easy to imitate, I show each player just how to go through his or her part with excellent results. Another thing my past experiences of the stage have taught me is that by treating my people as human beings and equals, assuring them I have the utmost confidence in their brains and ability to play the parts in which they find themselves cast, I am able to get them to do their best acting.

When I first started in as a director, I made a study of every department of the business. I went to the negative department, the developing and printing rooms, the carpenter shop, the scenic artist's bench, the scenario department and the property rooms and made myself thoroughly familiar with the work of the people employed in each, so that in the end when I discover mistakes in my work when it is flashed upon the screen in the projection room, it does not take me long to find out just where the fault lies and how to correct it.

Director E. H. Calvert superintending the erection of scenes for Essanay's "The Man Trail."

I enjoy experimenting with the camera and the negative departments for new effects, and it was by doing this that I was the first director to use a double tint as in "Her Trip to New York." The moving camera and the double diaphragm were also two of my pet inventions which I bring into use quite often and which I have noticed have been adopted by others.

*Producer with Essanay Film Company.

By using the back lighting, I find I obtain excellent results in photography, and with this thought uppermost in my mind when going out in search of exterior locations, as well as with my work under the lights, I get some very satisfactory effects.

That I have a good, strong story with a punch to it is a matter of decided choice with me, but if the story is not up to my usual standard, I can manage to make the picture worth while by bringing in an unusual lot of artistic scenic and lighting effects, for if an audience sees something of merit in these little things, the eye is delighted to such an extent that the brain does not realize there is something missing in plot.

I consider it of the utmost significance that a motion picture director has had some previous stage experience for the sake of knowing the dramatic art to a better advantage. This is one profession in which few if any real young fellows can excell, for the longer we live and the more we learn in every walk of life, the better able we are to handle the situations in the story; and the more experience we have gone through, the more we read, travel and mingle with all sorts and classes of humanity, the better fitted we are to reproduce upon the screen stories dealing with these things.

Scene from "The Slim Princess," a Calvert production.

What success I may have attained with my profession, I want to share with my casts, my carpenters, my property men, the people in the developing and printing rooms, my camera men and writers, for without their able assistance I never could have obtained the satisfactory results that have been ours to enjoy.

Another source of help to me comes from my willing young assistant, Bertram Bates, who enters into my work with as much earnestness as I do myself. His help is invaluable in getting my work to the screen as I would have it.

I have had people who were watching me direct a scene remark upon the fact that I go about it quietly, and they ask me if I never find it necessary to raise my voice and use language for which theatrical producers seem to be famous, and my answer to them is always that it is a useless waste of energy. For my people exert themselves to do their best as long as I am patient, and what more can I ask?

Nobody ever obtained satisfactory results from me by mistreatment, so why should I expect it of others? Besides we keep young longer if we never allow ourselves to get fussed up over small matters, and learn to handle even the bigger problems of life in a calm, determined manner.

One thing that I invariably insist upon in my productions is that the people in the cast go about their business slowly and with deliberation; for I have observed too many badly blurred effects caused by actions that were too hasty.

As previously stated, I consider "The Crimson Wing" my biggest picture, while "The Man Trail" is probably my best. Others that have given me satisfaction are "The Masked Wrestler," "Under Royal Patronage," "Mongrel and Master," "The Hour and the Man," "Trinkets of Tragedy," "The Song in the Dark," "The Circular Path," "The Outer Edge," "The Reaping," "Affinities" and the "Tish Series.."

My work is a part of my very being; I keep it on my mind night and day. I take it to bed with me, get up with it, eat with it, enjoy recreations that will afford me assistance, and in fact am ever on the alert for some new ideas and experiences that will help me as a director of the art of motion pictures.

TOURNEUR HEADS NEW FIRM

Great New Studios and Factory in Fort Lee Will Open About December 1 for the Making of Big Photodramas

With "Quality, not Quantity, as its motto, a new film manufacturing concern, the Paragon Film, Inc., will open a great studio, now nearing completion, and a factory at Fort Lee, N. J., about December 1. At the head of the organization, which is backed by ample capital, is M. Maurice Tourneur, the eminent French producer of motion pictures, who came to this country from Paris a year ago and has staged some of the most artistic screen productions seen in this country. His office in the New Jersey corporation is the dual one of vice-president and general manager. The Paragon will release its output through the World Film Corporation, with which M. Tourneur has been associated.

"The new company," said M. Tourneur in an interview, "will enable me to present photodramas of five or more reels each, along special lines, which I have long felt would be very profitable. We will not attempt to turn out a million feet a week, nor even from thirty to forty reels, as nothing really artistic can be assured to such an output. Our intention is to produce about twenty-four big five-reel feautres a year and perhaps three or four larger ones, which will mean from 10,000 to 15,000 feet of film a month. We are certain of a market for such an output and we expect to produce better pictures than have yet been made. This will make the exhibitors our friends.

"The new plant is ideally located in the center of the woods, near the Universal plant, and it will contain many original improvements, the effect of which will be felt by those seeing our pictures. We have already contracted for the best French directors in America, the best original scenarios and adaptations from the recent plays of the most successful theatrical managers, and for the best American actors, whom I regard as superior to any we have in Europe.

"Although we have gone so far with our plans, the door is still open and always will be for new talent and for original artistic suggestions. While we start from a high point, we feel that we have much to learn, and our policy will be one of progress, and not of satisfaction to continue with what we have accomplished. I detest a crowded or a noisy studio and I feel that these two conditions have held back the motion picture more than any other factors. I shall have but three or at most four directors beside myself, and these will have plenty of room and privacy for their work. I shall try to eliminate rush, as time is most important to the artistic creator in any form of endeavor.

"With the absence of noise and trouble, caused by imperfect system, I think I can do away with all the nervousness which has so often proved fatal to the production of the high-class drama. I have invented and adapted means for new and correct lighting, one of the chief requisites for convincing screen results. The greatest care will be taken in the selection of our casts. Our successes already in that particular will testify to our ability in that direction.

"We will not hesitate to spend money to secure desired results, as our directors have been so carefully chosen as to make them worthy of the highest trust. They will not be hampered in any way. They will not have to wait and keep their actors waiting for hours while a scene is being set, for there will be stages enough to have these all set at night, so that the work on the actual making of the picture will begin the first thing in the morning, while all are fresh and can give the best that is in them. In this way, instead of devoting most of the day to the mechanical work and a small part to the artistic, the entire day will be given over to the acting, thus obtaining the coveted prize of director and actor alike, time."

Next Great Northern Release

The next release of the Great Northern Film Company entitled "A Woman's Honor" is a modern society drama in four parts.

With absorbing interest it tells the story of the marriage to Captain Ross of Hilda Thurmer, whose father estimated to be immensely wealthy, is bankrupt. Believing his daughter to be well taken care of, Thurmer ends his life. The suicide soon reveals the true state of the deceased's finances and scandalous circumstances are exposed. The captain is enraged and, at the advice of Prince Albert, abandons his wife. Hilda is quickly turned from an innocent, trusting girl into a bitter, vindictive woman, whose life henceforth is to be devoted to getting revenge upon the man who has abandoned her in the hour of her trouble. She obtains an engagement to appear upon the vaudeville stage and the premier performance the prince occupies a prominent box. Fascinated by Hilda's beauty he seeks to renew the acquaintance and Hilda is quick to grasp the opportunity thus presented. She ensnares the sensuous prince, who purchases her former home and presents her with it.

Scene from Great Northern's "A Woman's Honor."

At an evening reception given by the prince at Hilda's home among the guests bidden is her former husband. It is on this occasion that Hilda obtains the revenge she has been seeking. After that she breaks her relations with the prince. To gain surcease from her wretchedness she takes to drugs. But out of the depths of vice a glorious love comes to her in the devotion of Paul Davis, an artist, who brings her consolation for the sufferings and disappointments of her early life. The character of Hilda is admirably portrayed by Miss Rita Sacchetto, the famous Great Northern star.

METRO'S CANADIAN PREMIER

Valli Valli, Who Appeared in Person, and Metro Feature Given Ovation at Imperial Theater of Montreal

Metro pictures made a Canadian debut by turning away over ten thousand patrons from the Imperial theater, Montreal, on Monday night, October 18. Great preparations had been made for the occasion, some of the leading people of the whole province were present, and congratulations poured in through hundreds of telegrams.

When Manager Howard Conover and the officers of Metro Pictures Limited came down to the theater at seven o'clock, they found the police reserves had been called out by the theater employees, and every seat in the house taken. By eight o'clock, Bleury street was packed so that cars could not be run through it, and hundreds of autos and carriages were lined up, till it resembled the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

Most of the distinguished visitors were forced to wait until the second show began, and when "The High Road" came on the screen for the second time, a well known society editor declared that it was the most distinguished assemblage ever seen in a Montreal theater. Metro in Canada is controlled by a group of the leading financiers of Montreal, and at the formal opening on Monday there were over fifty titled personages present. Certainly there has never before been such a gathering of the nobility at any exhibition of motion pictures.

After an introduction by Alderman Boyd, a leading city official, Miss Valli Valli came on the stage in person, and told the audience that it was one of the happiest moments of her life, as she felt that she was among her own people. She told them that her brother was at the front, fighting for his king and country, and that her every sympathy was with Britain in the war. Cheers interrupted her again and again, and when she spoke of the Patriotic Scenario Contest now being conducted in Canada, to encourage the writing of a Canadian scenario to be made in Canada, the applause was deafening.

She said that motion pictures were the greatest of educators, and that the patriotic picture, when produced, would doubtless accomplish much by arousing national enthusiasm to aid recruiting, which is its principal object. Next she was presented with several huge bunches of American beauties, and then, as she was making her exit, a member of the staff of Metro Pictures Limited came forward with a flower basket of sterling silver, three feet tall, which he presented to Miss Valli on behalf of Metro Pictures Limited and Herbert Lubin, its managing director. The house went wild in its applause, and was delighted when it was announced that an additional surprise was in store for the audience in the personal appearance of Edward Brennan, the popular screen favorite, who supported Miss Valli in "The High Road." He was presented with a silver cigarette case, and in his speech dwelt on the distinctive qualities of Metro pictures, their list of stars, and their masterly directors. He read a telegram from John W. Noble, who directed "The High Road" and finished with a few happily chosen remarks that literally brought down the house.

The occasion was certainly an auspicious one from every standpoint. It is interesting to note that the management of the Imperial theater radically changed its policy to bring in Metro pictures, raising prices until the best seats were 50 cents, instead of 25 cents as heretofore. A beautiful stage setting was provided to show off the new program to the best advantage, the Astor roof garden being duplicated most effectively, with the orchestra on the stage. "The High Road" as a picture received a great deal of applause, and the Montreal newspapers on the following morning were high in their praise of the whole event.

After the theater party, a banquet was tendered to Miss Valli, at which the leading financial boards, newspapers and military were represented. It emphasized the new era being entered into for the picture trade in Canada, and indicated the spirit of progressiveness which marks the new company.

Musical Score for "An Alien"

"Playing the pictures" is an expression that has long been used by the gentlemen who banged the pianos in the nickelodeons of the past. Today orchestras are taking their place in such houses as those in which Paramount pictures are booked, and orchestra leaders who formerly considered the film an offence against art have seen the light, together with the great majority of the theater-going public.

A new road is opening to them as photoplays become more and more worthy the name and photo-operas follow the lead set by the Lasky Feature Play Company in presenting Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen."

The recent announcement of musical scores for Paramount pictures was made after the successful arrangement of a score for a picture which has since caused a sensation throughout the country, and is now booked only through Paramount exchanges, "An Alien," produced with George Beban in the title role, by Thomas H. Ince.

Daniel Dore who was in charge of the orchestra at the Astor theater presentation arranged the score which can now be obtained through application to the New York office of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

The value of a sympathetic musical accompaniment has been frequently demonstrated in the case of big feature productions, but few offerings have sent this lesson home so strongly as "An Alien."

After giving full credit to Thomas Ince's masterful screen technique, and George Beban's gripping portrayal, one must also spare a breath to praise the composer who is responsible for the arrangement of the special music. It meets accurately the changing moods of the producer, keeps pace with the tempo of the action, and heightens the achievements of the players.

But music is not the only thing that is well done in the presentation of "An Alien" since special attention has been paid to the accessories and aids furnished exhibitors by the Paramount exchanges handling it.

A particularly attractive window card, a specially large and elaborate press sheet, an unusual folder, and a six-sheet might be mentioned in this connection. It is interesting to note that since "An Alien" was first presented, two new Paramount exchanges have been opened, the Famous Players Film Service, 532 Walnut street, Cincinnati, and Famous Players Film Service, 278 Jefferson avenue, East, Detroit.

Eleanor Brown Now with Thanhouser

A recent and mirthful addition to the Thanhouser forces at New Rochelle, N. Y., is Eleanor Brown, one of the prettiest and most thoroughly girlish girls on the screen. "Brownie," as she has been dubbed by her fellow-workers, although not quite eighteen years of age, is already enrolled in the stock ranks, and has a good start towards wide popularity with an irresistible personality paving the way and ability and willingness backing her up.

Eleanor Brown.

Miss Brown is a New York girl, and evidently intends continuing to be one, judging from her recent purchase of a round of commutation tickets between New Rochelle and Manhattan. Her first appearance in motion pictures was made in "Cupid of the Olden Time," a Thanhouser subject in which she played one of the leads, Morris Foster taking the other.

Previous to this Miss Brown peered at the country's millions from the front covers of the Saturday Evening Post, Cosmopolitan, Metropolitan and other national publications on which she gained a place through the pens of Penryhn Stanlaws, Howard Chandler Christy, Harrison Fisher and several other artists of note for whom she posed. In stature, "Brownie" is little more than five-foot-four, but she is bubbling over with life and fun, has an unlimited store of contagious smiles, is athletic, and has a personality whose charm never fails to captivate.

Ince Stages Sensational Naval Battle

U. S. CRUISER PARTICIPATES

WHAT will in all likelihood be regarded as the most sensationally realistic battle ever staged for motion pictures was fought in the waters off San Clemente Island this week, when Producer Thomas H. Ince allowed a U. S. cruiser to sink a specially purchased bark for some scenes of a production now in the process of making.

The battle was fought in full view of nearly a thousand persons who sailed out into the Pacific aboard yachts and launches from San Diego. It lasted more than two hours, during which time some 6,000 feet of film were exposed by the nine camera-men employed to photograph the spectacle.

The vessel which was sacrificed for purposes of motion picture realism was the Bowhead, famous for many years on the Pacific Coast as a whaling bark. The vessel which made the attack was the U. S. armored cruiser San Diego, which is now lying in San Diego harbar. Ince bought the Bowhead several months ago and immediately set a crew of men at work, under the direction of Mechanical Director Tom Brierly, converting the craft into a warship of the Bleucher battle cruiser type. The cost of this work, including the purchase price of the vessel, approximated $18,000. Dummy smokestacks and military masts were built and the entire hull was armored.

Under the direction of Producer Ince, fifty men went from Inceville to San Diego to assist in the undertaking. One crew was under the wing of Business Manager E. H. Allen, the other under J. Parker Reed, while Ince, himself, acted as supervisor. The comera-men were dispatched, each to a different boat, so that all points of vantage might be covered. One positioned himself aboard the San Diego; another aboard the torpedo boat destroyer Perry; another aboard the Paul Jones; another aboard the U. S. tugboat Harris; another aboard John D. Spreckels' private yacht. The rest found acceptable accommodations aboard divers smaller craft plying about in the harbor.

Shortly after noon the Bowhead was towed out to sea and the two torpedo boat destroyers took up their respective positions as her protectors. Then Ince gave the order for action and the San Diego, her decks cleared, began firing on the Bowhead at a range of 12,000 yards with her eight-inch guns.

The first salvo from the turret guns struck the aftermast and fore-funnel of the Bowhead, smashing them into kindling wood and hurling the splintered mass for a distance of 200 feet into the sea.

Closing in at top speed, the San Diego then began firing her six and eight inch batteries simultaneously and shortly thereafter the Bowhead became a battered, helpless derelict. Fires started both fore and aft and continued with unabated fury until the only mark the gunners on the San Diego had to aim at was the column of smoke pouring from the charred and blackened hull.

Although filled with several hundred tons of rock and sand, the famous old whaling craft did not sink until a volley of eight-inch projectiles, fired at close range, ripped open the hull. The craft then sank, stern first, in fifteen fathoms of water.

Mirror Signs Opie Read

Captain Harry Lambart, director-general of the Mirror Films, Inc., who arrived in Chicago last week accompanied by Jack Cunningham, publicity representative of the same company, has already signed a contract whereby Opie Read, the novelist, will write original scenarios exclusively for the Mirror company.

Captain Lambart is in the West in the interests of his company and there are said to be important reasons for his presence there in addition to those which might surround a simple business trip. It has been rumored that there are more contracts to be signed and that there is property in the West on which the Mirror executive board has its eye.

Captain Lambart is stopping at the Congress hotel

Gunners of U. S. cruiser San Diego, getting the range of the bark, Bowhead, during motion picture battle staged by Thomas H. Ince, sixty miles off the coast of Southern California.

Gunners of U. S. cruiser San Diego watching the sinking of the bark "Bowhead" following the motion picture battle staged by Thomas H. Ince, sixty miles off the coast of Southern California.

with Mrs. Lambart. He would neither affirm nor deny the story that he was going on to the Coast on the trail of other persons whom the Mirror wants in its business.

The deal with Mr. Read was made over the luncheon table at the Press Club a day or two after Captain Lambart and Mr. Cunningham arrived in town and the papers were signed that day. Mr. Read has seen one of his stories on the screen, but he has never written for pictures. He will do human interest stories of every day American life for the Mirror and will begin work in a few weeks.

Jewell Hunt Joins Vitagraph

Miss Jewell Hunt is the latest member of the Vitagraph Company's stock players. Hitherto unknown to either the legitimate stage or the screen, she is considered a veritable "find" and is destined to rise to the highest ranks of her profession. As a dancer in New York society, however, she has already made an enviable reputation for herself, and with the terpsichorean art as her passion, the term "The Dancing Girl of Motion Pictures" is bound to be applied to her sooner or later and will likely stick to her through the big career that is ahead of her.

Jewel Hunt.

She was one of the first to properly interpret the modern dances and under the patronage of a number of society women, she conducted the Dolly Varden Studio, at Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, Manhattan, where she numbered among her clientele many of the "400." She became one of the leading exponents of up-to-date dancing and originated the Dolly Varden waltz and other attractive figures that found their following among the best dancers.

During her brief time at the Vitagraph plant, she has shown a remarkable aptitude and a thorough understanding of the roles she has played. She is soon to be featured in productions that require her dancing ability as well as the emotional powers she possesses.

A scene from the Broadway Universal feature, "The Long Chance."

Paramount Secures Donald Thompson

Leaving the port of New York on the liner St. Paul, with the statement that by the time he reaches Athens, Greece will be in the war, Donald C. Thompson, expert photographer and globe trotter, has set out for the Balkans in the interest of two organizations of importance in their particular fields, the Paramount Pictures Corporation and the Leslie-Judge Company.

Since the advent of the motion picture, the "camera-reporter" has become more and more significant among the world's newsgatherers. This twenty-six year old Kansan was one of the first to realize the possibilities of the new branch of "the game." At the Baltimore Democratic convention three years ago he took his first flier into the films. The result was such that he added a motion picture camera to his photographic stock and freelanced to such good purpose that he became a charter member in the Unusual Angle Club and distinctly welcome in the offices of the editors.

A confirmed wanderer, he was in Canada at the outbreak of the war and securing a permit from General Hughes was able to obtain exclusive photographs of the Canadian contigent. Later he went to France on a freight ship, narrowly escaping demolition when a careless German bomb just missed the tramp steamer on which he did odd jobs for his passage, since mere money meant nothing when it came to getting inside the lines.

With the English on the continent, Mr. Thompson took some of the most remarkable pictures of the entire war. For seven days and nights he was under steady fire at the retreat from Mons. When asked whether or not filming the battle was as dangerous as fighting he shrugged his shoulders, and said: "Yes, I suppose it is, but if you're going to be killed you will be, so why worry?" His one idea is to get the pictures just as the born reporter thinks of nothing but his "story." He is quiet and matter of fact in speech and manner and yet he has done things few men have more than dreamed of.

In London he acted as correspondent for the New York World, and later joined the Belgian army. Having been at one time or another with the English, French, Belgians, Germans, Turks, Russians, Serbians and Bulgarians he has had a unique opportunity to study the methods of them all. "While helping Weigle take the Chicago Tribune's German war pictures, he said, "I was wounded, but after a time in the hospital was soon up and at it again."

Since exclusive rights to the films he takes have been secured by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Mr. Thompson will be one of the many camera-correspondents of the Paramount Newspictures.

The application of the Selig Polyscope Company for the registration of the Red Seal trademark for the Selig feature plays released through V. L. S. E., has been granted by the United States Patent Office.

Mutual Companies Unusually Active

BIG PRODUCTIONS FORTHCOMING

THE announcement of extensive plans for the enlargement and increase of activity of various of the Mutual Film Corporation's producing companies comes from the home office simultaneously with that of a number of photodramas extraordinaire which will appear in the near future in the Mutual's new program. Progress in all its branches has attended the advent of the Mutual's new regime, and with its new program practically complete, save for the final arrangements concerning "Vogue" comedies which will be forthcoming in a few days, new high marks for motion picture quality and efficient service are being established by the Mutual every day.

Announcement of the most recently perfected plan of changes in equipment and working arrangements comes from the Gaumont studio at Flushing, L. I. In order to handle its four Mutual brands, the Gaumont company will open up a winter studio in South Jacksonville, Fla.

Gaumont directors leaving for Jacksonville, Fla., where photoplays will be made all winter. Left to right, top line, Fritz Orlamand; William F. (Silent Bill) Haddock, Richard Gerrick, Edwin Middleton, Directors. Lower line, William Chamberlain and Allan Robertson.

On November 1, a company of sixty members of the Gaumont forces, players, three directors and technical men will leave for the south on the Clyde line, taking advantage of the trip down to film a photoplay on the boat. The studio will be located at the well equipped "Dixieland" theater grounds, which will serve as headquarters for exterior work all over the state. An invitation has been extended to F. G. Bradford, the general manager of the company, by the St. Augustine Board of Trade, to send his players to the picturesque city, and during the winter at least one of the three companies will go there. Palm Beach, Fort Meyers and other places along the coast will also be included in their itinerary.

While the two drama companies and one comedy company are busy in the south, important changes will be made in the studio at Flushing, which will, nevertheless, not interfere with the work of picture progress there. The personnel of the going and remaining forces has not been chosen. The plans are to keep at least one company—a comedy company—at work at Flushing.

The Rialto star feature will be made in Florida, the stars chosen for each production being sent down to the south by boat for their short engagements. Important Rialto releases scheduled for the Mutual Program in the near future are "The New Adam and Eve," a photodrama modeled after the great story by Nathaniel Hawthorne, in which Grace Valentine plays the lead, "The Devil's Darling," featuring Francine Larrimore, and an exquisite colored romantic picture, "A Prince of Yesterday," the release date of which will be announced later.

Other well known Broadway figures who are at present working at the studio are Cissy Fitzgerald, Tom Waters, May Wallace, John Daly Murphy, Fayette Perry and Alice Dovey.

Thirty thousand dollars is being expended by the Thanhouser company for a glass studio at Jacksonville, Fla., which will be ready for occupation on December 1. At that time some of the New Rochelle contingency will go south, where the beautiful scenery of Florida, the West Indies and the Bermudas will be used as the setting for one and multiple reel drama and comedy for the Mutual. Simultaneously, two companies will go to the Hudson Bay country to produce dramas of life in the frozen north. Activities will by no means slacken in New Rochelle.

Two Thanhouser Master-Pictures have just been completed, and will be released in the near future. One is the wild, picturesque story of the Irish coast, in which Geraldine O'Brien, the beautiful actress who was seen last season on Broadway in "The Miracle Man," plays the lead, entitled "His Wife." This will be released October 28. The other is "Inspiration," a picture of New York's Bohemia, telling the life story of Audrey Munson, the famous artist's model, who is known as "the Panama-Pacific Girl," because it is she who posed for most of the works of sculpture and painting decorating the buildings at the current exposition at San Francisco.

While the American Film Corporation announces no important immediate changes in production or equipment, it is sending to the Mutual program of November 11, a Master-Picture which will be of more than passing interest to the throngs of Americans who enjoyed it as a play. It is "The End of the Road," a picturization of that play by H. Grattan Donnelly, which first went to the public under the title of "Carolina."

The most recent addition to the David Horsley players, announcement has just come, is Irving Cummings, the leading man of the Mutual's great serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," whose daring work as "Arthur Stanley" has marked him as a photoplayer of extraordinary talent.

Another Master-Picture which will be released as a special in the Mutual program on November 7, is "The Seventh Noon," in which Ernest Glendinning, the popular young actor plays the leading role.

Grace Valentine with Gaumont

After a long search and a hard one to find the right actress to play the role of "Eve" in the forthcoming Rialto Star feature, "The New Adam and Eve," which Richard Garrick is producing at the Gaumount studio for the regular Mutual program, Grace Valentine, the beautiful Broadway star, has been chosen to play the part. There were hundreds of applicants, but the casting required great discrimination, since "Eve" must be possessed of an almost classic beauty of form and face and of unusual intelligence to fit her for the part in the modern adaptation for the screen of Nathaniel Hawthorne's story. The role of "Eve" which Miss Valentine will play in the Mutual release is somewhat reminiscent of her part in "Yosemite," in which she followed Laurette Taylor some time ago. As the whimsical first feminine resident of the Garden of Eden, clothed in a fascinating garment of wild flowers and leaves, she is turned loose in the modern world as it is today, Miss Valentine will be very charming. Her face is unusually expressive. One can well imagine that for a clever interpretation of the curiosity of Eve when she sees the inventions of dress and science of today is required an actress of real ability. Grace Valentine was borne in Springfield, Ohio, on Valentine Day. Her real name is Grace Snow, but because she was such a pleasant valentine to her family, they always called her that. She decided to take that name when she went on the stage.

Grace Valentine.

Nance O'Neil with Lubin

Through the earnest efforts of Messrs. Singhi and Lowry of the Lubin Company, Nance O'Neil, the great American emotional actress, has been persuaded to abandon her contemplated theatrical tour and has signed a contract with the Lubin Company for her appearance in a series of feature pictures to be released through the V. L. S. E., Inc., offices.

What the vehicles will be in which Miss O'Neil will make her appearance under the Lubin banner, has not as yet been definitely decided upon, and before making decision there will be a careful consideration of the stock of motion picture rights at hand in the scenario department. In addition each of the following writers of the Lubin staff, Anthony P. Kelley, Louis Reeves Harrison, Mark Swan, Daniel Ellis, Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman and George Hennessy, will submit an original five-reel script, consideration of which will be given seriously, along with the possible adaptation of stage successes. Miss O'Neil will be consulted and her choice will receive the recognition.

Edwar Lewis, now in Gallup, N. M., whither he has gone from the Grand Canyon of Arizona to complete filming of "The Great Divide," will begin work on the new feature with Miss O'Neil, immediately upon completion of his present picture, on his arrival in Philadelphia.

"At Bay" Has Extraordinary Cast

George Fitzmaurice, who is producing George Scarborough's "At Bay" for Pathe, has been making use of some extraordinarily elaborate sets in his picture. The photograph used as a frontispiece of this issue of MOTOGRAPHY illustrates a cabaret scene in which were a large numger of persons and where an unusually deep set was used.

Fitzmaurice's cast, by the way, is one of the highest salaried, if not the highest, which has ever been used in a picture. Florence Reed is his leading woman, and she is supported by Frank Sheridan, Charles Waldron, Lyster Chambers and De Witt Jennings, not one of whom but is a real Broadway favorite. Excellent progress has been made on the picture which will soon be completed and placed upon the Gold Rooster program.

Stars in Metro's Barbara Frietchie

The unusual contrast of the oldest actress on the English speaking stage and the youngest star of the screen appearing together will be shown when Mrs. Thomas W. Whiffen, the "Grand Old Lady" of the stage, and little Mary Miles Minter, the youngest screen star, are seen in "Barbara Frietchie," a five part feature picture now in production at the Popular Plays and Players studio, for an early release on the regular Metro Program. Although Mrs. Whiffen has appeared in many notable stage productions on both sides of the Atlantic for more than half a century, this will mark her debut in motion pictures. At present she is playing a prominent role in "Moloch," a successful play now running at the New Amsterdam Theater.

Mary Miles Minter and Mrs. Thomas Whiffen in a scene from "Barbara Frietchie."

"Right Off the Bat," the five-reel comedy drama in which Mike Dolin is featured, is making a hit all its own. It is being handled in New York and Ohio by the All Star Feature Booking Company.

Vitagraph Star's Wonderful Gown

In order that Miss Eleanor Woodruff of the Vitagraph Players be properly gowned to look the part of the Newport society leader she plays in the feature production, "Colton, U. S. N.," her costumes were designed by one of America's foremost modistes. Mons. Maurice, head of the firm of Maison Maurice, has furnished gowns to Miss Woodruff which he values at $10,000 and which he regards as his best efforts. They are the very latest creations of fashion and the film will undoubtedly have a strong lure for the fair sex, aside from the dramatic quality of the production.

Eleanor Woodruff.
Photo by Underwood and Underwood.

Little could be written that would give any adequate idea of the utter loveliness of these creations. They comprise a complete wardrobe from wonderfully attractive street gowns to the filmy lingerie of the boudoir. Furs, dancing dresses and hats, ultra yet withal so appealing, are shown to splendid advantage by Miss Woodruff.

Gaumont's New Scenario Editor

In line with its policy of giving exhibitors the best attractions in the motion picture field, the Gaumont company has just announced that George DuBois Proctor has been added to the staff as scenario editor. Mr. Proctor is peculiarly well fitted to pass upon manuscripts as he has had long experience as a dramatic critic, editor of motion picture magazines, and writer of feature scenarios.

Rath and Seavolt's new laboratory and factory in St. Paul, Minn., which was fully described in last week's issue of Motography.

Although born in Boston, and by all traditions bound to go to Harvard, Mr. Proctor went to Yale, where his editorial ability was soon recognized. After leaving college, he engaged in newspaper work. This gave him the broad experience which has been such an important asset in his work for motion pictures. He is thoroughly acquainted with the whole American field, having worked on eighteen newspapers from coast to coast.

After spending three years as a dramatic editor, Mr. Proctor became editor of the New York Morning Telegraph. Later he went with the Motion Picture News. As a scenario writer, among the recent productions credited to the new Gaumont editor are "Emmy of Stork's Nest," "An Enemy to Society," "The Green Witch," and "The Old Curiosity Shop."

Dorothy Gish in New York

Dorthy Gish, whose name is a household word, and whose face and figure on the screen have penetrated to almost every country on the globe, has just arrived in New York from the Pacific coast. This is the first time that the famous photoplay sisters, Lillian and Dorothy Gish have been separated. Lillian Gish remains on the Pacific coast, while Dorothy is at the Reliance studios in New York under the direction of Allan Dwan, appearing in a new photoplay in which she is to be featured.

Miss Gish's vehicle has not as yet been named. Its plot and the treatment of it before the camera have been worked out and the company rehearsed on the Pacific coast under the direction of D. W. Griffith.

The photoplay is a comedy. It will present Miss Gish in a quaint and lovable light as a little girl of humble origin who creeps into the deserted mansion of a wealthy family, and there dons for the first time in her life beautiful clothes. Mr. Griffith and Mr. Dwan believe that Miss Gish has in this part a vehicle which will display to the public her entire charm and characteristic and unusual ability as a screen actress.

JOHNSON AS D'ARTAGNAN

Thomas Ince Directing Famous Stage Star in Adaptation of "Three Musketeers," Which Will Be Triangle Offering.

Orrin Johnson, the estimable Broadway star, will be presented by the Triangle, during November, in a magnificent Ince-supervised production of "D'Artagnan," an adaptation by Thomas H. Ince and J. G. Hawks of Alexander Dumas' immortal classic, "The Three Musketeers." Though it will not be this notable actor's first appearance on the screen, it will, nevertheless, offer him in a romantic role that is believed to have afforded him more splendid opportunities than he has ever enjoyed since he deserted the footlights for the studio.

Two solid months were consumed in the making of this pretentious feature, so elaborate were most of its settings and so difficult its scenes, and neither Ince, himself, nor any of his associates has any doubt that it will set a new mark in the production of romantic costumed stories.

Johnson was selected to portray the name part because he possesses the attributes demanded of the character-dramatic ability, good looks and daring—and his performance is declared to surpass all his stage achievements. With the knowledge of motion picture making which he took with him to Inceville, he was able to proceed with his work without having to rehearse extensively and this fact alone prevented a more prolonged production.

The subject, in its entirety, as is the case with virtually all the big Ince picture-plays, was produced at Inceville. Whole villages were constructed in various parts of the mammoth N. Y. M. P. plant in the Santa Monica mountains and the company engaged in filming the piece simply had to walk a few steps from one to another when a change of location was needed.

The cast which appears in support of Johnson is expected to equal the usual Ince standard. It embraces Dorothy Dalton, Louise Glaum, Rhea Mitchell, George Fisher, Harvey Clarke, Walt Whitman and Arthur Maude. Miss Dalton, who has already appeared in one Ince-Triangle offering—"The Disciple," in which William S. Hart is starred—will be seen in the important role of the Queen. Miss Glaum has the part of Miladi, while Miss Mitchell plays Madame Bonacieux; Fisher, the King; Clarke, the Duke of Buckingham; Whitman, the Cardinal; and Maude, de Rochefort.

Clever Duplication Made by Lubin

When some few weeks ago Jack Pratt, Lubin director, began the production of Louis Reeves Harrison's big five-reel Lubin V. L. S. E. release, "The Rights of Man," he was confronted with the usual amount of problems which are thrust before the director, but in this particular case it seemed that just a wee bit more than the average attention was to be necessary to build the proper sets and select the real locations for the staging of those scenes of the picture which were to be replicas of the battlefields of Europe. There were graves to be shown, real war time graves by the road side; there were buildings to be struck by shells and the effects shown, and there were uniforms to be accurate and critic proof in their appearance. Accordingly Director Pratt with Art Director Farnham of the Lubin Company, got busy and dug for the proper information untiringly. It was hard to secure the necessary data and the search had about been given up, when it was recalled that Joe Farnham, now of the Lubin Company, had been in France for four months and knew the real country conditions.

Graves of three hundred French and German soldiers at Montemont, France.

Mr. Pratt found not only the knowledge desired but in addition a collection of seventeen hundred still pictures which Farnham had taken himself and which gave vivid views of just what he sought—the graves, the wounded and dying and dead on the fields of battle, and shell-destroyed buildings. Then it was decided that "The Rights of Man" was to be at least one picture in which no man could criticise settings and locations. Carpenters and scenic artists were put to work and at Lubin's Betzwood, landscape architects constructed the ground as France really is, built houses and dug graves in replica.

Scene from Lubin's "The Rights of Man," showing soldier's graves taken at Betzwood, Pa.

Perhaps foremost among the many extraordinary replicas of the war zone is the one showing the grave of three hundred French and German soldiers, dug in the middle of a plowed field at Mondemont, France. It was at this position that the Chateau changed hands four times, twice occupied by the Germans and twice by the French in what is perhaps written in history as one of the most fierce hand to hand encounters of the present big war. Director Pratt has reproduced this scene in a most remarkable way, as is shown by comparison of the photographs. One is at Betzwood, Pa., and the other at Mondemont, France.

Howard Estabrook Signs with Arrow

Howard Estabrook, Broadway's favorite leading man, has been signed by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation of 71 West Twenty-third street, to play a stellar role in the forthcoming Arrow-Pathe releases. Mr. Shallenberger's arrangements with Mr. Estabrook include the latter's exclusive services.

For this reason Mr. Estabrook has resigned from the cast of "Miss Information," in which he has been playing opposite Miss Elsie Janis. He cannot leave the cast of that popular production until November 6.

Mr. Estabrook, for the last two weeks, while engaged in eight performances a week with Miss Janis, he nevertheless has reported daily to Director Howell Hansel for screen work. Except on Wednesdays and Saturdays, when matinee performances interfered, he has put in ten hours a day before the camera.

Within the next fortnight the executive offices of the Arrow Film Corporation will be moved to the Yonkers plant at 120 School street. Mr. Shallenberger, because of his extensive motion picture interests, will maintain an office for himself downtown; but the Arrow office and studio work will be done in Yonkers after November 8.

Equitable Signing New Notables

FAMOUS STORIES COMING

EQUITABLE keeps busy. During the past week many engagements of more than passing interest have been consummated. In addition to the procuring of important plays and books, original stories from the pen of Equitable scenario staff, a great number of highly important fiction works and star players have been secured.

William Courtenay, at present starring in "Under Fire" at the Hudson Theater and recently seen as star of "Under Cover," will make his first screen appearance in a picturization of Maxwell Grey's "The Silence of Dean Maitland." During the time he has been appearing in stellar roles, he has appeared successively under the direction of Richard Mansfield, Daniel Frohman and the Selwyns. Marguerite Leslie, who made her first appearance on the American stage as Mrs. Ogden in "The Virginian," is now permanently with the Equitable Corporation and will make her first screen bow in "The Green-Eyed God." Her work in "Arsene Lupin," "Nero," "Preserving Mrs. Panmure," "The Concert," "A Member of Tattersalls," "The Witching Hour," "The Gamblers," "The Money Moon," and as leading woman for Sir Henry Irving, brought her international fame. Miss Leslie was induced to adopt screen work. Her first work will characterize the Equitable program early in December.

Supporting William Courtenay and playing very important roles will be two of Filmland's foremost favorites. Mary Charleson, last seen as star of "The Road o' Strife" and previous to that with Vitagraph, will have the important part of ingenue, while popular Arthur Ashley will handle a similarly important male role in the same production. Mr. Ashley recently appeared opposite Emmy Wehlen, while his work in a feature with Vivian Martin commended him to the Equitable as an excellent opposite for Courtenay.

Margarita Fischer, who begins work this week at the Fifty-second street studio, will have beautiful Adele Ray with her, under the direction of Harry Pollard, in "The Dragon." Charles Seay, who is staging "The Fisher Girl," in which Muriel Ostriche, William H. Tooker, Clara Whipple, Ethel Langtry and Myrtis Coney are appearing, returned from Block Island and left immediately for Jacksonville, Florida, where the production will be completed. E. Mason Hopper is at work with Gail Kane, who will make her Equitable debut in "The Labyrinth."

Joseph Golden is working on "The Senator," in which Charles J. Ross, another Equitable star, will make his appearance. The company supporting Mr. Ross is now at Washington, where many scenes are being made with the Treasury, White House, Smithsonian Institute, Congressional Library and Senate chambers as backgrounds.

Now that its productional facilities are in full sway, the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation announces that within the forthcoming five months its releases will contain, among others, ten noted players now starring in Broadway plays.

Lenore Ulrich, who is now appearing in "The Mark of the Beast" at the Princess theater, will be seen in "The Better Woman." Emmett Corrigan, playing in "Young America" at the Gaiety theater; William Courtenay, now appearing in "Under Fire"; Robert Edeson, playing in "Man and Wife," and Cyril Scott, Frank Sheridan, Molly McIntyre, Hilda Spong, Katharine Kaelred and Alexandra Carlisle, all announced for early appearance on the legitimate stage, will play for Equitable in "Creeping Tides," "The Labyrinth," "The Dragon," "Greater Love," "Not Guilty," "A Daughter of the Sea," and others.

TALENTED AUTHOR SECURED

Mrs. Wilson Woodrow to Write New Pathe Series —Widely Talented Woman Has Had Unique Career

Pathe has secured the services of the famous novelist and short story writer, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, to write the stories of the next Pathe series. The widely recognized talents of Mrs. Woodrow assure the literary excellence of the stories and the value of the pictures from the story standpoint.

Mrs. Woodrow has been so much in the public eye that a brief account of her life and activities should be of interest. Of distinguished colonial ancestry she has also the distinction of being the cousin of the president by marriage, her husband being Mr. Wilson's first cousin. She was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, her ancestors having been among the original settlers of that place. Her great grandfather was appointed comptroller of public moneys by George Washington, and Samuel Finley, second president of Princeton college, was her great grand uncle. After the death of her father, who was a doctor, her mother bought a newspaper and it was through that newspaper that the later Mrs. Woodrow became a writer, for her brother, sister and she managed the paper.

After her marriage, with her husband who was a mining, civil and bridge engineer, she lived in the remote mining camps of Colorado and Arizona, obtaining there much literary material of which she made later use. Her first story was of a woman in the mining camps and it had the unusual experience of being received by McClure's on a Friday, being accepted the next day, and the check in payment for it being in the author's hands the following Monday. The story was responsible for her being requested to write a series for McClure's, which series ran for three years. For five or six years Mrs. Woodrow enjoyed the distinction of being the only woman featured among the contributors of Life. Recently she has been a steady contributor to Hearst's Magazine, which has featured her work.

"The Crimson Wing" a Special

George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, announces the release of an extra six-act feature photoplay on the V. L. S. E. program. It has been completed some time and now is ready for booking. It comes in as a "special," the regular plays of one each four weeks being released as usual.

The extra is "The Crimson Wing," dramatized from the widely known novel of that title, written by Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Chicago and Washington society leader and litterateur. It is a strong drama of war and romance, and the scenes are laid on the present battle line between Germany and France.

While it portrays with striking vividness the terrors and heroism of war, it is strictly neutral, taking sides with no faction. It ends with a touching love scene, uniting a man and a woman of opposing nations. The drama is presented in a manner that not only gives offense to none, but makes the heart go out in sympathy to all the battling nations and yearn for a permanent peace.

Exceptional interest is attached to the photoplay because of society leaders, national and world characters, who take part in it. Garden and villa scenes were taken on the grounds and in the homes of Chicago's wealthiest citizens, including Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, the author, Harold and Cyrus McCormick, Orville Babcock, Edward S. Moore, James Ward Thorne, Scott Durand and Howard Shaw. The majority of these persons with their wives and families, as well as other society leaders, appear in the play.

Mr. Moore, vice-president of the Rock Island railroad, takes the part of a chauffeur in one scene. He is dressed in army uniform and drives his own $14,000 car. Wallace Rice, author and playwright, also takes a part in the play.

Several hundred feet of the film were taken in France on the border line of Germany, showing the French army in maneuvers and commanded by General Joffre, the head of the French army. The photoplay is directed by E. H. Calvert, a West Point man, who has seen fourteen years of service in the U. S. Army. Mr. Calvert also takes the leading role with Miss Ruth Stonehouse.

"Diamond Clubs" Busy

In answer to the $10,000 cash prize offered by the North American Film Company for a suggestion for a sequel to the big Mutual serial "The Diamond from the Sky," "Diamond Clubs" have come into being all through the New England states. Fostered by the branch and exchange managers of the Mutual in that section of the country, and stimulated by a friendly rivalry, the clubs are progressing splendidly. Each organization has the same object. It is to think up among themselves a plot germ which will meet the requirements for the $10,000 sequel prize and will land them the money, which they will then divide among themselves. Each organization attends the exhibition of the succeeding chapters of the great diamond serial as they appear, and then holds a meeting for discussion and plotting further devices for the continuation of the fight for the jewel.

"Diamond Clubs" are more or less an outgrowth of the recreation nights given to the employes of many of New England's industrial corporations by their managers. It has become customary for many of the companies to give their workers tickets for a picture theater one evening a week, or to entertain them at a special exhibition at their own recreation rooms if they possess any. "The Diamond from the Sky" has been shown in a large percentage of these places at the repeated requests of the employes. From these evenings, the "Diamond Clubs" have grown.

Scene from Metro's "Her Reckoning or Tables Turned."

Paul Gilmore Joins Metro

Paul Gilmore, the romantic and dramatic leading man, who recently finished work in "The Penitentes" for the Triangle, has joined the Quality-Metro forces and is starred with Marguerite Snow in "Rosemary," a forthcoming production on the regular Metro program.

Paul Gilmore.

Mr. Gilmore, who will play opposite Miss Snow in future productions, is a handsome type of man and extremely versatile, having played in everything from musical comedy to tragedy. But it is in romantic, dramatic roles that he excels. Strangely enough, Mr. Gilmore used "Rosemary" as a starring vehicle on the speaking stage, following John Drew's success with the play on Broadway. He also appeared in John Drew's roles in many other stage productions, including "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" and "The Tyranny of Tears."

While Mr. Gilmore has appeared as a star on Broadway in a revival of "The Three Musketeers," he is perhaps best known throughout the South and West where he is a popular favorite and matinee idol. For several years he appeared in that part of the country at the head of his own company, playing the leading roles in Broadway and London successes.

Selig Press Clippings No More

The Selig Polyscope Company, according to bulletins, has discarded the time-honored scrapbook of press clippings.

The company announces its startling violation of a time-honored custom in the following statement:

"What is the good of a press scrapbook anyhow?

To our mind, it but feeds the vanity of the press agent, and occupies valuable time on the part of his employer who must drop all work and scan the volume when it is carried into the inner sanctum by the publicity man. It is not the press clipping that goes into the scrapbook to be shown the Boss, but the legitimate story that goes into the publications to be read by the people, that counts. The old circus stuff is au fait. Those press agents who label every production released by their particular employers a 'masterpiece' will soon find their occupations gone. The coming publicity men must be men of education and brains, men of newspaper training who know a good story when they see it, and are able to write that story honestly and brightly. The old-time publicity man had the front and the scrapbook; the publicity man of the future will have the stuff and no scrapbook!"

Raver Feature Employs Vast Cast

The inaugural Raver Film Corporation production which, as heretofore announced, will be "The Other Girl" from the pen of Augustus Thomas, in addition to its distinctiveness for smoothness of story and elegance of tone and tint, will have a colossal cast, exactly four hundred and two different people being engaged to present Mr. Thomas' play before the camera. Percy Winters, son of the noted dramatic editor, William Winter, who occupied his desk on the New York Tribune from 1865 to 1909, and who has, these many years ago, won his laurels as a director not only on the legitimate stage itself but more recently in motion pictures, has signed his name to a Raver contract and becomes director of production. William Jennings Coyle, who for the past two years has collaborated with Mr. Winter during the time of his film association, joins the Raver staff in his familiar role of assistant to the director of productions.

Harry Raver.

William Hartman, acknowledged as a valuable aid to the directorial staff, has already discharged his first week's work securing suitable locations for the exteriors for the Augustus Thomas production.

James J. Corbett, too well known in more fields than the theatrical alone for detailed introduction here, has been selected for the lead and will impersonate "Kid Garvey," the champion pugilistic trainer of the story.

Mr. Raver proposes to employ even more elaborate and impressive methods of exploitation on all the Raver Film Corporation productions than he did on his "Cabiria." He succeeded with this Itala spectacle because he was a showman and knew how. The same instinct and ability should carry him to even greater heights in this, his own venture. Lithographs, far away from the conventional, of all dimensions, together with lobby photographs, framed groups and all the other retinue of display advertising, not forgetting heralds, pamphlets and the smaller printed data, are being prepared for "The Other Girl."

Patrick J. McCaffray has been signed as principal camera man and is selecting his group of subsidiaries.

A. K. Greenland has been placed in charge of the publicity department and will be surrounded by a capable corps of aids. Next week's issue will convey an announcement of the identity of the principals engaged for the first production.

Totten's Busy Summer

Joseph Byron Totten, an Essanay director at the head of an Essanay touring company, has returned to the Chicago studios after a fifteen weeks' trip through the east, during which he filmed a dozen photoplays, three of which he wrote himself.

Mr. Totten left the studio last July with a company of twenty people, going directly to his country home and stock farm at Pendleton Hill, Conn., where a daylight studio was hastily constructed. Here he took "The Village Homestead," one of his own scripts, using his own house as the homestead. "The Call of the Sea" and "The Lighthouse by the Sea," the last picture his own, were taken respectively at Block Island, Rhode Island, and at Newport. "Hearts and Roses" was filmed at Westerly, R. I., "A Mansion of Tragedy" was taken in Boston, and "Boys Will Be Boys" was set, staged and completed in New York City. Other plays were taken in various places along the Atlantic coast.

"We had a very successful trip," Mr. Totten said. "We took several photoplays, working fairly fast but very carefully. I am building a permanent studio at my farm which, I think, will come in very handy for Essanay photoplays that require New England atmosphere."

Mr. Totten came to Essanay for the second time a year ago, leaving David Belasco, on whose producing staff he worked, and dropping the production of "Experience" to take up the offer made him by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay. Seven years ago, he was with the Essanay forces, leaving to take up Broadway productions with Belasco. Mr. Totten directed the film version of "The Blindness of Virtue," which is now having a tremendous run. He has written fifty-two stage plays and fifteen photoplays.

ROTHAPFEL BEGINS HIS TOUR

Famous Exhibitor, Touring the Country at the Expense of the Mutual Film Corporation Gives First Talk in Philadelphia

A hundred of Philadelphia's most active and prominent motion picture exhibitors gathered at the Rothapfel-Mutual Tour banquet held on October 21 at the Continental Hotel, in that city. S. L. Rothapfel, former manager of the Strand theater in New York and now shortly to take charge of the new Rialto theater on Broadway, was the guest of honor and principal speaker.

"Not so many years ago I was walking the streets of Philadelphia looking for a job as an operator in one of your theaters," Mr. Rothapfel said as he reached a point for "local color" in his talk. "And I got the job," he continued. Mr. Rothapfel told of the steps by which he fought his way upward and the methods that had brought him success. He received the closest attention throughout his address which lasted nearly two hours.

Among the subjects discussed by the speaker were the handling of music for the theater, the psychology of entertainment, the treatment of lights, the balance of a program, and the relation of the employer and employe. Incidentally Mr. Rothapfel mentioned the Mutual Film Corporation's new $8,000,000 program and the purpose and ideals for which it stands.

"They are on the right track," he said, referring to the Mutual and its officers. "They realize that your success means their success. I do not want to talk about the merit or lack of merit of any film or corporation. I want to avoid that, yet I think it is due to them, for sending me around the country as they are doing, that I shall call attention to this attitude of theirs, their generous view of the business and their effort to help the exhibitor to greater successes.

"It is not a case of making money 'while it lasts.' They are thinking of the tomorrow. They have grown with the picture, they know from where it emanated. They have gone through the struggle to bring it where it belongs. It is the most popular form of entertainment in the world and they are sensible enough and have business sagacity enough to know that this is the only course that can be pursued that means stability, confidence and success. They know that their interests and yours are identical."

Edward O'Keefe of Atlantic City was toastmaster. Among the speakers of the evening were Jay Emanuel, Marcus A. Senn, C. Stamper, Charles Goldstein and several others.

The banquet got a touch of excitement from a short but warm debate between Mr. Rothapfel and an exhibitor. Mr. Rothapfel had reached the conclusion of his address and invited questions.

Edward J. Jeffries, the owner of two theaters, rose and challenged the speaker's statements on some points of theater policy.

"I'll be back here after this tour is over—I am coming at my own expense just to show you in your own theater what I mean, and I will demonstrate to you in person," exclaimed Mr. Rothapfel. "That goes now, and I'll be back."

The next point on the Rothapfel-Mutual itinerary is Washington, where a banquet will be held at the Hotel Raleigh.

Will Oppose New Constitution

The proposed constitution which reaches the voters of the state of New York at the coming election has a new and active enemy in the motion picture forces, including exhibitors, manufacturers and salesmen. An active campaign against the adoption of the new state charter has been started by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc.

A committee representing this industry waited on the constitutional convention leaders at Albany and asked for a hearing on the insertion of a plank guaranteeing as full liberty to motion pictures as is now accorded to newspapers and the spoken drama. This committee was accorded scant courtesy in its hearing before the Bill of Rights committee.

The Board of Trade was organized and incorporated shortly after under the New York State law, and almost its first official action was to condemn the new constitution, whose drafters had declined to give a hearing to the motion picture men's presentation of their side of the censorship question.

The campaign against the constitution will be carried on throughout the state through the medium of the screen in motion picture theaters, and by the exhibitors in all the communities large and small. It is estimated that 1,800,000 people are reached by the screen in New York state each day.

The following resolution has been passed by the directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., and was given out last week from the headquarters at 18 East Forty-first street:

Upon motion duly made, seconded and carried, it was

Resolved, that the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., condemns the action of the Bill of Rights committee of the Constitutional Convention, held at Albany, New York, during the months of July, August and September, for the purpose of formulating amendments to the present constitution of the state of New York, such constitution so amended to be submitted to a vote of the people this November; in refusing to report to the convention the proposed amendment, by which it was provided that the motion picture as a vehicle of thought transmission was to be granted the same liberty from legalized pro-publicity censorship, now enjoyed by the press; such action on behalf of the committee being discriminatory and contrary to the best interests of the people, in that it failed to protect them from the possibility of such censorship—the arbitrary act of the few over the many—conceived in ignorance, intolerance, prejudice or malice, and therefore, contrary to the principles of freedom and free expression of thought upon which this country is founded.

Further Resolved, that this association use its influence in behalf of, and in every way possible lend its encouragement and support to, the press and all other agencies in their endeavor to cause the people to reject at the polls the amendments adopted by the said convention; such rejection being thoroughly justified upon the ground that a convention so constituted as to fail to recognize that censorship is an attack upon the bulwarks of our freedom, and to protect our people from such attack, is not of a disposition which would justify the approval of the results of its deliberations.

Signed: Walter W. Irwin, J. W. Binder, Wm. A. Johnston, S. L. Rothapfel, Nicholas Power, J. E. Brulatour, Edward A. MacManus.

Great Northern Signs Famous Dancer

A star of international fame and great distinction who appears exclusively in Great Northern productions is Miss Rita Sacchetto, the celebrated dancer and character actress. In her early girlhood she began her theatrical career, specializing in dancing and pantomime, and winning the attention of leading critics with her power of mimicry. She has performed in all the famous theaters of the world, including the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, where she delighted many with her marvelous dancing; for Miss Sacchetto is a most versatile artist, combining histrionic with terpsichorean feats. The Dowager Czarina of Russia, after witnessing a performance in St. Petersburg, commanded the actress to appear at the royal box to receive the imperial lady's personal praise. She also received the distinction of appearing before the Infanta Isabella of Spain and is the recipient of many more great honors. Her acting is sincere and convincing; she emphasizes the note of womanliness, tenderness and sympathy, pathos and affection, and is particularly well adapted to interpret the roles assigned to her.

Rita Sacchetto in "A Woman's Honor."

Grace Elliston with Rolfe

Grace Elliston, one of the foremost actresses in the country, who achieved a personal triumph in "The Lion and the Mouse," will make her bow on the screen in a big five part feature picture now in production at the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., studio for release on the Metro progam.

Grace Elliston.

Miss Elliston was born in West Virginia, and made her first appearance on the stage in 1899 at the Lyceum Theater, New York. She received her early training under the personal direction of Charles and Daniel Frohman, and was afterward the leading woman for Richard Mansfield, Nat C. Goodwin, Henry Miller and other big stars. Most of her time was spent in Broadway productions, but her long run in "The Lion and the Mouse" brought her fame throughout the country and carried her to nearly every state in the Union.

Her clever work with Henry Miller in "The Taming of Helen" is well remembered by playgoers. During the season of 1913 Miss Elliston caused blase New York to "sit up and take notice" with the daring character "Molly" in "Ourselves," a startling human document. She also made a pronounced and favorable impression in "Damaged Goods" on its first presentation. Edward Brennan, the noted dramatic actor, will be featured with Miss Elliston in her debut on the screen.

Essanay Filming Mystery Tale

A company of Essanay players, under the direction of J. Charles Haydon, is now at work making a five-act photoplay of "The Alster Case," taken from the novel of that title by Rufus Gillmore, author of "The Opal Pin," "The Mystery of the Second Shot," and other widely read detective novels.

The photoplay will be Essanay's December release on the V. L. S. E. program. It is an intensely fascinating mystery play and carries out the stirring incidents of the book with great faithfulness to detail.

Bryant Washburn takes the leading masculine role and Miss Ruth Stonehouse the leading feminine part. The mystery surrounds the slaying of Mrs. Alster, and is solved in an unusual and thrilling manner at the climax of the play. The suspense is sustained until the very end, the finger of guilt points at several innocent persons, so that the discovery of the real slayer comes as a complete surprise.

Beban to Star in Own Play

When George Beban, the famous Pietro Massena of the play "The Sign of the Rose," and the photoplay "The Alien," saw the Great Equitable drama "Trilby" on the screen he was so impressed by the skill of Maurice Tourneur, the director of the picture, he at once made up his mind that Mr. Tourneur was the man he wished to direct the making of a picture from an original scenario which Mr. Beban was at that time creating, and which he believes will mark a new era in photoplay productions.

On Monday night last, Messrs. Beban and Tourneur met for the first time, and Mr. Beban, in his graphic and inimitable manner, detailed, for the benefit of Mr. Tourneur, the ideas he had embodied in his creation.

Mr. Tourneur is far from being a demonstrative man, but at the conclusion of the recital he most unhesitatingly expressed his opinion that the scenario was wonderful, and at once started on the task of selecting a cast to meet the somewhat exacting requirements of the scenario.

Details concerning the character of the story have not yet been made public. Even its name is not announced, but it has leaked out that it contains numerous surprises for the audience, and that the interest and suspense are kept until the very last flash is shown upon the screen.

Salesman Opens Dark House

Not the least interesting example of the initiative exercised by film roadmen, is that of R. L. White of the Kansas City office of the Big Four, who arrived in Beatrice, Neb., recently and found the manager of the Gilbert theater had jumped his contract and left town. A shipment from another feature company had been returned unused the previous day and Essanay's V. L. S. E.

Anita King, the Paramount girl, greeted by President W. W. Hodkinson of Paramount Picture Corporation in New York City.

print, "The Blindness of Virtue," was lying at the depot awaiting a return train.

Mr. White at once saw the owner of the theater and proceeded to convince him that V. L. S. E. features, properly advertised, would make money for him, manager or no manager; and that proper advertising was one of the very best things he (White) did. With the owner's permission he took off his coat and started to work, spreading news like it had never before been spread in Beatrice. One of the results was a clever banner "ad" covering the entire top of one page of the daily, six columns wide and eight inches deep. There was also a nice story in the news section. The result of this enterprise was that the box office showed a profit of more than $50 for the day.

And then, just to illustrate that the owner could do the same thing for himself, day in and day out, Mr. White took hold of another feature and by proper advertising and publicity, played to a big crowd the following day. So impressed was the proprietor that he decided to follow Mr. White's idea and manage the theater himself. It is now doing a thriving business.

Meaney Now an Author

Don Meaney believes in photographs—of other people only. That is why, as far as he is concerned, the intermission between photographic sittings averages three years. In the particular case of the accompanying photograph, its taking was an accident and its finishing a surprise. Don, himself, had no intention of having any finished, but when the call came for the Quality Film Company to desert the Sunset boulevard studio in Hollywood, and Mr. Meaney, as manager of productions for that concern, deserted also and with scarcely chance for a goodbye, a friend had the Meaney photograph finished and—here it is. Mr. Meaney's year on the west coast, through, first, his connection with the Universal company and his present managerial position with Francis X. Bushman of Quality Films Company, has greatly added to his already large acquaintance with people and conditions in the film world and peculiarly fits him for the position that is his. Formerly a newspaper man on various Chicago dailies, the call of this profession is strong at times, and it is such an assignment as "putting over" scoop newspaper stories for his company that is an especially pleasing one for Mr. Meaney. That Mr. Bushman appreciates the manner in which the Quality company's publicity was handled is evidenced by his gift to Mr. Meaney of a diamond ring.

Don Meaney.

Don is now writing a series of stories in which Mr. Bushman will be starred. The first, "The Man God Forgot," or, "A Virginian's Sacrifice," is now in course of production. The story is one concerning a southerner's endeavor to win laurels as a football star at Virginia University; to win the heart of pretty Georgia Daniels (Beverly Bayne), and last, but not least, to crush his enemies and make the innocent suffer with the guilty. The story is filled with interest, action, and is absolutely different from anything Mr. Bushman has done heretofore. Mr. Meaney's second story, "Conscience," will be completed the early part of next week.

Charles Sutton of Edison

Charles Sutton, veteran character actor of the Edison forces, is a fine type of the sterling actor which the screen has drawn from the stage. Though one did not know his histrionic history, his portrayals on the screen impress with that certain something which comes only from long association with the classic drama—"finish," some might say, but it is something more than that; at times one glimpses in his work a tinge of the heroic called for in many Shakesperean plays in which he, of course, has appeared, on the speaking stage with illustrious associates.

Charles Sutton.

That he is versatile in comedy as well as the more serious roles is evidenced in his spending considerable time in a sketch of his own, "Madonna of the Tubs," and by his work on the screen for Edison where he has been six years. He is called upon so often that to list his films would appear an Edison catalogue. His portrayals are always character and are marked with an honesty, sureness and virility that strikes a responsive chord of sympathy and reality. He is numbered among that cast which made "The Stoning" one of the most commented upon plays of the year. In that release he played the unyielding, old time father so typically as to score an individual success.

Bluejackets See "Neal of the Navy"

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of recent date contains a big picture display relating to the presentation of the Pathe serial "Neal of the Navy" at the new Pantages theater in that city, on the occasion when some two hundred blue jackets and marines, from the government navy yard at Bremerton, attended the performance at the special invitation of Manager Alex Pantages.

In addition to the picture display, the Post-Intelligencer contains a story of the incident which reads in part as follows:

When the lieutenant of the U. S. N. clapped the young man on the back after he had vanquished several antagonists in a hand-to-hand encounter and said "Why not try for Annapolis? The navy needs such men as you," the sailors applauded sympathetically. When the Stars and Stripes broke out over the government launch there was another concerted clapping of hands.

The naval men were the guests of Manager Alex Pantages. "It promises to be the real thing," said a bluejacket when the scenes closed. "I'll have to see how that young fellow gets through with his job."

New Brand of Films for General Program

REAL PLOTS PROMISED

IT IS an occurrence of note when the General Film Company makes room for a new brand of film on its program. The birth of Vim comedies therefore assumes more than ordinary importance in light of the fact that they are to be released every Friday on the General program beginning November 12. The comedies are reported to be entirely out of the ordinary run and guaranteed laugh getters. A glance at the names of those who are responsible for this new venture will show that this is no idle boast and that Vim comedies are here to stay as a permanent and successful member of the General Film Company.

Louis Burstein, prominent as a producer, has been made director-general of Vim comedies which are being produced for the Melies Manufacturing Company. Filmdom knows Burstein as that type of man who brings success to whatever venture he undertakes, knows him as a capable organizer and producer.

It was Burstein who, with Adam Kessel, Jr., and Charles O. Baumann, formed the New York Motion Picture Company. Burstein was quarter owner, secretary and treasurer of this company until he disposed of his interests some time later. As a result of his pioneer work in the New York Motion Picture Company, the way for Keystone comedies, which have become world-famous, was paved. The popularity of Wizard comedies released through the World Film Corporation can also be traced directly to Burstein.

Once again Burstein was enabled to demonstrate his skill as an organizer when he took charge of the formation of the Reliance Company and, in the early days of that company, had full control of all its productions. In him the Vim Company has acquired a man with set and practical ideas, gifted with a great amount of experience and keen foresight. His director-generalship means much to the ultimate success of these comedies.

Burstein declares that the production of good comedies is a problem, but he has made up his mind that every Vim comedy shall be a laugh getter. "Vim comedies," he says, "are the result of all my experience and studies. They are bound to become popular because I am putting into them every essential of a successful comedy film.

"Above all, every Vim comedy must have a plot. Although somewhat slapstick in nature, that does not mean that they cannot have plot. I don't believe in insulting an intelligent audience by making the film a hodge podge of nothing.

"Secondly, there is no excuse for vulgarity in film. Our comedies will be entirely free from any suggestion of it. You can enjoy our comedies without being ashamed to laugh.

"Only the best of talent and no expense spared is the third essential. If you want to make good film, you must pay for it. We realize this and Vim comedies will stand for all that is high-class, clean and funny."

"Bobbie" Burns and "Walt" Stull, who will be remembered chiefly for their work as the creators of the funny "Pokes and Jabbs" series, head a long list of Vim comedy artists. These comedians will renew their old and popular characterizations with an entirely new line of stories and comic caperings.

"Bobbie" Burns was originally an acrobatic comedian. As such he appeared at all the leading vaudeville houses and music halls of Europe and America. At the completion of this engagement he joined the "Babes in Toyland" company with which he remained three seasons, later accepting an engagement in the "Wizard of Oz" company. In the Follies of 1909, Burns had a prominent part. With the disbanding of the Follies, Burns forsook the stage for the camera, appearing first with Selig and later with Lubin.

"Walt" Stull

"Bobbie" Brumn.

Some of the Stars who will appear in Vim Comedies.

While with Lubin he first met "Walt" Stull. Stull had begun his theatrical career in stock, starting with the Forepaugh stock company of Philadelphia in 1894. The local popularity which Stull almost instantly received resulted in his engagement as leading stock man at the Girard Avenue theater, Philadelphia. As a matinee idol he remained at the Girard many years until attracted by an offer by Emma Bunting to go on the road as co-star. This was followed by several seasons of juvenile roles in a dramatic company headed by Creston Clark. In 1907 Stull decided to go into business for himself and the Walter H. Stull stock company was the result of his decision. After two successful seasons the company disbanded, when Stull accepted an attractive offer from the Lubin Company and transfered his talents to the screen. At first he played the "heavy" in one of the Lubin companies until a far-seeing director saw his comedy possibilities and, from that time on, consistently assigned Stull to comedy roles.

Scene from "A Pair of Birds."

When Burns and Stull went to the Reliance as author-directors, they met Burstein. It was then that the three put their heads together and resolved to create a new line of comedy. Vim comedies are the result.

Scene from "Midnight Prowlers."

The first release is entitled "Midnight Prowlers" and deals with the fright of Mr. and Mrs. Jabbs as the result of the report of burglars in the neighborhood. "Midnight Prowlers" will be followed the next week by "A Pair of Birds." Pokes and Runt are in jail. They decide to escape and their escape is most unique. After many mishaps, they are finally more than glad to surrender to the guards and to get once again the protection of prison bars and striped suits.

On November 26, "Pressing Business," the third release, will appear. A man sends his one and only suit of clothes to the tailor. While they are at the tailors he must stay in bed. Imagine his horror when he learns that the tailor shop has burned down while his one suit of clothes was there! Comedy aplenty is furnished in his efforts to get another suit.

Leading members of the "Pokes and Jabbs" array are Ethel Burton, a vivacious and charming comedienne, "Spook" Hanson, formerly a clown at the Hippodrome, Edna Reynolds, a popular stock favorite, "Babe" Hardy, a three hundred and fifty pounder. At present, Burstein is negotiating with several other promising favorites and the result of these negotiations will be announced later.

Burns and Stull with their coterie of mirth provokers are leaving New York early next week for tropical Florida, where they will establish winter quarters.

"PENNY-A-LINERS" WON'T DO

Virile Authors Needed Badly for Film Stories—Arthur H. Spiegel of Equitable Trying to Lure Noted Fictionists

Arthur H. Spiegel, head of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, and at present attending important board meetings of that concern, threw a bomb into the Equitable camp this week when he displayed a number of copies of letters and cablegrams he had sent during the past four weeks while at the helm of his large merchandising plant at Chicago.

Rudyard Kipling, Stewart Edward White, C. N. and A. N. Williamson, Richard Harding Davis, Jack London, the Castles, J. Egerton and his wife, William J. Locke, James O'Donnell Bennett, Brand Whitlock, Robert W. Chambers, Frederick Jackson, Tolstoi's estate, and publishers for Guy De Maupassant, Flaubert, Victor Hugo, Sir Walter Scott, J. Fenimore Cooper, and other creators of splendidly unconventional stories, were among those who had been queried by Mr. Spiegel regarding the converting of their works into screen vehicles.

Mr. Spiegel called a meeting of those directly responsible for the success of Equitable, and without opposition, without the least hesitation, Russell Edgar Smith and Marc Edmund Jones, heads of Equitable's scenario department, were instructed to follow up Mr. Spiegel's lead and secure such of the old and new fiction classics as were protected by copyright and procurable in form suitable for screen adaption.

"The penny-a-liner," to quote Mr. Spiegel, "who writes for the yellow back novel, the cheap magazine and the boiler plate newspaper at so much a line, without consideration of the matter he is writing, who simply compiles laboriously a flow of rhetoric, because he is getting so much for so much, is of no earthly use to the film world.

"We need, ever so badly, more brain power in the story department, and we have decided to get it, if we have to exhume the dead masters' bodies and get their 'mark' on a contract.

"We need unconventional denouements. We need different kinds of climaxes. We must creep, not run, away from the eternal triangle. We must have less of the two women and one man, or one woman and two men. We must so construct our stories that the average auditor of the most humble brain power, or the most intelligent with the greatest brain power, will have to use a certain amount of perspicacity to fathom the plot. Our weakness is the finish of the stories. The first, second and third reels are great. We have novel situations, novel climaxes and novel dramatic action—then comes the last two reels and we see the hero drawing closer to the heroine. We note the coming downfall of the adventuress, the coming expose of the bribe taker, forger, the exonerating of the convicted hero—the forgiven intruder, the punished unfaithful one—and then—tableaux—hero and heroine in each other's arms.

"Unconventionality—new business, less trickery—less double exposure, more straight dramatic work with more deductional power required from the audiences—and Equitable is going to get, if we have to go to the Pyramids and the tomb of Noah and dig for the old stone manuscripts and give them modern settings, retaining the great climaxes, powerful tales and new theories they must have contained, and which our modern writers will not put into stories because we accept their conventional stuff.

"Within the week we have changed the titles of three pictures, because when we had completed them and dressed them up with original ideas, such as we are demanding from our writers, we found that our stories were so much stronger, so much more novel, and contained so much real interesting material, that the original titles were not applicable, in the sense we wish them."

First Set in New Ince Studio

An exact replica of the New York Stock Exchange will be the first set erected within the new $75,000 studio that Producer Thomas H. Ince is building at Culver City, for the production of forthcoming Ince-Triangle features. This set will be used for many of the big scenes in the current production in which H. B. Warner, recently arrived at Inceville, will be offered as star.

Work on the construction of the new plant is progressing rapidly, it is stated, and with the completion of one of the eight stages, which is expected in two weeks, carpenters will at once begin the erection of the stock exchange set, under the direction of Tom Brierly.

At present Warner and his supporting cast are working under the direction of Charles Swickard in a setting designed to depict the interior of a New York stock broker's office. The set is an exact counterpart of a well known broker's office, it having been built with the assistance of an eastern financier who is a friend of Producer Ince. Its dimensions are 60 by 110 feet.

Since the death of a motion picture player of the same name, the family of William West, that veteran and able character Edison player, has been greatly embarrassed through acknowledging the condolences of many friends who naturally confused the Edison actor with his namesake.

W. N. Selig Honored by Mayor

Mayor Thompson of Chicago, on Monday evening, October 23, nominated six new members of the Board of Education of Chicago. The Chicago Board of Education is among the most powerful and important educative boards in the United States. Included among the nominees was William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company. Mr. Selig is at present visiting his motion picture studios in Los Angeles, California, and Las Vegas, N. M., and was not appraised of the fact that he had been nominated as a member of the Chicago board. In commenting upon his nominations, Mayor Thompson said: "I think my appointees are the best group of individuals ever suggested for membership on the board. There were many names suggested to me and the choice was a difficult one."

William N. Selig.

Mayor Thompson classifies Mr. Selig as a self-made man and one qualified in every way for membership on the Chicago school board. Mr. Selig is known as one of Chicago's most influential business men and is probably one of the most widely read men of the present day. His personal friendship with literary men and women of high standing is also very extensive. For many years Mr. Selig personally read and selected the novels, short stories and original photoplays submitted to his company for motion picture filming and his conception of the style of work of authors of high class is probably unsurpassed by any book or magazine editor.

Mr. Selig's nomination for membership on the Chicago Board of Education is not only a tribute to Mr. Selig as a man, but is also a tribute to higher art in motion pictures. The product of the Selig Polyscope Company has always been consistently clean and educational.

Star Registered Real "Surprise"

Katherine Kaelred, the eminent emotional actress, received one of the worst shocks of her career at Inceville recently, during the production of "The Winged Idol," the five-part Ice-Triangle feature, in which she is starred. With House Peters, the popular actor who plays the leading male role, she arrived at the "set" prepared for the day's work. The stage was arranged to present an interior in the apartments of the seeress, Countess Iva Ivanhoff, the part played by Miss Kaelred. Nothing seemed to have been disturbed since the night before.

Miss Kaelred seated herself at the table and when Thomas H. Ince, who was directing the scene, ordered action, the actress lifted the velvet spread which covered the table. Never before did she more truly register surprise and terror than in the scene which followed, for there, coiled beneath the cover was a hissing king snake.

Why the snake crawled up the leg of the table will always be a mystery at the Inceville studio. Stranger still is the fact that the snake seemed so suitable to its environment that Producer Ince grasped the opportunity to produce a thrilling effect and used the reptile in the production.

James J. Corbett of Raver Company

James J. Corbett, who appears in the leading role of "Kid Garvey" in the Raver Film Corporation's inaugural production, "The Other Girl," has had a varied and interesting career. He is a native of California and is exceptionally popular in that state. It was William A. Brady who discovered the theatrical talent of Mr. Corbett following closely upon his being crowned heavyweight champion of the world. His first stage appearance was in the title role of "Gentleman Jack" followed by "The Naval Cadet," "The Adventurer" and "Around New York in Eighty Minutes," in all of which vehicles Corbett was starred. About this time vaudeville began making its deep inroads into the older form of stage entertainment and Corbett was, of course, one of the first to be lured away because of his importance. "A Thief in the Night" was his vehicle and before he had finished with it he had not only toured America on the Keith and Orpheum circuits but had appeared everywhere in England and Australia.

James J. Corbett.

His present picture appearance is the first in which he has been presented in a worthy role. Mr. Corbett has been surrounded with a special cast. Becky Bruce, in the character of Catherine Fulton, who discards the old time theory that heredity is dominated by environment, is his leading lady.

COMPLETE MADAME BUTTERFLY

Mary Pickford of Famous Players Appears in Production of Well Known Classic. It is Her First Oriental Role

"Madame Butterfly," John Luther Long's most universally beloved work, is at last to be given to the motion picture public with the incomparable Mary Pickford in the celebrated role of Cho-Cho-San, by the Famous Players Film Company on November 8. It was over a year ago that the producers acquired the film rights to the immortal story, the appearance of which in screen form has been eagerly awaited by a public that had long before learned to love it, through the various media by which it had already been presented, as an opera, novel and play.

It is interesting to note that "Madame Butterfly" was written about twenty years ago and first gained the attention and admiration of the theatrical world when David Belasco produced it with Blanche Bates in the leading role—in which she scored one of the greatest successes of her career. In 1904, the great Puccini, charmed by the infinite pathos of the tale, wove about it one of the most exquisite musical settings that has ever been heard on any operatic stage. Two years later the opera was introduced into this country by Henry W. Savage, and it has ever since been one of the most popular offerings of the musical world.

Mary Pickford in a scene from "Madame Butterfly."

Now it is to be immortalized upon the screen as a Paramount picture. It is unique, and altogether fitting, that Mary Pickford, the foremost photoplay star in the world, should be chosen to appear in "Madame Butterfly," which has the distinction of being the first work of an American author to be made the basis of a grand opera. Coincidentally, it is the first oriental role which the little star has ever played.

Paul Gilmore With Raver

Paul Gilmore, the well known theatrical star of the legitimate stage and the man who has likewise made his mark in no small fashion on the picture screens of the country, has signed a contract with the Raver Film Corporation whereby he agrees to appear in a prominent role in the Augustus Thomas drama, "The Other Girl."

Mr. Gilmore became known throughout the country as well as on Broadway when he was featured in the road production of "The Havoc," by H. S. Sheldon, and after that scored an even more tremendous success in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird." Other productions in which he has appeared include "King Charles," "Captain Debonnair," "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Boys of Company B" and "The Call of the North." In pictures he has been featured by the Vitagraph Company, the Griffith Fine Arts Company, and on another page of this issue his appearance in a Metro picture is announced. It is now understood, however, that Mr. Raver will monopolize his services for some time to come.

The Harvard comedies featuring the world famous screen comedian, Billy Quirk, formerly featured star with Biograph, Solax, Vitagraph and Universal and recognized as one of the foremost comedy pantomimists in the world, are being produced at the rate of one a week, three having been completed to date.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil G. Coward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.

Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You - Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 6, 1915 Number 19

"The Battle Cry of Peace"—a Super-Film

IT is possible for a motion picture to be so great in purpose and in execution that it becomes more than a motion picture—a sort of super-film. The fact that it is a motion picture at all is secondary. It is put into that form because the picture has become the shortest and surest path to the human mind. Instead of its theme being selected as subject for a film, the film is chosen as the most effective vehicle for the theme.

Such a picture is J. Stuart Blackton's "The Battle Cry of Peace." If it be judged at all, judgment must rest upon it as an emissary of awful truth—not as an entertainment.

Yet if entertainment in a picture be the art of holding the people spell-bound, "The Battle Cry of Peace" is that. And if that fact alone is the motive force behind its showing in all the theaters of the country, we must be well content.

For the exhibitor estimates the value of a picture by the amount of entertainment it offers. We cannot take exception to that attitude; it is his business to entertain. He must offer the people what they want. If he be a good exhibitor he will not let his private taste dictate the tastes of his patrons.

The subject of "The Battle Cry of Peace" is broader than the motion picture business itself. It is vitally important that every American citizen see it. The very future of this country depends upon getting into the public mind the facts revealed by this picture. Our people must know these conditions; and there is no other way of telling them that will compare with the picture way.

The newspapers of the country have risen nobly to the task of preparing the people for an inevitable crisis. Yet the power of the press, mighty as it is, is a feeble cry compared with the power of the picture. The press is spreading the doctrine of preparedness not because it delights the people or increases circulation, but because it is its highest duty. The possession of the most powerful public organ in the land has brought that duty also upon the exhibitor. It is a new responsibility, destined to play a tremendous part in the future history of the nation; perhaps a greater part than the press has ever played. It is a responsibility that the exhibitor must recognize.

Preparedness—insurance against war—whatever you may call it, is the dominant problem of this country. All other questions are secondary to it. The thinking few are confronted with the stern and difficult, but absolutely necessary, task of bringing home the truth to the unthinking thousands.

Mr. Blackton's picture is the first really great instrument for this purpose. Perhaps others will follow. If so, these comments apply equally to them. We might praise the producer of the Battle Cry for his magnificent altruism and high purpose, and wish him commercial success with it. But that is not our function here. We are not lauding a film, nor complimenting a film maker; we are pleading with all the exhibitors of America to recognize their tremendous power and use it in a cause that may some day mean life or death to the nation. For it is in the hands of the exhibitors to lead the people.

The Board of Trade and the League

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which was organized by and for exhibitors only, has just had a very good convention. Those who attended and those who read the convention report in this number should be more than ever convinced that the exhibitors' association is a necessity.

Meanwhile the newly inaugurated Motion Picture Board of Trade—organized for all branches of the business, manufacturers, exchange, exhibitors, press—is going out after all the substantial members it can get. That means that the bigger exhibitors, at least, will be invited to join. And we believe they should join. The Board of Trade is, potentially at least, a splendid institution. It is too young to make very definite statements as to where its greatest strength will lie. No doubt changes will have to be made before it achieves its full power, as is the case with all new organizations. But the men who have put their fortunes into the business, as exhibitors or as anything else, should want to sit in the councils of the trade the board represents. They will want to get in early, to have a voice in whatever reconstruction may be necessary to perfect the new federation.

The point of this editorial is that the Board of Trade is in no sense a substitute for an organization of exhibitors. The exhibitors of this country must continue to have their own society; indeed, they must continue to work for its increase and prosperity.

There is no reason why every exhibitor with a well established business and an investment to protect should not be a member of both organizations. They can well afford it, for a good trade association is like the paint on a house—the Dutch have a saying that good paint costs nothing.

Looking upon the Board of Trade with the utmost favor, as we do, we still maintain that the thing of prime importance to the exhibitor is the exhibitor's own exclusive association. There is no reason for any interference between the two bodies. We are certain it is not the intention of the Board of Trade to disturb any previously existant organization.

Problems such as legislation, censorship, taxation, etc., affect all branches of the business. The Board of Trade is in a splendid position to handle them, and that should be its main function. There are many other problems which affect the exhibitor alone; and they should be handled by the exhibitor's own association. It is impossible to merge these separate responsibilities; therefore it is necessary to develop separate organizations to the last limit of strength.

No exhibitor should withdraw his support from the League, no matter how many other societies he may think it desirable to join. For after all, the League is the only organization that is wholly and entirely for the benefit of the man whose whole fortune and time is tied up in the theater end of the business.

American Industries for October suggests if catalogs are useless and personal representatives too expensive, why not send to all the Latin American countries an animated catalog? A moving picture of the production and uses of any article. With titles in correct Spanish, or Portuguese for Brazil, the moving picture will introduce an electric heater, a machine-made shoe, cement, or an automobile, more effectively and to more people than a single salesman.

Just a Moment Please

We've been called all sorts of things in a long and varied career but Ed Kaufman, writing from out on Bill Russell's ranch near Santa Barbara, California, pulled a new one this week when he addressed us as a "Jeffe Politico."

It sounds like one of Lloyd Robinson's oldtime insults, Ed, but we'll forgive you until we have time to dig out our Mex dictionary and give a look.

In the meantime we'll ask all our other friends (?) to address us by terms we can understand, thus avoiding any possibilities of offense and saving us a lot of trouble.

GIVE US A HARD ONE.

Dear Colyum:

Please tell me what the w. k. P. A.'s would do were those ever-handy words "Petite and Charming" barred when describing a feminine lead? Mac.

What's the matter with "Winsome and beautiful?" Or perhaps you prefer "Svelte and bewitching?"

The next contribution that comes to hand is a corker, however, and we frankly admit it. Don Bell of Bell & Howell is the chap who slipped it to us and now that we've got the darned thing we scarcely know what to do with it. However, perhaps some of our most faithful followers can help Don out by telling him what the gent wants. The letter is reproduced without a change in punctuation or spelling:

Fullerton la

oct 14. 1915

dear sir i have gitbin turch with themotin pitcher film manufacturers and since that i would like to know if yo do keep any of the bible senry i would like to no i would like some of them from you so write at once W T T——r.

—

Here we are in the middle of the column only to discover that the space which two weeks ago we found so hard to fill at the bottom of this Pinnacle of Persiflage, and which last week was found to be at the top, is now at this particular spot.

—

However, with a paragraph or two like this, we are safely past the obstacle and once more running smoothly along toward the end.

—

Thus demonstrating our ability to meet any emergency which arises.

—

OUR BURG.

John R. Freuler of Noo Yawk was back to visit old friends in Our Burg for a few days this wk.

J. W. Binder, the silver tongued spell binder of the Board of Trade stopped a couple o days at the La Salle house last wk. and on Sat. last give a free feed to some of Our Villages w. k. epicures.

Mae Marsh, the pop. actress of Los Angalaize, was to Our Village but hurried along after being shut out of the Colonial Opry House on acct. she being lessen 21 yrs. old. Ah there Fiske. Some more of your dirty work!

Jack Cunningham, the effete demonstrator of a well known Soil Food, is abt. our Village these days telling the natives the merits of Mirror Film stock and introducing Cap. Lambert.

Art Sawyer what represents the Cort Fillim Co. hereabouts is spreading the gospel about the Cort-Castle fillim what features Vern Castle and his Missus. He's agoing to give a show at the Opry House some day this wk.

—

By golly, our mention of Christmas last week has sure had an effect we never dreamed of when we wrote it.

—

All the elevator men in our Bldg. has ditched their summer uniforms for the blue they wear in Winter.

—

And strange to say the cold snap hit the S. end of the Bldg. first.

—

Brrrr! N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Long Chance"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FRANK KEENAN, the well-known screen star, does some excellent emotional work in the six-reel Universal Broadway feature "The Long Chance," to be released on November 1. His portrayal of a hard-hearted old gambler of the West,

Frank Keenan as Harley Hennage in "The Long Chance."

whole heart is softened only by the love awakened in it by a girl, is very convincing and his natural mannerisms add to the satisfying qualities in the picture. This unusually convincing story is one of western life dealing with a mining town, a gambler's love for a young girl, her marriage to a young westerner and after many thrilling incidents and the death of the girl's husband, the gambler proving his love by watching over the girl and her daughter.

There is excitement aplenty in this production and the photography is excellent throughout. The desert sand storm scenes are handled very successfully and are thrilling in their startling genuineness.

Stella Razeto is captivating as Donna, the girl with whom Harley P. Hennage, a typical western gambler played by Frank Keenan, is in love. Miss Beryl Boughton as Marie, daughter of Donna; Fred Church as Oliver Corblay; Clude Benson as Sam; Harry Blaising as T. Morgan Carey; Jack Nellson as Bob McGraw and Walter Newman as Borax O'Rourke complete the cast.

Harley P. Hennage, whose reputation as a gambler is wide-spread over the country, comes to a small western town and there meets Donna, a young girl, with whom he immediately falls in love. The girl, however, is in love with Oliver Corblay and tells Harley that she is going to marry Corblay, but still wants him as her friend. Harley leaves the town and returns to his gambling resort.

Corblay, who has a claim on the desert leaves with one T. Morgan Carey, a man from Boston, to look over the claim and see what it is worth. The scenes change from the pretty little home in the western town to the vast desert and suddenly a terrific sand storm comes up. After the storm is over the Indian guide who had gone with Corblay and the man from Boston, can find neither of the men and returns home and tells Donna of her husband's disappearance. A thorough search is made for him but he can't be found and sometime later when the girl and her young infant daughter are on the verge of starvation Harley comes to town and takes them back with him and Donna secures a position as cashier in a restaurant.

Many years pass and Donna has passed away, while Marie, her daughter, is under the kindly influence of Harley. About this time Harley while out on the desert comes upon a skeleton and finds on the clothes which are lying near it a piece of paper which identifies the man as Corblay and tells of how he had been attacked by Carey and left in the desert to die.

Later Harley is shot by Borax O'Rourke, a bitter enemy, and dies in the arms of Marie, Donna's daughter. Marie then turns to Bob McGraw, a young engineer for consolation, and he willingly gives it to her.

"The Yankee Girl"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

BLANCHE RING, than whom there is no more popular singing comedienne, makes an advantageous screen appearance in a pictured version of her musical comedy success, "The Yankee Girl," by George V. Hobart. The picture, in five reels, was produced by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and will be released on the Paramount Program. Blanche Ring's presence is, of course, the feature of the offering.

She gives to "The Yankee Girl" of the screen as she did to the stage production, a pleasing spirit and much good humor, using, at times and appropriately, some of her stage mannerisms, and they have the desired effect. Other singing comediennes have not been so judicious in their actions before the camera. Blanche Ring's performance as the enthusiastic self reliant Jessie Gordon who settled a copper deal, or steal, in Latin America, will in all probability meet with general approval.

The story has been slightly elaborated and in the Morosco production there is a continuous story, the plot at times becoming melodramatic and exciting. It is of an American girl who accompanies her copper-mine-promoting father to South America. Gordon is hurrying to make the initial payment on an option he holds. His competitors send James Seavey to prevent this, as they are anxious to obtain the concession.

Warned that he will be delayed if he sails directly to the port, Gordon entrusts a sum to his daughter and leaves his yacht, intending to make the balance of the trip overland. Jessie upon arriving finds that she is short just $50 of the initial payment. She visits the president, who has been bought over by the rival company, and after a little flattery borrows the sum and forces the payment upon him.

A scene from "The Yankee Girl."

Even then the battle is not won, for the second payment has to be made the next day. As her father has been delayed and she is not permitted to reach her yacht, Jessie decides to enlist the help of the consul, who turns out to be a former sweetheart. Together they outwit Seavey and secure the land concession for Gordon. The picture ends with a love scene between Jessie and Jack Lawrence.

Forrest Stanley is a good looking and manly Jack Lawrence. He and Howard Davies meet in a fistic duel that for action of the real vigorous kind surpasses many that are staged in the roped arena. Howard Davies is the scowling James Seavey who continually shifts a cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other. Harry Fisher, Jr., and Syd de Grey in comic character parts register fright and distress through the five reels. Herbert Standing, who can always be counted upon for an excellent "makeup" and a fine character portrayal, is seen as President Ambroce Castroba. Completing the cast are Bonita Darling, Robert Dunbar and Joe Ray.

"Comrade John"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN THE five-part picturization of the Samuel Merwin and Henry K. Webster novel, "Comrade John," the meritorious Pathe Gold Rooster Program presents the most consistently good picture since its beginning. It may also be said with little fear of contradiction that "Comrade John" is the finest production to come from the Balboa studios. The story is unusual and remarkably interesting, the acting excellent, and the direction and staging is exceptional.

A tense moment in "Comrade John."

The story deals with a freak religious cult. "Beauty Through Toil" is the motto of this sect that is even more fraudish than it is freakish. Its chief character is one of those men, whose prototype we have seen or heard of frequently, who bring forth a new faith, or doctrine, often it is masqueraded as a revival of an ancient religion, and reap a harvest from the gullible. The story is well-knit, it is continuous in its development of an interesting theme, and its situations and climax are arrived at plausibly.

The truthfully depicted characters are convincingly acted by a cast of well selected and efficient players. The splendid company and the high class production are worthy of the material, and fully bring to realization its many possibilities, both in interesting characters and dramatic force. Often a play with an indifferent plot deserves merit because it deals with interesting characters, or if the order is reversed this holds good. But "Comrade John" has both a well devised plot and convincing characters.

Briefly, the story is of a man of great ability who induces many people to embrace his new religion and subscribe large funds to its maintenance. He assured them that the "Dream City" has been built by his comrades, which is in keeping with the motto, "Beauty Through Toil." In reality he has engaged an architect to build the city. This young man is in love with one of the followers of Stein. When the "Prophet" tries to make the girl the object of his unclean affection, the architect exposes him. The "comrades" set fire to the temple.

The director has shown much skill in producing "Comrade John." The dream city in all its glory as well as in flames is shown at a distance, which is more effective than a near view in scenes of this kind. In many other details he has shown judgment equally good.

William Elliot, the star of several Broadway successes, is seen in the title role. Ruth Roland is her usual naturally effective self as Cynthia and Lewis J. Cody plays the heavy part of Prophet Stein. These three parts are equal in importance and opportunities, and they are rendered excellently. To praise one of these players above the other two would be unfair, for one is just as effective and no more so, than the other. Madeline Pardee is a sympathetic figure as Comrade Ellen.

Selig's "The Flashlight"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

ONE of the best photographed and interest stirring productions ever released by the Selig Company is "The Flashlight," in two reels to be released on November 1. Credit for the inspiration of the story is due to James Oliver Curwood. The production is magnificently staged and contains many rich interior settings and realistic jungle scenes in which a number of perfect specimens of the elephant tribe are leading figures.

The story is lively and contains a thrilling romance in which a young newspaper photographer upon being persuaded to photograph the harem of an Indian Prince discovers a beautiful English girl being held prisoner. There are advantages for some dramatic acting in this production and a capable cast has been selected.

Bessie Eyton is a charming Joan, who attracts the attention of Prince Chan which part is ably portrayed by Robert Morris. Edward Piel is cast as Roscoe Harding, the young newspaper photographer and C. C. Holland does exceptionally good work as Tarus, the hunchback keeper of the elephants.

As the story opens, Roscoe Harding, a young newspaper photographer in India, takes a picture of Prince Chan and after it is developed the prince insists that he accompany him to his palace and there photograh his harem. On the young photographer's arrival at the palace he is taken to a room where he is locked in and told not to enter any other part of the house or it will mean his death. He receives a mysterious note telling him that after he has photographed the harem he will be killed and is urged to escape.

He tells the prince that he would rather take a flashlight picture of the harem and that night the prince surrounds himself with the beauties of his harem. Harding takes the flashlight and as he does so a beautiful young English girl is revealed standing in the background and she appealingly holds out her arms to him.

What the flashlight revealed.

The prince notices the surprise on Harding's face and suspecting that he knows of the presence of the girl he follows him to his room and there finds the note warning Roscoe to escape and a rope there to aid him.

The prince attacks the young photographer, but he is dealt a blow from behind by the hunchback keeper of the elephants who aids Roscoe Harding to escape through the window. Roscoe manages to rescue Joan and later the two are followed by Tarus and together they mount an elephant and start on a wild journey through the jungle. Prince Chan and his followers on three or four elephants follow the escaping party and are nearly up with them when Tarus by a clever ruse manages to get Joan and Harding into a boat and they escape while he waits and after killing Prince Chan he sacrifices his life for the English girl. Joan tells Harding of how Prince Chan had abducted her and brought her a prisoner to his palace and as we last see them they are floating down the jungle river.

"Her Reckoning, or Tables Turned"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

TELLING a story such as is greatly liked by screen patrons, "Her Reckoning, or Tables Turned," produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., and for release by Metro November 1, is a beautiful and elaborate offering. The interior settings in this picture are particularly tasteful. This is so with all the scenes, there is not an artistic one here and a mediocre one there. The cafe or cabaret scene is especially fine. Producers in general usually fail to obtain the proper atmosphere in cafe scenes, which makes the realness of this one remarkable.

With a quick moving plot and spirited action the story which is that of an ignoble young man who goes through what he believes is a sham marriage with an unsophisticated little girl because his father wishes him to marry an heiress, is at all times interesting and has several good dramatic moments. A situation of some strength, and it is effectively presented, is where Ethel learns, by the unexpected arrival of a letter, that her husband intends deserting her.

Howard urges Ethel to join the party.

Emmy Wehlen, an efficient actress of beauty and exceeding charm, lives up to the opportunities of her part and is an appealing Ethel Stratton, who is loved by Howard Sherbrooke and Dick Leslie, companions at college. She engages herself to Howard and he, too selfish to give her up or lacking the courage to cross his father, who plans an ambitious marriage for him, asks Leslie to arrange a sham service. Finding that Ethel is greatly in love with Howard, Leslie agrees. But he engages a real minister who performs the ceremony.

For several months they live happily, until Howard learns that his father has made all arrangements for his marriage to the daughter of a multi-millionaire. He deserts Ethel, telling her that she is not his wife, and giving her the circumstances. She writes a reproachful letter to Leslie, who upon receiving it hurries to New York and accompanied by the minister arrives on the day of Howard's wedding to Beatrice Ford.

They hurry to the Ford home and expose Howard. The bride's father threatens to have Howard arrested for bigamy. Horrified at the prospect of disgrace, and happily for Ethel and Leslie, Howard takes his own life. Some months later Ethel and Leslie are married. Comprising a capable cast are J. Frank Glendon as Howard; Leslie Austin as Leslie; Walter Hitchcock as Stanley Grant; Jeanette Horton as Beatrice Ford and H. Cooper Cliffe as her father. Edgar L. Davenport is John Sherbrooke. The lighting and photography are the work of a skillful camera man.

"The Whirl of Life"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

VERNON and Irene Castle, the world's most famous exponents of modern dancing, are appearing in a refreshing comedy which contains plenty of action and is replete with good clean humor. The Cort Film Corporation recently released the six-reel production, "The Whirl of Life," in which the life of these "children of Terpsichore" is shown. The Castles do not dance their way through this production. No, indeed! Vernon has a desperate villain, who also loved the fair Irene, to overcome. This villain, in fact, goes to the desperate means of having Vernon's wife abducted. Here it is that the famous dancer proves that he is not only a "wonderful dancer," but also is capable of putting up a good fight.

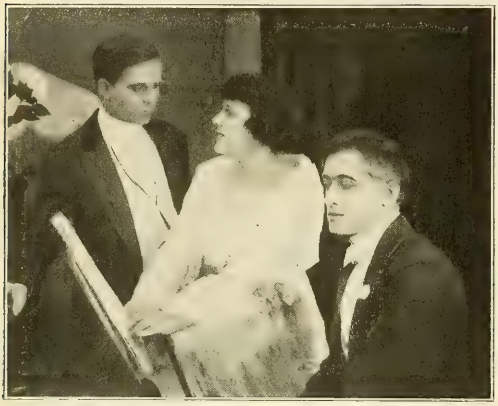
"The Whirl of Life" was written by Vernon Castle—oh, yes, he is also an author—and adapted by Catherine Carr. Some people are very apt to take some of the more ridiculous parts of this picture seriously, but it really is all a burlesque. There are doubtless many of us who have seen Vernon glide his way through the more intricate steps of the modern dancing, and admired his dancing, but could you imagine yourself being attracted to Vernon, for the first time, in a bathing suit? Well, that is the predicament that Irene first saw him in, and regardless of the fact that she was supposed to be in love with a broker, she saw Vernon and immediately the little god, Cupid, began his work.

Shortly after their first meeting at the beach they are married and then leave for Paris. Here they live in an ill-furnished room for some time. However, just when they are in the depths of despair they get a chance to dance in a cafe, and from then on their fame is assured. They return to America and here they immediately become idols. But their life is not to go on smoothly. Irene's former lover, hearing of their success, hires a gang of ruffians, who, after his mistress has lured Irene to the river side, carry her off to a roadhouse. The broker then, properly intoxicated, attacks the famous dancer, but at the crucial moment Vernon appears upon the scene and after a desperate struggle he and his wife escape. They arrive at Long Beach in time to open Castles-by-the-Sea, while Crosby, the broker, and his chief gangster fall over a cliff into everlasting perdition.

Essanay's "The Destroyer"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

WITH an interesting and well developed story to work upon and a well balanced cast to work with Lawrence Windon has made a success of the Essanay three-reel production "The Destroyer" to be released on October 25. The plot of the story deals with a tragedy caused by a physician's assistant in testing the blood of a young man, who is about to be married and who through fear of physical unfitness submits himself to a eugenic test.



Frances Burnham, a handsome young society woman, who is wooed by two lovers and finally accepts one of them much to the dismay of the other, is portrayed in a very satisfactory manner by Nell Craig. Edmund F. Cobb makes a dramatic Kenneth Randall, the young man who gains the girl's love and John A. Lorenz is admirably cast as Dr. Gordon Rockwell, the young physician, whose love for Frances causes him to betray his friendship for Randall and overcome his better self.

Gordon Rockwell, a physician, and Kenneth Randall share bachelor apartments together and both are in love with Frances Burnham. Randall proposes to the girl and she accepts him and the same night just after he has left Dr. Rockwell comes to see her and also proposes marriage, but she tells him of her engagement to Randall. Rockwell is much taken aback, but holds no grudge against his friend and in all sincerity wishes them happiness.

